"That upon the taking effect of this act there shall be transferred to the Tariff Commission hereby created all such property and equipment, books, and papers as were possessed or used by the body heretofore known as the 'Tariff Board,' in connection with the subjects for which the Tariff Commission is hereby created."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I make a point of order against the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] upon the ground that it is not germane to the bill and not germane to the section to which it is offered as an amendment.

My position in that matter, Mr. Chairman, is this: This is a section of a bill relating to the customs taxes of the United States. The balance of the bill, except so far as the income-tax feature is concerned, relates to those portions of our taxing law. The purpose of the amendment, as I heard it read, is not the purpose of levying taxes or assessing taxes, but its purpose is the ascertainment of information—information that may or may not be pertinent to the subject matter under consideration in this bill. But assuming, for the sake of the argument, that it is germane to this bill, it is the establishment of an organization in the Government purely for the purpose of obtaining information, and as I understand the bill proposed as a new paragraph by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE], from hearing it read, it does not vest in these commissioners or in this board any power whatever to regulate tax rates. I think that is correct, if I heard it aright.

Mr. PAYNE. Certainly; it does not give them any power to fix rates.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Therefore I can see no more germaneness in this proposition to the subject matter of this bill than there would be if a certain gentleman were to offer an amendment to increase the number of clerks on the Ways and Means Committee, or if some one were to offer an amendment to create a bureau of statistics in the Treasury Department. Information would not only be obtained in this way, but there are a number of other bureaus in the Government that could furnish information along the same lines that it is proposed for this board to gather; and if you were to open the door to a bill of this kind as an amendment to the pending measure, you would have an interminable number of amendments that would be offered about subject matters that have not been considered by the committee.

Of course, I recognize the fact that the committee could have authorized a proposition of this kind; but the purpose of the rule providing that amendments that are not germane to a bill are not in order is to protect the House against ill-considered amendments. The theory of the government of this House is that the legislation coming before the House before it is considered on the floor shall be carefully considered by one of the committees of this House, perfected, and presented to the House in perfected form. This is a matter of much importance. It requires careful consideration. It has not received consideration by one of the authorized committees of the House, and therefore I do not think it is proper to bring it up at this time and force it on the House for consideration when its details have not been properly thrashed out before a committee of the House. Therefore I insist on the point of order.

Mr. MURDOCK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. MURDOCK. It is my purpose to offer another tariff commission provision to the administrative features of the act. I do not think that the gentleman's point of order, as he applies it to this commission, will apply in that case.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If it is for a tariff commission, I am inclined to think the point of order would apply at any portion of the bill; but of course I can not speak as to the gentleman's amendment until I have heard it read. I think it would apply to any portion of the bill.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. AUSTIN. I wish to know whether it would be in order, before the point of order is passed upon, to offer an amendment to this new paragraph submitted by the gentleman from New York and have it considered in connection with the original proposition?

The CHAIRMAN. It would not, except by unanimous consent.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. PAYNE. It is true, Mr. Chairman, that the general purposes of this bill are to fix rates and provide revenue upon various articles imported into the United States, but that does not cover the whole scope and object of the bill. For instance, there is a paragraph in the bill that authorizes and requires the President to report to Congress whether the amount of any article imported into the United States in any one year does not exceed 5 per cent of the consumption in the United States. In case it does not, he is to report that fact to Congress. So that the bill goes further than to fix rates. It puts into the hands of an executive officer of the Government the power to make this inquiry, and requires him to report to Congress if he finds the fact that the imports do not exceed 5 per cent of the consumption or production in the United States of any article at any time.

So the bill goes much further than fixing rates and raising revenue and providing for the proper administration of the law in the collection of those taxes. It authorizes an executive officer to make this very inquiry that I am seeking to make in this amendment, in order that the report may furnish a basis to Congress for action.

The paragraph in the bill that authorizes the President to make this inquiry and report does not say what Congress shall do. Neither does this amendment which I offer. The President is to transmit that information to Congress, ostensibly for some purpose. Possibly we might infer from the debates, from the remarks of gentlemen upon the other side, that if it was found that the imports of any article did not exceed 5 per cent of the product in the United States they would take that fact into consideration in fixing rates. If the bill provides that in a single instance, or for a single purpose, or in reference to a single fact, such information shall be obtained, and the information comes to the Congress of the United States after that inquiry has been made, it opens the door, if it was not opened before, for any amendment of this kind and for the appointing of a commission to make these inquiries.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from New York permit the Chair to make an inquiry?

Mr. PAYNE. Certainly.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from New York make no distinction between a revenue bill and an appropriation bill in regard to the principles which he has laid down?

Mr. PAYNE. I think the rule makes a distinction, if I am correct about it, between an appropriation bill and other bills.

The CHAIRMAN. It is undeniably true that if there be a provision in an appropriation bill which is subject to a point of order under the rule, and it passes without the point of order being made, then an amendment itself not in order may be offered to that proposition; but is that true of a revenue bill?

Mr. PAYNE. That grows out of the fact that the rules provide that in an appropriation bill there shall be no new legislation. If new legislation comes from the committee, and no point of order is made against it, of course any germane amendment to that is in order. We get rid of the rule to that extent, because the Appropriations Committee have reported a bill in that shape, and the Committee of the Whole have accepted it, and no one has raised a point of order on the original proposition.

I would not say that the two cases were parallel. There is no rule that there shall not be legislation in a revenue bill. In fact, the whole of a revenue bill is legislation from beginning to end. And so legislation that is germane to the object of the bill, the raising of revenue, is proper and appropriate legislation.

I could not raise any point of order successfully against any provision in this bill, no matter how much it lacked germaneness, but I am not seeking to put in a proposition that is not germane to the object of the bill, but one that is in accordance with it and is in aid of it, namely, the fixing of proper duties to raise revenue. It seems to me that anything is proper as an amendment that helps to carry out that object or tends to that object.

The question of these rates is the bill is something to review, subject to finding of facts to be reported to Congress. It was perfectly proper for gentlemen to put into their bill a proposition that the President should find these facts if they thought they were germane and would aid them in the future in amending the legislation. But it is just as proper for me to offer this general proposition for the Tariff Board to examine into all these questions of raising revenue, and it is perfectly germane, it seems to me.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the pending bill is entitled "A bill to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes." It includes many schedules of tariff rates on articles imported into the United States, and it includes a long list upon the free list where there are no tariff duties to be collected; it includes a provision for the levying and collecting of the income tax, and it includes two sections which are administrative in their character.

It would not be denied, I think, that any proposition relating to the subject of the tariff would be in order unless specially excluded by a rule of the House. The rule of the House on this subject, which was adopted at the beginning of the last session of Congress, provided in paragraph 3, Rule XXI, as follows:

No amendment shall be in order to any bill affecting revenue which is not germane to the subject matter in the bill, nor shall any amendment to any item of such bill be in order which does not directly relate to the item to which the amendment is proposed.

The gentleman from Alabama in making the point of order suggested that perhaps this amendment might be subject to a point of order because of the place where it is offered in the bill. It is not an amendment to any item in the bill, I ask the Chair to note. It is an amendment to the bill itself. It does not come within the provision that the amendment must be germane to the item of the bill to which it is offered, because it is not offered to any item in the bill. It is not offered as an amendment to any paragraph but as an independent paragraph, and the only question the Chair has to determine is whether it is germane to the subject matter.

Let us see what it does. It provides for the creation of a tariff commission. For what? To investigate the cost of production of all articles which by any act of Congress now in force or hereafter enacted are made the subject of what? Of tariff legislation.

Section 4 of the bill provides that to enable the President to secure information as to the effect of tariff rates, restrictions, exactions, or any regulations imposed at any time by any foreign country, and so forth, the President may require the commission to make investigation. What is the subject matter of the bill? The subject matter of the bill covers the whole scope of tariff legislation. There is no article which can be brought into the United States from any source which is not covered by the provisions in the tariff bill.

This bill covers everything in the way of tariff legislation, and every article which can be imported into the country is covered by the terms of the pending bill.

Not only that, but in the beginning of section 4 of the bill it is provided in Paragraph A:

That for the purpose of readjusting the present duties on importations into the United States and at the same time to encourage the export trade of this country, the President of the United States is authorized and empowered to negotiate trade agreements with foreign nations wherein mutual concessions are made looking toward freer trade relations and further reciprocal expansion of trade and commerce.

The pending bill therefore not only covers all there is concerning the tariff duties, all of the free list, but also authorizes the President to negotiate trade agreements with foreign nations in reference to future expansion of trade and commerce. That covers the whole scope of possibility in regard to future trade and commerce and tariff regulations. Not only that, but on page 216 of the bill it is provided:

S. That the President shall cause to be ascertained each year the amount of imports and exports of the articles enumerated in the various paragraphs in section 1 of this act and cause an estimate to be made of the amount of the domestic production and consumption of said articles, and where it is ascertained that the imports under any paragraph amount to less than 5 per cent of the domestic consumption of the articles enumerated he shall advise the Congress as to the facts and his conclusions by special message.

Therefore, the bill covers not only all import duties upon all classes of articles which will be brought into the United States, but covers the entire free list, and authorizes the President, in addition, to authorize trade conventions, and then authorizes and directs the President to ascertain the amount of the domestic production and consumption of every article named in the dutiable list or the free list. It covers the whole scope. It not only fixes the duties to be paid, not only provides for the free list that is given, not only provides for trade conventions to be negotiated in reference to future trade and commerce, but directs the President to find the amount of production and consumption of every article referred to in section 1. Will anyone say, can it be contended, that a provision authorizing the President to name a commission which shall—investigate the cost of production of all of the articles which may be the subject of tariff legislation—is not germane to a provision directing the President to ascertain the amount of production and consumption?

Paragraph S on page 216 directs the President to—cause an estimate to be made of the amount of the domestic production and consumption of said articles.

Can it be contended that it is not germane to add a provision that the President—in ascertaining these facts shall also ascertain the cost of production of these articles?

That is the provision in the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York. Can it be contended that it is not also germane to provide—that the President in securing information as to the amount of production and consumption shall also secure information as to the effect of tariff rates, restrictions, exactions, and regulations imposed by any foreign country?

If we direct the President to enter into trade conventions with foreign countries, are we not authorized to let the President name a commission which in aiding him in negotiating these trade conventions shall ascertain what rates, restrictions, exactions, or regulations are imposed by a foreign country upon importations from this country?

Mr. Chairman, I have great regard for the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, as I have great regard for the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD]. I have given some attention to parliamentary law and practice in this House. It is seldom that I express a personal opinion like this, but I do not see how anyone can honestly pretend that this amendment for a tariff commission is not germane to the provisions of this bill. If the political conditions are so strenuous upon the other side of the aisle that they dare not take a vote on the tariff commission, then I have no criticism to make if through some method they prevent it from coming before the House; but it will be the effort of men who are afraid and not of men who have nerve to meet the situation. I have always been willing to vote on any proposition which could be presented to the House. I admire the man who is bold enough to take his political life in his hand and not be afraid to vote, and I had hoped that the other side of the House would not be afraid to vote upon a proposition creating a tariff commission. You have repeatedly declared that you were against it. Why should the point of order be made at all upon this proposition? The gentleman from Alabama, who holds the other side of the House in the small of his hand, has repeatedly declared that he has recanted since he favored the creation of a tariff commission, and that he now stands solidly against it. Why should he make a point of order? Has the time come when he is afraid that the solid phalanx on the other side of the House would break in the middle? I do not know whether the solid phalanx on the other side of the House would break in the middle, but if you think you can prevent our taking to the country the question of the scientific making of a tariff bill you are mistaken.

We may not have the opportunity to break your solid phalanx in this Congress, but you prevent a vote on this question in this Congress and we will show you a majority in the next Congress. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, if the point of order is not sustained I propose to offer an amendment to the motion of the gentleman from New York, and if the point of order is sustained I propose to offer a proposition for a tariff commission as an amendment to the administrative features of the bill, where I hope it will be held to be germane. Now, I am aware of the fact that the rule as to the germaneness of motions in this body is constantly narrowing, largely by reason of the fact that most of the time the House is busy with the consideration of appropriation bills, where the rule is strictly interpreted. The precedents have conformed largely to the necessities of consideration of appropriation bills. The last time that a tariff commission was offered, I think, as an amendment in this House was when an appropriation bill was pending. On May 23, 1910, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] was in the chair, and a point of order was made by the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] against a tariff-commission bill which had been offered to the appropriation bill, and after long argument—argument which consumed the greater part of the day—the point of order made by Mr. FITZGERALD was sustained by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] on the ground that it was new legislation, as I remember it. That was on an amendment to an appropriation bill. When it comes to the matter of an amendment to a revenue measure the rule of germaneness is quite different. The rule reads as follows:

No amendment shall be in order to any bill affecting revenue which is not germane to the subject matter in the bill.

The subject matter of this tariff bill has wide latitude. The bill has a dutiable list, it has a free list, it has an income-tax feature, and, in addition, a long list of administrative provisions. Some of those provisions have latitude in themselves of an exceptional nature. The first paragraph in section 4, Paragraph A, says:

A. That for the purpose of readjusting the present duties on importations into the United States and at the same time to encourage the export trade of this country, the President of the United States is authorized and empowered to negotiate trade agreements with foreign nations wherein mutual concessions are made looking toward freer trade relations and further reciprocal expansion of trade and commerce.

But the bill goes even further than that in its latitude, as I wish to point out to the Chairman. Paragraph R of the same section provides that the President of the United States shall have a survey of the selling price of goods abroad. It is in this language:

R. That whenever articles are exported to the United States of a class or kind made or produced in the United States, if the export or actual selling price to an importer in the United States, or the price at which such goods are consigned is less than the fair market value of the same article when sold for home consumption in the usual and ordinary course in the country whence exported to the United States at the time of its exportation to the United States, there shall, in addition to the duties otherwise established, be levied, collected, and paid on such article on its importation into the United States a special duty (or dumping duty) equal to the difference between the said export or actual selling price of the article for export or the price at which such goods are consigned, and the said fair market value thereof for home consumption, provided that the said special duty shall not exceed 15 per cent ad valorem in any case and that goods whereon the duties otherwise established are equal to 50 per cent ad valorem shall be exempt from such special duty.

Now, Mr. Chairman, the bill goes even further than that in its latitude. It provides, for instance, a certain regulation as to the duties to be levied, dependent on the way in which the goods are transported to the country, whether in foreign or American bottoms, and it seems to me that the wide range of the subject matter of the bill is such that under the rule which I have recited the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] is in order. If it is not in order at the point at which it is offered it certainly must be in order in the paragraphs in the administrative section of the bill which I have cited. I want to say, Mr. Chairman, from my own viewpoint, that I do not believe that the commission proposed by the gentleman from New York, if it should be held in order and if it should be enacted by the Congress of the United States, would be an effective and an efficient commission. I do not believe that the proposal of the gentleman empowers the commission to get all the facts. I do believe that the commission proposed in the amendment which I shall offer at another place in this bill will be efficient; that it has teeth; that it has the power fully defined to adduce all the facts needed and lay a basis for the only just revision of the tariff this country can have.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that under two rules of the House this amendment is clearly not in order. Clause 7 of Rule XVI provides that a subject different from that under consideration may not be introduced under color of amendment. I wish to refer the Chairman to two precedents that seem to me to be in order on this point:

On December 31, 1827, Mr. Rollin C. Mallary, of Vermont, presented this resolution from the Committee on Manufactures:

"Resolved, That the Committee on Manufactures be invested with the power to send for persons and papers."

It was explained that the committee wished this power in order to acquire information to be used in framing a tariff bill. Mr. Andrew Steward, of Pennsylvania, proposed an amendment to strike out all after the word "Resolved" and insert:

"That it is expedient to amend the existing tariff laws by increasing the duties on the following importations—raw wool and woolens, bar iron," etc.

Mr. John Floyd, of Virginia, made a point of order against the amendment.

The Speaker (Mr. Andrew Stevenson, of Virginia) decided that the amendment was not in order, inasmuch as the proposition was on a subject different from that under consideration, and consequently inadmissible, under color of amendment, by the rules and practice of the House.

Now, one other precedent. I refer you now to a decision made in 1880 by Representative Carlisle, of Kentucky, who was then presiding as Chairman of the Whole House:

On March 17, 1880, the House was considering "a bill making appropriations to supply certain deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes," when Mr. Otho R. Singleton, of Mississippi, offered an amendment for the purpose of repealing the law making the Public Printer an officer appointed by the President, making the Public Printer an elective officer of the House of Representatives, etc.

Mr. John A. McMahon, of Ohio, made a point of order against the amendment.

After debate the Chairman ruled.

I am not going to read all of it. It is found in Hinds' Precedents, volume 5, page 422. Among other things, the Chairman said:

It will be observed that each of these rules admitted amendments introducing new motions or propositions, if they were not offered as substitutes for the motion or proposition under debate. But in March, 1822, the House changed the rule of 1789 so as to make it read as follows:

"No motion or proposition on a subject different from that under consideration shall be admitted under color of amendment."

And in this form the rule has stood ever since, and now constitutes a part of the seventh clause of Rule XVI in the recent revision. The rule does not prohibit a committee reporting a bill from embracing in it as many different subjects as it may choose—

That was just as the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] called attention to in the beginning—

But after the bill has been reported to the House no different subject can be introduced into it by amendment, whether as a substitute or otherwise.

Also, again, the Chairman, Mr. Carlisle, said this:

It is not always easy to determine whether or not a proposed amendment relates to a subject different from that under consideration within the meaning of the rule; and it is especially difficult to do so when, as in the present instance, the amendment may, by reason of the terms it employs, appear to have a remote relation to the original subject.

Mr. Chairman Carlisle continues:

It neither increases nor diminishes the amount proposed to be appropriated by the bill; nor does it in any manner affect the expenditure of the money proposed to be appropriated by the bill.

So I make the same point, Mr. Chairman, that this proposed amendment in no way affects the revenue to be raised by this bill. Not only that, Mr. Chairman, but it seems to me the strongest of all reasons that can be given under the more recent rule we have adopted. Clause 3 of Rule XXI provides no amendment shall be offered which is not germane to the subject matter in the bill. And that is quite different from the subject matter of the bill; and yet gentlemen have used the terms indiscriminately so far during this discussion.

Now, what was the subject matter in the bill?

Section 1 of the tariff bill imposes duties and prescribes the free list, section 2 contains the income-tax provisions, and sections 3 and 4 are the administrative sections. But, Mr. Chairman, I do say this, in the administration provisions in this bill you will find nowhere any subject matter, in any one of them, to which the provisions embraced in the motion submitted by the gentleman from New York are germane. Let us see. There are three substantive propositions, as I understand it, that are embraced in the motion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE]. This commission that he proposes is to do what? First, it is to investigate the cost of production of all articles affected by the tariff.

I wish to inquire of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] and of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] to what provision in the pending bill is that germane? We have conferred no such authority on our President in this bill or on anyone else.

Second. The second substantive proposition carried in the gentleman's motion is that a tariff board shall investigate with special reference to the prices paid domestic and foreign labor. To what proposition of our bill is that germane, I again inquire of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]?

The third proposition is that the Tariff Board provided for in this amendment shall investigate foreign tariffs and determine their effects. To what proposition in this bill is that germane?

So that, Mr. Chairman, even under clause 7 of Rule XVI, fairly construed, and even construed with liberality, it seems to me the weight of authority is that this amendment would not be in order, because it is really a different subject matter that is introduced by it.

But when you consider the modification of the rules of this House that was established by the third clause of Rule XXI, adopted at the beginning of the last Congress, it seems to me there is no doubt that this amendment is clearly out of order, because you can take the three substantive propositions that are carried in the gentleman's motion—first, to investigate the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad, and there is no proposition in our bill, administrative or otherwise, to which it fairly relates; and, second, the same thing can be said about the difference in the cost of labor; and, third, the same thing also can be said about the effects of foreign tariffs—so that I say there is no one of the three substantive propositions carried in the motion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] that is germane to anything in this bill, and I therefore think that the point of order against the gentleman's motion ought to be sustained.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, the only question here is whether this amendment is germane to any part of the tariff bill. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] have fairly pointed out the provisions under which the President is directed to ascertain information. This amendment is germane to those provisions. Even if no such clauses were included, this amendment would be germane to any bill raising revenue, under the interpretation which this House has given more than once to the meaning of those words, "raising revenue."

The question of the meaning of the words "raising revenue" does not happen to have come up, so far as I know, in this particular form, but it has come up—in fact, I raised it myself—in connection with a question of privilege. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] a number of years ago claimed the right to bring before the House as a matter of privilege a bill consolidating customs districts throughout the country. I raised the point of order that the question was not a matter of privilege, because, as I held, a bill for the consolidation of customs districts is not a bill raising revenue.

I also raised another point of order, which was sustained; but as to my point of order that a bill consolidating customs districts was not a bill raising revenue, I was overruled by Mr. Speaker Cannon on the 12th day of February, 1906. You will find the decision recorded on page 2453 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, a copy of which I have sent up to the Chair.

If the Chair will observe, at the bottom of the first column, on page 2453, at the place where I have marked the book, the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] moved that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union to consider the bill to provide for the consolidation and reorganization of customs-collection districts. Against this motion I raised the two points of order of which I have spoken.

Now, if the Chair will turn to the bottom of page 2454, he will find the ruling of Mr. Speaker Cannon:

> The SPEAKER The Chair is ready to rule, unless the gentleman desires to address the Chair further. The Chair would be ready to follow, touching the first point of order made by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER], the ruling by Mr. Speaker Reed, in which ruling the Chair concurs. Even without that ruling the Chair would be inclined to hold that this bill under the rule was privileged.

Now, what is the ruling of Mr. Speaker Reed, to which Mr. Speaker Cannon referred? If the Chair will turn back to page 2453 and look near the bottom of the second column he will find that—

> On May 4, 1898, Mr. Charles H. Grosvenor, of Ohio, called up as a privileged matter the joint resolution (H. Res. 27) to repeal the joint resolution in reference to the free zone on the frontier of Mexico, the subject involved being the transportation of dutiable goods and its relation to smuggling.
> Mr. Samuel W. T. Lanham, of Texas, made the point of order that this was not a bill "raising revenue."

The Chair, who at that time was Mr. Speaker Reed, ruled, as the Chair will find by turning to page 2454, at the top of the first column, as follows:

> So it seems to the Chair that, this being a measure relating to the revenues and the collection of the revenues, and without determining whether it increases or decreases the revenue, it is a matter that comes strictly within the rules and can be considered under the rules.
> The Chair therefore overrules the question of order raised by the gentleman from Texas.

Now, of course those were not exactly parallel cases. In this instance it is not a question of privilege. It is a question of germaneness. What I wish to point out to the Chair is that these rulings indicate the practice of this House in the interpretation of the meaning of the words "bill raising revenue," and for that reason I ask the attention of the Chair to these rulings.

The CHAIRMAN. If this came in as an independent bill, reported from the Ways and Means Committee, would it, in the opinion of the gentleman, be privileged?

Mr. GARDNER. Unquestionably.

Mr. SHERLEY. If the Chair will permit—not to cover ground already covered, but to answer the gentleman from Massachusetts—the contention of the gentleman, boiled down, is that whatever would have been a proper matter for the Committee on Ways and Means to report as privileged would be germane to this bill, because this matter is privileged and properly comes from the Ways and Means Committee.

Mr. GARDNER. The gentleman ought not to put into my mouth such a non sequitur as that.

Mr. SHERLEY. The gentleman from Massachusetts did not put it that baldly, because that would have destroyed the gentleman's argument; but the effect of his statement is that the Chair held once that a bill undertaking to consolidate certain customs districts was a privileged bill, that could be reported from the Ways and Means Committee, and therefore that it would be germane to a revenue bill; but the proposition with which the Chair is confronted is whether such a bill as the present one having been reported, there is anything in it to which this proposed amendment can be held to be germane. It is not a question as to whether this particular Tariff Board amendment would be a matter proper to be referred to the Committee on Ways and Means, and reported by it, and which, being reported by it, would be privileged, but it is whether there is anything in this bill raising revenue which makes this amendment germane to it.

Now, I submit to the Chair that nothing has been advanced by the other side to show that the matter is germane to the bill. It does not affect the raising of revenue as applied in this bill. It does not affect rates at all. It simply provides for the creation of a board which shall have certain defined duties. And, by the way, in passing, it does not enlarge in the slightest the power that now exists to ascertain everything that is desired in this particular, because the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce created last year by a Democratic House has all the power that is given in this bill, in language as explicit as that contained in this amendment. Now, it would be very much more appropriate to amend that law than to add it to this particular revenue bill.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SHERLEY. Yes.

Mr. MANN Is there any provision under which the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce can subpœna witnesses and take their testimony under oath?

Mr. SHERLEY. I do not think there is any doubt that the bureau has ample power to make such investigations and reports as are necessary to advise Congress or the President fully on tariff matters.

Mr. MANN. I notice that the gentleman did not answer the question.

Mr. SHERLEY. Well, the gentleman asked a question that is not necessarily germane. I have the provision that transfers the duties of the old bureau to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. I am not prepared to say offhand whether that bureau would have the right to subpœna witnesses or not, but I am prepared to say that in several respects the language of this law creating the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce makes a more complete bureau for the investigation of tariff matters than the proposed amendment of the gentleman from New York.

Mr. MANN. Surely the gentleman does not say that seriously.

Mr. SHERLEY. It is not only said seriously, but I think it is demonstrably accurate.

The law creating the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce is found in Public Act, No. 299, approved August 23, 1912, and is as follows:

> The Bureau of Manufactures and the Bureau of Statistics, both of the Department of Commerce and Labor, are hereby consolidated into one bureau to be known as the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, to take effect July 1, 1912, and the duties required by law to be performed by the Bureau of Manufactures and the Bureau of Statistics are transferred to and shall after that date be performed by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.
> Those certain duties of the Department of Labor, or Bureau of Labor, contained in section 7 of the act approved June 13, 1888, that established the same, which especially charged it "to ascertain, at as early a date as possible, and whenever industrial changes shall make it essential, the cost of producing articles at the time dutiable in the United States, in leading countries where such articles are produced, by fully specified units of production, and under a classification showing the different elements of cost, or approximate cost, of such articles of production, including the wages paid in such industries per day, week, month, or year, or by the piece; and hours employed per day; and the profits of manufacturers and producers of such articles; and the comparative cost of living, and the kind of living; what articles are controlled by trusts or other combinations of capital, business operations, or labor, and what effect said trusts, or other combinations of capital, business operations, or labor have on production and prices," are hereby transferred to and shall hereafter be discharged by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, and it shall be also the duty of said Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce to make such special investigation and report on particular subjects when required to do so by the President or either House of Congress.
> Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce: Chief of bureau, $4,000; assistant chiefs of bureau, 1 at $3,000, 1 at $2,750; Chief of Division of Consular Reports, $2,500; chief clerk, $2,250; stenographer to chief of the bureau, $1,600; clerks—7 of class 4, 5 of class 3, 1 at $1,500, 11 of class 2, 14 of class 1, 17 at $1,000 each, 11 at $900 each; messenger; 5 assistant messengers; 4 laborers; laborer, $480; in all, $104,860.
> To enable the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce to collate and publish the tariffs of foreign countries in the English language, with the equivalents in currency, weights, and measures of the United States of all such foreign terms used in said tariffs, and to furnish information to Congress and the Executive relative to customs laws and regulations of foreign countries, and the purchase of books and periodicals, $10,000.

To further promote and develop the foreign and domestic commerce of the United States, $60,000, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of Commerce and Labor.

Mr. GARDNER. The gentleman from Kentucky is mistaken in supposing that I cited only one case. I cited the free-zone case in Mexico, and I cited the case of the consolidation of the customhouses and districts. In both cases the Committee on Ways and Means claimed privilege for their bills under section 56 of Rule XI, which gives the Committee on Ways and Means the right to report at any time "on bills raising revenue."

Mr. SHERLEY. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. GARDNER. Yes.

Mr. SHERLEY. Suppose there was a bill reported out by the Ways and Means Committee that dealt with internal revenue alone and only one subject of internal revenue; does the gentleman think it would be in order to offer as an amendment to that a reciprocity agreement touching customs duties with Canada?

Mr. GARDNER. Probably not. Now, Mr. Chairman, in the two cases which I cited privilege was claimed under that provision of the rules which gives the Committee on Ways and Means the right to report at any time "on bills raising revenue." There is nothing else under the sun for which the Committee on Ways and Means may claim privilege except bills raising revenue. Such being the case, the question has arisen, What is the meaning which the House gives to the words "bills raising revenue"? Twice it has been decided distinctly that the words "bills raising revenue" must be construed in the broadest possible way.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I believe the committee is indebted to the gentleman from Massachusetts for raising an issue which simplifies the determination of this question. My understanding of the contention of the gentleman from Massachusetts is that the criterion in this instance is as to whether a particular bill is privileged under the rule giving the committee the right to report bills affecting the revenue. That rule has been very broadly construed in sustaining the power of the Committee on Ways and Means, and I take it that the contention of the gentleman from Massachusetts is that to a bill raising revenue, reported from the Committee on Ways and Means, which is a privileged matter, any amendment which, if proposed as an independent measure, would be privileged as a separate measure if reported from the Committee on Ways and Means, would be in order as an amendment to this bill.

The gentleman from Massachusetts has not been as frank in calling attention to the precedents on this occasion as he usually is. Under paragraph 56 of Rule XI, section 772 of the digest, where the authorities are collated, there is an authority to which the gentleman has failed to call attention.

The digest sets forth:

The privilege of the Committee on Ways and Means to report bills raising revenue is broadly construed to cover bills relating to the revenue, but a bill providing for a tariff commission and a declaratory resolution on a subject relating to the revenue were held not to be within the privilege.

Hinds' Precedents, volume 4, section 4626, presents this very case, where a bill had been reported from the Committee on Ways and Means providing for a tariff commission, and it was held not to be a revenue bill within the meaning of the rule making revenue bills privileged.

4626. A bill providing for a tariff commission was held not to be a revenue bill within the meaning of the rule giving such bills privilege. On March 7, 1882, the House being in Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, Mr. John A. Kasson, of Iowa, moved that the committee proceed to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2315) to provide for the appointment of a commission to investigate the question of the tariff and internal-revenue law, which had been reported from the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. Edward K. Valentine, of Nebraska, made the point of order that this bill might not be taken up out of order, since it was neither a revenue bill nor an appropriation bill nor a bill for the improvement of rivers and harbors.

At that time, Mr. Chairman, under the rules of the House the practice was instead of moving to go into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union to consider some particular bill to move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union to consider bills on the Union or the Private Calendar, and then by motion a bill was selected for consideration. If it were a privileged bill, it could be taken up out of order, thus putting it in the same category as under our present practice, where the motion is to go into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union to consider revenue bills as privileged matter.

After debate, the Chairman ruled—

The Chair finds on inspection of the bill, in the first instance, that it provides for a commission called "the Tariff Commission"; that in the second section it gives the number of such commissioners, provides for their salaries, and the payment of such officers and assistants as may be provided. In the third section the duty of such commission is prescribed. It is to take into consideration and thoroughly investigate all the various questions relating to the agricultural, commercial, mercantile, manufacturing, mining, and industrial interests of the United States so far as the same may be necessary to the establishment of a judicious tariff, or a revision of the existing tariff; and for the purpose of fully examining the matters which may come before it, such commission, in the prosecution of its inquiries, is empowered to visit such different portions and sections of the country as it may deem advisable. The fourth section provides that the commission shall make to Congress final report of the result of its investigation at certain times prescribed in the bill.

It is apparent that the bill was very similar in its chief characteristics to the proposed amendment of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE].

The Chair finds in the memoranda of the bill it was introduced and referred to the Committee on Ways and Means January 9, 1882, and on February 8, 1882, was reported back with amendments, committed to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and ordered to be printed.

Reference has been made in the course of the debate to a certain clause of the rules in order to assist a proper decision. Rule XI provides:

"All proposed legislation shall be referred to the committees named in the preceding rule, as follows, namely: Subjects relating to the revenue and the bonded debt of the United States, to the Committee on Ways and Means."

Under clause 4 of the same rule committees are given leave to report at any time on matters therein stated. The Committee on Ways and Means is authorized to report on bills raising revenue.

The single question the Chair is called on to decide is this: Is the present bill one entitled to precedence under clause 4 of Rule XXIII in its consideration before the Committee of the Whole? If it is entitled to such precedence, it is entitled because of the language of the rule, and that language is "bills for raising revenue."

The Chair would suggest no light is thrown on the subject, in his judgment, by the citation of Rule XI, regulating the submission of certain matters to the committee. Nor, again, is any help derived by the rule which relates to the report of the committee. Plainly the consideration of those is quite immaterial at the present moment.

Is this a bill for raising revenue? It is a bill to instruct a commission to investigate the various great interests of the country and to report the result of these investigations to Congress.

It will be noticed the language of the fourth clause is not bills relating to revenue; it will be noticed it is not subjects relating to revenue; nor is it revenue bills, but bills for raising revenue. In other words, to carry out the provisions and power expressed in the Constitution authorizing Congress to lay and collect taxes, duties, and imposts. The Chair understands the words "bills raising revenue" to mean bills laying taxes, authorizing duties and imposts within the provisions of the Constitution; and the Chair believes that that is the proper construction of this rule.

The question is one simply of the precedence of business. The other questions which have been alluded to as of great importance, the problem whether or not in certain stages of consideration amendments might be offered, are not material to that discussion of consideration. It is sufficient to decide those when they are reached.

Then the Chair, citing some other matters which are not quite material, sustained the point of order, and ruled that the bill had not precedence under the rules at that time.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Yes.

Mr. GARDNER. The gentleman has omitted to read the second footnote to that case on page 956. Will the gentleman be kind enough to read that or allow me to read it?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, I called attention to it. It says:

See section 4020 for the form of rules, etc.

I called attention at the outset of my statement to the fact that procedure at that time was different under the rules than the existing procedure. At that time the motion was to go into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering bills on the Union Calendar. When the committee was formed, bills which were then privileged, because the committee had the right to report at any time, could be taken up out of order on the calendar. The practice now is different in that under our present rules and practice the motion is made at the outset that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering a designated bill, and the bill must be of the privileged character in order to permit the motion to prevail against objection.

If the gentleman from Alabama at any time on any day after the Journal has been approved submitted a motion that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the purpose of considering a bill to create a tariff commission, if the point of order were interposed that it was not a privileged motion, there can be no doubt in the mind of the Chair that the Chair would hold the motion could not prevail, but must be declared out of order. The whole argument of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] was to the effect that this proposed amendment was in order because it was germane under the rule, it being a matter over which the Committee on Ways and Means had jurisdiction, and that it would be privileged because it came within the rulings describing bills as bills raising revenue. If the gentleman's contention can not be sustained, then the entire argument must fall.

Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I yield.

Mr. GARDNER. Will not the gentleman admit he has been discussing a case decided by Chairman Robinson under another form of the rule and overruled by two Speakers of the House, as the footnotes clearly indicate?

Mr. FITZGERALD. The footnotes in the volume of Hinds' Precedents which I have do not so indicate.

Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman admit that he has been reading the ruling of Chairman Robinson, and that it was overruled by Mr. Speaker Reed and Mr. Speaker Cannon?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Oh, no.

Mr. GARDNER. That is the ruling before the rule was changed——

Mr. FITZGERALD. I make no such statement. If the ruling has been substantially overruled by Mr. Speaker Reed and Mr. Speaker Cannon, the very distinguished gentleman who prepared this digest, and who was Mr. Reed's parliamentary clerk and admired as a parliamentarian above all men who had ever served in Congress and for whose decisions he had a particularly high regard, would have clearly indicated in the notes that this decision was no longer considered as binding, but had been overruled by Mr. Speaker Reed; but there is no such note, there is no such indication.

Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Just let me finish this statement, because I wish it complete. If the gentleman from Maine, who prepared——

Mr. GARDNER. Just a moment——

Mr. FITZGERALD (continuing). If Mr. HINDS, who prepared the Precedents, which are so valuable, had any suspicion that this ruling was not a precedent to be followed, he would not have taken a page and a half in setting forth in fine type the reasoning of Mr. Robinson, the chairman of the committee, who made this decision.

Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman yield to me for one question?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Yes; I yield.

Mr. GARDNER. What is the meaning of this sentence in Mr. HINDS's footnotes: "It is now the usage under the rule to move to take up any bill"?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I supposed the gentleman from Massachusetts was more familiar with the rules than he indicates, but perhaps it is necessary even to remind him of what the practice is. Under the rules to-day, Mr. Chairman, there is what is known as the morning hour, not very frequently taken advantage of, but nevertheless there is a morning hour under the rule. When the committees are called, for one hour, any bill upon the House Calendar, at the direction of the committee reporting it, can be called up for consideration. At the expiration of one hour from the time the call of committees has commenced any Member, if he be authorized by a committee to do so, can take a Member off the floor and submit a motion that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of some particular bill upon the Union Calendar. In 1882, if I recall what the practice was at that time, although I have not refreshed my memory recently, instead of submitting a motion to consider a particular bill the motion in order was to resolve the House into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the consideration of bills on the Union Calendar. Under our present practice one amendment is in order to a motion; that is, to take up a particular bill and substitute another. If my memory be inaccurate, I am quite sure the gentleman from Massachusetts and his collaborator, the gentleman from Maine, who prepared these precedents, will correct me, and I shall wait a moment to give them that opportunity. If not, I shall proceed further. While I have not read the rules which were in force in 1882 for some time, yet——

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MANN. The motions which the gentleman made attracted our attention, but we could not hear what the gentleman said.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I will repeat it. Under our present practice—and I invite the attention of the gentlemen from New England, so that I may not be compelled to make this statement a third time; I invite the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] and the gentleman from Maine [Mr. HINDS] to give attention to this statement, so I may pass beyond this point in the argument—under our rules at the present time there is a morning hour.

Mr. GARDNER. Will the gentleman yield? I heard the gentleman's previous explanation.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Well, the gentleman from Illinois, the leader of the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts, called my attention to the fact he could not hear.

Mr. GARDNER. I will answer, if the gentleman wishes me, now.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The gentleman called my attention to the fact that my statement had not been heard by the gentleman.

Mr. GARDNER. I heard the whole dissertation on the morning hour and on the motion to go into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, which follows it under the order of business. The subject has nothing to do with the footnote. The gentleman knows that any bill on the Union Calendar may be reached under the next order of business after the morning hour. He knows that the footnote can not possibly have any reference to that circumstance.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The gentleman's illuminating explanation has not satisfied me and has not demonstrated that my statement of the practice now and in 1882 is incorrect.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will suggest to the gentleman from New York that his opinion is that the question of whether or not the matter is privileged——

Mr. FITZGERALD. That is quite true, Mr. Chairman. It is not. But it has a very important bearing on the question as to whether this amendment is germane. It was to that point that I was coming. Because if the contention of the gentleman from Massachusetts can not be sustained the entire argument of the gentlemen on that side must fall. Under decisions, entirely new subject matter, although it may have some relation to matters in the bill, can not be admitted as an amendment on the theory that it is germane.

One valuable test to ascertain whether this proposed amendment is germane to the subject matter in the bill is this test as to whether if it were contained in a separate bill and reported from the Committee on Ways and Means it would be privileged, because the Committee on Ways and Means could only report such matters as privileged under the rule as relate to the revenue. As it has been held that a bill creating a tariff commission is not privileged, it must be a matter distinct from the subject matter of a revenue bill. It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, in view of the difficulty at times of determining what is the subject matter of a bill, and how some matters relating to one another may still not be germane, that here is a test for the pending question that clearly demonstrates that this particular provision can not be held to be germane to subject matter in this bill.

Mr. COOPER. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER]?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I will.

Mr. COOPER. The gentleman says that the proposed amendment is not germane to the subject matter in the bill or of the bill. Now, I ask the gentleman this question: The bill has more than one purpose, has it not? The title says the bill is a bill "To reduce tariff duties." That is one purpose. It further says that it is a bill "To provide revenue." That is another purpose. And then, that it is a bill "For other purposes."

Mr. FITZGERALD. Well, specify them.

Mr. COOPER. One of them, these other purposes, is distinctly specified in paragraph A, on page 195. I ask the gentleman from New York if that is not true. Paragraph A, on page 195 of the bill, provides for something entirely distinct from the reduction of revenue rates or the providing of revenue.

Mr. FITZGERALD. That may be——

Mr. COOPER. Please permit me to ask a question. That paragraph expressly authorizes and empowers the President of the United States to negotiate trade agreements with a view to increasing importations into this country and to extending our exports to foreign countries, and with a view to mutual concessions looking to freer trade and further reciprocal expansion of trade. That is the language of the bill. Now, I ask the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] if that paragraph does not involve inquiry for the ascertainment of facts, which inquiry it is impossible for the President himself to conduct, and, that being so, does not the amendment of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] simply provide the machinery necessary to ascertain the facts, the effect of rates abroad, the effect of the exactions of foreign laws, the effect of foreign export duties and bounties, and of any regulations imposed at any time by any foreign country upon the importation into or sale in any such foreign country of any products of the United States, in order to enable the President properly to execute this provision authorizing him to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements with a view to extending our trade? It simply provides the machinery absolutely necessary for the ascertainment of the facts, without which it will be impossible for the President successfully to negotiate reciprocal trade agreements.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Whatever opinion the gentleman may have as to whether this amendment provides the machinery to enable that to be done, it does not itself make a provision to provide a tariff commission or provide the machinery to carry out the purposes of the bill germane under the rule. For instance, I call the gentleman's attention to this reference in the digest:

Subjects are not necessarily germane because they are related. Thus the following have been held not to be germane:
To a proposition relating to the terms of Senators, an amendment changing the manner of election.

That merely provided the machinery for the election of the Senators whose terms were changed, but it was not sufficient to make the provision germane, and it was not held to be in order. And so in this instance, merely because some machinery is needed to enable the President to discharge duties imposed upon him, it does not necessarily mean that legislation providing the machinery is germane to the legislation imposing the duties.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, I do not believe that it is necessary for the Chair to decide the issue raised between the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] and the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD]. I do not believe that the Chair in passing upon this question will consider the question whether this amendment is offered at the proper place or not, but he will decide whether it is proper at any place in the bill.

Now, Mr. Chairman, there are two purposes in the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE], one looking to the readjustment of import duties in the future and the other to aid the President in the administration of this very law.

Now, with reference to the first—and my colleague from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] has called the attention of the House to section 4—I will ask the Chair to turn to that section, paragraph A.

The CHAIRMAN. What page?

Mr. LENROOT. Page 195. It reads:

That for the purpose of readjusting the present duties on importations into the United States and at the same time to encourage the export trade of this country—

And so forth. Now let me stop right there for a moment. This amendment looks toward a future adjustment of tariff duties. This very bill now under consideration before the committee also has opened the same door, because it looks toward a future adjustment of tariff duties. This bill as it is framed at present proposes doing it in a certain way, to wit, by empowering the President to negotiate trade agreements with foreign nations. And then it provides that when those treaties have been negotiated they shall be submitted to Congress, to the House as well as to the Senate, for ratification.

Now, Mr. Chairman, supposing this amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] was offered to paragraph A, so that it would read: "That for the purpose of readjusting the present duties on importations into the United States, and at the same time to encourage the export trade of this country, the President shall" do these things "and also a tariff commission shall be created," just as is proposed by the gentleman from New York.

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Wisconsin yield to the gentleman from Georgia?

Mr. LENROOT. Certainly.

Mr. HARDWICK. The Tariff Commission, according to the gentleman's amendment, is to do three things, which are entirely different from that provided for in the section of the bill which the gentleman refers to.

Mr. LENROOT. We shall see about that. The gentleman says it is to do three things. There are only two, as a matter of fact, first, to ascertain the cost of production, and, second, to aid the President, and they are strictly germane to the provisions of the bill. Now, those all tend either to the administration of the law or to a future adjustment of tariff duties, just as you provide in the beginning of paragraph A.

But aside from that, Mr. Chairman, let us consider its germaneness with reference to the language of section A, empowering the President to negotiate treaties with other countries. What is the information that the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York proposes to secure? Information as to differences in cost of production, differences in wages, differences in prices. Will the Chair rule that that information is not of value to the President of the United States; is not of value to the Congress of the United States when those treaties shall be prepared by the President and returned to the Congress for ratification?

Of course, I appreciate the fact that one side of this House does not believe, or at least some of the time does not believe [laughter on the Republican side], that costs of production have anything to do with a treaty or with a tariff duty, and yet, of course, the Chair would not rule it out upon that question, knowing that one great school of political thought does believe that the cost of production was a very material element in the fixing of import duties.

Now, with reference to the amendment itself—and I shall be very brief—there are but two sections in the amendment for the Chair to consider in this connection, and they are sections III and IV.

Section 3 empowers the commission to make this investigation of cost of production, and so forth, for what purpose? For such facts as—may be necessary or convenient in fixing import duties or in aiding the President and other officers of the Government in the administration of the customs laws.

What law? This bill, soon to become a law, that is now under consideration. And is it not a germane proposition to provide, as a part of the administrative features of the law, another body of experts to aid the President in administering this law?

And in order to show that he will need information of this kind, let me call the attention of the Chair to section 4:

That to enable the President to secure information as to the effect of tariff rates, restrictions, exactions, or any regulations imposed at any time by any foreign country upon the importation into or sale in any such foreign country of any products of the United States, and as to any export bounty paid or export duty imposed or prohibition made by any country upon the exportation of any article to the United States which discriminates against the United States or the products thereof, and to assist the President in negotiating trade agreements with foreign nations and other administrative provisions of the customs laws, the commission shall, from time to time, make report, as the President shall direct.

Now, you have a section in the administrative part of this bill which provides that if any foreign country shall grant a bounty upon articles exported to the United States there shall be added to the rates you have proposed in this bill to the import duties the amount of that bounty. And is it not going to be necessary for the President to get that information? And in this amendment that the gentleman from New York offers it is expressly provided that this proposed tariff commission shall, for the purpose of assisting the President of the United States, secure this information.

Further on you have another section, known as the dumping clause, that has already been referred to, that where articles are sold or invoiced at a less price here than they are commonly sold for abroad there shall be an added duty imposed on those articles. It will be necessary for the President of the United States to get that information.

And so all of the information that is sought to be secured through the medium of a tariff commission is information that is proper and necessary under the terms of this bill, and the Chair can well throw aside any question of whether this would under some circumstances be privileged or not, because, it seems to me, the Chair must find that the language in the administrative features of this bill is such as absolutely to make this amendment germane.

Mr. HARDWICK. Suppose out of a good many propositions embraced in the motion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] one, and one only, might be considered germane. Could that be coupled up with a lot of other things that would be held not germane and the amendment of the gentleman from New York be held in order?

Mr. LENROOT. I admit that it could not; and I have tried to show that every particle of investigation that the Tariff Commission is directed to make is proper and necessary under the various sections of this bill. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, we all differ on many questions, and after listening for many years to arguments on points of order I recognize the fact that gentlemen can differ further on what is germane to a bill than on any other subject. But it does not seem to me there can be the question of a doubt that this proposition is not germane to this bill.

A few minutes ago the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] said that a revenue bill was one which raised money. As a matter of fact, the language of the rule is that bills affecting the revenue are privileged in the House. Now, there can be no question under that rule that this amendment does not affect revenue. It may affect the information of a body of men who intend to write a bill that affects revenue, but in itself it has no clause whatever that affects the purpose of this bill. Now, gentlemen seek to hang the germaneness of this bill on the proposition that we have directed the President of the United States to inform the Congress as to certain facts in reference to the importation of goods into this country. That does not make this proposition germane to it. This House within a year has established the machinery of government by which the President of the United States can assemble the facts desired; and through that machinery, already established, can give the Congress not only the information that we call for in this bill, but can give Congress all the information called for in this so-called Tariff Board amendment. The Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce was builded for that purpose.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] says that I have recanted. No man in this House ever asserted more positively than I have asserted before and reiterate now, that I desire that this House and the Ways and Means Committee shall be given all information. But I know from past experience that these tariff commissions are junketing boards; that they are places in which high favorites may draw royal salaries. We have created for the purpose of administration of this act a bureau of the Government that will be effective and can be effective.

Now, Mr. Chairman, there is about as much logic in saying that because we have called for a report by the President, or called for a consideration of the dumping clause in this bill, where there is other machinery of the Government to ascertain the facts, that this board is germane to this bill because it might produce machinery on which these facts should be ascertained as it is to say that a bill reorganizing the entire judicial system of the United States is germane to this revenue bill.

Why, there is clause after clause in the administration features of this bill that says that the circuit court and the district court of the United States shall have jurisdiction over certain offenses, and that they are authorized to punish people for violating the terms of this law. You can say with just as much logic and just as much force that the machinery of the courts of this land is to-day ineffective to carry out the provisions of this bill, and therefore it is in order and germane to bring before this House an amendment that would revise our entire judicial system. Why not do so? If the only peg you have to hang this contention on is that you need, according to your views, a better piece of machinery to ascertain the facts than you have to-day, why can not you contend just as legitimately that you need a better piece of machinery to punish crime than you have to-day?

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, I call the attention of the Chair to the fact that section 56, Rule XI, gives to the Committee on Ways and Means the privilege to report at any time "on bills raising revenue." I hope the gentleman from Alabama, who has contradicted me, will insert in the RECORD the provision of the rule which I understood him to say gives the committee the privilege to report at any time on bills affecting the revenue.

The CHAIRMAN. The bill being considered by the committee is H. R. 3321, entitled "A bill to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes." The subject of the bill is presumed to be and is in fact stated very fully in the title. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] has proposed as a new paragraph an amendment at the end of section 1 to create a tariff commission. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] makes the point of order that the amendment proposed by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] is not in order, because it is not germane to the bill under the rules of the House.

Under general parliamentary law, as the Chair remembers the history of it, such an amendment would unquestionably be in order, and if it be not in order now it is because of the rules of the House which have been adopted for its guidance.

Section 7 of Rule XVI is an old rule in this House, having been in operation, if the Chair remembers correctly, since 1822. That part of it which seems to be germane to this discussion now is:

> No motion or proposition on a subject different from that under consideration shall be admitted under color of amendment.

At the beginning of the last Congress an additional rule was placed in the rules of the House, which reads:

> No amendment shall be in order to any bill affecting revenue which is not germane to the subject matter in the bill, nor shall any amendment to any item of such bill be in order which does not directly relate to the item to which the amendment is proposed.

The last paragraph which the Chair read admittedly would have no application to the particular case now under consideration before the committee. But the language of the first part of this clause 3, Rule XXI—"no amendment shall be in order to any bill affecting revenue which is not germane to the subject matter of the bill"—evidently was intended to still further restrict the policy contained in clause 7 of Rule XVI. Now, it is admitted by all that the Committee on Ways and Means, as, indeed, I think, every other committee in the House except the Committee on Appropriations, can bring in as a substantive part of a bill legislative matters that would not be in order if offered as an amendment from the floor of the House. Such clauses will not for such reason be subject to a point of order when brought in as a substantive part of the bill.

So that question of whether this would be in order, if it had been brought in as a substantive part of the bill, need not be passed upon by the Chair. Neither does the Chair think that the question of whether it would be a privileged matter as suggested by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] is of consequence in this decision. However that may be, the question, after all, whether the matter is privileged or nonprivileged, is, Is it germane; is the proposed amendment obnoxious to clause 7 of Rule XVI, and to clause 3 of Rule XXI?

The Chair has examined this amendment with considerable care, and has sought as best he could to apply it to the bill under consideration before the committee, the purpose of which is expressed in the title. The Chair does not believe that in its spirit and intention, as fairly to be deduced from the language of the amendment proposed, it is the purpose of the amendment to bring about legislation which is germane to the matter contained in the bill under consideration, and the Chair, therefore, sustains the point of order.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I respectfully appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois appeals from the decision of the Chair. The question is, Shall the decision of the Chair stand as the decision of the committee. The Chair will ask the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. RUSSELL] to take the chair.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, to save the Chair any embarrassment I will ask for tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and Mr. MANN and Mr. UNDERWOOD were named to act as tellers.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 164, noes 87.

So the committee determined that the decision of the Chair should stand as the decision of the committee.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, as a new paragraph, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, by adding a new paragraph following the word "Zaffer," in line 27, page 132, as follows:

"661. The provisions of the dutiable list and the free list of this section shall constitute the minimum tariff of the United States.

"(a) That from and after the 31st day of March, 1914, except as otherwise specially provided for in this section, there shall be levied, collected, and paid on all articles when imported from any foreign country into the United States, or into any of its possessions (except the Philippine Islands and the islands of Guam and Tutuila), the rates of duty prescribed by the schedules and paragraphs of the dutiable list herein, and in addition thereto 25 per cent ad valorem; which rates shall constitute the maximum tariff of the United States: Provided, That whenever, after the 31st day of March, 1914, and so long thereafter as the President shall be satisfied, in view of the character of the concessions granted by the minimum tariff of the United States, that the Government of any foreign country imposes no terms or restrictions, either in the way of tariff rates or provisions, trade or other regulations, charges, exactions, or in any other manner, directly or indirectly, upon the importation into or the sale in such foreign country of any agricultural, manufactured, or other product of the United States, which unduly discriminate against the United States or the products thereof, and that such foreign country pays no export bounty or imposes no export duty or prohibition upon the exportation of any article to the United States which unduly discriminates against the United States or the products thereof, and that such foreign country accords to the agricultural, manufactured, or other products of the United States treatment which is reciprocal and equivalent, thereupon and thereafter, upon proclamation to this effect by the President of the United States, all articles when imported into the United States, or any of its possessions (except the Philippine Islands and the islands of Guam and Tutuila), from such foreign country shall, except as otherwise herein provided, be admitted under the terms of the minimum tariff of the United States as prescribed by section 1 of this act. The proclamation issued by the President under the authority hereby conferred and the application of the minimum tariff thereupon may, in accordance with the facts as found by the President, extend to the whole of any foreign country, or may be confined to or exclude from its effect any dependency, colony, or other political subdivision having authority to adopt and enforce tariff legislation, or to impose restrictions or regulations, or to grant concessions upon the exportation or importation of articles which are, or may be, imported into the United States. Whenever the President shall be satisfied that the conditions which led to the issuance of the proclamation hereinbefore authorized no longer exist, he shall issue a proclamation to this effect, and 90 days thereafter the provisions of the maximum tariff shall be applied to the importation of articles from such country. Whenever the provisions of the maximum tariff of the United States shall be applicable to articles imported from any foreign country they shall be applicable to the products of such country, whether imported directly from the country of production or otherwise.

* * * * * * *

"(b) That the President shall have power and it shall be his duty to give notice, within 10 days after the passage of this act, to all foreign countries with which commercial agreements in conformity with the authority granted by section 3 of the act entitled "An act to provide revenue for the Government and to encourage the industries of the United States," approved July 24, 1897, have been or shall have been entered into, of the intention of the United States to terminate such agreement at a time specified in such notice, which time shall in no case, except as hereinafter provided, be longer than the period of time specified in such agreements, respectively, for notice for their termination; and upon the expiration of the periods when such notice of termination shall become effective the suspension of duties provided for in such agreements shall be revoked, and thereafter importations from said countries shall be subject to no other conditions or rates of duty than those prescribed by this act and such other acts of Congress as may be continued in force: Provided, That until the expiration of the period when the notice of intention to terminate hereinbefore provided for shall have become effective, or until such date prior thereto as the high contracting parties may by mutual consent select, the terms of said commercial agreements shall remain in force: And provided further, That in the case of those commercial agreements or arrangements which contain no stipulations in regard to their termination by diplomatic action, the President is authorized to give to the Governments concerned a notice of termination of six months, which notice shall date from April 30, 1914."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this amendment and all amendments thereto close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Chairman, this is an amendment providing that the maximum and minimum feature shall be applied to the present tariff bill.

There are at present three tariff systems used by the principal nations of the world. The single or unchanging system, which is called the autonomous system, is that adopted by Great Britain. It is appropriate to a country whose tariff is purely fiscal, and it is not adapted to change by negotiation. It is best adapted to a nation which places duties on but a few articles and has no favors to ask and no concessions to offer.

A second plan is the general or "conventional" system. This is a tariff system where rates are established upon a large proportion of imports. Upon this basis special negotiations are entered into with individual nations, by which concessions or reductions are granted in return for like favors. This, in effect, makes all tariff rates subject to separate treaty agreement.

A third method is the maximum and minimum provision, such as I have provided for in this amendment. By this system two rates are established, and the minimum or lesser rates are granted only upon grant of like minimum rates or equivalent concessions.

It is evident that the first system is not adapted to the present bill or to our situation as regards the importation of foreign goods. It is appropriate only where few articles are on the dutiable list, and we have thousands. Such a system is suitable where revenue only is considered, and where tariff rates are placed on a few articles, generally used, but not produced in the importing country. In such case the amount of imports and their cost do not affect domestic production. It is admitted that the present bill is not such as would make this system applicable, and no one suggests the adoption of such a system at present.

There is a provision in the bill which is an attempt to provide for the general or conventional system. But it is a weak and ineffectual attempt. In this provision the President is authorized to negotiate trade agreements with foreign nations, provided such agreements shall be submitted to Congress for ratification. But such power already exists without this provision. Under it President Roosevelt negotiated our present Cuban treaty. Under it President Taft negotiated the ill-fated Canadian reciprocity agreement.

In order to be effective under a system where individual tariff agreements must be made with each Government, power should be lodged in some executive department to negotiate such treaties and make such changes. This we are unwilling to do. The Congress will not relinquish its power to control this great source of revenue, and would have no constitutional power to do so if it desired. With our present system we are almost necessarily precluded from individual trade agreements or reciprocity treaties with every nation from which we receive imports. To place ourselves at their mercy unless such agreements are made is certainly not wise.

It would appear almost self-evident that the system best adapted to our condition is the maximum and minimum system. It is the simplest, subject to the least friction, not open to misconception, not subject to "most favored nation" objections, is more stable and uniform in operation, is most easily administered and most generally understood. Besides it has been tried and has been found not only successful, but notably and exceptionally so.

In its report the Committee on Ways and Means asserts that the maximum and minimum provisions of the Payne law "have not been productive of any effective expansion of our foreign trade and commerce." This is so far from being true as to be ridiculous. Under the provisions of the Payne law passed in 1909 foreign nations were given until March 31, 1910, to grant to the United States their minimum rates or equivalent concessions in order to obtain our minimum rates. Before that date all the principal nations of the world availed themselves of that privilege. As a consequence we obtained for the first time in our history the best rates and terms from all the great nations. It is true that some countries which had before exacted unjust terms in their commercial intercourse with us yielded with reluctance. France did not send her acceptance until March 29, two days only before the time expired. But there was not the slightest friction or difficulty. We treated all alike, and only demanded what others required.

Since this provision went into operation we have enjoyed the largest and most profitable foreign trade the country has ever known. We have increased our exports from $1,663,000,000 in 1909 to $2,204,000,000 in 1912, an increase of $541,000,000. During the same period our imports increased $341,000,000. By this it appears that we not only increased our foreign trade under its provisions more than ever before known, but we increased our sales over and above our purchases $200,000,000. A system under which such results can be achieved ought not lightly to be abandoned.

One wonders why so necessary a measure of self-preservation and defense is omitted. There is, there can be but one answer. It was a Republican measure and it was in the Payne bill. Discard it notwithstanding it had worked such wonderful results; discard it even if its beneficent provisions had given us a better trade position than we had ever before secured; discard it even if it leaves us helpless to our commercial rivals. Can this be considered statesmanship or is it merely petty envy, pique, and resentment?

The report says that the maximum and minimum provision is an attempt to "expand our commerce by force"; that it is a "stand and deliver policy." How absurd is such a contention! Is it an exercise of force to say to a nation, "We will grant our lowest rates if in return we receive yours?" Is it an unjust condition to impose when we say, "You can not receive our best terms until we receive yours?"

The committee declares that the only way to expand our foreign trade "along rational lines is through mutual concessions." That is just what the maximum and minimum provision enables us to do. But our only chance for "mutual concession" under the proposed law will be to still further reduce rates which the sponsors of the bill declare are already as low as they dare make them. If after the passage of this bill France shall again seek to impose her maximum rates against our commerce, what can we do? Protest? We did that before and without avail. Grant her still further reductions from the rates fixed in the present bill? Then every nation with a "most favored nation" clause in its treaty, and nearly every one contains such clause, will demand like reductions. In this condition we shall be at the mercy of our eager and strenuous rivals, begging favors where experience has taught us no favors will be granted. In what a humiliating condition this will place us! At the last we shall be compelled to adopt this provision, for it will be our only measure of protection. How much better to do it now.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired; all time has expired. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MANN) there were—ayes 62, noes 107.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. SWITZER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment to the schedule.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, by inserting a new paragraph at the end of said schedule, as follows:

"661. That whenever any articles named in this schedule are exported to the United States of a class or kind made or produced in the United States, if the export or actual selling price to an importer in the United States, or the price at which such goods are consigned is less than the fair market value of the same article when sold for home consumption in the usual and ordinary course in the country whence exported to the United States at the time of its exportation to the United States, there shall be levied, collected, and paid on such article on its importation into the United States a special duty (or dumping duty) equal to the difference between the said export or actual selling price of the article for export or the price at which such goods are consigned and the said fair market value thereof for home consumption: Provided, That the said special duty shall not exceed 15 per cent ad valorem in any case.

"'Export price' or 'selling price' or 'price at which such goods are consigned' in this section shall be held to mean and include the exporter's price for the goods, exclusive of all charges thereon after their shipment from the place whence exported directly to the United States.

"The Secretary of the Treasury shall make such rules and regulations as are necessary for the carrying out of the provisions of this section and for the enforcement thereof."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I desire to make a point of order. The point of order I make is that this amendment affects the free list instead of the tax list. It is only a change of what is in the bill. Now, the point of order is that it is not germane, or not germane here, as it is in another section of the bill, and therefore under the rule is not germane to this portion of the bill. I do not mean to say the gentleman can not make his amendment, but I mean this is the wrong place at which to make that amendment.

Mr. MANN. No; Mr. Chairman, the present dumping clause in the bill was stated by one of the distinguished members of the Ways and Means Committee on the Democratic side the other day to apply only to the dutiable list.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Rather than take up the time, if there is any dispute about it, as it is already in the bill, I withdraw the point of order and ask unanimous consent that debate on the amendment be limited to five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on the amendment and all amendments thereto be closed in five minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. SWITZER. Mr. Chairman, this amendment I have just proposed is of a more general character than the amendments I have previously offered. The dumping clause provided in the bill in section 4 applies only to articles upon the dutiable list and to articles produced in this country. Now, I see no reason why, in order to treat everybody fairly, to be just to those whose products are upon the free list produced in this country, they should not have the same protection by the same sort of a law as the individual whose products are upon the dutiable list. I rather think there is more reason why a person should be protected whose products are upon the free list, for many of the industries the products of which are upon the dutiable list are carried in this bill under a protective duty. They all have recourse to this dumping clause. I can see very readily why it does not matter whether we have a dumping clause which applies to many articles on the free list, such as coffee, rubber, spices, tea, and a good many things of that kind we do not produce in this country, but take the matter of corn, potatoes, wool, sugar in three years from now, shingles, lumber, coal, iron ore, boots and shoes, and a good many of the products of the forest, and a majority of the products of the farms of this country placed by this bill upon the free list I can not for the life of me figure out any valid reason why the producer of those articles should not have the same protection afforded by this dumping clause that has been inserted here for the protection solely of those whose products are on the dutiable list. I do not think that I have anything further to state in support of the proposed amendment. This follows along the same line of argument I have here suggested on the leather paragraph and on the free-wool paragraph, except that it will apply to all articles produced in this country that are on the free list. My amendment will give the producers of such articles the same protection which the pending measure proposes to give to the producers of commodities carried on the dutiable list.

Justice certainly demands that the potato raiser, the boot and shoe manufacturer, the coal operator, the miller, the woolgrower, and the farmer should enjoy as full protection against excessive importations of like articles produced by them which are procured by the importer at a lower price than the articles usually sell for in the country from which they are exported as our Democratic friends are giving the rice grower and other special interests favored by this bill by placing their products on the dutiable list.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SWITZER].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, we are about to start the reading of the portion of the bill relating to the income tax. I would like to see if I can make an arrangement about the reading of the sections, in order to save time. I would like to ask unanimous consent that the income-tax portion of the bill, section 2, may be read through for committee amendments, that at this time gentlemen may indicate the sections to which they wish to offer amendments, and after we have read through the section we will come back to those sections where amendments are proposed to be offered and dispose of them, without any agreement as to limitation of time right now.

Mr. MURDOCK. We have a number of amendments. We will be very glad to designate them.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman state them?

Mr. MURDOCK. A, B, and G.

Mr. STAFFORD. I wish to offer an amendment wherever fire insurance is stated, in order to include life insurance.

Mr. MANN. I have A, B, C, and G.

Mr. ANDERSON. I would like to inquire whether the whole of section G will be included as one paragraph, or whether the paragraphs under G will be considered as separate paragraphs?

Mr. MANN. On what page is that?

Mr. ANDERSON. On page 146. I desire to offer an amendment to the paragraph commencing with the word "Second," on page 146.

Mr. MANN. I take it that would be treated as a separate paragraph.

Mr. ANDERSON. I have two amendments which I would like to offer to that section.

Mr. MURDOCK. We have amendments to the first and second sections of G.

Mr. MANN. We have G, and that would cover everything.

Mr. DILLON. I want to offer one after D.

Mr. MANN. I have D. I have A, B, C, D, G.

Mr. HULINGS. I would like to offer one to the second paragraph of G.

Mr. MANN. That is all in.

Mr. STAFFORD. I would like to offer one on page 154.

Mr. MANN. That is in G. Is there any other? I have A, B, C, D, E, and G.

Mr. MOORE. Does this arrangement contemplate any general debate?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It contemplates taking them up under the five-minute rule, as in the previous schedule. When we get into the paragraphs we may ask unanimous consent for a limitation on each paragraph, but it is not involved here. Mr. Chairman, I now renew my request for unanimous consent that Section II, relating to the income tax, be read through for committee amendments, and when it is finished return to paragraphs A, B, C, D, E, and G for such amendments as Members of the House may desire to offer.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that Section II of the bill be read for committee amendments; that at the conclusion of the reading of the section the committee will return to the consideration of paragraphs A, B, C, D, E, and G for the offering of amendments. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SECTION II.

A. That there shall be levied, assessed, and paid annually upon the entire net income arising or accruing from all sources in the preceding calendar year to every citizen of the United States, whether residing at home or abroad, and to every person residing in the United States, though not a citizen thereof, and by every citizen of Porto Rico and by every citizen of the Philippine Islands, a tax of 1 per cent per annum upon such income over and above $4,000; and a like tax shall be assessed, levied, and paid annually upon the entire net income from all property owned and of every business, trade, or profession carried on in the United States by persons residing elsewhere.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer a committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee). The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL] offers a committee amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 133, line 6, after the word "and," by striking out the word "by" and inserting the word "to."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer the following additional amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 133, line 7, after the word "and," by striking out the words "by every citizen."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

B. That, subject only to such exemptions and deductions as are hereinafter allowed, the net income of a taxable person shall include gains, profits, and income derived from salaries, wages, or compensation for personal service of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, or from professions, vocations, businesses, trade, commerce, or sales or dealings in property, whether real or personal, growing out of the ownership or use of or interest in real or personal property, also from interest, rent, dividends, securities, or the transaction of any lawful business carried on for gain or profit, or gains or profits and income derived from any source whatever, including the income from but not the value of property acquired by bequest, devise, or descent: Provided, That the proceeds of life insurance policies paid upon the death of the person insured shall not be included as income.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 135, lines 1 and 2, by striking out the words "shall not be included as income" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "or payments paid by or credited to the insured, on life insurance, endowment, or annuity contracts, upon the return thereof to the insured at the maturity of the term mentioned in the contract, shall not be included as income."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

That in computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions the necessary expenses actually incurred in carrying on any business, not including personal, living, or family expenses; all interest accrued and payable within the year by a taxable person on indebtedness; all National, State, county, school, and municipal taxes accrued within the year, not including those assessed against local benefits or taxes levied hereunder; losses actually sustained during the year, incurred in trade or arising from fires, storms, or shipwreck, and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise; debts actually ascertained to be worthless and charged off during the year; also a reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear and tear of property arising out of its use or employment in the business, but no deduction shall be made for any amount of expense of restoring property or making good the exhaustion thereof for which an allowance is or has been made; no deduction shall be allowed for any amount paid out for new buildings, permanent improvements, or betterments, made to increase the value of any property or estate; the amount of income received or payable from any source at which the tax upon such income, which is or will become due, under the provisions of this section, has been withheld for payment at the source in the manner hereinafter provided, shall be deducted; but in all cases where the tax upon the annual gains, profits, and incomes of a person is required to be withheld and paid at the source as hereinafter provided, if such annual income except that derived from interest on corporate or United States indebtedness does not exceed the rate of $4,000 per annum, or if the same is uncertain, indefinite, or irregular in the amount or time during which it shall have accrued, and is not fixed or determinable, the same shall be included in estimating net annual income to be embraced in a personal return; also the amount received as dividends upon the stock, or from the net earnings of any corporation, joint-stock company, association, or insurance company which is taxable upon its net income as hereinafter provided shall be deducted. The net income from property owned and business carried on in the United States by persons residing elsewhere shall be computed upon the basis prescribed in this paragraph and that part of paragraph G of this section relating to the computation of the net income of corporations, joint-stock and insurance companies, organized, created, or existing under the laws of foreign countries, in so far as applicable.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I offer another amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL].

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 135, line 3, by inserting after the word "income" the words "for the purposes of the normal tax."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an additional amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL].

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 135, line 10, by striking out the words "or taxes levied hereunder."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

C. That in computing net income under this section there shall be excluded the interest upon the obligations of a State or any political subdivision thereof, and upon the obligations of the United States the principal and interest of which are now exempt by law from Federal taxation; also the compensation of the present President of the United States during the term for which he has been elected, and of the judges of the supreme and inferior courts of the United States now in office, and the compensation of all officers and employees of a State or any political subdivision thereof.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL].

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 136, line 25, by inserting after the words "United States" the words "or its possessions."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

D. That there shall be deducted from the amount of the net income of each of such persons, ascertained as provided herein, the sum of $4,000: Provided, That only one deduction of $4,000 shall be made from the aggregate income of all the members of any family composed of one or both parents and one or more minor children, or husband and wife, but if the wife is living permanently apart from her husband she may be taxed independently; but guardians shall be allowed to make deduction in favor of each and every ward, except that in case where two or more wards are comprised in one family and have joint property interests the aggregate deduction in their favor shall not exceed $4,000, and said tax shall be computed upon the remainder of said net income of such person for the year ending December 31, 1913, and for each calendar year thereafter; and on or before the 1st day of March, 1914, and the 1st day of March in each year thereafter, a true and accurate return, under oath or affirmation, shall be made by each person of lawful age, except as hereinafter provided, subject to the tax imposed by this section, and having a net income of $3,500 for the taxable year, to the collector of internal revenue for the district in which such person resides or has his principal place of business, or, in the case of a person residing in a foreign country, in the place where his principal business is carried on within the United States, in such form as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall prescribe, setting forth specifically the gross amount of income from all separate sources and from the total thereof, deducting the aggregate items or expenses and allowance herein authorized; guardians, trustees, executors, administrators, agents, receivers, conservators, and all persons, corporations, or associations acting in any fiduciary capacity, shall make and render a return of the net income of the person for whom they act, subject to this tax, coming into their custody or control and management, and be subject to all the provisions of this section which apply to individuals; and also all persons, firms, companies, copartnerships, corporations, joint-stock companies or associations, and insurance companies, except as hereinafter provided, in whatever capacity acting, having the control, receipt, disposal, or payment of fixed or determinable annual gains, profits, and income of another person subject to tax, shall in behalf of such person make and render a return, as aforesaid, but separate and distinct, of the portion of the income of each person from which the normal tax has been thus withheld, and containing also the name and address of such person: Provided, That in either case above mentioned no return of income not exceeding $3,500 shall be required: Provided further, That persons liable only for the normal income tax, on their own account or in behalf of another, shall not be required to make return of the income derived from dividends on the capital stock or from the net earnings of corporations, joint-stock companies or associations, and insurance companies taxable upon their net income as hereinafter provided; and the collector or deputy collector shall require every list to be verified by the oath or affirmation of the party rendering it, and may increase the amount of any list or return if he has reason to believe that the same is understated: Provided, That no such increase shall be made except after due notice to such party and upon proof of the amount understated; or if the list or return of any person shall have been increased by the collector, such person may be permitted to prove the amount liable to be assessed; but such proof shall not be considered as conclusive of the facts, and no deductions claimed in such cases shall be made or allowed until approved by the collector. If dissatisfied with the decision of the collector, such person may submit the case, with all the papers, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for his decision, and may furnish sworn testimony of witnesses to prove any relevant facts.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 138, line 3, by adding, after the figures "$3,500," the words "or over."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee offers another amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 139, line 6, by adding, after the word "person," the words "or stating that the name and address, or the address, as the case may be, are unknown."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

E. That all assessments shall be made and all persons shall be notified of the amount for which they are respectively liable on or before the 1st day of June of each successive year, and said assessments shall be paid on or before the 30th day of June, except in cases of refusal or neglect to make such return and in cases of false or fraudulent returns, in which cases the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall, upon the discovery thereof, at any time within three years after said return is due, make a return upon information obtained as above provided for, and the assessment made by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue thereon shall be paid by such person or persons immediately upon notification of the amount of such assessment; and to any sum or sums due and unpaid after the 30th day of June in any year, and for 10 days after notice and demand thereof by the collector, there shall be added the sum of 5 per cent on the amount of tax unpaid, and interest at the rate of 1 per cent per month upon said tax from the time the same became due, except from the estates of insane, deceased, or insolvent persons.

All persons, firms, copartnerships, companies, corporations, joint-stock companies or associations, and insurance companies, in whatever capacity acting, including lessees or mortgagors of real or personal property, trustees acting in any trust capacity, executors, administrators, agents, receivers, conservators, employers, and all officers and employees of the United States having the control, receipt, custody, disposal, or payment of interest, rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensation, remuneration, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable annual gains, profits, and income of another person, exceeding $4,000 for any taxable year, other than dividends on capital stock, or from the net earnings of corporations and joint-stock companies or associations subject to like tax, who are required to make and render a return in behalf of another, as provided herein, to the collector of his, her, or its district, are hereby authorized and required to deduct and withhold from such annual gains, profits, and income such sum as will be sufficient to pay the normal tax imposed thereon by this section, and shall pay to the officer of the United States Government authorized to receive the same; and they are each hereby made personally liable for such tax. In all cases where the income tax of a person is withheld and deducted and paid or to be paid at the source, as aforesaid, such person shall not receive the benefit of the exemption of $4,000 allowed herein unless he shall, not less than 30 days prior to the day on which the return of his income is due, file with the person who is required to withhold and pay tax for him an affidavit claiming the benefit of such exemption; nor shall any person under the foregoing conditions be allowed the benefit of any deduction provided for in subsection B of this section unless he shall, not less than 30 days prior to the day on which the return of his income is due, file with the person who is required to withhold and pay tax for him a true and correct return of his annual gains, profits, and income from all other sources, and also the deductions asked for, and the showing thus made shall then become a part of the return to be made in his behalf by the person required to withhold and pay the tax, or such person may likewise make application for deductions to the collector of the district in which return is made or to be made for him: Provided, That the amount of the normal tax herein imposed shall be deducted and withheld from fixed and determinable annual gains, profits, and income derived from interest upon bonds, mortgages, or other indebtedness of corporations, joint-stock companies or associations, insurance companies, and also of the United States Government not now exempt from taxation, whether payable annually or at shorter or longer periods, although such interest does not amount to $4,000, in the same manner and subject to the same provisions of this section requiring the tax to be withheld at the source and deducted from annual income; and likewise the amount of such tax shall be deducted and withheld from coupons, checks, or bills of exchange for or in payment of interest upon bonds of foreign countries and upon foreign mortgages or like obligations (not payable in the United States), and also from coupons, checks, or bills of exchange for or in payment of any dividends upon the stock or interest upon the obligations of foreign corporations, associations, and insurance companies engaged in business in foreign countries; and the tax in each case shall be withheld and deducted for and in behalf of any person, firm, corporation, or association subject to the tax herein imposed, although such interest, dividends, or other compensation does not exceed $4,000, by any banker or person who shall sell or otherwise realize coupons, checks, or bills of exchange drawn or made in payment of any such interest or dividends (not payable in the United States), and any person who shall obtain payment (not in the United States), in behalf of another of such dividends and interest by means of coupons, checks, or bills of exchange, and also any dealer in such coupons who shall purchase the same for any such dividends or interest (not payable in the United States), otherwise than from a banker or another dealer in such coupons; but in each case the benefit of the exemption and the deduction allowable under this section may be had by complying with the foregoing provisions of this paragraph.

Nothing in this section shall be construed to release a taxable person from liability for income tax.

The tax herein imposed upon annual gains, profits, and income not falling under the foregoing and not returned and paid by virtue of the foregoing shall be assessed by personal return. Any person for whom return has been made and the tax paid, or to be paid as aforesaid, shall not be required to make a return unless such person has other net income, but only one deduction of $4,000 shall be made in the case of any such person.

Mr. HULL. I desire to offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 141, line 25, by adding, after the word "herein," the words "except by an application for refund of the tax."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 142, line 8, by adding, before the word "file," the word "either."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. I desire to offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 142, line 18, by adding, after the word "herein," the word "before."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. I desire to offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 142, line 25, by striking out, after the figures "$4,000," the words "in the same manner and."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. I desire to offer another amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 143, line 1, amend by striking out, after the word "the," the word "same."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 143, lines 13 and 14, by striking out the words "firm, corporation, or association."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 143, line 14, by adding, after the word "herein," the word "before."

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

G. That the normal tax hereinbefore imposed upon individuals likewise shall be levied, assessed, and paid annually upon the entire net income arising or accruing from all sources during the preceding calendar year to every corporation, joint-stock company or association, and every insurance company, organized in the United States, no matter how created or organized, but not including partnerships; but if organized, authorized, or existing under the laws of any foreign country, upon the amount of net income arising or accruing by it from business transacted and capital invested within the United States during such year: Provided, however, That nothing in this section shall apply to labor, agricultural, or horticultural organizations, or to mutual savings banks not having a capital stock represented by shares, or to fraternal beneficiary societies, orders, or associations operating under the lodge system, and providing for the payment of life, sick, accident, and other benefits to the members of such societies, orders, or associations and dependents of such members, nor to domestic building and loan associations, organized and operated exclusively for the mutual benefit of their members, nor to any corporation or association organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, or educational purposes, no part of the net income of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual.

Second. Such net income shall be ascertained by deducting from the gross amount of the income of such corporation, joint-stock company or association, or insurance company, received within the year from all sources, (first) all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid within the year out of income in the maintenance and operation of its business and properties, including rentals or other payments required to be made as a condition to the continued use or possession of property; (second) all losses actually sustained within the year and not compensated by insurance or otherwise, including a reasonable allowance for depreciation by use, wear and tear of property, if any; and in the case of mines an allowance for depletion of ores and all other natural deposits on the basis of their actual original cost in cash or the equivalent of cash; and in case of insurance companies the net addition, if any, required by law to be made within the year to reserve funds and the sums other than dividends or return of premium payments paid within the year on policy and annuity contracts: Provided further, That mutual fire insurance companies requiring their members to make premium deposits to provide for losses and expenses shall not return as income any portion of the premium deposits returned to their policy holders, but shall return as taxable income all income received by them from all other sources plus such portions of the premium deposits as are retained by the companies for purposes other than the payment of losses and expenses; (third) interest accrued and paid within the year on its indebtedness to an amount of such indebtedness not exceeding its paid-up capital stock outstanding at the close of the year, or if no capital stock, the capital employed in the business at the close of the year: Provided, That in the case of bonds or other indebtedness, which have been issued with a guaranty that the interest payable thereon shall be free from taxation, no deduction for the payment of the tax herein imposed shall be allowed; and in the case of a bank, banking association, or trust company, interest paid within the year on deposits; (fourth) all sums paid by it within the year for taxes imposed under the authority of the United States or of any State or Territory, or Government of any foreign country, as a condition to carry on business therein, not including the tax imposed by this section: Provided, That in the case of a corporation, joint-stock company or association, or insurance company, organized, authorized, or existing under the laws of any foreign country, such net income shall be ascertained by deducting from the gross amount of its income received within the year from business transacted and capital invested within the United States, (first) all the ordinary and necessary expenses actually paid within the year out of earnings in the maintenance and operation of its business and property within the United States, including rentals or other payments required to be made as a condition to the continued use or possession of property; (second) all losses actually sustained within the year in business conducted by it within the United States and not compensated by insurance or otherwise, including a reasonable allowance for depreciation by use, wear and tear of property, if any, and in the case of mines an allowance for depletion of ores and all other natural deposits on the basis of their actual original cost in cash or the equivalent of cash; and in case of insurance companies the net addition, if any, required by law to be made within the year to reserve funds and the sums other than dividends or return of premium payments paid within the year on policy and annuity contracts: Provided further, That mutual fire insurance companies requiring their members to make premium deposits to provide for losses and expenses shall not return as income any portion of the premium deposits returned to their policyholders, but shall return as taxable income all income received by them from all other sources plus such portions of the premium deposits as are retained by the companies for purposes other than the payment of losses and expenses; (third) interest accrued and paid within the year on its indebtedness to an amount of such indebtedness not exceeding the proportion of its paid-up capital stock outstanding at the close of the year, or if no capital stock, the capital employed in the business at the close of the year which the gross amount of its income for the year from business transacted and capital invested within the United States bears to the gross amount of its income derived from all sources within and without the United States: Provided, That in the case of bonds or other indebtedness which have been issued with a guaranty that the interest payable thereon shall be free from taxation, no deduction for the payment of the tax herein imposed shall be allowed; (fourth) all sums paid by it within the year for taxes imposed under the authority of the United States or of any State or Territory thereof as a condition to carry on business therein, not including the tax imposed by this section. In the case of assessment insurance companies the actual deposit of sums with State or Territorial officers, pursuant to law, as additions to guarantee or reserve funds shall be treated as being payments required by law to reserve funds.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 145, line 22, by inserting, after the word "associations," the words "nor to cemetery companies."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 147, line 3, by adding, after the word "expenses," the words "and reinsurance reserves."

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, will the Clerk kindly report that amendment again?

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the amendment will be again reported.

The amendment was again read.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. STAFFORD. Do I understand that under the rule under which we are proceeding it is permissible to inquire of the gentleman offering amendments for an explanation of them?

Mr. MANN. Why, certainly.

Mr. HULL. I will say to the gentleman that the first language here was intended to meet that requirement which many of the States impose on the companies with respect to keeping a reinsurance reserve fund. The language in the bill as it stands now is not comprehensive enough to embrace the real purpose of it as to mutual fire insurance companies.

Mr. STAFFORD. May I ask the gentleman to explain the amendment, which is very sweeping in character, that he offered to page 135, at the end of line 2, which relates to exemptions of certain dividends of life insurance companies?

Mr. HULL. Instead of being a sweeping amendment, it is the contrary. Quite a number of gentlemen preferred to have a declaratory clause inserted there, and that was done. Under all constructions of laws of this character, and especially where gifts, bequests, and devises are not made income, the return of insurance investments is held not to be taxable income. The proceeds of life insurance policies paid to some third person on the death of the insured is not considered taxable, and still less would any return of the investment to the person during lifetime be considered taxable income. But it was desired by a number of gentlemen that a declaratory provision to that effect, that the return of the investment made in insurance during life for business or other purposes under the terms of which the assured receives back the amount invested, or a portion at different times, should be declared not to be taxable income.

Mr. STAFFORD. As I understand the amendment, it refers only to the returns in the so-called tontine policies, and not to the returns that insurance companies make annually in dividends when the policy holder pays the premium.

Mr. HULL. It has reference to the return at any time or times of any portion of the investment made by a person in insurance. The gentleman has got on another question, which will arise more directly later on, and explanations will be more apparent at that time.

Mr. STAFFORD. Very well. The amendment we are now discussing is a clause the end of which limits it to the payment of dividends and policies, or payments made at the maturity of the term mentioned in the contract.

Mr. HULL. Different insurance companies during past years have had different terms to express or define the investment which people make, and the amounts returned have been called tontine payments, and also distributions, and also accumulations, and terms of that character. It is largely the same class of business, and this provision merely declares what the law has always been—that no part of the principal returned to the investor during life in connection with these transactions is considered a taxable income.

Mr. COOPER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. COOPER. I would like to have this made clear to me. Suppose an insurance company sends to me a notice that the premium on my policy is $100; that the dividends are $20. In making the income-tax return would that $20 be taxed as a part of the income?

Mr. HULL. We will reach that provision of the bill in a few moments, to which I propose to offer an amendment, and then I can make myself better understood.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman kindly take that up and explain it when the amendment is offered?

Mr. HULL. I will.

Mr. BARKLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. BARKLEY. Suppose that a policy is taken out and the premiums paid for a period, and then the policy has a certain cash-surrender value in tontines or endowment. The man may surrender his policy and take endowment. Now, is that cash-surrender value taxable as income?

Mr. HULL. No part of the principal invested in insurance which comes back to the insured during life is considered taxable income any more than the return of money which he might have loaned to another or a deposit that he might have made in the bank.

Mr. BARKLEY. The surrender cash value would be considered a part of the principal?

Mr. HULL. If it is in fact a part of the principal. I take it that most people who enter into these insurance transactions under the terms of which they expect to secure returns during their life expect certain gains, and to realize on them, but I take it they would not as a rule enter into them under any other circumstances. When these gains come back to the person who takes out the insurance, unless the insurance company has paid the 1 per cent on its earnings out of which the dividends are declared, then he would pay the tax as one pays a tax on interest on the money he loaned.

Mr. BARKLEY. In the transaction under discussion the amount received in return is usually less than has been paid previously, and of course there could be no gain except the protection the insured had while the policy was in force.

Mr. HULL. Then there would be no tax.

Mr. HINEBAUGH. Mr. Chairman, I desire to ask the gentleman a question. I am contemplating offering an amendment, and it may be covered by the amendment which the gentleman has just offered. The amendment I contemplate is to strike out, in line 25, page 134, after the word "policies" and at the top of page 135, line 1, the words:

Paid upon the death of the person insured.

So that if that amendment were adopted the proviso would read:

Provided, That the proceeds of life insurance policies shall not be included as incomes.

I would ask the gentleman if his amendment practically in effect would amount to the same?

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, the amendment which was adopted includes the proceeds of life-insurance policies paid on the death of the person insured, and also includes the return of any and all sums which a person invests in insurance and receives back at one time or at periodical times during his life, as distinguished from any actual gains or profits which he derives out of the investment.

Mr. HINEBAUGH. It would not be exactly the same in effect then.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 147, lines 17 and 18, by striking out the words "not including the tax imposed by this section" and inserting a colon after the word "therein."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. I also offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 148, line 14, by striking out the words "or return of premium payments."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I also offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 148, line 23, by adding, after the word "expenses," the words "and reinsurance reserves."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I also offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 149, lines 14 and 15, by striking out the words "not including the tax imposed by this section" and inserting a period after the word "therein."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 146, line 20, by striking out the words "or return of premium payments."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

Third. The tax herein imposed shall be computed upon its entire net income for the year ending December 31, 1913, and for each calendar year thereafter: Provided, however, That any corporation, joint-stock company or association, or insurance company subject to this tax may designate the last day of any month in the year as the day of the closing of its fiscal year and shall be entitled to have the tax payable by it computed upon the basis of the net income ascertained as herein provided for the year ending on the day so designated in the year preceding the date of assessment instead of upon the basis of the net income for the calendar year preceding the date of assessment; and it shall give notice of the day it has thus designated as the closing of its fiscal year to the collector of the district in which its principal business office is located at any time not less than 30 days prior to the date upon which its annual return shall be filed. All corporations, joint-stock companies or associations, and insurance companies subject to the tax herein imposed, computing taxes upon the income of the calendar year, shall, on or before the 1st day of March, 1914, and the 1st day of March in each year thereafter, and all corporations, joint-stock companies or associations, and insurance companies, computing taxes upon the income of a fiscal year which it may designate in the manner hereinbefore provided, shall render a like return within 60 days after the close of its said fiscal year, and within 60 days after the close of its fiscal year in each year thereafter, or in the case of a corporation, joint-stock company or association, or insurance company, organized or existing under the laws of a foreign country, in the place where its principal business is located within the United States, in such form as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall prescribe, shall render a true and accurate return under oath or affirmation of its president, vice president, or other principal officer, and its treasurer or assistant treasurer, to the collector of internal revenue for the district in which it has its principal place of business, setting forth (first) the total amount of its paid-up capital stock outstanding, or if no capital stock, its capital employed in business, at the close of the year; (second) the total amount of its bonded and other indebtedness at the close of the year; (third) the gross amount of its income, received during such year from all sources, and if organized under the laws of a foreign country the gross amount of its income received within the year from business transacted and capital invested within the United States; (fourth) the total amount of all its ordinary and necessary expenses paid out of earnings in the maintenance and operation of the business and properties of such corporation, joint-stock company or association, or insurance company within the year, stating separately all rentals or other payments required to be made as a condition to the continued use or possession of property, and if organized under the laws of a foreign country the amount so paid in the maintenance and operation of its business within the United States; (fifth) the total amount of all losses actually sustained during the year and not compensated by insurance or otherwise, stating separately any amounts allowed for depreciation of property, and in case of insurance companies the net addition, if any, required by law to be made within the year to reserve funds and the sums other than dividends or return of premium payments paid within the year on policy and annuity contracts: Provided further, That mutual fire insurance companies requiring their members to make premium deposits to provide for losses and expenses shall not return as income any portion of the premium deposits returned to their policy holders, but shall return as taxable income all income received by them from all other sources plus such portions of the premium deposits as are retained by the companies for purposes other than the payment of losses and expenses; and in case of a corporation, joint-stock company or association, or insurance company, organized under the laws of a foreign country, all losses actually sustained by it during the year in business conducted by it within the United States, not compensated by insurance or otherwise, stating separately any amounts allowed for depreciation of property, and in case of insurance companies the net addition, if any, required by law to be made within the year to reserve funds and the sums other than dividends or return of premium payments paid within the year on policy and annuity contracts: Provided further, That mutual fire insurance companies requiring their members to make premium deposits to provide for losses and expenses shall not return as income any portion of the premium deposits returned to their policy holders, but shall return as taxable income all income received by them from all other sources plus such portions of the premium deposits as are retained by the companies for purposes other than the payment of losses and expenses; (sixth) the amount of interest accrued and paid within the year on its bonded or other indebtedness not exceeding its paid-up capital stock, outstanding at the close of the year, or if no capital stock, the amount of interest paid within the year on an amount of indebtedness not exceeding the amount of capital employed in the business at the close of the year, and in the case of a bank, banking association, or trust company, stating separately all interest paid by it within the year on deposits; or in case of a corporation, joint-stock company or association, or insurance company, organized under the laws of a foreign country, interest so paid on its bonded or other indebtedness to an amount of such bonded or other indebtedness not exceeding the proportion of its paid-up capital stock outstanding at the close of the year, or if no capital stock, the amount of capital employed in the business at the close of the year, which the gross amount of its income for the year from business transacted and capital invested within the United States bears to the gross amount of its income derived from all sources within and without the United States; (seventh) the amount paid by it within the year for taxes imposed under the authority of the United States not including the tax imposed by this act and separately the amount so paid by it for taxes imposed by the Government of any foreign country as a condition to carrying on business therein; (eighth) the net income of such corporation, joint-stock company or association, or insurance company, after making the deductions in this subsection authorized. All such returns shall as received be transmitted forthwith by the collector to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

All assessments shall be made and the several corporations, joint-stock companies or associations, and insurance companies shall be notified of the amount for which they are respectively liable on or before the 1st day of June of each successive year, and said assessments shall be paid on or before the 30th day of June: Provided, That every corporation, joint-stock company or association, and insurance company, computing taxes upon the income of the fiscal year which it may designate in the manner hereinbefore provided, shall pay the taxes due under its assessment within 120 days after the date upon which it is required to file its list or return of income for assessment; except in cases of refusal or neglect to make such return, and in cases of false or fraudulent returns, in which cases the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall, upon the discovery thereof, at any time within 3 years after said return is due, make a return upon information obtained as above provided for, and the assessment made by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue thereon shall be paid by such corporation, joint-stock company or association, or insurance company immediately upon notification of the amount of such assessment; and to any sum or sums due and unpaid after the 30th day of June in any year, or after 120 days from the date on which the return of income is required to be made by the taxpayer, and for 10 days after notice and demand thereof by the collector, there shall be added the sum of 5 per cent on the amount of tax unpaid and interest at the rate of 1 per cent per month upon said tax from the time the same becomes due.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 152, lines 5 and 6, by striking out the words "or return of premium payments."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 152, line 14, by adding after the word "expenses" the words "and reinsurance reserves."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 152, line 23, by striking out the words "or return of premium payments."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, in response to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD], I merely wish to say that the language of the bill as it is now places in the alternative dividends or return of premium payments. It is the contention of a number of attorneys and officials of different insurance companies with whom I have talked that this, in legal effect as well as in substance, from their standpoint, is the same as the present law. In other words, until the time of the enactment of the corporation-tax law few, if any, people perhaps had ever heard the phrase "return of premium payments" used in this connection.

It was called a dividend out of the surplus or profits. After this law was enacted the contention was soon offered by a number of companies adverse to paying any portion of this tax that the term "dividends" simply meant return of premium payments or savings; that either one could be used as an alternative expression or as a synonymous expression. I do not desire to consume time now to go into this matter at any length, except to say that the sole purpose and effect of this bill from the beginning has only been to reenact the present corporation-tax law in so far as the insurance provision is concerned, and that means a tax of 1 per cent upon the net profits of insurance corporations. Now, in order that not only the legal effect of the present law, but the language as well, may continue in the proposed law, the pending amendment is offered. We reduced it to a mixed question of law and fact as to what these dividends contain, and not solely a question of law, if the contention of gentlemen representing the insurance companies is correct, and that being so, if they return actual premium overcharges at any time by this method to the policyholders the fact would be disclosed and no tax would accrue. If, on the contrary, these dividends embrace actual profits that have accumulated there in connection with deferred dividends and in other respects to which I might call attention, then the tax would fasten on it and they would pay 1 per cent, as all other corporations.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman kindly explain why he exempts mutual fire insurance companies by giving them the privilege of making returns for premium payments, and not mutual life insurance companies which are organized in the same manner?

Mr. HULL. On account of the hazards of the business, the mutual fire insurance companies, which are expressly referred to, pay in as premiums from 10 to 20 times the amount of the estimated loss for the coming year.

Mr. STAFFORD. Is it not a fact that in mutual life insurance companies, carried on absolutely for the benefit of the members, the premiums are larger than necessary and that the dividend payments should be returned the same way?

Mr. HULL. I have just explained, and if I go into the matter extensively it is rather a long story.

Mr. STAFFORD. From the gentleman's statement it is only a question of degree. The gentleman states, in the case of mutual fire insurance companies, the premiums are very large, to carry to some unexpected losses; but the same principle applies in the case of mutual life insurance companies.

Mr. HULL. So far as mutual life insurance companies are concerned, as I understand it, they impose a premium of about 30 per cent in excess of what they can expend for all purposes. That premium goes into the hopper and out of the manipulation of their business affairs there is derived a profit from, in the main, three sources. That is excess of interest which according to the estimate to their policy holders they can only realize from 3 to 3½ per cent on money loaned, when in fact, they realize from 5, 6, up to 7 per cent. That is one of the sources of profit accumulations. Another is the savings in the way of managing and conducting the business, the estimate for which is much in excess of what is actually expended. Another is the large excess in the mortuary fund. They estimate that the total loss will amount to much more than it actually does. The result is that they get a large saving there. Now, quite a number of these items are accumulated by the company in connection with deferred dividends, and so forth. For instance in relation to an endowment policy, as I understand it, and the gentleman knows I am not an expert in this business and very few people are——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. McCOY. Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD at this place a decision rendered by the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey construing the provisions of the corporation-tax law on these points which are now under discussion. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL] on May 1 inserted in the RECORD an opinion of Mr. Cabell, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, which held that some of these return dividends and other return payments were taxable under the corporation-tax law. The district court of New Jersey held otherwise, and that decision was upheld by the United States circuit court of appeals. I think it would be of some advantage to have these two opinions in the RECORD, and I therefore ask unanimous consent to have them incorporated at this point.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. McCOY] asks unanimous consent to place in the RECORD the decisions to which he has referred. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. McCOY. If the Chair will permit me, I will say that only part of the opinion refers to these particular points, and it is only that part of the opinion that I will put in. No appeal has been taken from the decision of the circuit court of appeals. It is now too late to appeal. There are no conflicting decisions, so that this case establishes the law.

The following are the decisions referred to:

United States District Court for the District of New Jersey.

The Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. v. Herman C. H. Herold, collector of internal revenue, etc.

Judge Cross, district judge, after discussing other points, said:

Four points have been raised and argued by counsel:

First, whether certain so-called dividends are or are not "income" "received" within the meaning of the statute;

Second, whether certain so-called "supplementary policy contracts" should be represented in the reserve funds;

Third, whether for the purpose of taxation the corporation's statement should be made on a "cash" or on a "revenue" basis; and

Lastly, whether expenditures for replacing furniture, etc., should be considered as an investment or an expense.

These questions, of which the first is the most important, will be considered in the order named. Before proceeding, however, to determine whether "income" "received" includes not only cash receipts, but also deductions from renewal premiums allowed on account of overpayments of previous years, it seems both advisable and necessary to quote at some length from the statement of facts:

Paragraph 4 thereof, after describing the three methods employed in mutual life insurance of securing from members contributions to meet losses, proceeds as follows:

"The level premium plan is the one in general use by all insurance companies, including plaintiff. Under this plan the maximum annual contribution which any member can be called upon to pay is uniform throughout the life of the policy. The member pays during his early years a sum in excess of the current cost of his insurance. This excess is applied to the creation of a reserve or self-insurance fund, which serves to maintain the insurance in the later years, when the stipulated level premium would be insufficient to meet the current cost of insurance on the mutual premium plan.

"Whether a mutual company be conducted on the assessment plan, the natural premium plan, or the level premium plan, the member receives his insurance at cost. The assessment company collects its premiums after the death has actually occurred, and the cost is thereby ascertained. The mutual level premium company collects its estimated premiums in advance and adjusts the actual cost afterwards.

"The calculation of premium rates for life insurance involves, first, the adoption of a table of mortality, showing the probable death rate for each age of life; second, the adoption of an assumed rate of interest such as the company may safely expect to realize upon its invested assets during the lifetime of the policy. These two factors determine what is technically known as the net or mathematical premiums, which are the sums sufficient and necessary to pay all outstanding policies as they become claims, provided deaths occur exactly in accordance with the table of mortality and the rate of interest earned on the investment of such premiums is exactly equal to the rate assumed. To the net or mathematical premiums there is added a sum technically known as 'loading,' for the purpose of meeting the expense of conducting the business, as well as any unforeseen contingencies, such as an abnormal death rate due to war or pestilence. The net or mathematical premiums, increased by the 'loading,' constitutes the premium rates stipulated in the policies of insurance.

"Premium rates so computed are, in the experience of life insurance companies, generally found to be in excess of their requirements. In a mutual company such excess constitutes its margin of safety, and must be liberal. Such a company has no capital stock and must rely entirely upon its premiums to meet unusual contingencies. They must be sufficiently large to assure the company's ability to pay its claims as they accrue beyond peradventure. Their policies may run for a period of 50 years, or even 75 years, and the stipulated premium can not be increased after the policy is issued. In computing their rates the companies use, therefore, a table of mortality showing an admittedly higher death rate than that which will probably be realized. The assumed rate of interest on investments is also lower than that which the company expects to realize. The provision for expenses and contingencies is greater than would ordinarily be required. Mutual companies have these three margins of safety and, normally, each assumption is in excess of what is actually required. They result in excess or redundant premiums.

According to the practice of the plaintiff, at the end of each year the excess of income over disbursements is ascertained, and after setting aside so much of said excess as is required for the increase in policy reserves and other liabilities, the balance is added to the dividend fund. Each policy holder's share in this fund is then ascertained, and before his next premium falls due he is advised of the amount thereof and that the company will accept in full settlement of such premium the difference between the premium written in his policy and the amount standing to his credit in the dividend fund, which has arisen out of previous premium payments. The policy holder may, if he desires, withdraw his share of the dividend fund in cash, or this share is paid to him if he discontinues his policy, or is paid in addition to the amount insured if the policy becomes a death claim. The fund is available for emergencies; but unless so used by the company it is not depleted from year to year except by such actual cash payments as are made from it, as above mentioned.

The method of calculating premiums and ascertaining and disposing of the excess described in this and the two preceding paragraphs is practiced not only by the plaintiff, but by other mutual life insurances companies generally.

"Plaintiff permits the policy holder to pay the full stipulated premium instead of the difference between the stipulated premium and the amount standing to his credit in the dividend fund. In such cases the difference between the amount so paid and the sum required to continue the policy in force is used by the plaintiff, either in the purchase of additional insurance or to shorten the endowment or premium-paying period, as the insured elects * * *."

From the foregoing it appears that whereas in a mutual company insurance is effected at cost, it is essential, in order to constitute a margin of safety, that its premium rates should be larger than it might reasonably be expected would be required to carry the insurance. To effect this purpose a table of mortality is used which shows an admittedly higher death rate than that which will probably prevail, while the assumed rate of interest on its investments is made lower than it is expected will be realized, and the provision for contingencies and expenses is made greater than would ordinarily be necessary. This course is adopted for the reason that a mutual company, having no capital stock, is compelled to rely upon its premiums to meet unexpected losses and contingencies. Paragraph 7 of the statement of facts shows clearly how the dividend fund is created. Each policyholder may, at his option withdraw his dividend—that is, his share of such fund—in cash or have it applied in reduction of the subsequent year's premium, or to purchase additional insurance, or to accelerate the payment period. Such option is conferred by the following or a similar clause, which appears in all of the outstanding policies of the company:

"After this policy shall have been in force one year each year's premium subsequently paid shall be subject to reduction by such dividend as may be apportioned by the directors. Dividends thus created will be applied either in reduction of premium or upon the addition or accelerative endowment plan or paid in cash, at the option of the insured."

The policyholder, therefore, although he has paid more at the beginning of the year than was necessary to provide for the cost of carrying his insurance, will, nevertheless, at the end of the year, when such cost has been actually ascertained, receive the benefit of the overcharge by way of a so-called dividend. Thus the policyholder receives his insurance at cost, while at the same time the stability and solvency of the company have been reasonably and properly guarded and maintained. In all cases where the policyholders, in the exercise of their option during the years 1909 and 1910, in question, withdraw their dividends in cash the amount thereof was included in the plaintiff's statement, and the tax thereon imposed by the Government was paid. The Government claims, however, that where the dividends to the policyholders are not withdrawn in cash, but, pursuant to the option allowed them, have been applied in one or other of the ways above mentioned, they are to be regarded as cash dividends paid by the company, upon which the Government is entitled to impose, as it did impose, the tax in question.

The true situation, however, is this: The policy is issued at a fixed premium, as determined by the company's table of rates; that stipulated premium can not be increased, but may be lessened annually by so much as the experience of the preceding year has determined it to have been greater than the cost of carrying the insurance, and the difference between the amount of the stipulated premium and the cost of carrying the risk constitutes the so-called dividend. This difference, however, is not in any real sense a dividend. The term as used is technical and well understood in insurance circles, and as so understood has a widely different signification from that ordinarily attached to the word "dividend." It operates, as already stated, merely to abate or reduce the stipulated premium called for by the contract of insurance, to the extent and for the reason that it has been determined by experience that the policyholder paid for his insurance during the preceding year more than it actually cost the company to carry the risk. This excess payment represents not profits or receipts but an overpayment—an overpayment because, being entitled to his insurance at cost and having paid more than cost, he is equitably entitled to have such excess applied for his benefit. It makes no difference what this excess is called; the question is, What does it represent? Does it in anywise or to any extent represent earnings or profits received by the company so as to constitute it a part of its income, or does it merely represent an overpayment? Under the terms of his policy the policyholder may, at his option, withdraw such excess in cash and thereby impart to it a quasi appearance of profits, but its character is not thereby changed.

In that case, however, he would, if he desired to continue his policy, be required to pay the full premium as therein stipulated, whereas if he desired such premium reduced to what experience had shown was the actual cost of his insurance, he could have the excess over such cost applied in reduction of the stipulated premium and pay only the cost price for the ensuing year; and assuming that the cost price as determined by the experience of the first year remained the same for 5, 10, 15, or other number of years, that original excess payment would serve to carry his insurance at cost during all of the succeeding years. The following extract from the brief of counsel for the complainant fully and clearly illustrates the point:

"It appears that if the company issues a policy with a premium of, say, $100, and it is found at the end of the year that the payment of that sum at the beginning of the year was $10 in excess of the actual cost of the insurance, the company holds this amount in a 'dividend' fund and collects from the policyholder in full settlement of the second year's premium, $90. At the end of the second year it might be found that this payment of $90 was $2 in excess of the cost of the insurance during the second year, so that the company would hold $12 which had been paid in excess of the cost of the first and second years' insurance. The insured would then pay $88 as a premium for the third year. If during the third year the death rate among the company's members should increase abnormally, so that the company would be required to use $4 of the $12 standing to the policyholder's credit in the dividend fund, leaving $8 therein, it would be necessary for the insured to pay $92 in settlement of the premium for the fourth year's insurance. The amounts returned for taxation would be $100 the first year, $90 the second year, $88 the third year, and $92 the fourth year. Instead of paying $92 the fourth year, the policyholder might pay $100, and in this case $92 would be applied to continue the original policy in force and $8 would be used to buy additional insurance or to shorten the premium-paying term, in which case $100 would be returned for taxation. The several amounts of $10, $12, and $8 represent the so-called dividends or amounts standing to the credit of the policyholder in the dividend fund, which, unless withdrawn in cash by the policyholder, are paid by the company, in addition to the amount insured, when the policy becomes payable as a claim."

From the foregoing it appears that what the company receives in cash and all that it so receives where the dividend is applied in abatement of renewal premiums is the difference between the stipulated premium and the so-called dividend. In such cases the dividends are not sums paid to the policyholder and by him returned in cash. They are not "income" "received." The policyholder has not paid the premium stipulated in his policy, but a premium reduced by his share of a fund ascertained by the directors composed of excess premiums. This seems to be the view which has been uniformly taken by the courts, in so far as their decisions have been brought to my attention. In Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. v. Commonwealth (128 Ky., 374) the supreme court of that State so held, as will appear from the following extract taken from a somewhat lengthy opinion:

"It is clearly shown by the evidence, and conceded by counsel for the State, that the reports as made by the appellant company embrace all first, or original premiums—the premiums receipted for on the face of the policies—and also the subsequent, or renewal premiums, except to the extent that such renewal premiums were reduced by what is termed 'Dividends.' It is the contention of the appellee that such renewal premiums should have been reported without such reduction or abatement, as having been reduced by the company 'in cash or otherwise'; while the appellant company contends that the reduction from the nominal, or stated, premium as made was a contract right of the policy holder, and constituted no premium or part of the premium received by the company 'in cash or otherwise.' And these opposing contentions present the question in this case. * * *

"The present statute reads. * * * 'All premiums receipted for on the face of the policy for original insurance and all renewal premiums received in cash or otherwise in this State or out of this State on business done in this State during the year ending the 30th day of June last preceding.' * * *

"The appellant, every year before a premium falls due, determines how much of the stipulated premium it will exact from the insured. The diminution, whether it be called a 'dividend' or 'surplus' goes in the abatement of the renewal premium, and the insured pays only the difference. The insurance company, therefore, received not the full renewal premium, but the difference between the stipulated premium and this dividend or portion of surplus. All that the insurance company receives in cash or otherwise is this difference. * * *

"The Commonwealth is claiming to tax the appellant upon money which it never received at all. The appellant says that it is only required to pay upon money which it receives in cash or otherwise, except that it admits that it is bound to pay the full tax on the original premium receipted for on the face of the policy without regard to whether it in fact received such premium or not. The answer sets out the course of business of the appellant and shows what money it has received and what money it has not received, and shows that the difference between it and the Commonwealth is that the Commonwealth is attempting to charge it for the full amount of premium stipulated for in the face of the policy although it does not exact and has not the right to exact such full amount, being required to give to the policy holder the advantage of the dividend or surplus, or whatever it may be called, in the diminution of the nominal premium." * * *

"Now, the truth is, that this overpayment (called dividend) is not a dividend in any sense of the term; nor is the failure of the company to collect the full amount of the premium in after years a credit in any sense of the term. A sum of money applied as a credit can never be used for the same purpose again."

"If I owe A $50 and he owes me five notes of $150 each, when I credit him on the first note with the $50 I owe him, he can not require me to credit the same sum on the remaining four notes as they fall due. But that is just what the State is insisting on being done in this case. The policyholder makes the overpayment of premium technically called 'loading' and the company holds this sum and calls it a 'dividend,' and the State says that this is a crediting of the same sum on each of the after accruing premiums, and should be considered as so much collected each year by the company and as having been paid 'otherwise' than as cash.

"In order to bring the matter before our minds distinctly, let us assume that in 1900 A takes out a policy in the appellant company in which the stipulated premium is $150 per annum; that of this sum $100 would be sufficient to carry the risk in ordinary times, and that $50 is what is called 'loading,' collected in order to meet the contingencies of the future. Now, in 1900 the policyholder pays the full amount of the premium, $150. After that the company says to him, 'You need only pay $100 per annum, and as long as the $50 of overpayment you made in 1900 remains unexhausted, your annual premiums will be really $100, instead of $150, as stated in the policy.' The account in five years would be stated as follows:

1900, beginning of the insurance period, premium paid	$150.00
1901, beginning of the insurance period, premium paid	100.00
1902, beginning of the insurance period, premium paid	100.00
1903, beginning of the insurance period, premium paid	100.00
1904, beginning of the insurance period, premium paid	100.00
1905, beginning of the insurance period, premium paid	100.00
Total	650.00

"Obviously the total amount of money paid by the policyholder and received by the insurance company is $650, and it has received no more, either in cash or otherwise; and on the sum so received it is conceded that appellant has paid the tax due.

"If we look only at the method of bookkeeping of the appellant and have regard only to the terms it uses, there is much in the appearance of the case thus presented to warrant the position of the Commonwealth as to its rights to tax the so-called 'dividends' said to be annually credited on the premiums due from policyholders, but the law looks below the mere appearance of things and has regard to the reality; and thus looking, it sees that the appellant misuses the terms 'dividend' and 'credit,' and, as shown above, pays no dividend and allows no credit, but that, in reality, all that it does is to collect on the first premium a sum sufficient to meet the contingencies of any given year of the future, and then abstains from collecting any further overpayment while the first remains on hand."

The opinion in the foregoing case has incorporated in it, somewhat at length, an opinion by the appellate branch of the Court of Common Pleas of Pennsylvania, in Commonwealth v. Penn Mutual Life Insurance Co. (1 Dauphin Co. Rep., 233) from which the following extracts have been taken:

"But we think the so-called 'dividends to policyholders' are not 'net earnings or income' and do not represent such earnings, and that defendant is not liable to tax in respect to them. Notwithstanding the mass of testimony and exhibits on this point, including the ingenious questions of the able counsel on either side, followed by answers from the officers of the company, called as witnesses, not always as clear or intelligent as might have been expected, the facts are few and simple, as we have found them above. It is strenuously contended by the able special counsel for the Commonwealth that because these abatements are entered on the books of the company as 'dividends to policyholders' or 'surplus to policyholders,' they therefore represent net earnings or income, and furnish a measure of the liability of the company to taxation. Whatever these statements may be called, they are in reality what we have stated in the finding of facts. The amounts they represent are mere negative quantities, abstract statements not of what is, or is to be received or to 'come in,' but what is not to be received. The calculations are made for the express purpose of determining how much of the amount which the company might receive shall not be received, and one of the items which make up the apparent amount upon the basis of which this calculation is made is the sum which was abated and not received during the preceding year. In short, the whole proceeding is merely a method by which the books of the company are made to show what would be the actual gross debtor and creditor accounts of the company if the whole amount of the premiums was collected and a part was afterwards returned to the policyholders, while in fact it is neither collected nor returned. * * * It is a fallacy to suppose that the real nature of the transaction is that the policyholder pays his whole stipulated premium and receives his share of the dividend or distribution of surplus."

In State of Minnesota v. Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., decided December 15, 1909, in the district court of the second judicial district of that State (opinion not reported), it appears that a State statute required insurance companies to pay annually a tax equal to 2 per cent of all premiums received by them or their agents in that State, in cash or otherwise, during the preceding calendar year. The claim was there made by the State that the defendant company should pay "the tax on an amount represented by the maximum premiums called for in the policy, covering not only the amount the policyholder pays each year in cash, but also including any amount the policyholder receives credit for on such premium in the form of a dividend. In short, the State claims the insurance company in effect receives the maximum premium in cash in this State in such year, although but part is paid by the insured in cash and the balance is in the form of a credit given by the company on account of a dividend allowed. In disallowing the State's claim the court in its opinion says:

"The dividend declared in any year is applied in reduction of the next maturing premium on the policy of the insured. It follows that where a dividend has been apportioned and applied to the reduction of the premium named in the contract the policyholder pays to the company and the latter receives in cash only the difference between the maximum premium and the amount of the dividend, and these dividends, as the facts disclose, represent a surplus arising out of premiums previously paid, upon which the defendant company had already paid the State its 2 per cent tax. The word 'premium' as used in this statute is subject to the limitations expressed in the words which follow and, in a measure, control its use, to wit: 'Received in this State in cash or other obligations.'

"The statute apparently does not require the company to pay the 2 per cent tax on the full amount of premium named in its policies in this State. If so, the law would have so stated. On the contrary, the language is '2 per cent on all premiums received in cash and other obligations in this State.'"

In Fuller v. Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. of New York (Conn.; 41 Atl. Rep., 4) the court said:

"It (net premium) is the sum paid yearly by each to furnish the stipulated protection for all. But the policyholders must pay not only for the cost of insurance, but also for the expense of management; so to the net premium is added a sum deemed sufficient to pay expenses and provide for contingencies, which is called the 'loading.' In this way the policyholders pay the sum necessary for the cost of insurance and expense of management. The amount of the net premium is calculated upon the basis of certain tables of mortality and upon the assumption that the company will receive a certain rate of interest upon all its assets, and the amount of the loading is calculated upon a certain assumed rate of expense. Now, it may happen that the rate of mortality experienced by the company is less and the rate of interest actually received is greater than that assumed, and that the ratio of actual expense is less. In such case the company has in reserve more than enough, with the anticipated annual premiums, to provide for future cost of insurance and management. It has a sum which is not needed for the purpose for which it was paid. This sum is called 'profits.' It is, in fact, a surplus resulting from overpayments by policyholders. This surplus is derived from money paid by the insured and received by the company for a particular purpose, i. e., providing for cost of insurance expense of management. If not needed for that purpose, it should, in equity, be returned to the policyholders. They do not, however, own it or have any legal control over its distribution. Part of it, indeed, is derived from contributions of policyholders who are dead; but the equity is recognized, and it is the duty of the company, when a surplus is ascertained, to return such portion as it does not deem proper to keep as a guaranty fund to the existing policyholders in equitable (i. e., as nearly as practicable) proportion to their overpayments or contributions. Such return of overpayments, whether in cash or by application on future premiums, or by increase of the amount insured, is a dividend. This is the meaning of 'dividend,' and the only meaning it has or can have in connection with mutual insurance."

"In New York Life Insurance Co. v. Styles (59 L. J. Q. B., 291; L. R. 14 App. Cas., 381 (1889)) it was held as follows:

"That the surplus premium income of a mutual insurance company derived from and annually returned to participating policy holders, is not assessable to income tax as profits or gains arising from any profession, trade, or vocation exercised in the United Kingdom."

In the opinions of Lords Herschel and MacNaghten the following passages appear:

"Lord Herschel: 'In the case before us certain persons have associated themselves together for the purpose of mutual assurance—that is to say, they contribute annually to a common fund, out of which payments are to be made in the event of death to the representatives of the persons thus associated together. Those persons are alone the owners of the common fund, and they, and they alone, are entitled to the management of it. It is only in respect of his membership that any person is entitled to be assured a payment upon death. * * *

"'Can it be said that the persons who are thus associated together for the purpose of mutual insurance carry on a trade or vocation from which profits or gains accrue, to them? I can not think so. I am aware that the surplus income with which we are concerned is called "profits" in the documents of the appellants. But both the learned lords who formed the majority in Last's case (1) repudiated the idea that because moneys, which were not in fact profits are erroneously so called, this would make them "profits" within the meaning of the income-tax acts. I entirely concur. We must look to see whether they are really so or not. Persons who agree to contribute to a common fund for mutual insurance certainly would not in ordinary parlance be regarded as carrying on a trade or vocation for the purpose of earning profit. Let us see how the so-called profit arises. It is due to the premiums which the members are required to pay, being in excess of what is necessary to provide for the requisite payments to be made upon the deaths of members, and not being, as the case states they were intended to be, commensurate therewith. This may result either from the contributions having, owing to an erroneous estimate or overcaution, been originally fixed at a higher rate than was necessary, or from the death rate being lower than was anticipated. Can it be properly said that, under these circumstances, the association of mutual insurers has earned a profit? The members contribute for a common object to a fund which is their common property; it turns out that they have contributed more than is needed, and therefore more than ought to have been contributed by them for this object; and accordingly their next contribution is reduced by an amount equal to their proportion of this excess. I am at a loss to see how this can be considered as a "profit" arising or accruing to them from a trade or vocation which they carry on. It is true the alternative is allowed them of leaving the excess in the common fund, and so increasing their representatives' claim upon it in case of death, but I can not think that this makes any difference. Mr. Bremner truly pointed out that if these so-called bonuses were to be regarded as representing profits, it followed that if the premiums were trebled the profits would be increased in proportion.'"

"Lord MacNaghten.—'Certain persons agree to insure their lives among themselves, on the principle of mutual insurance. They take care to admit none but healthy lives. They contribute according to rates fixed by approved tables, and they invite other persons to come in and join them by insuring their lives on similar terms. The rates fixed by the tables are taken as being sufficient to provide for expenses, to meet liabilities, and to leave a margin for contingencies. What is to become of the surplus if everything goes right? The practice is to take an account every year of assets and liabilities and to give the insured the benefit of the surplus, either by way of reduction of premium or by way of addition to the sum insured. It can make no difference in principle whether the surplus is so applied or paid back in hard cash. In either case, it is nothing but the return of so much of the amount contributed as may be in excess of the amount really required. I do not understand how this excess can be regarded from any point of view, or for any purpose, as gain or profit earned by the contributors. I do not understand how persons contributing to a common fund in pursuance of a scheme for their mutual benefit—having no dealings or relations with any outside body—can be said to have made a profit when they find that they have overcharged themselves, and that some portion of their contributions may be safely refunded. If a profit can be made in that way, there is a field for profitable enterprise, capable, I suppose, of indefinite expansion.'"

In Tenant v. Smith (61 L. J. P. C., 11; 1892, A. C. 150), a case which arose under the English income-tax act, Lord MacNaghten said:

"It is a tax on income in the proper sense of the word. It is a tax on what comes in—on actual receipts * * * not on what saves his pocket, but on what goes into his pocket."

Gresham Life Assurance Society v. Bishop (71 L. J. K. B., 618; A. C. 287) was also a case growing out of a provision of the English income-tax act, to the effect that "the duty to be charged in respect" of interest arising from foreign securities "shall be computed on a sum not less than the full amount of the sums which have been or will be received in Great Britain in the current year without any deduction or abatement."

It was held that the tax was to be assessed on the amount of such interest as was actually received in that country during the year and not on the amount constructively received in yearly accounts of profit and loss.

The above cases furnish a clear exposition of the nature and character of the dividends considered in this case.

Not only is their reasoning inherently persuasive, but their authority is enhanced by the fact that there are no conflicting decisions, or at least none have been brought to the court's attention. Counsel for the Government denies not so much their intrinsic weight as their relevancy, claiming that the act under consideration has abrogated or nullified them. In other words, it is contended that by the express language of the act no dividends declared by life insurance companies can, in the ascertainment of their net income, be deducted from their gross income. No distinction between dividends is admitted, no matter how, for what purpose, or from what fund declared, or whether paid or unpaid, all are alike, and all must be taxed because they represent income "received." If, however, as contended, Congress had in mind the cases above cited, and intended by the clause of the act in question to overrule them, it can hardly be urged that it used very clear or apt language to express its intention. On the contrary, it would appear from its language, that it intended to give those cases its approval, and adopt and continue the distinction thereby created. In seeking to ascertain the intention of Congress, it seems but reasonable to assume, in the absence of anything to the contrary, that it used the word "dividends," as applied to insurance companies, in the sense it had long and generally borne in insurance matters, which sense had moreover been confirmed by repeated judicial decisions. The term should, in other words, be given what might not inappropriately be called its trade signification. (Hedden v. Richard, 149 U. S., 346.) Hence, when it refers to dividends "paid" it means dividends paid, and not an application of excess premium payments in abatement or reduction of subsequent premiums. The word "paid," as used by Congress, is highly significant. It clearly shows that it had cash payments in mind. Not only does this appear from its inherent meaning, but by its use in other clauses of the section providing for deductions from gross income. The expression "gross income," as used in the act, means gross cash receipts and the deductions which were directed to be made therefrom, in order to ascertain net "income received," were deductions of cash expenditures. The principle of cash receipts and cash expenditures underlies the structure of the entire section. To hold that "paid" has a different meaning when applied to dividends from that given it in several clauses of the immediate context would be unwarranted. It should be held to mean dividends which have been paid in cash during the year and repaid to the company as premiums. Counsel for the complainant, speaking of such dividends well say, "unless so received and paid back to the company, they do not constitute 'income received,' the question of income is to be determined, not by what the parties might do, but by what they do do." If, therefore, a policyholder, by the express provision of his policy, elects to have a previous overpayment of premium applied in reduction of a succeeding stipulated premium, what he pays, and all that he pays or can be required to pay, is the reduced premium, and that is all that the company received by way of income and all it is liable to be taxed for. Such a construction of the act in nowise contravenes its purpose, which was to subject to taxation cash dividends, which, as statistics show, form a very large item in insurance business. Since, then, there is subject matter which the clause of the act plainly embraces, there is neither reason nor propriety in broadening its scope by construction so as to make it include that which by strong implication, at least, it excludes. To do so would be violative of one of the chief rules of construction applicable to acts concerning taxation.

Before leaving this branch of the case, it seems proper to say that dividends of the kind under consideration should not be confused with dividends declared in the case of a full-paid participating policy wherein the policy holder has no further premium payments to make. Such payments having been duly met, the policy has become at once a contract of insurance and of investment. The holder participates in the profits and income of the invested funds of the company. His case is, therefore, radically different from that of a policy holder whose dividend represents merely the excess cost of his insurance; which excess, at his request, and pursuant to the terms of his policy, has been applied in abatement or reduction of a future premium. But it may be urged that the fund for which the so-called dividends are declared on mutual policies is likewise largely derived from interest on the company's investments, and that this shows that in a real sense such dividends are after all declared from the earnings, profits, or income of the company. This proposition might be entitled to weight were it not for the fact that in so far as the fund from which such dividends are declared is produced from interest on the company's invested funds, it has already been subjected to and has paid taxes under the act in question.

Furthermore, while, perhaps, not illegal, it is in a sense unfair, and therefore presumably contrary to the intention of Congress, as between a mutual company and a stock company, to tax the dividends in question as income received. The policy holder in a stock company pays a uniform and fixed premium each year, the premium in his case is not "loaded," but is presumed to represent cost as nearly as may be, for the reason that the stability of his policy is assured by the stock of the company, and not, as in the mutual plan, by premium payments avowedly in excess of the cost of the insurance. It would seem to be fair and equitable, therefore, between the two classes of companies, to tax them upon the premiums actually paid them by their policy holders and not to tax one class upon premium payments actually received and the other upon payments which at the utmost are only "constructively received."

My conclusion, therefore, is that by the clause in question Congress did not overrule the authorities above cited, but on the contrary crystallized them into statute law, and by so doing, exempted from taxation dividends of the character in controversy.

—

In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, for the third circuit.

(October term, 1912. No. 1693.)

Herman C. H. Herold, collector, v. Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co., plaintiff below.

ERROR TO THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE DISTRICT OF NEW JERSEY.

Before Gray, Buffington, and McPherson, circuit judges.

Per CURIAM:

Certain taxes for 1909 and 1910 were levied against the insurance company by two supplementary assessments under the act of 1909. The company paid under protest, and afterwards recovered judgment against the collector for practically the whole amount levied. Several questions were raised and decided below, but in this court only one question needs attention: Does the act tax the so-called "dividends" awarded annually to policy holders? The answer must be in the negative, unless such "dividends" form a part of the company's "net income * * * received by it * * * during such year." If they do not arise from income received during the tax year, but from income received during a previous year, Congress has not taxed them; or perhaps it is more correct to say, Congress has not taxed them more than once. Concededly, they have been taxed once with the other net income of the particular year during which the company actually received them in cash; if, therefore, they are to be taxed more than once, it is well settled that the language imposing such an exceptional burden should be clear and unambiguous. But we need not discuss the subject; that duty has been performed by Judge Cross with such fullness and ability that we can not do better than adopt his opinion. The case in the district court is reported in 198 Federal, at page 199, and the discussion we refer to extends from page 200 to page 212, inclusive. But we do not adopt what is said on page 212 concerning dividends on full-paid participating policies, nor what is said on the same page concerning stock companies; not because we wish to suggest disapproval, but merely because no opinion about these matters is called for now, as they do not seem to be directly involved.

The judgment is affirmed.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I offer another amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee offers a further amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 153, line 7, by adding, after the word "expenses," the words "and reinsurance reserves."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the adoption of the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I also offer another amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 154, line 3, by striking out the words: "Not including the tax imposed by this act."

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

The committee informally rose; and Mr. GOULDEN having taken the chair as Speaker pro tempore, a message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 99. An act to fix the times and places of holding district court for the district of Arizona.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the following resolution with an amendment, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

House concurrent resolution 7.

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there be printed 20,000 additional copies of the report of the Ways and Means Committee on H. R. 3321—15,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives, to be apportioned as follows: Two thousand to the Committee on Ways and Means, 1,000 to the House document room, 12,000 to the House folding room; and 5,000 for the use of the Senate.

THE TARIFF.

The committee resumed its session.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk concluded the reading of section II.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Does the gentleman desire to offer an amendment?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, at the request of the Commissioner from the Philippine Islands [Mr. QUEZON] I offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 133, line 7, after the words "Porto Rico," strike out "and of the Philippine Islands."

Mr. QUEZON. Mr. Chairman, as a matter of principle I believe in an income tax. I believe that government should be supported by those benefited by it in proportion to the wealth of the beneficiaries; but I also believe that the people alone who pay the taxes have the right to levy them, and for this reason I am opposed to have the Congress of the United States levy any tax to be paid by the Filipino people.

The purpose of the amendment, which at my request has been introduced by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], is to exclude the Philippine Islands from the provisions of section 2 of this bill. I understand it to be the reason of the Ways and Means Committee for imposing upon the Filipino people the income tax the fact that the Philippine Government will suffer a loss of about ₱500,000 through the abolition of the export tax provided for elsewhere in this bill. But, Mr. Chairman, while it is true that there will be this loss of revenue, there is no need for creating new taxes, inasmuch as the Philippine Government has a surplus of more than ₱500,000 of revenues over its ordinary expenditures, according to the report of the auditor of the Philippine Islands of 1911, which I hold in my hand. On page 17 of this report the following figures are given: Total ordinary income for the year, ₱25,445,520.45; total expenses, ₱19,580,651.17; excess of ordinary revenue income over expenses, ₱5,864,869.28. Besides the report of the collector of customs for 1912 shows a constant increase in customs revenues since 1909, the increase during the fiscal year 1912 as compared with 1911 being ₱1,337,674.90. This increase alone is more than the total export tax, which was in 1912 ₱1,069,690.04.

It is evident from what I have said that the Philippine Government can get along very well without the export tax, and therefore the loss of this revenue does not require the creation of a new tax.

But this is not the main reason for my objection to the extension to the Philippines of the income tax. My main reason, Mr. Chairman, is that it is un-Democratic. If it is necessary that there should be levied new taxes in the Philippine Islands, the Philippine Legislature and not Congress should levy those taxes. What is the use of having a Philippine Legislature if Congress is going to levy the taxes to be paid by the Filipino people? We have learned from you that taxation without representation is tyranny, and in this case we are taxed by a legislative body wherein we have no representation. Only through the courtesy of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] I had the opportunity of having my amendment submitted to the committee, and through the courtesy of the House I can discuss it. But in my own right I can say and do nothing on this floor; and, at any rate, I can not vote.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, the reason for levying this income tax on the wealth of the Philippine Islands is this: The present law levies an export tax, which falls on the industry of the Philippine Islands and upon their productive capacity. It is a burden on the small farmer who raises tobacco and hemp and is an injury to the industrial development of the Philippine Islands. This bill repeals the law which authorizes an export tax in the Philippine Islands.

As the Commissioner representing the Philippine Islands [Mr. QUEZON] states, it will reduce their revenues about half a million dollars. I consulted Gen. McIntyre, the head of the Insular Bureau, and the Secretary of War about this proposition for the purpose of trying to find out whether we could repeal the export tax. They said, after investigation, that we could certainly do so if we would extend the provisions of this income-tax bill to the Philippine Islands for the benefit of the Philippine Islands treasury.

You understand this provision does not tax the Philippine Islands for the benefit of our Government, but levies a tax upon the wealth of the Philippine Islands for the benefit of their Government in the same way that we levy it upon our own people. In other words, the effect of this bill is to untax the poor farmer in the Philippine Islands whose export of hemp and tobacco and other products are taxed when he sends them out of the country, and the burden of this income tax falls upon the wealth of the Philippine Islands. I was advised by the Insular Bureau that although this proposition had been considered by their local legislature, and while this Government had advised them to pass a law of this kind, up to the present time they had either failed or refused to do so.

Mr. QUEZON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. QUEZON. There was no reason for passing any bill, because the export tax on hemp was still on the statute books. So where was the wisdom of levying new taxes on the Filipinos when we had sufficient revenues on hand? But now we are ready to do it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. We have now repealed the export tax and we are levying upon the wealth of the Filipinos, for their own benefit, a tax which we think is just for our own people. I think this insures a tax on wealth there which they do not now have. I think it thoroughly just, and I think it should remain in the bill.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman explain why Hawaii is left out of the bill—so long as he is speaking on this subject?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Hawaii is in the bill. Hawaii is a Territory of the United States, and therefore it comes under the title of United States. Of course the tax in the Philippine Islands goes to the treasury of the Philippine Islands.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT.

The committee informally rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, a message from the President, in writing, was communicated to the House of Representatives by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, who also informed the House that the President had approved and signed bills of the following titles:

April 25, 1913:

H. J. Res. 62. Joint resolution making an appropriation for defraying the expenses of the committees of the Senate and House of Representatives authorized to attend and represent the Senate and House at the unveiling and dedication of the memorial to Thomas Jefferson at St. Louis, Mo.

May 1, 1913:

H. R. 2973. An act making appropriations for certain expenses incident to the first session of the Sixty-third Congress, and for other purposes.

THE TARIFF.

The committee resumed its session.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] in behalf of the Resident Commissioner representing the Philippine Islands [Mr. QUEZON].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, at the request of the representative of the Philippine Islands [Mr. QUEZON] I offer a further amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the further amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] in behalf of the representative of the Philippine Islands [Mr. QUEZON].

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 133, line 7, after the word "and," by striking out the word "of" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "to every person residing in."

Mr. QUEZON. After my first amendment has been voted down I hope that this one will be adopted. I am not sure that the wording of the amendment expresses entirely my purpose. I shall explain to the committee what I want and let you gentlemen do the rest.

The paragraph as it stands levies taxes on the citizens of the Philippine Islands alone, so that no foreigner will bear the burden of this taxation. This is not fair. Foreigners residing in the Philippines receive as much protection and benefit from the Philippine Government as the Filipinos, if not more. Again, the property owned, and every business, trade, or profession carried on in the Philippines by persons residing elsewhere is not taxed. There is no reason on earth for this exemption. I hope the law will be so worded as to impose the tax on every person residing in the Philippines and on every property, business, trade, or profession carried on there by persons residing outside the islands.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], in behalf of the Resident Commissioner from the Philippine Islands [Mr. QUEZON].

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I understand the committee offered an amendment, in line 7, striking out the words "by every citizen." Is that correct, changing the word "by," in line 6 of page 133, to the word "to"? That would still leave the law applicable only to every citizen of Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. Plainly that would not cover a rich Chinese merchant in the Philippine Islands or a rich English merchant or a rich Japanese merchant in the Philippine Islands. I apprehend it was not the intention of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL], if the law is to be applied to the Philippine Islands, to omit the very people who make the money over there in trade and who have the money. Does not the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] believe himself that this amendment ought to prevail?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman that I think the amendment is worthy of consideration, and I will ask unanimous consent that it be passed over for the present with the privilege of coming back to it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], in behalf of the Resident Commissioner from the Philippine Islands [Mr. QUEZON], may be passed over for the present and recurred to later. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 3321—the tariff bill—and had come to no resolution thereon.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. ANTHONY, for 10 days, on account of a death in his family.

LEAVE TO WITHDRAW PAPERS.

By unanimous consent, at the request of Mr. WILSON of New York, leave was granted to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of H. R. 22260, Sixty-second Congress, granting a pension to Lydia Norton, no adverse report having been made thereon.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the following personal request.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Cox asks leave to withdraw the evidence in H. R. 28498, Sixty-second Congress, third session (Jack Merssner).

The evidence in H. R. 5191, Sixty-second Congress, first session (Abraham Crist).

The evidence in H. R. 16879, Sixty-second Congress, second session (Martha Fitzpatrick).

The evidence in H. R. 18351, Sixty-second Congress, second session (Cornelius W. Morrison).

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, these requests will be granted.

Mr. MANN. Are those cases in which there are no adverse reports?

The SPEAKER. It does not state. Those requests will be laid aside.

LEGISLATIVE ACTS OF PORTO RICO (S. DOC. NO. 20).

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

As required by section 31 of the act of Congress approved April 12, 1900, entitled "An act temporarily to provide revenues and a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes," I transmit herewith copies of the acts and resolutions enacted by the Legislative Assembly of Porto Rico during the session beginning January 13 and ending March 13, 1913.

WOODROW WILSON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, May 6, 1913.

The SPEAKER. This message will be printed and referred to the Committee on Insular Affairs, and the accompanying documents will remain in the archives of the House.

REPORT ON THE TARIFF BILL.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask the Chair to lay before the House the concurrent resolution in reference to printing additional copies of the report of the Ways and Means Committee on the tariff bill (H. R. 3321).

The SPEAKER laid before the House the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 7) for the printing of 20,000 additional copies of the report of the Ways and Means Committee on H. R. 3321, with a Senate amendment thereto.

The Senate amendment was read, as follows:

Line 7, after "Senate," insert:

"To be apportioned as follows: Two thousand to the Committee on Finance, 1,000 to the Senate document room, and 2,000 to the Senate folding room."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I move to concur in the Senate amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

RECESS.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House take a recess until 7.45 o'clock p. m.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 30 minutes p. m.) the House took a recess until 7 o'clock and 45 minutes p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker.

THE TARIFF.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 3321—the tariff bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, with Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee in the chair.

Mr. COPLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 133, line 8, strike out everything in subsection A after the word "Islands" and insert in lieu thereof "a tax of 2 per cent per annum upon such income over and above $5,000; and a like tax shall be assessed, levied, and paid annually upon the entire net income from all property owned, and of every business, trade, or profession carried on in the United States by persons residing elsewhere.

"In addition to the income tax provided under this section (herein referred to as the normal income tax) there shall be levied, assessed, and collected upon the net income of every individual an additional income tax (herein referred to as the additional tax) of 1 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $10,000 and does not exceed $15,000, and an additional income tax of 2 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $15,000 and does not exceed $20,000, and an additional income tax of 3 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $20,000 and does not exceed $25,000, and an additional income tax of 4 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $25,000 and does not exceed $30,000, and an additional income tax of 5 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $30,000 and does not exceed $35,000, and an additional income tax of 6 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $35,000 and does not exceed $40,000, and an additional income tax of 7 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $40,000 and does not exceed $45,000, and an additional income tax of 8 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $45,000 and does not exceed $50,000, and an additional income tax of 9 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $50,000 and does not exceed $55,000, and an additional income tax of 10 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $55,000 and does not exceed $60,000, and an additional income tax of 11 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $60,000 and does not exceed $65,000, and an additional income tax of 12 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $65,000 and does not exceed $70,000, and an additional income tax of 13 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $70,000 and does not exceed $75,000, and an additional income tax of 14 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $75,000 and does not exceed $80,000, and an additional income tax of 15 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $80,000 and does not exceed $85,000, and an additional income tax of 16 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $85,000 and does not exceed $90,000, and an additional income tax of 17 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $90,000 and does not exceed $95,000, and an additional income tax of 18 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $95,000 and does not exceed $100,000, and an additional income tax of 23 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $100,000 and does not exceed $200,000, and an additional income tax of 28 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $200,000 and does not exceed $300,000, and an additional income tax of 33 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $300,000 and does not exceed $400,000, and an additional income tax of 38 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $400,000 and does not exceed $500,000, and an additional income tax of 43 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $500,000 and does not exceed $600,000, and an additional income tax of 48 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $600,000 and does not exceed $700,000, and an additional income tax of 53 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $700,000 and does not exceed $800,000, and an additional income tax of 58 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $800,000 and does not exceed $900,000, and an additional income tax of 63 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $900,000 and does not exceed $1,000,000, and an additional income tax of 68 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $1,000,000. All the provisions of this section relating to individuals who are to be chargeable with the normal income tax, so far as they are applicable, shall apply to the levy, assessment, and collection of the additional tax imposed under this section. Every person subject to this additional tax shall, for the purpose of its assessment and collection, make a personal return of his total net income from all sources, corporate or otherwise, for the preceding calendar year."

Mr. COPLEY. Mr. Chairman, under this proposed amendment a man having an income of $5,000 or less would pay no tax. If his income was $10,000, he would pay $100. If his income was $25,000, he would pay $700. If it was $50,000, he would pay $2,700. If it was $75,000 a year, he would pay $5,950. If it was $100,000, he would pay $10,450. If it was $1,000,000 he would pay $415,450.

Mr. Chairman, I have introduced this amendment for several reasons, the principal one being that I believe it to be the best way of equalizing the opportunities which society in this country offers to certain men in securing more than their fair share of the benefits derived from the labors of other men. If there is one tax which bears lightly on the shoulders of the individual paying it, it is that which is paid out of a surplus income. It galls no shoulders, though it will probably gall some hearts. No man can seriously question that any tax paid under the graduated schedule proposed in this amendment would come out of a surplus income after allowing its recipient a sufficient amount to provide for his family and himself in a dignified manner.

There are two standpoints of justice from which we might look at this question: One, the material; the other, the moral.

From the material standpoint a government is established for the purpose of insuring, as far as possible, safety to life and safety to property—the enjoyment of an income. The life which is sought to be protected is of equal value to the different individuals, the richest and the poorest alike. The property which is protected, particularly that represented by an income, is not of equal value to the rich and the poor, nor is it in a ratio of their respective incomes. In one instance a meager living with nothing left over; in the other, all the comforts as well as the necessities and an enormous surplus besides.

What is the ratio between a surplus income of many millions of dollars a year and a surplus income of nothing, and what is the Government asking of each?

From the moral standpoint, is the possessor of the brain power sufficient to amass an enormous fortune entitled to all its benefits, or does he owe some duty to society?

The per capita wealth in this country, about $1,500, is the highest of any country in the world; and, bear in mind, this represents the labors of man not from the Declaration of Independence, not from the first settling of this country, not from the beginning of the Christian era, but from the beginning of time, the labors of man coupled with opportunities presented to them in this country. This same per capita means for every man, woman, and child. It would amount to about $7,500 for each adult man. A man, therefore, who has accumulated $1,000,000 in his lifetime has appropriated to himself the entire earnings of 133 men; not for one generation, but since human beings began to accumulate wealth on this footstool. Society, therefore, in this country has offered the individual these opportunities, and society is entitled to some of their earnings.

Take the richest man in America, probably John D. Rockefeller. His wealth is variously estimated from five hundred to one thousand millions of dollars, which means that from 66,000 to 133,000 men have been at work accumulating property for him since the time when human beings first evolved sufficiently to appreciate the value of property.

I am taking Mr. Rockefeller merely as a type. He could not possibly have created this wealth by the labor of his own hand or brain alone. It required, in addition, the conditions of society which allowed him private ownership of oil lands and oil wells, which allowed him practically whatever margin he could get on refining his product and also whatever margin for distribution he might take. Now, Mr. Chairman, we need the brain power of the great captains of industry working for the benefit of all our people, and we need the stimulus which self-interest furnishes to them.

I believe in exempting moderate incomes. It is not the income of $5,000 a year that is a menace to the institutions of this country, and I do not believe there is a single one of our self-made captains of industry who would not have subscribed to the graduated income tax proposed in this amendment when he began the process of gathering his fortune. I have no authority to speak for the gentleman whose name I have used in this illustration, but I do believe when he entered the oil business he would have been willing to guarantee to work just as hard as he has done, denying himself everything he has denied himself, with a prospect of a fortune of a few million dollars instead of several hundreds of millions.

Why, wealth is a relative matter at best. Each man is prompted by a most healthful impulse. He wants to see the helpless members of his family, for whose helplessness he is primarily responsible, cared for as well as the helpless members of his neighbor's family. We do not want to discourage this principle, but if one man has the vision and the energy and the application that allows him to amass a swollen fortune, provided his neighbors are treated in exactly the same manner, he will work just as hard as if there were no such provision as this.

If this amendment should be adopted, and I venture the prediction that within 10 years some such law will be written on the statute books of this country by the American Congress, I would then suggest that a good part of it be turned back to the various States from which it is collected, to be used by them in lightening the burdens of taxation of the poor and less fortunate people, and not as alms and charity but as equalizing the burdens. The child of a Rockefeller and the child of the humblest workman are alike an asset to this country. Every enlightened State has compulsory school laws, but, unfortunately, not all of them furnish free textbooks, and where a poor man has a large family and is compelled to send his children to school they add a burden which is not equalized by a man with an income so large that he has a surplus after providing for his family. And yet the value of these children as estimated by the State is in direct ratio to their numbers.

With such an enormous income as this would give it would be possible for the various States and the Federal Government to prosecute their researches along the lines of health, sanitary science, medicine. In other words, it would be a question not of charity but of justice. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. COPLEY].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. GILLETT. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 133, line 8, after the word "islands," insert "a tax of one-half of 1 per cent per annum upon such income over and above $1,000 up to $4,000, and"

Mr. GILLETT. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this amendment is to reach that class who are exempted by the present bill who have an income over $1,000 and less than $4,000 a year, and have them pay an income tax of one-half of 1 per cent. Unquestionably a majority of the people of this country are exempted by the $4,000 limit now in the bill. I have no question but that a great majority of our people have no hope of ever having an income of $4,000 a year, and would be very glad, if they were assured of that income, to give much more than 1 per cent of it to the Government in the shape of an income tax. My main purpose, however, in suggesting this is not because I think those below $4,000 necessarily ought to pay an income tax. I appreciate that there should be a difference between the rich and the poor in the per cent of the tax and that the weight upon the poor should be made very light. But there is another effect which can be reached by an income tax. The main reason that I offer this amendment is that I think it would be an antidote to what is one of the most alarming diseases which we all recognize here to-day in Congress—the disease of extravagance. I think everyone will admit that in the last few years the tendency of national expenditure has been constantly increasing to an extent which the great mass of the people do not trouble themselves about and do not appreciate, and I can see no brake for the constant progress of that expenditure except some such provision as this.

The great mass of the people of the country do not appreciate that they are paying the expenses. They look upon the National Government as a great reservoir of wealth, from which they extract as much as they can for their district or for their enterprises without any cost to them; and in recent years there has been a prodigious increase of Federal activities. Most of us probably approve of that increase. It is doing much for the country in every way, but it is costing money. It is making a constant necessary increase in our expenses, and it is changing the attitude of the people toward the Federal Government so that they are constantly demanding more and are reckless of expense. To-day every Congressman has a call from his home constituency to get all of the money that he can out of the Treasury for his district. His people do not pay much attention to what he votes for other districts. They do not care how much logrolling he does, how willing he is to pledge his vote to some reckless extravagance in some other portion of the country; so long as he gets what they want for their own district they are satisfied. We have upon us a constant pressure for expenditure, and no matter how economical we may be at heart, few of us are Spartan enough to stand up and resist this pressure.

It seems to me that an amendment like this which says that a man who gets an income over $1,000 shall pay one-half of 1 per cent tax would bring home to the people the fact that they are paying the bills as they really are. The tax would be very small, only 50 cents on an income of $1,000 and $5 on an income of $2,000. If the Government were expensive, if the administration were extravagant, their little tax of $1 or $5 would be increased. If the Government were economical their income tax would decrease so that all the time they would have a little feeling in their pockets as to whether the Government was economical or extravagant.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GILLETT. Yes.

Mr. AUSTIN. Does the gentleman not think it would defeat every Member who would vote for this amendment if the fact were known at home?

Mr. GILLETT. No; I do not. I do not believe the people are so unthinking and selfish. I am willing to take the risk at any rate, and this question, perhaps, illustrates the impulse which we all have. We are all afraid to do anything which we think may hurt us at home, regardless of whether we think it is right and best for the country or not.

I believe it would be extremely desirable to make every citizen of the United States have some constant pressure telling him whether the Government was economical or whether the Government was extravagant, and that is the reason I advocate this amendment. I do not suppose under the caucus rules it is very likely to be adopted, but I do hope it will produce some effect upon the minds of gentlemen and set them thinking whether it is not necessary for us to do something to check this constant growth of Federal expense and the constant pressure on Members of Congress to vote large appropriations and bring back some inducement and reward and popularity for being economical.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Chairman, as a new Member of this great body I of course feel that I should have regard to some extent for the long-established custom of this House, which in a measure demands that discussions of questions shall be left in the main to the more mature Members from the standpoint of service, but on the other hand, I feel that as a representative and commissioned spokesman of more than 200,000 citizens of the fourth congressional district of Texas I should be allowed to break in a measure whatever of this custom remains, and exercise my constitutional right to speak my sentiments on this floor and refuse to be relegated to that lockjawed ostracism to some extent typical of the dead past.

This Congress has been called in extraordinary session for the purpose of handling an extraordinary situation. It has been assembled to revise the tariff and to provide revenue for the support and maintenance of the Government. The question of levying and collecting taxes to defray the expenses of Government is to my mind one of the greatest, if not the greatest, and most serious that has ever confronted a people of any Government or that confronts us at this hour. To levy taxes so that they will bear equally and equitably on all property in all sections, and so that the greatest burden will fall on those most able to pay is the true doctrine advocated and adhered to by the Democratic Party since its coming into existence. Entering upon this great task we are met by a condition the most extraordinary in the annals of our time. The Democratic Party must and has set itself to the task of taking a system that has grown up under the most indefensible system that the world has ever known—that of a tariff levied not for revenue but for protection—and with a determination to relieve the people of unjust burdens, yet to provide revenue for the Government. The system of protective tariff built up under the Republican misrule has worked to make the rich richer and the poor poorer. The protective tariff has been justly called the mother of trusts. It takes from the pockets of those least able to pay and puts it into the pockets of those most able to pay. The two great parties in the long past took distinct positions upon the tariff question—the Democratic Party of the masses on the one side and the Republican Party of the classes on the other side; the Democratic position being that the only reason on earth for the levy and collection of a tariff tax at all is for the purpose of raising money to defray the expenses of the Government, and that whatever protection came to any industry from this tax was only an incident and arising out of the system, and no reason for the tax.

The Republican doctrine being that the real reason for the levy and collection of a tariff tax was to protect American industries from competition, and that the raising of revenue to support the Government was only an incident coming from the system. A system that would build around this Government a tariff wall so high that the factories of other countries could not pay import duty, come into this country and sell in competition with American trade, leaving the American industries absolutely without competition and leave them to fatten on the American consumer. The Republican doctrine is a prohibitive tariff; the Democratic doctrine is one "for revenue only," and levied high enough to raise money to defray the expenses of the Government, yet low enough that the factories of other lands can manufacture their goods, pay the import duties, and sell in competition with American trade to the benefit of every American consumer. The country has carried the prohibitive tariff of Republicanism until the American consumer is stooped and weary of his all too heavy load. They have therefore turned them out of the high places of power and called the party of Jefferson and Jackson again to power. That party that in the older days guided this ship of state so long and so well. The Democratic Party was called to power on a platform of great principles.

The Baltimore convention that placed the banner of this great party in the hands of the clean and matchless Woodrow Wilson was a convention made up of real human beings. Men who came from every walk of life, and who were fresh from the people, who knew their hopes and their aspirations, their wants, and their sufferings. They placed at the head of the party and as spokesman for the party a man whom they believe had the great heart and mind that he could interpret the inarticulate longings of suffering humanity. By an electoral vote unprecedented in the history of the Republic, this leader was called to the highest station in the gift of men the world over. In conformity with his and his party's pledges to reduce the tariff at once and downward, he called this Congress in extra session. Not only is the Democratic Party to be congratulated, but the whole of the country on the fact that in carrying out the pledges made to the people, that in Congress they have the stainless, able, and peerless OSCAR UNDERWOOD as majority leader and chairman of the powerful Committee on Ways and Means. To my mind this committee has given to the country the best, fairest, and justest tariff bill ever written and a law the operation of which will lift much of the load from the bending backs of the taxpayers of the country.

When the history of this era is written impartially the name of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] will shine resplendent, and the great debt of gratitude they owe him will never be paid, as was said the other day by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER], until he is called to the Presidency of the United States, the only office in the Republic carrying greater responsibilities, or with greater opportunity for great public service, than the chairmanship of the great committee which he now holds.

The gentlemen on the other side of the Chamber, our Republican friends, who by reason of their broken pledges and unkept promises to the American people have been reduced to a mere handful, are to-day standing for nothing, reduced to an opposition party only, are very solicitous that the present bill will bring on hard times and panics. A panic may come at any time, but it is my deliberate judgment that this bill will be no more responsible for any panic that should come than it was the cause of the panic of 1907, which came not after a reduction of the tariff, but came amid the prosperous times of protection about which our Republican friends talk so much. The Republicans talk about the hard deal the producer is getting in this bill. I would call their attention to the fact that when they were in power they put hides of the producer on the free list, but they were too good to the rich manufacturer to put the shoes that he manufactures and sells on the free list. This Democratic tariff bill leaves hides on the free list and also puts shoes that the American consumer must buy to protect the feet of himself and his children on the free list. The Republican Party was willing, according to their argument, to do an injustice to the producer of hides, but was not willing to make a corresponding reduction in the shoes for the consumer. This eternal Republican solicitation for the American manufacturer makes me tired. Willing and anxious to take that small rich class under its protecting wing, but unwilling at all times to heed the great chorus of sad cries ever coming from the large yet poor class, the American consumer.

This tariff bill goes on in its reduction of taxes on the necessaries of life. Follow the long line of reductions made. On all classes of woolen goods the Republican protective tariff is reduced from an average of 92 per cent to a Democratic revenue tariff averaging 35 per cent. Notice a few articles, for instance:

Woolen dress goods, from 99.70 to 35 per cent.
Ready-made woolen goods, from 79.56 to 35 per cent.
Flannels for underwear, from 93.29 to 25 and 35 per cent.
Woolen blankets, from 72.69 to 25 per cent.
Cotton underwear, from 60.27 to 25 per cent.
Stockings, hose, and half hose, from 75.38 to 50 per cent.
Shirts, collars, and cuffs, from 64.03 to 25 per cent.
Ready-made wearing apparel, from 50 to 30 per cent.
Handkerchiefs and mufflers, from 59.27 to 30 per cent.
Cotton thread, from 31.54 to 19.29 per cent.
Gloves, from 44.15 to 31.77 per cent.
Anvils of iron and steel, from 32.11 to 15 per cent.
Bolts, from 20.59 to 15 per cent.
Chains of all kinds, from 46.59 to 20 per cent.
Pocket knives, from 77.68 to 40 per cent.
Scissors and shears, from 53.77 to 30 per cent.
Table and butcher knives, forks, etc., from 41.98 to 27 per cent.
Files, etc., from 60.47 to 25 per cent.
Tinware from 45 to 25 per cent.
House or cabinet furniture of wood, from 35 to 15 per cent.
Sugar, from 48.54 to 36.25 per cent.
Red lead, from 60.35 to 25 per cent.
White lead, from 38.01 to 25 per cent.
Castile soap, from 16.20 to 10 per cent.
All bricks, from 30.23 to 10.28 per cent.
China, crockery ware, from 55 per cent to 35 and 50 per cent.
Wire rope and strand, from 49.84 to 30 per cent.
Common window glass, from 46.38 to 28.20 per cent.

With these reductions made, this bill goes on and puts the following articles that the farmer and laboring man must use totally on the free list. I quote that part of the bill.

Agricultural implements: Plows, tooth and disc harrows, headers, harvesters, reapers, agricultural drills and planters, mowers, horse-rakes, cultivators, threshing machines and cotton gins, wagons and carts, and all other agricultural implements of any kind and description, whether specifically mentioned herein or not, whether in whole or in parts, including repair parts.

These great reductions have been made by this Democratic tariff bill with the assurance to the American people that further reductions will be made as soon as the revenues of the country will justify.

The Sixty-second Congress, being a Democratic Congress, submitted an amendment to the Federal Constitution calling for an income tax, an income tax being one of the cardinal principles of the Democratic Party, one it had long contended for—our position having always been that the tariff is a tax and that the burdens should fall heaviest on those men and industries most able to pay. I quote from paragraph A of section II of the bill, as follows:

A. That there shall be levied, assessed, and paid annually upon the entire income received from all sources in the preceding calendar year by every citizen of the United States, whether residing at home or abroad, and by every person residing in the United States, though not a citizen thereof, a tax of 1 per cent per annum upon the amount so received over and above $4,000; and a like tax shall be assessed, levied, and paid annually upon the entire net income from all property owned and of every business, trade, or profession carried on in the United States by persons residing elsewhere.

In addition to the income tax provided under this section (herein referred to as the normal income tax) there shall be levied, assessed, and collected upon the net income of every individual an additional income tax (herein referred to as the additional tax) of 1 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $20,000 and does not exceed $50,000, and 2 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $50,000 and does not exceed $100,000, and 3 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $100,000.

This provision holds that a man whose income is $4,000 per annum shall pay 1 per cent per annum as a direct tax to the Government, and as his income mounts into the thousands he shall pay more, which is nothing but just and right. This tax is calculated to reach 425,000 in all and bring into the Treasury revenues amounting to not less than $70,000,000. This section is true to the Democratic doctrine that wealth and not consumption should pay the greater amount of revenue to support the Government. Under the old system of levying tax on articles of common use the poor man with a large family to feed and clothe was compelled to pay more tax to the Government than the rich man with a small family.

Our Republican friends, in their effort to prejudice the producing class against this bill, tell him that he will be compelled to sell his products cheaper. We deny this as a general proposition, and in those few cases where he does we will point him to the other side of the question and demonstrate to him that the articles which he must buy under the provisions of this bill will be materially reduced. The articles that the farmer must buy have all been placed on the free list or materially reduced. Again demonstrating the justness of this bill and pointing to the time in the near future when all of the necessaries of life will be placed on the free list. In their effort to prejudice the farmers of the country against this bill our Republican friends will find that they are dealing with a thinking and intelligent class, who can not be easily fooled by the trickery of the political orator.

They talk about the farmer. What consideration have they shown him? Of course they are quite willing to give the farmer a tariff on his products, the price of which is fixed in the markets of the world and which no tax can change, if they can by this fool him into standing for a protected market for the manufacturers who have for generations stood behind a protective-tariff wall of robbery and fattened their already swollen purse with more ill-gotten gain wrung from horny hands of the toiling masses that have forever been ground under the heel of taxation with a relentless tread.

Mr. Chairman, I am one of those Democrats who believe that the only reason for the levy of a tariff is to raise revenue to defray the expenses of the Government, and when the time comes that money to defray the expenses of the Government can be raised from the income tax and other legitimate sources of direct taxation, that the tariff should be entirely removed and that free trade should come in its stead. And along this line I advocate a Federal inheritance tax. To me this is a just tax and easy to pay. When a man by inheritance comes into a large fortune out of no effort on his own part and only by accident of birth, accumulated by his ancestry under a Government which protected him in his property rights, I believe he should be willing to pay some of it as a tribute to the agency that protected his ancestry in the accumulation.

When this tax on a reasonable percentage basis is levied, it will bring large sums into the Treasury which as the years go by will increase as swollen fortunes are broken up, and again the tariff tax can be lowered to the benefit of every American consumer.

Mr. Chairman, the Republicans in this House quote, it seems with a great deal of pleasure, that part of the Baltimore platform which says that the tariff shall be lowered, but that it shall not be lowered suddenly and to such a great extent that any legitimate industry shall be harmed. They loudly acclaim that this bill is not drawn true to that promise, in that they say it will put some industries out of business. I for one Democrat on this floor do not believe that any industry is a legitimate one that can not live without a protective-tariff wall built around it. In line with what the President said in his message to the Congress I believe in matching the genius of the American citizen against the genius of the world, and I have confidence enough in the ability and skill of the American manufacturer to believe that he can go into the manufacturing business with the skilled labor of American workmen, produce his wares, and compete with other countries for the trade of the world. The man who says that he can not do this is paying his country and the ability of the manufacturers of his country a poor compliment indeed.

Mr. Chairman, the Republican minority in this House, or I suppose I should say the two minorities in this House—one being what little remains of that great party of Lincoln and McKinley and the other the dumb, driven, blind followers of the "Terrible Teddy"—have tried to play on the prejudices of the new Members of this body by telling them that the appointment of the committees were deliberately held up until the tariff bill was disposed of, and have held this as a club over their heads in order to make them be subservient to the Committee on Ways and Means and force them through fear of ostracism to vote for this bill as the committee wanted it. This is a childish bit of horseplay and a miserable appeal to the prejudice. This bill was submitted to the Democratic caucus, and there every Democrat had a chance to have his say and to offer his amendment to the bill. We settled our party differences in that caucus and have come into this House and before the country with a united front, and this seems to pain our Republican brethren keenly, for they know that every amendment that they offer will be met with a solid Democratic majority and sent to the scrap heap, where it will justly repose. As I said in the outset, the Democratic Party was called into power and took the reins of government on a great platform of principles which they should and are going to carry out, and speaking as a new Member whom our Republican friends would try to prejudice, I say that it is more important that these pledges be carried out and the party's honor held stainless than that I or any other new Member ever get on a committee. This is my answer to the drowning minorities that are grabbing at every passing straw.

Mr. Chairman, I came to this body a few weeks ago with childlike enthusiasm and confidence. It has always been my ambition since childhood to live such a life that one day my fellow citizens would call me to membership in this popular branch of the greatest lawmaking body in the world. Out of their confidence and partiality they have done this. It is now my sole purpose here to help enact such wise and just laws that our common country will by virtue of these laws be a happier and a more prosperous country. I have always dreamed of a country which I believe this should be and will be, and that is one in which the citizenship is an educated and patriotic people, not swayed by passion and prejudice, and a country that shall know no East, no West, no North, no South, but inhabited by a people liberty loving, patriotic, happy, and prosperous, with its lawmakers having no other purpose than to write such just laws as shall in the years to come be of service to human kind yet unborn. [Applause.]

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts is one I do not believe this House is ready to support. It is a well-known fact that in this country of ours the man of small means usually pays all the taxes that he ought to pay upon property that he owns, and this idea that you can stop expenses, stop extravagances, as the gentleman from Massachusetts puts it, by levying an additional tax upon the man of small income seems to me to be incorrect. I believe that every man in this country ought to pay taxes according to the property that he owns, and usually you will find that throughout the country the man who has little property usually pays his just share of taxes. He is compelled to do it. The little property he may have is in sight when the assessor comes around and is easily gotten at, and he has to pay on all he owns. The amount may be small in comparison with what some others pay in the community, but it is on all his property.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman yield? Does the gentleman believe that it is a proper income tax to exempt a man who may have property worth $100,000 drawing 4 per cent income and not pay taxes under the provisions of the pending bill?

Mr. FOSTER. I judge, under this bill, if he draws 4 per cent upon the $100,000 capital, he will not pay an income tax; but there is little likelihood of many cases of that kind coming to the surface in the country.

Mr. STAFFORD. If it were $3,900, he would not.

Mr. FOSTER. The gentleman might find instances where this law would not be able to reach everybody. And that is another illustration, I will say to my friend from Wisconsin—another illustration that sometimes these men who have the great fortunes escape taxation. You can not reach all of them; but this bill places the limit at $4,000, and it is going to reach a great many of them.

Mr. STAFFORD. It will reach only 1 per cent of the population of this country. Many men of wealth—men owning $100,000, $50,000, or $75,000—will escape any taxation whatsoever.

Mr. FOSTER. Well, I will say to the gentleman from Wisconsin, I have no doubt when this bill becomes a law that a great many men who are not paying as much taxes as they ought to now will pay more than they have been paying in the past. This does reach a class of men who can afford to pay it, but the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts takes from the man who is drawing $1,000 an additional tax that he must pay, and he is paying, possibly, upon the full valuation of all that he has in the world, because those people usually pay it on the property that they own, and the idea of placing an additional burden upon him does not commend itself to me. The man whose income is $1,000 must support his family, educate his children, and, if possible, lay up something for a time when he can not earn anything.

Mr. BARTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FOSTER. In a moment. There may come a time, I will say to my friend from Wisconsin, when the Government would want to place this additional tax upon the man of small income in some great emergency, when the Government requires more money than it is able to raise with the present system of taxation, and in that case I am satisfied that the man of small means would be willing to pay his just portion. Those people are patriotic and do not want to escape the taxation that is imposed upon them. It should be the policy of every citizen to pay his just portion of taxes for the support of his Government, and no patriotic citizen ought to object. A great trouble has been in our present system that those of great wealth have escaped this burden. It is difficult in every State to pass laws so that those persons who own vast amounts of property must pay their just taxes. Corporations are continually evading their just part of taxation for the support of the Government. The man with a farm, whether large or small, can not hide his property. The person with a home, it may be all he has, must pay his part; it is just and right he should do so, but at the same time those who have been enjoying the blessings of special laws that have enabled them to take from the man of small means a part of his earnings in the way of tariff taxes now levied for the support of the Government on this excessive income ought to be compelled to pay more. This law will in my judgment prove beneficial in our system of taxation and I hope will cause the burden of taxation to fall most heavily on those who are best able to bear it.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman yield? I think we are in harmony as to the principle.

Mr. BARTON. On the theory of your argument, which I think you believe honestly, I would ask you what objection you would urge against the amendment introduced by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. COPLEY]?

Mr. FOSTER. I have not studied that amendment sufficiently to give an answer that would possibly be what ought to be given on a great question of this kind. I will say in regard to beginning the income tax, this new system of taxation, I believe the committee has arrived at the proper rate. And I will say to the gentleman that in the future these rates may have to be changed and the amount of income which is now exempted may have to be changed. And so, if it has to be done, there is plenty of time to do it. We are starting out on a new system of taxation, one that we never had in this country, and many whom we hope to reach are those who possibly have never paid their fair share of taxes before.

The man of family, whose income is small, has usually paid a consumption tax in the way of tariff, and has contributed his fair share of taxes to the Government, and now, if his small income is again taxed, it is more than he should be expected to bear at this time, and so I shall vote against the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin, and hope that it will be defeated.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Chairman, I am bitterly opposed to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GILLETT]. The poor people of this country for more than a hundred years have been bearing the burdens of taxation. A revenue tariff is the most unfair method of raising money to defray the expenses of government, and when levied upon the necessaries of life its burdens fall most heavily upon the laboring people. To-day the section hand pays more to defray the expenses of this Government than John D. Rockefeller or Andrew Carnegie. Under the unwise system of a high protective tariff, as advocated by the Republican Party, the burdens of the poor have been increased by levying a complicated system of specific and ad valorem rates. As an example, under the Payne law you place on the poor man's stocking costing not more than a dollar per dozen a rate of 93 per cent, and on the rich man's stocking costing more than $5 per dozen you place a rate of 55 per cent. It is so unequal in its terms that no man can justify or defend such a system. President Taft, in his message to Congress submitting the report of the Tariff Commission on wool and woolens, declared that the present law placed a tariff of 150 per cent to more than 200 per cent on the coarser wooolen cloths, a prohibitive rate, affording a complete monopoly, at the same time less than one-half of these rates are laid upon the finer woolen fabrics. What is true in these examples is largely true in all the rates in the Payne law.

The man who is the most able to pay has escaped the burden of high taxation, and the man who is the least able to pay is carrying its greatest burden. A tariff tax carries with it burdens and benefits. Only those who have property on which a tariff can be laid can ever hope to share in the benefits. So the producer of the raw material and the producer of the finished product are the only classes who can hope to share in the benefits of such taxation. But the toiling millions, constituting more than three-fourths of the population of this country, bear the great burdens of taxation, and yet they never have had an opportunity to share in the benefits of such taxation. The income tax stands out like a great emancipator, with a proclamation to the world declaring that the time has come when the unequal burdens of taxation shall no longer rest upon the shoulders of the laboring classes of this country, but that, instead thereof, these burdens shall be placed where they properly belong—upon the backs of the rich. The cross upon which the income of labor is being crucified by a protective tariff shall be torn down, and instead thereof a righteous income tax shall be inaugurated, placing an equitable portion of the burdens of taxation upon the men of this country who own property, which must be defended by the strong arm of this country. The tax dodger must uncover his hidden wealth to the tax collector. Mr. Chairman, there has never been known to man a fairer system of raising a revenue than that of an income tax, and I hail the sixteenth amendment as a harbinger of good to the American people, a relief to those who have been bearing the burdens in the past, with the hope that they may reap the benefits and fruits of their own toil. [Applause.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this amendment may close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that debate upon the pending amendment may close in 10 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] is recognized.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I do not think I shall talk to the amendment exactly, but it strikes me that if this section of the tariff bill should become a law it would be unconstitutional, because it provides that the tax shall begin on the 1st of last January, a month prior to the time of the adoption of the sixteenth amendment just referred to by my colleague. This bill provides that the mutual insurance companies shall pay taxes as other corporations do.

It provides, too, that the individual who owns a policy in an insurance company shall be required to pay the tax upon the premium which he pays every year. It also provides, if I interpret the language of the law correctly, that he shall also be obliged to pay a tax upon the dividends which are deducted from his premium every year.

This law, too, provides, if it should become a law, that if any man owns a piece of property which he rents to another he may be obliged to allow the person to whom he rents his property to pay the income tax out of the rent, or if he should desire to be exempted from that condition, under the provisions of this law he would be required to make a statement to the individual who rented his property by disclosing his income from every source, and he must be able to show to the lessee of his property that his total income is less than $4,000 a year.

It seems to me that that is rather reaching out a good ways to compel the owner of a piece of property to make a statement under oath to the man who rents his property as to just what sources of revenue he has from every other line of endeavor. I think that if this law should be enacted and enforced in this particular it would be found to be very unpopular.

There is one other condition of the law which I think ought to be improved by amendment. It is that owners of bonds issued by corporations, no matter how small the amount of the holding may be, may have the income tax deducted from the interest on their bond holdings. Now, this would be no hardship on the holder of a large number of bonds, because it would come entirely within the law. But this law proposes to exempt from taxation incomes amounting to $4,000 per annum; and I undertake to say that investigation would disclose the fact that nine-tenths of all the bond holdings in this country are in the possession of widows and orphans, any one of whom may not own more than from one to five thousand dollars, and this interest in their one to five thousand dollars of bond holdings may be their total revenue. And if it should happen that the interest on $5,000 of bonds amounted to $250 per annum, and the tax on that $250 per annum was collected at the source, and this $250 was the only income that the widow or the orphan had, this bill would require the person having not to exceed this $250 income to pay this income tax.

A remedy to be applied by the owner of these bonds, to be sure, is provided in this bill. What is it? It provides that if any owner of bonds having an income of less than $4,000 wishes to avail himself of the exemptions from the tax, he must make a sworn statement of the total income which he has, and if his income is shown to be less than $4,000, of course the exemption would be made, but it would cost as much to make the statement as to pay the tax—an unjust requirement. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, the committee's bill exempts from taxation all incomes under $4,000 per annum. As I understand the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GILLETT], it provides for a tax of one-half of 1 per cent on all incomes from $1,000 to $4,000 per annum.

It seems to me that there are at least two very good and sufficient reasons why the amendment of the gentleman from Massachusetts should not prevail. The first may be said to be, in a sense, a political reason, and the second an economic or social reason. And it seems to me that when the Representatives of a great people are undertaking to write a tax law, based upon an entirely new principle of taxation, it is entirely proper that we should consider the political reasons as affecting the terms of the bill, because if we believe in this new system of taxation, as it seems to me the country has shown it does, we ought not to put anything into the law which would endanger its permanency as a part of our fiscal system. And I venture the assertion that if Congress at the first opportunity which it has had of levying a direct tax upon the people without apportionment should levy a tax which would fall upon every citizen of the land, that tax would not stay upon the statute books longer than the first election which followed the first call of the tax collector. The people would be perfectly justified in repudiating it.

And the reason for it is as intimated in the argument of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FOWLER]. Under the indirect taxes which the people have been paying heretofore, which have been largely consumption taxes—because the poor consume out of all proportion to their income of what the rich consume as to their income—the men of small means and of small incomes have been paying an extraordinarily large share of the taxes to support the Government.

And if this direct tax should now be added to the burden which they must carry and should be made general upon all persons having incomes of more than $1,000, they would rise up in their wrath and write this law off the statute book as promptly as we have written it on. And they ought to do so. The present consumption taxes bear most heavily upon the poor; it is right that the income tax should bear most heavily upon the rich.

The second reason that appeals to me is this, that in levying this direct tax upon incomes we ought to rise above the point where the consumption taxes now bear out of all proportion to the incomes, and we ought to leave free and untaxed as a part of the income of every American citizen a sufficient amount to rear and support his family according to the American standard and to educate his children in the best manner which the educational system of the country affords. I think it safe to say that no man with the average American family of five children can support that family according to the proper American standard and send his children through the high schools and colleges of the land who does not have a gross income of $4,000 per annum. Out of that sum must be paid living expenses, interest on debts and other obligations, improvements to the home, education of children through colleges and universities, many comforts and some luxuries which Americans demand. And if you would not tax education, if you would not retard the development of our people up to the standard at which Americans ought to live, and if you would not doubly tax the poor upon whom these consumption taxes are now levied, you must make this exemption at about the sum of $4,000. Why, the exemption is less than it was in the Wilson law, because while that law exempted incomes under $4,000 it also exempted living expenses, and the average American man whose income is $4,000 will spend at least $3,000 in maintaining his family and his home; so that this tax would be a tax upon a net income of something like $1,000, while under the Wilson law the exemption really amounted to something like $7,000.

Now, the argument suggested by the question of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] is a good one as far as it goes, that the man who has $100,000 of property invested at 4 per cent would not pay any tax, and he is a pretty rich man, and he ought to pay a tax. The trouble with it is that if we were by this tax simply going after idle wealth the argument of the gentleman would be sound.

Mr. ANDERSON. Will the gentleman yield right there?

Mr. PALMER. I am afraid I can not. But we include not only idle wealth in this taxation, but we necessarily include industry and the doing of business, and this tax is levied upon the man whose gross income is $4,000; it includes not only interest upon moneys invested but actual earnings as well; and the man is rare in this country whose income from idle capital is $4,000 or less and who has no other income besides.

Mr. STAFFORD. There are many instances of that kind in Wisconsin, I will say to the gentleman.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GILLETT].

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, I ask that the amendment be read again.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be again reported.

The Clerk read the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 134, line 1, by striking out the figure "3" and substituting therefor the figure "8."

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, the purpose of the amendment is similar to that of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois a moment or two ago, in which he had the tabulated statistics giving the different figures under his own particular calculations. The purpose of this is to carry out a little further the idea of the committee on the income-tax provision and make this 9 per cent on incomes over $100,000, which is just. I feel, however, that, whether accepted or not, the income tax in its entirety is a matter that deals with the greatest question which must be settled by this lawmaking body. That is the question brought out here to-night and coming up all through the debate—the problem of privilege against the people.

As far as I am concerned, I was pledged when I went before the people to an income tax. I supported it on principle, because I believe it is the most just tax that can be devised; that it will take the burden off the shoulders of those who in the past have been carrying the burden and who are the least able to bear it.

I am pledged on this subject and I am in favor of this income tax, because there is the same proposition running through it as through the necessary reduction of the excessive tariff as evidenced by the present conditions due to the present schedules. I have been attacked a number of times from different sources on my attitude, and I want to read the plank in my platform that I put out several months before I was nominated. This platform was published in papers hostile to myself and was made the basis of attack in numerous editorials. After declaring for the Tariff Commission as the only real solution of this problem, I made the following declaration regarding the present situation:

I believe that the present excessive tariff on many products is simply the privilege unjustly acquired by corporations of taxing the people. The original intention of protecting infant industries has been lost sight of and it has become a tool to increase the cost of living. I do not believe that government can hand out golden gifts to manufacturers and still be just to the consumer. I am opposed to the doctrine that government has a moral right to take from the mass and bestow upon the individual without regard to the common welfare. Any tariff measure which would mean the greatest good to the greatest number would receive my support. I would endeavor in every measure to ascertain whether it would promote the public welfare, weaken special privilege, and help to give every man a fair and square chance before supporting it. If it had such aims I should feel it my duty to favor it, regardless of the party proposing or attacking it.

[Applause.]

Mr. YOUNG of Texas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania. No; I can not yield. I have not time.

Mr. Chairman, the debate which has occupied the House for many days has witnessed much of conflicting opinions and also of glittering generalities and petty partisanship.

Speeches have been made containing quibbles and juggles, false pretenses, appeals to short-sighted selfishness, and blind sentiment, and they have come from both sides of this House.

I believe that after the speechmaking is done, every man who votes upon this measure must face the issue squarely. The final vote is "Yes" or "No"; it is either for or against this measure as it stands.

I have taken the position that the tariff question will never be settled right until the services of a nonpartisan, unbiased commission of experts are at the disposal of Congress. I have declared that a haphazard revision will not prove satisfactory to the country for any length of time, and that any measure so framed must of necessity be more or less of a leap in the dark.

But, however much I believe that only in a competent tariff commission will this vexing problem of America be finally settled, I have never advocated a continuance of present conditions. The present measure is no more haphazard than the Payne law, and the results of the Payne law are before us in concrete evidence. It has put such unjustifiable burdens upon the people of the Nation that immediate action is necessary, and it will be impossible for any measure to work out more injustice than the situation to-day contains.

I consider that a vote cast here by a Representative of the people is right only if it would advance the general welfare as the deciding vote. I hold that I can not hide behind a refusal to vote on either side of the question, nor behind the plea that the Democratic majority should assume responsibility for this measure and its possible failure, on the ground of partisanship.

I believe that this bill is more just than the present law to the people of the Nation, that as a whole it will improve conditions and bring more of justice and less of oppression to the common man. I believe it is a fulfillment of the pledge of an immediate revision of the tariff downward. It contains mistakes of judgment, but the people of this country will forgive those mistakes where they will not forgive a pledge breaker. The Representative, be he Progressive, Democrat, or Republican, who breaks his pledges to the people is due for a scourging from an outraged and indignant public.

The American people are patient, but they are asking for deeds, not quibbles and pretexts. The day of blind party regularity is passed, and a vote here must stand or fall on its merits. [Applause.]

It seems to me that when poverty, industrial bondage, and the injustice and viciousness which follow them are the result of certain conditions it becomes the sacred duty of not only every Representative but every citizen to demand that such unjust conditions be changed and the causes which produced them removed, regardless of those who oppose such action or against whose individual interests it may operate. The fact that this law may prove harmful to protected interests can hardly outweigh the fact that the present Payne law is harmful to the people. There is more harm in waiting than in acting, and if there is any doubt I am willing to give the people the benefit of the doubt.

I described in the general debate on this bill the conditions in the great industrial districts of this Nation. No one can deny that excessively high tariffs have helped to enable great corporations to put wages down and prices up, and thus reap a far too wide margin of profit. It is dishonest and dangerous to perpetuate such conditions, and, as far as I am concerned, I can not but add my vote to any effort to change those conditions and to prevent the continuance of oppression and injustice through legislative wrong.

I would not think of attempting to outlaw all the forces which make for inequality of wealth in this Nation. Wealth and poverty are reached by many paths, and both may be the result of honesty and fraud, genius and greed, vice and virtue, energy and trickery, violation and upholding of law.

If we attempted to control all human enterprise and human relations in arbitrary fashion, every man would wear the shackles of coercion, and liberty would be a forgotten name. But I do believe in the principle, and I shall endeavor to vote, as a Member of this House, for any measure which will advance the principle that ruthless strength and cunning shall not override the weak, that concentrated wealth shall not strangle justice, that neither unjust riches nor enforced poverty shall find harbor in this Nation through legislation. [Applause.]

And I am convinced that right there is the dividing line on all vital issues in this Nation to-day. On one side are the privileged few, who have lost every feeling of brotherhood with their fellows and are willing to crush countless human beings into ignorance and want in order to maintain their own unjust advantages. On the other side are the masses of the people who, in the very degree by which these privileged few prey and prosper, are robbed of their fair share of life's opportunities and happiness.

That is the great question before the Nation to-day—"Shall this be a government for all the people, of all the people, and by all the people, or a government of the people, by privilege, for a few?" It is a question which must be settled and settled here. No new lands beckon the American lovers of liberty to-day to come and work out old problems under new conditions. There is no new country where the oppressed may seek refuge. For the first time in history men are compelled to settle their problems with finality face to face.

And the final answer to the question will come with the decision as to whether the people of America are to rule or be ruled. Because I believe that this tariff measure, in spite of the method of its making and its defects in specific details, against which I have spoken and voted, will, as a whole, decrease the power of privilege and enlarge the opportunities for the many, I must of necessity vote for it.

Its income-tax provision alone would cover a multitude of sins. It will, for the first time in the history of this Nation compel the possessors of swollen fortunes to pay the tax they should have paid long ago. It will shift part of the burden of taxation from the bending shoulders of the poor to those who have profited from governmental favoritism. It simply demands that the multimillionaire shall do what the poor man has always done, and it is just and right in its demand. [Applause.]

This bill is, to my mind, an honest attempt to carry out the pledge for an immediate revision of the tariff downward. A still further pledge has been made by the Progressive Party, and it, too, will be carried out in the future. It is that the tariff must be revised scientifically through the assistance of a tariff commission of trained experts, a system which will make it possible to fix tariff rates as national and not as party measures.

Under such a system we may have our giant industry without the blighting and dwarfing of the industrious; we may have our commercial splendor without our shame, prosperity without oppression, tariff legislation without the stain of lawlessness, statesmanship without the brand of treason, while kings of American finance shall no longer trample upon the keepers of American faith.

Because I believe with President Hayes that "he best serves his party who serves his country best," and in view of the pledges I have given the people, I can not do else than support the bill as a whole and stand responsible to the people for my action. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MURRAY of Oklahoma. Mr. Chairman, every man is an integral part of civilization and of society; he has equal obligations with his fellows, and is an equal expense to the Government so far as his right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Beyond this a man may have either a family or property to protect, or both. When he is called upon to protect his family or his property, he is called upon for extra expense for this extra protection to support the Government. For the past half century we have taxed the millions of American families rather than the surplus property of the portions made by the few under favoritism of government. Surplus wealth requires extra protection, and in this bill we have a clause we call the income tax, based upon a graduated scale as to the different rates; and I may say that this proper graduation will depend largely upon experiment. We do not say that we are wholly right in detail of this provision. The man who claims that claims something which he knows is not true, and the great American people do not expect us to be perfect. They do expect us to do something. They will excuse a mistake, honestly made; but they will not excuse the attempt of those who would destroy an effort to tax the surplus wealth of the country which has gone untaxed so far as it has been used for support of the Federal Government.

There are those who would say that we should begin at $1,000 in lieu of $4,000. They forget the principle upon which this tax is founded, and that is that every man who is making no more than a living should not be taxed upon living earnings, but should be taxed upon the surplus that he makes over and above that amount necessary for good living. We also recognize that there are different grades of living, and we start out with the assumption that $4,000 will reach the highest grade of living, and starting there we tax all of the surplus wealth that tends to pile up gigantic fortunes which have so beset and threatened the existence of our civilization by creating social extremes. The purpose of this tax is nothing more than to levy a tribute upon that surplus wealth which requires extra expense, and in doing so it is nothing more than meting out even-handed justice. The American people will so pronounce and approve it.

Again, even though we should start out at $1,000 as the basis of a highest grade of living, it would not be practicable for the reason that it would necessitate a vast deal more of collecting agents, and that would take up that extra amount of revenue obtained by taxing earnings between $1,000 and $4,000. If we were in a State, as, say, in the State of Oklahoma, where we have such tax, and we should proceed to levy an income tax, with a tax collector in every county in the State, we could then start at any rate, but since it must require extra officials for the Federal Government anyway, the people do not ask that we provide a surplus number of public officials who would be required by the extra amount between $1,000 and $4,000 merely for the sake of taxing all incomes.

I want to say, Mr. Chairman, that of all the provisions in this bill—while I admit there may be some errors and there might be some change, especially with reference to insurance policies, to my thinking, ought to be changed, so wholesome a public policy is insurance—of all the provisions of this bill this one will meet the hearty approval of the great American citizenship. I want to say now to those who would contest it that you will contest in vain. Any man or any party who would oppose this just tax will, as he or it ought, go down to defeat. [Applause on the Democratic side.] I want to predict now that we are just entering upon a policy for the support of this Government which, in a very few years, will be the only method of taxation for the support of the American Republic, and the days for protective-tariff favoritism will be over. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. KELLY].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 134, line 1, after the figures "$100,000" by striking out the numeral "3" and inserting in lieu thereof the numeral "6".

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, no tax in its collection is popular, and the income tax will not be popular in some quarters. This tax comes in response to a generation-old, determined demand upon the part of the people who would like to see the hardship of the levy of taxes borne by those best able to bear it. There remains and there will remain a great doubt among the people, however, that when the very rich are taxed either they evade in part the taxation or that they pass it on for the people to pay.

And the great problem remains—the increasing accumulations of the rich. In spite of all our laws in regard to taxation, in spite of all the tariff theories we have, of this variety and that, in spite of all the decrees of dissolution by the courts, in spite of our efforts to conserve national resources or to prevent discrimination in transportation, the very rich of this country succeed in doing one thing. They continue to grow richer. In different degres and among all of us the supreme quandary of our hour is the vast increasing accumulation of wealth in the hands of the few.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. MURDOCK. I can not yield, I will say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania. We have before us an omnibus tariff measure. It has been framed by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] and his colleagues. Its main proposition is a device whereby they propose to lower rates and let in foreign importations and so accomplish the regulation of domestic commerce. But neither the gentleman from Alabama nor any of his colleagues has explained to us wherein their device will control the volume of importations into this country after they have lowered the duties; and in every point where the duties have been lowered to a point that will permit a flood of importations, who in America will feel it first? The large interests, the rich factors that control in commerce? No. The first to feel the force and burden of a flood of foreign importations will be the small producer, the man who is at best having a hard struggle.

The Steel Trust has nothing to fear from a reduction of duties; the great combinations in other lines are not fearing for themselves a reduction in the tariff. They control, many of them, through international combinations. It is the small producer who will be first to suffer. I do not think that all of us realize at all times how vast the force of wealth now is in the hands of the larger factors in industry. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. CRISP] gave here the other night a list of men and estates in this country, and he pointed out in a table that there were 29 individuals and estates in America who have among them the vast sum of $3,000,000,000, and he gave figures to show that these men and these estates, less than 30, had an income of something like $170,000,000 a year. Now this income tax, which I favor and which I had hoped would be brought in for a separate vote, proposes to reach some of these larger incomes. I do not believe that it reaches the larger incomes with as heavy a per cent of tax as it should reach them, and for that reason I have offered this amendment, increasing the amount of the tax on incomes above $100,000 from 3 per cent to 6 per cent. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. TAVENNER. Mr. Chairman, when I went before the voters in the campaign last fall I made the declaration, repeating it over and over, that should I be elected I would make a conscientious endeavor to learn how the people of my district would desire me to vote on important legislation affecting their interest, which might come up in this body, and would then vote that way.

I made that declaration in every good faith. I desire no greater tribute when I shall conclude my service in this House than that the people of my district may say of me, "He made a practice of ascertaining how the people of this district desired him to vote on even the simplest piece of legislation, and then voted that way."

In line with the preelection understanding between the voters and myself it is my intention to cast my vote as the Representative of the fourteenth Illinois district for the income-tax provision of the pending bill.

I believe in all sincerity, Mr. Chairman, that in so doing I am carrying out the desire not only of the Democrats of my district, but of 90 per cent of the rank and file of Republicans, Progressives, Socialists, and Prohibitionists.

I have made as extended inquiries as anyone could make, and I believe that 90 per cent of the people of the whole United States, regardless of their politics, race, religion, color, or creed are heartily in favor of an income tax which proposes a tax on wealth in lieu of the present system, which provides for the raising of revenue by taxing exclusively the clothes on a man's back, and the other things that people must wear, eat, and use in order to live.

Not only the poor man, from whose bending back some of the burden of taxation is to be lifted by means of this bill, favors the measure. I am in a position to say that many fair-minded men of wealth residing in my own district, men who will be required to pay a considerable tax on their incomes by virtue of the income-tax provision of this bill, have written me in most favorable tone of the measure, declaring that the proposition that a man should be taxed according to his ability to pay and according to the benefits and privileges he receives under the Government is fair and just.

I am not prejudiced against wealth. Any man who has honestly acquired wealth shows but an evidence of his industry, intelligence, and skill, and deserves the respect of all. But I do contend that men possessing wealth should pay, and are able to pay, more taxes than their less fortunate brothers who own only the clothes upon their backs, and possibly their household furniture, and whose weekly wage is scarcely enough to enable them to provide for their families from week to week, let alone to lay anything by for a rainy day.

Mr. Chairman, the income tax is part of the Democratic plan to reduce the ever-increasing cost of living in this country. It means the carrying out of the program promised in the preelection campaign last fall, namely, to take some of the tax off the necessaries of life, such as sugar, woolens, cottons, beef, and lumber, and to make up for the loss of revenue thus sustained by the Government by placing a tax upon incomes. It is estimated the income tax will raise approximately $100,000,000, and that this amount of taxation will be taken off of the vital necessaries of life.

But, Mr. Chairman, to tax wealth and incomes, according to the standpatters and protectionists, is class legislation. The fact is, however, that the present system of taxing the necessaries of life while permitting wealth to go untaxed is class legislation of the grossest sort. Is it not passing strange that those who complain of an income tax as class legislation were never heard to complain of the existing class legislation which taxes the hats, coats, and shirts of the masses almost 71 per cent, while not requiring men like Rockefeller, Carnegie, and other millionaires to pay a single penny of taxation on their swollen personal fortunes to the National Government?

The masses of the people produce the wealth, and by legislative advantage a few get possession of it, and now these few object to the transfer to wealth of even a portion of the taxation being exacted from the masses on such articles as woolens, cottons, sugar, beef, and lumber.

The income tax is a recognition of the demand of the masses for a square deal in taxation, which they are not now receiving in either State or Federal taxation. Under the fiscal systems in vogue in most of the States the wealthy and powerful classes find ways to evade taxation, and are constantly succeeding, in one way or another, in shifting the chief weight of taxation from those most able to bear it to the shoulders of those weaker, poorer, and less able to protect themselves. The report of the New York special tax commission reported the conclusion that the richer a person grows the less he pays in relation to his property or income, and that personal property largely escapes taxation for either local or State purposes. The State tax commission of Massachusetts estimates the value of personal property in that State properly subject to taxation at over $5,600,000,000, of which less than one-fifth is taxed. The mayor of Philadelphia recently stated in the press that the undervaluation of property in that city is more than three hundred millions. Such conditions seem to be the rule in nearly every locality and in every State.

The small property owner can not hide his property nor shift his tax burdens, as can the rich and powerful, but must bear the crushing weight of not only that portion of taxes that is rightfully his but also much of the burden that should be carried by the rich.

So much for the chances of the small taxpayer in matters of State and local taxation. But the worst is yet to come. What about Federal taxation? In the raising of revenue to run the National Government, wealth is not asked to contribute anything whatever. Practically the entire expenses of the Government are met with funds raised by taxing the things the people eat, wear, and use.

One afternoon, several years ago, I sat in the office of United States Senator MOSES E. CLAPP, of Minnesota, interviewing him on the subject of taxation, for a newspaper article. He had told me that in State taxation the poor man, and the man of moderate means, was everywhere paying taxes for the rich.

"What about our national fiscal system?" I asked.

He replied by turning in his chair and pointing out of the window to the marble wall of the capitol across the courtyard.

"Do you see that wall yonder?" he asked. "Which stone is bearing the greater weight, the one at the bottom or the one at the top?" "Well," he continued, "that is the way it is under our present fiscal system. Those at the bottom are standing the burden of the weight of taxation. What we need in this country is an income tax."

Under the present fiscal system a millionaire pays no more tax toward running the National Government than the poor man with a large family. This seems almost unbelievable, but it is true and will not be denied here or elsewhere.

Why, then, it may be asked, have the people been willing to wait so long for an income tax? This is a question I can not answer. My own explanation of the tardiness of an income tax upon the statutes would be that it is because the average man of this Nation has not been aware until recently of the true state of affairs. The majority of persons have been under the erroneous impression that some portion of the taxes they have been paying to the local tax collector each year have gone to defray the expenses of the National Government, to help maintain the Army and Navy, pay the great army of Uncle Sam's employees, and maintain the various departments of the Government.

The money paid to local tax collectors, however, goes exclusively for the maintenance of the township, city, county, or State in which it is paid, and not a single penny of this money comes to the National Government.

Where, then, does the $1,000,000,000 which is necessary to meet the annual expenses of the General Government come from? It is not picked up out of the streets. No; it comes from the pockets of the masses of the people and is taken from them when they do not know it. That is, the people pay their national tax in the form of artificial prices for the things they eat, wear, and use. In other words, the Government raises $312,000,000 annually through a tariff tax, which is laid on nearly every article of common use.

With the exception of the amount raised through the recently passed corporation tax, the balance of the $1,000,000,000 expended annually by the Government comes from an internal-revenue tax, which, like the tariff tax, is on consumption, and falls no heavier, if as heavy, on the rich than on the poor.

In order to make it perfectly plain how it happens that a man with a large family working on a section of a railroad is actually paying more toward running the National Government than a millionaire bachelor who is too proud to marry and raise children, I will cite one illustration out of a multitude which could be given.

The Payne-Aldrich tariff tax on sugar is approximately 2 cents a pound. Every time the American housewife buys a pound of sugar that is in reality worth but 4 cents she pays 6 cents for it, not knowing that the sugar is worth but 4 cents and that she is paying 2 cents as a tax to the National Government.

That the price of an article is enhanced by the amount of the tariff tax is evidenced by the fact that in England, where there is no 2-cent tax on sugar, the average wholesale price of sugar the year around is approximately 2 cents (the amount of the Payne-Aldrich tax) less than in the United States.

The average tax on all articles under the Payne-Aldrich law is approximately 40 per cent. Nearly everything one must buy at the grocery, the hardware store, and the dry goods store carries a tariff tax, which means that the local merchant acts in the capacity of tax collector for Uncle Sam without being paid for it, and he is as unconscious of the fact as are his customers that in making purchases they are paying taxes.

To show, finally, that under the present fiscal system the millionaire bachelor does not contribute as much toward maintaining the National Government as the average workingman with a family it is necessary but to point out that the millionaire does not eat as much sugar as the entire family of the workingman, and, as the tax is wholly on consumption, it is obvious that the workingman with a family buys more pounds of sugar in a year, contributing his 2-cent sugar tax to the Government a greater number of times than the millionaire, and thus actually paying a larger tax than the millionaire.

This illustration need not be confined to the purchase of sugar, for it applies with equal aptness to any protected article, and there are 4,100 items in the Payne-Aldrich law.

The Payne-Aldrich law, however, taxes neither wealth nor income. A man may have a million dollars in gold and he is not asked to contribute anything whatever to the National Government, but if he is hungry or cold and must buy food or clothing to satisfy his needs he must pay a tax of more than 40 per cent.

I submit that wealth and incomes should properly be the first things to be taxed. The pending income-tax provision will tax them.

It is argued by some that an income tax is "premature, experimental, socialistic legislation."

The answer is that 52 nations and states levy a tax on incomes, and that the United States is practically the only one of the great nations of the earth in which wealth is permitted to go untaxed, so far as the General Government is concerned.

One of the beneficial effects that may be expected from an income tax is that under the present indirect system of tariff taxation the people do not realize that they are contributing the vast sums of money expended by the Federal Government; but when you have a direct system of taxation, and the tax collector goes to those who have to pay under this law and demands of them the amount due the Government, the result is they will realize that they are paying the money that runs this Government, and they will demand of their representatives economy in the administration of public affairs.

It is estimated that, exclusive of the corporation tax, the income tax will yield revenue for the first year under the operation of the bill as follows:

Incomes, amount.	Number of incomes.	Tax rate.	Revenue.
$4,000 to $5,000	126,000	1 per cent	$630,000
$5,000 to $10,000	178,000	.....do	5,340,000
$10,000 to $15,000	53,000	.....do	4,240,000
$15,000 to $20,000	24,500	.....do	3,185,000
$20,000 to $25,000	10,500	1 and 2 per cent	2,100,000
$25,000 to $50,000	21,000	.....do	9,660,000
$50,000 to $100,000	8,500	1, 2, and 3 per cent	11,560,000
$100,000 to $250,000	2,500	1, 2, 3, and 4 per cent	11,650,000
$250,000 to $500,000	550	.....do	6,743,000
$500,000 to $1,000,000	350	.....do	9,191,000
Over $1,000,000	100	.....do	5,826,000
Total	425,000		70,125,000

NOTE.—$4,000 is exempted in all incomes.

Including the tax on the incomes of corporations, the measure will yield in excess of $100,000,000.

Under the income-tax provision those having an income of more than $4,000 must pay a tax of 1 per cent on his income in excess of the exempted $4,000. For instance, a man having an income of $4,100, would pay a tax of $1; a man having an income of $5,000, would pay a tax of $10; $10,000, $60; $100,000, $2,260; $1,000,000, $38,260.

The estimates of the Ways and Means Committee show vividly how wealth has concentrated in this country. Although incomes as low as $4,100 per year will be subject to taxation, yet less than 1 per cent of our total population is affected by the bill.

Under the provisions of this bill, John D. Rockefeller, having an estimated capital of $500,000,000, and an estimated annual income of $50,000,000, will be required to pay an annual tax to the Government of $2,000,000. This is $2,000,000 more than he has ever paid before, because he has been in the habit of paying little, if any more, than the humblest citizen of the land. Other of the great millionaires will be affected as follows:

	Capital.	Income.	Tax.
Andrew Carnegie	$300,000,000	$15,000,000	$600,000
William Rockefeller	200,000,000	20,000,000	800,000
Estate of Marshall Field	120,000,000	6,000,000	240,000
George F. Baker	100,000,000	5,000,000	200,000
Henry Phipps	100,000,000	5,000,000	200,000
Henry C. Frick	100,000,000	5,000,000	200,000
William A. Clark	80,000,000	4,000,000	160,000
Estate of J. P. Morgan	75,000,000	7,500,000	300,000
Estate of E. H. Harriman	68,000,000	3,400,000	146,000
Estate of Russell Sage	64,000,000	3,200,000	128,000
W. K. Vanderbilt	50,000,000	2,500,000	100,000
Estate of John S. Kennedy	65,000,000	3,250,000	130,000
Estate of John J. Astor	70,000,000	3,500,000	140,000
W. W. Astor	70,000,000	3,500,000	140,000
J. J. Hill	70,000,000	3,500,000	140,000
Isaac Stephenson	74,000,000	3,700,000	148,000
Jay Gould estate	70,000,000	3,500,000	140,000
Mrs. Hetty Green	60,000,000	3,000,000	120,000
Estate of Cornelius Vanderbilt	50,000,000	2,500,000	100,000
Estate of William Weightman	50,000,000	2,500,000	100,000
Estate of Ogden Goelet	60,000,000	3,000,000	120,000
W. H. Moore	50,000,000	2,500,000	100,000
Arthur C. James	50,000,000	2,500,000	100,000
Estate of Robert Goelet	60,000,000	3,000,000	120,000
Guggenheim estate	50,000,000	2,500,000	100,000
Thomas F. Ryan	50,000,000	2,500,000	100,000
Edward Morris	45,000,000	2,250,000	90,000
J. O. Armour	45,000,000	2,250,000	90,000

In the $25,000,000 to $35,000,000 class, yielding incomes of $1,250,000 to $1,750,000 and taxes of $50,000 to $70,000, are James Stillman, J. H. Schiff, Charles M. Pratt, J. H. Flagler, Quincy A. Shaw, E. T. Bedford, E. T. Stotesbury, John Claflin, Henry Walters, E. C. Converse, Clarence H. Mackay, Nathaniel Thayer, W. H. Moore, and the estates of H. H. Rogers, Robert Winsor, George Smith, W. B. Leeds, W. Scully, John Arbuckle, J. Crosby Brown, John F. Dryden, W. L. Elkins, and O. H. Payne.

The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL] deserves the thanks of the country for the able and conscientious manner in which he has worked out the many perplexing details of this income-tax provision. I have sat here for days and heard him eloquently defend the principle that men should be taxed by governments in accordance with their ability to pay instead of because of their necessity to eat and to wear clothing. The effective manner in which he met the fire of questions by those who would tear down and destroy the measure convinced me of his expertness on this subject and that the bill is framed to stand the tests of the courts.

I believe that the income-tax provision of the tariff bill as it now stands, after having been amended by this House just before recess, is the fairest, sanest, and most progressive measure ever presented to Congress with the hope of passing.

Mr. Chairman, I do not believe it is just that the men who own 90 per cent of the wealth of this country should bear but 10 per cent of the burden of taxation. If Members agree with me that such a condition is unjust, then I submit the income tax is a move in the right direction to remedy it. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 133, section 2, paragraph A, line 9, by inserting after the amount of $4,000, the following:

"excepting when applying to a married man supporting a wife, when the amount of exemption shall be $6,000, and excepting the additional exemption in amount $500 for each and every child being supported by a mother or father."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this amendment close in five minutes.

Mr. LANGLEY. I would like to be heard on the amendment. If you would make it 10 minutes I would be obliged to you.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will make it 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in 10 minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Chairman, during the consideration of this bill it has occurred to me as a new Member that the arguments of the gentlemen on the other side of the House have been confined almost entirely and exclusively to the fact that it was drawn, not as a protective measure, but was drawn in the interests of the consumer—in other words, the little fellow, the poor man. So, if the gentlemen on the other side of the House for the time being will look upon me as a Democrat and look upon my amendment with favor, I will be very much obliged to them. [Applause.]

This amendment is intended to lift the burden in part from the shoulders of the married man. [Applause.] And I know whereof I speak. [Laughter.] This amendment, if permitted to be adopted by the distinguished gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], will be the means of exempting an additional $2,000 from the $4,000 which is already exempted for a married man who is supporting a wife. [Laughter.]

Mr. Chairman, it occurs to me that there are many married men who are not supporting wives. [Laughter.]

Mr. BORCHERS. Will the gentleman submit to a question?

Mr. BRITTEN. In one moment, please, and I will be glad to do so.

Mr. BORCHERS. I would just like to ask him——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BRITTEN] declines to yield.

Mr. BRITTEN. This amendment, Mr. Chairman, also exempts from taxation an additional amount of $500 for each and every child that is being supported by a mother or a father. [Applause.]

Mr. Chairman, I am glad to see that my amendment is receiving such devout consideration. I hope the gentlemen on the other side will permit this amendment to be read into the bill, because it is really entitled to a lot of consideration. The district which I represent in Chicago is composed almost entirely of little property owners, laboring men—Germans and Swedes in particular. These people do not believe in race suicide, as does my friend from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK]. [Laughter.]

Mr. MURDOCK. Will the gentleman yield? [Laughter.]

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Chairman, I will yield to the gentleman after my five minutes have expired.

For that reason, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I sincerely hope that you will give this amendment your thoughtful consideration, at least.

While I am on my feet I would like to call attention to another section of this bill which, according to my interpretation, will create a deficit of approximately $65,000,000, which deficit it is intended to care for by this income-tax section of the bill.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRITTEN. I will in a few moments.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois declines to yield.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means if in the consideration of this bill any attention was given to the financing of this $65,000,000, should it be found later on that this section of the bill is not a valid one? My impression is that to tax one man on his income 1 per cent and to tax his neighbor on the left 2 per cent on his income, and his neighbor on the right 3 per cent on his income will be found to be class legislation and unconstitutional, and therefore, before the vote is taken on this particular amendment, I would like to ask the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means if consideration was given to the financing of this deficit if that section should be declared invalid in the courts?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman that there is no doubt in the minds of the committee as to the constitutionality of a graduated income tax. But if it should fail it might cause a loss of approximately $20,000,000 that would otherwise be raised, and there is sufficient revenue in the Treasury at this time to take care of it, and then it would only be necessary to increase the normal income tax about a quarter of 1 per cent to cover the difference. But I do not have any apprehension about the constitutionality of the graduated income tax.

Mr. PAYNE. The gentleman need not worry over that, I will suggest, because they retain the provision for the issuing of bonds in case they are needed. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Chairman, I urge the adoption of my amendment. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, I entered the Chamber just as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BRITTEN] was explaining his amendment. I am not quite certain that I caught the exact purport of it, but I understood him to say that it was designed to help relieve some of the burden of an income tax upon married men who are supporting their wives—excuse me, I mean their wife. [Laughter.]

If that, Mr. Chairman, is the purpose of the amendment, then I am opposed to it, because women are so much better than men, that a man who has the privilege and the honor of supporting a wife ought to be willing to bear any reasonable additional burden that the Underwood bill may impose upon him. [Laughter and applause.] And, so far as I am personally concerned, I am also heartily in favor of any burden that the bill may impose upon married men who are not supporting their wives. [Applause.]

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, may I ask if this is in return for the amendments which the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] permitted the gentleman to write into this bill? [Laughter.]

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Chairman, I did not quite catch what the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN] said, but he has been heard so abundantly on this bill and these amendments, while I have had but few hearings, that I hope he will not interrupt me further. [Laughter.]

I hope also, Mr. Chairman, that I may be permitted to depart a little from the strict line of this discussion and touch on a topic which under the rules might not be entirely germane to this amendment, and I will agree to make this my valedictory, so far as this debate is concerned. [Laughter.] This afternoon the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] paid a very beautiful and a most deserved tribute to the distinguished chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, Mr. UNDERWOOD. I most heartily agree with all that he said concerning that distinguished gentleman. I do not agree with his bill, except the income-tax provision, but personally I take off my hat to the amiable and courteous gentleman whose skilled leadership has guided his party in this battle.

I want to say, further, that I have had now a number of years' service in this great body, and I also had the pleasure and the honor of the personal acquaintance of a great many of its Members before that period of service began, and during all that period I have formed the acquaintance and the friendship of many men on both sides of the House, and that acquaintance and friendship have left upon me an impression that I shall never forget and memories that I shall cherish to the end of my days. I have learned to appreciate, aside from and above partisanship, the high character and ability and patriotism of the membership of this body.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] stated that 51 years ago a distinguished Democrat [Mr. UNDERWOOD] first saw the light of day. Thirty-seven years ago another distinguished Democrat first saw the light of day, and that gentleman is also a Member of this body. I feel that I am privileged as a southerner, as a Republican, and as a citizen of a neighboring State to say a word in praise of that gentleman. I am sure that Members on both sides of the Chamber will agree with me when I say that we have never had to preside over the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union under such circumstances as these and during such a sharply contested debate as this has been a man who has been more courteous, more impartial, nor one who has presided with more dignity and more intelligence and fairness than the distinguished gentleman [Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee] who is now presiding over this committee. [Prolonged applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BRITTEN].

Mr. BRITTEN. If there is no objection, I should like to have my amendment reported again.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the amendment will be again reported.

The amendment was again read, as follows:

Amend, page 133, section 2, paragraph A, line 9, by inserting, after the amount "$4,000." the following: "excepting when applying to a married man supporting a wife, when the amount of exemption shall be $6,000, and excepting the additional exemption in amount $500 for each and every child being supported by a mother or father."

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Washington offers an amendment, which will be reported by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 134, at the end of line 11, add the following:

"'Every citizen,' 'every individual,' and 'every person' heretofore and hereafter referred to in this act shall apply only to male citizens in all States where equal-suffrage rights have not been granted. In States where equal-suffrage rights have been granted the words 'every citizen,' 'every individual,' and 'every person' shall refer to men and women alike."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent——

Mr. HEFLIN. I should like to have five minutes. [Applause.]

Mr. FALCONER. I should like two minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Will not the next paragraph do as well?

Mr. FALCONER. I prefer to speak on this paragraph.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. All right, make it 12 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 12 minutes, 5 minutes to go to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. LA FOLLETTE], 5 minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN], and 2 minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FALCONER]. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. Chairman, one hundred and thirty-seven years ago our forefathers living along the Atlantic coast in the territory familiarly known as the thirteen Colonies rebelled against the mother country and commenced that memorable struggle which resulted in the independence of these States. In their bill of grievances against the parent country the most potent and vital ones were taxation without representation and punishment for violation of laws in whose enactment this country had no part or say. They considered those things wrong then; we should consider them wrong now. In the ensuing years this Government, born of that struggle, has collected the revenues necessary for its maintenance by imposing tariffs on imports and by levying internal-revenue taxes, and has only resorted to direct taxation once in our history, that being an income tax levied as an emergency measure in time of war. This tax, while not questioned as a war measure, was a little later on declared unconstitutional as a peace measure; and it is only now, after a favorable decision by the various States, that such a measure shall be constitutional, and that a law is to be enacted putting a direct tax on certain of our citizens. It therefore is in order that we as a Nation shall be consistent, and as a Government shall not commit the injustice against which we fought in 1776, that I appeal to you to make this exception in favor of the women of the country dwelling in those States that have not conferred on womankind the right of suffrage. This exception would not apply to Wyoming, Colorado, Utah, Idaho, California, Oregon, Kansas, Arizona, and my own State of Washington.

These great Western States, having recognized the injustice imposed on the better half of our citizens, granted their women unqualified suffrage, made them equal electors of those Commonwealths.

Mr. Chairman, it is no surprise to those who have visited them to know that the first to see the injustice and to right the long-standing wrong imposed on womanhood were the people residing in the great States I have mentioned. If all our men could have lived in those States, gazed upon their noble ranges of mountains, many of which individually raise their snow-white domes toward heaven in dazzling purity, a perpetual invitation and inspiration to man to be likewise clean and noble, with love for the right, the beautiful, the true; if they had there lived, they would have been equally generous. If all men could breathe the rarified air of those mountains, those vast plains, and wooded dells, it would be easier for them to appreciate the right, detect the wrong, and stand for true equality.

If they could have traveled through those States of "magnificent distances," watched the development and subjection of their wonderful resources, and witnessed how nobly, earnestly, and faithfully the women did their part in that titanic struggle, enduring with the male of their species all the hardships and privations incident to pioneer life and subjugation of undeveloped nature, bravely, cheerfully, uncomplainingly, an inspiration and benediction to her own loved ones and all who met her.

If all mankind could grasp and realize these things all would have an enlarged horizon and clearer perception of the eternal fitness of things, and simple justice toward womankind would be easy of accomplishment. If the gentlemen within this Chamber had all been blessed with these experiences it would be easier for them to see the incongruity of this taxation of our unfranchised citizens by a Nation that went to war over the question of taxation without representation and against punishment by arbitrary, unauthorized, nonparticipating laws.

Mr. Chairman, I hear gentlemen exclaim against suffrage on the ground that it would degrade and lower womanly standards to participate in government; that they would lose to some extent those gentle attributes of femininity that are now their grace and charm; would become mannish, domineering, and coarse, should they receive the full rights of citizenship. There are none who know the weaknesses of such contentions as do those gentlemen who come from suffrage States, and they also recognize that the desire to hold womankind in subjection does not arise from man's higher or refined sensibilities but rather from his baser nature and from those characteristics that lead to tyranny. The same instincts which impel the uncivilized American Indian or the Moro head-hunters of our Philippine possessions to force onto their womankind all the sordid labor and menial tasks while their lazy lords take their ease as gallant protectors are underlying these objections.

Mr. Chairman, man, jealous of his imagined superiority of vision and almost infinite wisdom, selfishly fears a loss of personal caste should womankind be granted equal suffrage rights with himself, and it is a fact that woman stand but slight chance of receiving substantial justice until her lord and master can lose sight of the personal equation that warps his judgment and distorts his mental vision.

Mr. Chairman, I sincerely hope a majority of those present are not suffering from jaundiced perspective and will vote for this most just and worthy amendment.

Mr. Chairman, I sincerely favor an income tax, and regret that this tariff bill is so unequally balanced and so unjust to the interests of the people of not only my own State but to the entire United States that I will be compelled to vote against the measure as a whole. [Applause.]

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the committee, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] has injected into this debate the question of woman suffrage. When we are undertaking to tax the surplus wealth of the country, and to make the men who have been wringing millions from the toiling masses through the obnoxious tariff law written by the gentleman's party, he undertakes to sidestep and speak through this feminine voice in the interest of woman suffrage. [Laughter.] What are we coming to in this country?

God of our fathers, be with us yet.

[Applause.]

I do not believe that there is a red-blooded man in the world who in his heart really believes in woman suffrage. [Applause.] I think that every man who favors it ought to be made to wear a dress. [Laughter.] Talk about taxation without representation! Do you say that the young man who is of age does not represent his mother? Do you say that the young man who pledges at the altar to love, cherish, and protect his wife does not represent her and his children when he votes? When the Christ of God came into this world to die for the sins of humanity, did he not die for all, males and females? What sort of foolish stuff are you trying to inject into this tariff debate? [Applause and laughter.] Taxation without representation! Are you represented when the babe is nursing at the mother's breast? Taxation without representation! Is not the mother representing you? [Laughter.]

Mr. Chairman, I have not the time to pay any more attention to that just now, but at some time in the near future I propose to speak upon the subject of woman suffrage, and I shall call attention to a few things.

Let me assure you to-night, gentlemen, that the women of this country do not want woman suffrage. [Applause.] A vast majority of the good wives, mothers, and daughters do not want woman suffrage. When the wife and mother look after the home and rear their children in the way that God would have them reared, they have done enough in this world, and they are performing the highest and best service that womankind can perform [applause]; but when a woman mounts a dry-goods box in the street and speaks to the rabble, she lowers herself, and men lose that high order of respect that men cherish for lovely, gentle women. [Applause.] But, Mr. Chairman, I am not going to discuss that subject now, but I want to say a word about the income tax. When Christ was here He demanded more of the man with 5 talents than He did of the man with 2. Let the taxpayer pay according to his ability to pay. Here we have men who accumulate their millions in a few years under your tariff-tax system. A poor man with five children pays more tariff tax than Rockefeller or Carnegie. Yet you have permitted this great wrong and we propose to make them pay their fair share of the burdens of taxation. We will reach by the income tax wealth that has never paid a tax. You can not dodge it by talking about woman suffrage and hiding behind petticoats in this debate. [Laughter.]

We have trusts of every character. They say they have a chicken-food trust and they whitewash sawdust and feed it to the chickens. It is said that out in Oklahoma a gentleman fed his hens this whitewashed sawdust and he put a setting of 13 eggs under a hen and when she hatched them 12 of them were woodpeckers and the thirteenth one had a wooden leg. [Laughter and applause.] There are trusts and monopolies of every kind, and these little feminine fellows are crawling around here talking about woman suffrage. [Laughter.] I have seen them here in this Capitol. The suffragette and a little henpecked fellow crawling along beside her; that is her husband. [Laughter and applause.] She is a suffragette and he is a mortal suffering yet. [Laughter and applause.] I believe that is about all I have time to say to-night. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Washington.

The question was taken, and the amendment was lost.

Mr. FALCONER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 134, line 1, strike out the figure "3" and insert the figure "5."

Mr. FALCONER. Mr. Chairman, we have just had something of a talk on the subject of woman suffrage by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN]. Now, I will say in starting that I did not hear the amendment of my colleague from Washington, but I want to observe that the mental operation of the average woman in the State of Washington, as compared to the ossified brain operation of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN], would make him look like a mangy kitten in a tiger fight. [Laughter.] The average woman in the State of Washington knows more about social economics and political economy in one minute than the gentleman from Alabama has demonstrated to the Members of this House that he knows in five minutes. [Laughter.]

Now, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] a few moments ago made the statement that no man in this country could properly support a family on less than $4,000 a year. If that be true, the average workman in the United States is unfortunate, for he does not have 25 per cent of that amount with which to educate and take care of his family, because the average workingman, the producer, in the United States makes less than $700 a year.

I have offered this amendment, Mr. Chairman, making it 5 per cent on an income of $100,000, with the idea that the man who has $100,000 income ought to share the greatest burden and responsibility of supporting the Government, and because a man can not legitimately spend $100,000 a year.

I wish we had an opportunity in this bill to vote for the income tax. I believe in a graduated income tax, the greater the income the greater the tax; but the gentlemen who have the affairs of this House in hand in the parliamentary procedure are going to insist that we vote on this bill in toto.

I wish we might have a chance to vote on the income tax separately. Under the circumstances the gentleman from Alabama will not get a proper expression of the Members on both sides of the House unless he gives all an opportunity to vote independently on the income tax. Many Members are not going to be able to demonstrate how they really stand on the income tax unless this item is separated from the tariff bill.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. BARTLETT). The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FALCONER].

The question was taken, and the amendment was lost.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any amendments to paragraph B, the next paragraph which is open for amendment?

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 134, line 17, after the word "sales," insert the word "of," and after the word "property," in line 20, insert the following: "Provided, That such real estate shall have been purchased during the preceding calendar year."

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I offer this amendment for the purpose of making this paragraph, as I believe, conform to the understanding that the American people have had for many years of the term "income." I believe we have in all of the attempted legislation on the subject recognized that the expression "income" referred to an annual income. And it is very clear when we read this section as it is drawn that that part of it which refers to profits growing out of the sale of real estate, and possibly personal property also, does not alone embrace the annual income from such transactions. For instance, let us assume that a citizen has a piece of real estate worth $50,000 or $75,000. He sells that piece of real estate for its market value, and it transpires that he had purchased it 10 years before at a valuation of $10,000 or $15,000. The accumulated increment of these years is taxed in this bill as the income of the current year. It may be said that the law would not receive that construction at the hands of the courts or at the hands of the officials of the Government. But as I understand it we have already a precedent in that respect. This bill as it stands to-day is practically the same as the income-tax law of 1862. That law received the construction of the governmental officials almost immediately after its passage. It was construed to include the increased value of the real estate regardless of when purchased. Congress two years later, when that matter had been brought to the attention of the people, amended the law. Again, in the income-tax law of 1894 a limitation of two years was fixed.

This will very seriously affect owners of real estate in my section of the country. A very large proportion of my constituents and the constituents of others who come from the Middle West own very valuable farms, and a large percentage of them have owned those farms all the way from 5 to 15 and 20 years. It will be a very unfair burden and an unequal distribution of taxation to impose upon the sales of those farms, or city property, for that matter, an excise of 1 or 2 per cent in many cases. I say 2 per cent, because the sales of property would often amount to more than $20,000—indeed, than $50,000—in which case the purchase price at once becomes subject to the excise of the additional tax. For these reasons, Mr. Chairman, I believe this section ought to be modified; it ought to be put in accord with the true idea of an income tax, and with the idea that has prevailed in this country ever since 1864. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. BARTLETT). The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, line 1, page 135, by inserting after the word "insured" the following:

"Or amounts paid to the assured or his assigns in fulfillment or settlement of his policy contract."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I will ask the gentleman if he was in at the time the committee amendment was adopted?

Mr. STAFFORD. I have the committee amendment before me, but I do not believe it is provided for in that amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think this covers that subject.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, the amendment offered this afternoon by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL] limits the payments which will be exempted to those made by or credited to the assured on life insurance policies upon the return thereof to the assured at the maturity of the term mentioned in the contract. The provision as carried in the bill exempts the proceeds of life insurance policies paid upon the death of the assured, but there is no provision in either the bill as it reads or in the amendment that was adopted this afternoon that extends to the amount paid to the assured during his life or to his assigns upon a cancellation of the policy. For instance, a man has a 20-year-payment policy, or a 20-year endowment, or any other period, and wishes to have it cancelled before the term. No provision has been made to exempt the amount that is paid to the assured, yet we have the principle as carried in the bill exempting the amount paid to the beneficiary on his death. Carrying out the logic of the bill, I think there is no reason why the amount that may be paid upon cancellation before the time expires should be considered as the income of the assured or to whom it may be paid.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, it is impossible to enact laws that will keep up with all the changing methods of doing insurance business. The suggestion of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] is that there is some particular method, among many others, of conducting insurance business in this country at this particular time which we should regard by writing into this permanent law a provision that would specially apply to it. Now, the amendment that was offered and adopted by the committee this evening embraced not only the principle as to the return of any portion of an investment in any insurance by an individual, but it specified a number of those methods of conducting insurance business; and I take it if we should try ever so hard, unless we had among the membership of the House an actuary or some other individual who had had very extensive experience in the transaction of insurance business, we would not then be able to cover all insurance methods used in the conduct of their business.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will not the gentleman admit the amendment proposed and adopted this afternoon provides only for those payments that are made to the assured at the maturity of the term mentioned in the contract—that is the exact phraseology of the amendment—and does not provide for hundreds of thousands of instances where persons cancel their contract of insurance before the expiration of the time limit of the contract? Now, the only purpose of the amendment I offer is to carry out the very logic of the principle of the amendment offered by the gentleman and extend it to those cases where the policies are canceled before the termination of the term.

Mr. HULL. As I said, it is impossible to designate and write into law every particular method of doing insurance business in this country.

Mr. STAFFORD. But the gentleman's amendment does not provide at all for those cases where the policy is canceled before the termination of the period.

Mr. HULL. There is no adjudication here or in any other country that would make any of this taxable income. We are simply writing in a little declaratory provision in order to satisfy some gentlemen, and we have designated a number of these particular modes of return made to the insurer when he invests in insurance during his life, and I am satisfied that the principle is well embraced in the amendment offered and adopted this afternoon.

Mr. STAFFORD. The gentleman admits that under his amendment adopted this afternoon there is no provision made whatsoever for exempting these payments made in settlement of a policy.

Mr. HULL. Oh, I dare say that if we had an insurance man in here he could suggest probably half a dozen other methods by which they conduct business with their policy holders.

Mr. STAFFORD. But the gentleman must recognize there are thousands of instances where policies are terminated by the insurer before the termination of the term, and it is just those instances I am trying to provide for and to carry out the logical exemption the gentleman has provided for in his amendment.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman one or two questions. Of course the gentleman is aware every life insurance company has a cash surrender value to their policies, by which the policies may be surrendered by a cash amount paid to the assured. Now, is it true the committee amendment this afternoon does not exempt the amount paid upon the surrender of policies?

Mr. HULL. As I said to the gentleman, there is no exemption involved. If insurance was not mentioned by this taxable provision, they would be as well off as they are with the reservations made.

Mr. LENROOT. But the bill itself makes a proviso that the proceeds of policies in certain cases shall be exempt. Of course the gentleman is well familiar with the rule of construction that such a provision may give it an entirely different construction than if it had been omitted entirely.

Mr. HULL. I wish to say to the gentleman that, speaking individually, I have tried to confer with a number of insurance gentlemen, attorneys, and officers of insurance companies, and made every possible effort to understand the insurance language, terms, and so forth, and to embrace in an amendment a provision broad enough to cover every principle as to payments made back to the policyholders, and while sometimes each insurance man would have a new and different suggestion, yet I am satisfied the principle contained in the amendment which has been adopted by the committee will satisfy the wishes of any reasonable insurance man.

Mr. LENROOT. The gentleman himself seems to think there may be some doubt about it. Why not, in order to clear the doubt, accept the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD]?

Mr. HULL. I am frank to say that in talking with some insurance men I get quite confused with their definitions of a number of these insurance terms, and I am unable to find many of these gentlemen who agree in every respect in their definition of these terms referred to. And I am slow to adopt a suggestion of terms unless a gentleman presents himself as an expert, with the knowledge of the full signification of the expression he undertakes to write into the law.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, has my time expired?

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. BARTLETT). The time of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL] has expired.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, I would like to be recognized in my own right.

It does not require an insurance expert to decide the question of whether a cash-surrender value of a life insurance policy should be regarded as income and taxable under this bill. The law, so far as I know, of every State regulating life insurance provides that there shall be cash-surrender values of policies, and to tax as income the cash-surrender value of an insurance policy is exactly like taxing, not the income upon deposits in a bank, but taxing the deposits themselves.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LENROOT. I will.

Mr. MADDEN. Suppose the premium was $500 on a 10-year tontine policy and the cash surrender of that policy at the end of that 10 years was $5,000; if he paid the tax on the $500 annual premium, ought he to be compelled also to pay the tax on the surrender value of the policy? Would not that be paying the tax twice?

Mr. LENROOT. He ought not in any event to be compelled to pay a tax on the surrender value, because he is getting back his capital, his principal, that he has paid into the company, and he is not getting gains, profits, or income, but merely getting his money back.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I only rise to state what the committee's position is in this matter. As the bill now stands, there is no tax levied on the principal that is paid into an insurance company. There is a tax on the net income. The way we look at the proposition is this: Under the present law the net incomes of these corporations, whether they be insurance companies or not, are taxed 1 per cent. Under the clause of this bill the net incomes of these corporations, whether they are insurance companies or not, will be taxed 1 per cent. Now, there will be no tax whatever on the policy when it is paid on its termination, whether it expires on the death of a person or whether it is a tontine policy and expires before the death of the insured. But in the meantime there is a tax of 1 per cent on the net profits of the corporation, just as they are paid to-day under existing law.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman let me ask him a question?

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman from Alabama yield to the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will yield.

Mr. MADDEN. Does this bill provide for the payment of the tax on the annual premiums paid by the policy holder?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If they are net profits. I am not going into the question of what they are. We are going to leave that for the Treasury Department and the courts to determine.

If they are net profits on the net profits or so much of them as are net profits, the tax will rest. If they are simply a return of the principal, the tax will not rest upon them.

Mr. MADDEN. The gentleman evidently did not understand my question. I asked him if he understands the bill to provide that the individual policy holder is required to pay the income tax on the amount of his annual premium?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No.

Mr. MADDEN. Is he allowed to deduct it from his gross receipts?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. He has nothing to do with it.

Mr. MADDEN. His own gross income—he is not allowed to deduct?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly not.

Mr. MADDEN. Then he pays the tax on it?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; no more than he pays the tax if he buys a house. That is gross income.

Mr. GOULDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Alabama yield to the gentleman from New York?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. GOULDEN. I think the amendment proposed does not cover these cases. If a man has an insurance policy and runs along and keeps up the payments for a number of years, for, say, 10 or 15, then decides not to carry it any longer and to take the cash, in a case of that kind I would like to know if this amendment provides for a deduction on that?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The amendment which has been offered exempts the return of the principal under the circumstances the gentleman has named.

Mr. GOULDEN. There is the principal alone involved in this. It is simply the surrender value. It is the principal or the amount that has been paid in, because the charge that is made for carrying the risk is more than the return premium in this case.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If the gentleman will allow me to finish, I will explain.

Mr. GOULDEN. Very well.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. When that policy is returned there may be a portion of it that is principal and a portion of it that is profit, and probably there is. Under that contract they will return the principal and they will return some of the profit. Now, the principal returned under the amendment that we adopted this afternoon will not be taxed, but if there is profit returned it will be taxed.

Now that is all there is to it, and the amendment was framed to cover that.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield there?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Alabama yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. LENROOT. Will not the company have already paid a tax on that profit?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No.

Mr. LENROOT. The company has paid it, and must the insured also pay it?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The insured pays on the profit he makes, just as you would pay on the profit you make.

Now, if the gentleman will allow me, I can not finish an argument in five minutes if some one else is speaking in my time. Let me give an example. If the gentleman should buy a farm or a storehouse, and he could make profits on that storehouse for a period of 10 years, say, under this bill if those profits amount to more than his exemptions he will pay the tax on it during that time—all his profits above the exemptions. Now, if at the end of 10 years the gentleman should sell his storehouse for twice as much as he paid for it, he will not pay a tax on the original principal that he invested in that storehouse, but he will pay a tax on the increased price he may receive for it, or for the profit he may sell it for, if it is profit.

Now, in the case of a life insurance policy, it is the same as an investment in a house. The corporation, instead of the insured person, will be taxed on its net profits during the period the insurance runs, and at the termination of the period the insured will not pay a tax on his capital, but will pay a tax on the return of his profits, just as the man would pay a tax by the increased value of his storehouse in the case I cited. The two propositions are just the same.

Now, there is only one thing involved in this case. These great insurance companies are trying to get this Congress to untax them. They are eleemosynary institutions. I have nothing to say against them, but you have the choice whether you will invest your money in a home for your family, or in a storehouse, to furnish an income for your family and save it for the future, or whether you will invest it in a life insurance policy. You may invest it in a railroad company and get stock, and you do that in order to save it for yourself and your family. You may conclude that you are not as capable of handling your money as one of these great insurance companies is, and you send around and invest your capital in a policy. The only difference in the investment is that one is called a share of stock and the other is called a policy. You invest it for the purpose of profit in the policy, as you would in the stock.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. BARTLETT). The time of the gentleman has expired

Mr. TREADWAY. May I ask the gentleman a question?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in five minutes.

Mr. ROGERS. I have an amendment.

Mr. MANN. Is this paragraph B?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. GOULDEN. I want five minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then I ask unanimous consent that the debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 15 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto close in 15 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask the gentleman from Alabama for a little further explanation of his definition. I understood him to say at the beginning of his remarks that there would be no tax on an insurance policy on termination of the contract.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I did not say exactly that.

Mr. TREADWAY. I thought those were the words that the gentleman used.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I said there would be no tax paid on the principal that was paid back to the insured at the termination of the contract, but that there would be a tax on the profits.

Mr. TREADWAY. Yes; I understood that; but you did use the expression "on the termination of the contract." Now, I would like to go a little further as to the meaning of "termination of the contract." For instance, if you have a 20-year endowment policy and, as the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] is suggesting, you desire to surrender it and get the cash surrender value, do you consider that as the termination of the contract?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Unquestionably.

Mr. TREADWAY. In other words, if the policy had run 15 years and you took the cash surrender value, there would be no tax on the principal of that policy at the end of the 15 years?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Unquestionably there would not be.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment and ask to have it read.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts offers an amendment, which will be reported by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 135, line 14, after the word "year," insert "gifts to any corporation or association organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, benevolent, or educational purposes, no part of the net income of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual."

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, this paragraph, beginning on page 135 and running to the end of page 136, already includes many provisions for deductions which are to be made in ascertaining the definition of the term "net income," such as taxes, losses sustained in business and not compensated for, debts charged off during the year, and so on.

Now, I submit the amendment just read in the belief that there ought also to be a deduction for gifts made by individuals during the year to charitable, benevolent, and religious societies. I have adopted substantially the language in this regard which is used in the act itself, at the bottom of page 145 and the top of page 146, whereby are exempted the incomes of religious, charitable, and educational corporations, no part of the net income of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual.

Now, Mr. Chairman, it seems to me that it is desirable that there should be no curtailment imposed by this act upon the benevolent members of the community. If a man wants to make a gift to charity, he ought to be encouraged so to do and not discouraged. He ought to be urged to make such a gift rather than be penalized for doing so. This amendment that I have offered takes care of that situation and provides that in determining the deductions from net income there shall be included as a deduction gifts honestly made to these various benevolent corporations.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. GOULDEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I understood the gentleman from Alabama to give an assurance that the clause on page 134, line 25, providing for life insurance policies, that cash-surrender values on these policies that were carried up to their maturity or surrender were taken care of by an amendment this afternoon. I would like to have the gentleman give us some specific information on that point.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. There is no tax upon a policy paid on the death of the person.

Mr. GOULDEN. I understand that.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Now, as to the tontine policies——

Mr. GOULDEN. There are no tontine policies now.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, of the endowment-plan policies. Whenever the policy terminates, by reason of the contract, either at the end of the period or sooner, at the end of the contract, the principal that is paid will not be taxed, but the profits will be taxed.

Mr. GOULDEN. I want to say that there are no profits in that case.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then there is no tax. I do not know whether there are any profits or not.

Mr. GOULDEN. There are absolutely none.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not raise that question. If there are none, then there will be no tax, but that is for the court to determine.

Mr. GOULDEN. The gentleman added that life insurance policies were the same as any other investment. That is an error into which many people fall and is a common mistake. A life insurance policy is taken by the average man for the support of his dependent ones and not as an investment. There are comparatively few endowment policies issued to-day, but policies are taken on limited life, 10, 15, or 20 years, and primarily for the protection of the wife and children and not as an investment. It is a different proposition entirely.

Now, I want to say that in my judgment, based on years of experience in the business, that the mutual companies should have been exempted wholly, just as the mutual savings banks. I notice that the committee took care, when pressure was brought to bear on them, that the mutual savings banks, such as we have in the State of New York, without a dollar of capital invested, under the control of members, deposits running up into the hundreds of millions of dollars, were exempt. Mutual fire insurance companies and building and loan associations are also exempt. I may say that this is proper, and I indorse it. Why should not you exempt the mutual life insurance companies absolutely under the control of the policy holders—not one dollar of capital stock, not one dollar of profit, as that term is understood? Now, what is sometimes called dividends are paid out of three different things.

First, the saving in expenses over that which was expected to be necessary to conduct the business; secondly, the saving in mortality. Under the American experience table a certain amount of money is calculated for death losses each and every year. That amount is never reached. In a majority of companies the average is less than 80 per cent, so that there is another saving of 20 per cent. The third is that of the higher rate of interest than that calculated for by the various companies and State departments. There are the three items which are purely savings, not a dollar of profit. The great trouble with the average man not familiar with this subject is to draw a line between profits and savings. The man who has, we will say, a $10,000 policy of insurance, and who pays a premium of $300, receives an abatement beginning with the second year and continuing in each year thereafter through the life of the policy. We will say, as an illustration that it amounts to $50. That $50 is called profits by the framers of this bill. It is nothing of the kind. It is made up of those three items and belongs to the policy holder, and will be deducted from his subsequent premium abatements.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from New York has expired.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. I would like to have the attention of the gentleman from New York [Mr. GOULDEN]. The gentleman was speaking a moment ago of what is known as mutual life insurance companies. I think every Member has been pressed into the service in this regard, and that most of us understand that the argument is that the mutual life insurance company is made up of members of a company who are not stockholders in any sense of the word, but who operate on a mutual plan.

Mr. GOULDEN. Absolutely.

Mr. MOORE. That is to say, they are in effect the owners of the property. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] a moment ago indicated that the question of the exemption of these companies, as mutual fire insurance companies are exempted, as building and loan associations are exempted, would depend upon the determination by the Treasury Department of the question whether or not there was a profit after the payment of the premium. I want to ask the gentleman if he understands if there is any profit in the transaction which means that the premiums are paid up to a point and that they are then returned to the policy holder in the form of a paid-up policy—whether he regards it, or whether it is regarded generally, as a profit at all or if it is not simply a return of the money a man puts in.

Mr. GOULDEN. Absolutely; and it is on all fours with the mutual savings banks, mutual fire insurance companies, and building and loan associations. These mutual companies are absolutely owned and controlled by the policy holders. There is not a dollar of capital stock in 90 per cent of the companies. They carry policies on millions of our citizens, who will be called upon to pay this tax annually.

Mr. MOORE. Is such a position as this possible—and this is based on the position taken by the gentleman from Alabama? Is it possible that there would be put into these mutual companies, say, $900 by any one policy holder, and that he would get back $1,000?

Mr. GOULDEN. On an endowment policy, yes; on a limited life policy, no.

Mr. MOORE. Would that be regarded as a profit or a return of the money each year?

Mr. GOULDEN. It would be a return each year in the way of an abatement. Under the laws of New York no tontine policies are admissible. Abatement must be declared annually, and the policy holder can elect either to take that in an abatement of his premium, or reduction of his premium, or he can let it stand, to be payable at his death; but in no sense is it a profit.

Mr. MOORE. As I understand the gentleman from Alabama, if it shall be ascertained by the Treasury Department in its investigation after this bill has become a law that a policy holder had paid into a mutual company $900 and had received back $1,000, in that event he would be taxed for the additional $100.

Mr. GOULDEN. That is the intention.

Mr. MOORE. The gentleman says that is not a profit?

Mr. GOULDEN. It is not.

Mr. MOORE. Is it not a fact that these mutual companies which are not composed of stockholders have their net earnings taxed by the various States?

Mr. GOULDEN. It is.

Mr. MOORE. Is it not also a fact that these same mutual companies, made up of individuals who are endeavoring to lay away something for the rainy day for their wives and children who are left behind, have their earnings also covered by the corporation tax?

Mr. GOULDEN. That is true.

Mr. MOORE. So they are taxed in two ways.

Mr. GOULDEN. Yes.

Mr. MOORE. Now, it is proposed to tax them a third time, and that tax will fall upon 5,000,000 or 6,000,000 people in the land.

Mr. GOULDEN. Yes; and I am inclined to think they will be heard from in the next election.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out from the committee amendment in this paragraph the words "at the maturity of the term mentioned in the contract." And I would like to ask the Chair how much time remains?

The CHAIRMAN. One minute.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. Chairman, it seems quite remarkable that the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] should have deceived himself as to the true status of this particular piece of legislation. Here this paragraph provides for a tax on incomes, and then there is a proviso added to except proceeds from life insurance policies paid upon the death of the insured. The committee amendment also excepts the proceeds of life insurance policies paid upon the surrender of the policy at the maturity of the period fixed in the contract. Now, if the policy is surrendered in a less time or before the time fixed in the contract, the proceeds would not be excepted. If these words, "at the maturity of the term mentioned in the contract," were stricken out of the committee amendment, then the exception would apply to proceeds of policies surrendered at any time, whether before or at the time provided for maturity of the contract. Clearly, as it is now, that would not be excepted.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's time has expired. The question is upon the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Dakota, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out the committee amendment, on page 135, the words "at the maturity of the term mentioned in the contract."

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. Chairman, I call for a reading of the language before the motion to strike out, and then the reading as amended by striking out.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from South Dakota asks unanimous consent to have the committee amendment reported as it will read as amended.

Mr. MARTIN. I ask that the committee amendment be reported in the form as it is now written and then with the language that is proposed to be stricken out.

The CHAIRMAN. That is what the Chair stated. The Clerk will report the committee amendment if there is no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 135, lines 1 and 2, strike out the words "shall not be included as income," and insert in lieu thereof the words "or payments made by or credited to the insured on life insurance, endowment, or annuity contracts upon the return thereof to the insured at the maturity of the term mentioned in the contract shall not be included as income."

Amendment to the committee amendment. Strike out the words "at the maturity of the term mentioned in the contract," so that it will read as amended, "upon the return thereof to the insured shall not be included as income."

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced the noes appeared to have it.

Upon a division (demanded by Mr. MARTIN and Mr. MADDEN) there were—ayes 62, noes 84.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no other amendments offered to section B, amendments are in order to section C.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to section C.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 137, strike out all after the word "office," in line 5, and all of line 6.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. Chairman, Article XVI of the Constitution, the income-tax provision, states that "Congress shall have the power to lay and collect taxes on incomes from whatever source derived." My amendment, if agreed to, Mr. Chairman, will take away the exemption of city, State, and county officials.

I have inquired, Mr. Chairman, from the members of the Ways and Means Committee why the compensation of officers and employees of a State or political subdivision are to be exempt from the income tax, and I have been informed by some that it was because of the fact that to do so would render the act unconstitutional. Now, I have investigated that very carefully. I have looked up the decisions, and I have inquired carefully after reading into these decisions the language of the present income-tax article, and I am sure my amendment, if adopted, would not render the bill unconstitutional. The former governor of New York State, at the present time one of the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, the Hon. Charles E. Hughes, in a message to the Legislature of New York on January 5, 1910, gave it clearly as his opinion that if the income-tax amendment was added to the Constitution it would be possible to tax not only the income of the officials in the several States but the income derived from State bonds.

I do not advocate the taxing of the interest on our bonds, but I do advocate the taxing of the incomes of city, State, and county officials. It has been argued, too, by some members of the Ways and Means Committee that we ought not to tax the agency of the State. That may be good enough, but when you stop to consider that you are going to tax the manufacturer, and the merchant, and the storekeeper, and the professional man, and the salaried man, from whatever source his income is derived, I think it is pretty far-fetched to say that the man who is elected or appointed to public office ought not to be taxed on his income. I find in some States men are appointed to high public offices which pay a compensation exceeding $15,000, and in some of these cases after a period of time they retire and draw a pension, sometimes equal to their entire salary, and these men usually go on for all time without having their income derived from this particular source taxed, while every other man, who must labor and earn his money from the risk of business, must pay a tax upon his income.

I am quite surprised that the Democratic Ways and Means Committee has seen fit to exempt these officials.

Now, Mr. Chairman, we have heard a great deal of discussion on this tariff measure, and particularly the income-tax provision, and I venture the statement that very few men in this committee have carefully examined all of the provisions of the income-tax part of the act, because if they had they would see that there are many things in it which are going to work a great hardship upon the people. The method of collecting the taxes, the necessity of disclosing the private business of people to the community, is one of them. No man objects to disclosing his private business to the Government, but in this provision referred to by my friend from Illinois [Mr. MADDEN] this evening, he said the landlord, in order to obtain an exemption from the rent he receives from his tenant where the rent exceeds $4,000 per annum, must file with the tenant a statement of his income from every source whatever. That is only one of the absurd things of this provision.

I want to take the time of the committee for a moment before my time expires to refer to some remarks made by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK]. He said, if I remember correctly, that the rich were getting richer and the poor were getting poorer. I want to say that there never has been a time in the history of this country when there was greater opportunity for the man at the bottom to get up than there is now. There never was a time when it was easier for him to save money. I was looking up the record the other day, and I find that in the savings banks of New York 15 years ago there was on deposit $560,000,000 of the workingman's money, and on the 1st of January, 1913, there was on deposit $1,200,000,000—double the amount in 15 years—and this same conditions exists throughout the country.

In a recent report of the labor commissioner of New York State it was shown that for the year 1912 less people were unemployed in that State than ever before in its history. I repeat there has never been a period in the history of the country when the people enjoyed such unexampled prosperity as during the past 15 years.

I hope, Mr. Chairman, that my amendment will prevail. I insist that it is class distinction to exempt these local officials from the operation of this law.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I would like to call the attention of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL] to another question in regard to this. The section exempts from the operation of the income tax the judges of the Supreme and inferior courts of the United States now in office. I take it that those judges who are now retired are not now in office, but I apprehend that the same constitutional provision which causes the insertion of this provision in the bill would apply to the judges who are now on the retired list?

Mr. HULL. I scarcely think so, because the constitutional provision about which any possible question could arise merely prohibits the diminishment of salary of a Federal judge during his term of office.

Mr. MANN. Very true, but these judges who were retired are retired in accordance with that provision of the Constitution which provides that they shall hold office for life, and that their compensation shall not be diminished.

I call the matter to the attention of the gentlemen, because I am inclined to think that the same exemption would have to apply to these judges.

Mr. HULL Mr. Chairman, I do not construe this provision as the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] indicates is his disposition to construe it. These Federal judges are permitted to retire when they reach a certain age, and they are allowed a certain compensation afterwards, and during the period of their retirement they are not to be considered as in office, and they perform no official function, and in no view of the matter can I see how this tax would fail to apply to them. They would not be considered officials.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I desire to allude to the remarks of the gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDER]——

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield to me just for a moment on that point?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Tennessee yield to the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. HULL. I hope the gentleman from Missouri will pardon me.

Mr. BORLAND. I just wanted to make the suggestion to the gentleman that the auditor has just decided that question in the case of Senator GOFF, of West Virginia. The auditor has decided that as a judge on the retired list he is still in the service of the United States, and therefore he approved the payment of both salaries to him—that of a Federal judge and that of Senator.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDER] makes an unintentional, I hope, but very unfair, allusion to the effect of the operation of the proposed tax. Some persons who evidently are against this method of taxation, and who are seeking to discredit the proposed tax, have systematically circulated the report and the suggestion that under some provision in this bill the taxpayers are required to disclose their private affairs to other individual citizens.

There is not now and there never has been any provision in this bill that requires any taxpayer to disclose any portion of his affairs to any other citizen. The taxpayer has the amplest and the fullest opportunity in every instance to make his return to the district collector. If he prefers, as a matter of convenience under certain circumstances, he may make a partial return to the person who withholds his tax upon his principal income for him, but that is purely optional.

Now, the gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDER] seems to be very much afraid that the very idea of publicity would be offensive. I find that even in his State the tax returns which the people of New York are required to make to the State as to their property for taxation involve real publicity. I will read the language:

Notice of the completion of the assessment rolls must be conspicuously posted in three or more public places, and a copy left in a specified place where it may be seen and examined by any person until the third Tuesday of August following.

Now, I do not know, but I suppose that this is still the law in New York. These New York tax returns are far more complicated than the returns that will be made by individuals under the proposed measure. And yet gentlemen, including my friend from New York [Mr. CALDER]—and I must believe that he was misled by some one—persistently circulate the impression that somewhere in this bill there is a provision that requires a taxpayer to disclose his private affairs to another taxpayer, when there is absolutely no foundation for such an inference or such a charge. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. LOGUE. Mr. Chairman, I think it is well at this time to call attention to section B. While what this section means will be the subject of determination by judicial authority, still it is not amiss at this time to consider what it is thought to be by the committee who have had it in charge.

The act provides for a tax upon annual incomes. Therefore it is presumed to be a tax upon annual profits or increase or gain. Commencing at line 12 of page 134, section B provides at about line 15 and following that "personal service of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, or from professions, vocations, businesses, trade, commerce, or sales or dealings in property, whether real or personal," producing income, shall be taxed.

I have addressed myself to some of the members of the committee and asked whether it was contemplated by that provision to tax the increment of a property sold during the year, although bought years ago. To illustrate, if a property was bought 30 years ago at $10,000 and it sells to-day at $100,000, is a tax, at whatever percentage is laid down, to be levied on the difference in value between what the property was worth 30 years ago and what it was sold at to-day? The answer to that question was that it is.

I can not conceive that in any way at all to be an annual income or profit deriving annually. It can be shown and borne out that there are many properties purchased years ago that people have struggled with where the taxation of the increment made to-day as the profit of a single year would, in my judgment, be unreasonable.

Where shall we fix the profit of 1913? Shall we go back to the period of 1912? No; in the views of the committee you go back to a period of perhaps 30 or 35 years, and the difference between what the property was worth at the time of the last purchase and what it was worth up to the time at which it is sold is to be looked upon as a profit accruing within a twelvemonth, and that profit is accordingly to be assessed and taxed upon.

This would not be equitable and would not be within the spirit of an income tax, which is an annual tax on profits arising within a year. The section should be so worded that there could be no doubt, and that increment of real estate of many years is not the subject of taxation as profit of a particular year, and made clear that what is intended is the purchase and sale of a property within a year, which results in a profit, making that profit one that comes within the liability of a tax.

If that is the intention, I believe it would be well to have it clearly defined and stated; but I had gathered the meaning to be that "sales or dealings in property" would mean that where a person had purchased within a year and sold within that year there was clearly a yearly profit, and that would be a proper subject of taxation; but to run back for a period of 25 years to the last purchase and tax a man in any one year for the entire increment of 25 years I do not think is fair. I do not think it is the thought of the majority of the House. I do not think it is equitable, and I do not think it will meet with the hearty approval of people who may perhaps have struggled along with real estate for many years.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto be limited to five minutes.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I also would like five minutes.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I should like a little time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will make it 20 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in 20 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Mr. Chairman, in order to get the attention of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL], I move to amend line 5, page 137, by inserting the word "also" after the word "and" and before the word "the" in the middle of the line.

The language there seems to me very confusing, and I am unable to determine whether the words in lines 5 and 6—

And the compensation of all officers and employees of a State or any political subdivision thereof—

Apply to those officials now in office or those to come into office in the future. At the top of that page the word "also" is used as a conjunction, to show that the President of the United States during the present term, and the judges of the Supreme and Superior Courts during the terms which they are now serving, are exempt. Then follows the clause to which I refer—

And the compensation of all officers and employees of a State or any political subdivision thereof.

It is not clear to me whether that clause as it now stands does not exempt State officers for all time. By the insertion of the word "also" it would connect it with the exception which precedes and would make it perfectly clear that all those officers now in office are exempt. Is it the intention to exempt them always, or only those now in office?

Mr. HULL. The purpose of that language is to exempt the salaries of officials of States and their subdivisions from this tax.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. Why?

Mr. HULL. In view of the long line of court decisions to the effect that the Government has no more power to tax the instrumentalities of a State than a State has to tax the instrumentalities of the National Government. Now, while individually speaking, I, as well as each Member here, has his opinion as to what might or might not be done in that respect at this time, still it was not the desire of those who have been taking the most interest in this measure to inject any more constitutional questions or controversies into the bill, especially for the sake of only a few thousand dollars in taxes, and it would only add a few thousand dollars if that clause was included.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. In view of that purpose on the part of the committee, I call the gentleman's attention to the question whether that language is sufficiently clear in expressing the thought of the committee, or whether it does not still leave one in doubt as to whether only those in office at the time the law goes into effect are exempted.

Mr. HULL. I do not think there is any reasonable ground to put that construction on it, if the gentleman asks my individual opinion.

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. That is what I wanted. I am willing to abide by the gentleman's judgment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. GRAHAM]

Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois. I ask leave to withdraw the amendment. I offered it only for the purpose of getting information from the gentleman from Tennessee.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois withdraws his amendment.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I understood there were five minutes reserved for me. I think that was the stipulation that was made. I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. Will the gentleman pardon the Chair a moment? The attention of the Chair was diverted. The amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDER] is pending and has not been voted upon. The question is upon that amendment.

Mr. LOBECK. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. LOBECK. Does this exempt for instance the salaries of city officials?

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. LOBECK. And of county officials?

Mr. HULL. Yes; they are officials of political subdivisions of a State. It would exempt any official in any office, I think, in a State.

Mr. LOBECK. It would not exempt Representatives or Senators, would it?

Mr. HULL. They are not officers of a State. Besides they are covered elsewhere in the bill.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Chairman, my colleague [Mr. CALDER] offered an amendment which is pending to tax the compensation of officials of State, county, and municipal governments. When the present member of the Supreme Court, Justice Hughes, was governor of the State of New York he sent a message to the legislature of the State urging the legislature to reject the then pending amendment to the Constitution permitting the imposition of a tax upon incomes, because, in his opinion, under the peculiar wording of the amendment, it permitted the tax to be levied upon salaries of State, county, and municipal officers and also upon the incomes from State, county, and municipal bonds.

He set forth in very emphatic language the serious objections to giving the Federal Government such power. Later that speech was replied to in the Senate by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] in which, in a very elaborate argument, he pointed out that the Supreme Court had construed the previous amendments to the Constitution and had always construed them in view of the previous decisions of the court, and expressed the opinion that certain decisions of the Supreme Court were to the effect that, unless the proposed amendment of the Constitution then pending clearly and explicitly gave to the Federal Government the right to tax incomes derived from instrumentalities of State government and the income from bonds of State, county, and municipalities, in his opinion such a construction would not be placed on the amendment which has been ratified.

Subsequently, the people of the State of New York elected a Democratic legislature, and it was a Democratic legislature in the State of New York that ratified the income-tax amendment to the Constitution after the Republicans had had an opportunity and failed to do so.

I realize that there is considerable difference of opinion between men qualified to pass upon the question as to whether the Federal Government has at the present time the right to include salaries received by officials of State, county, and municipalities as income to be subjected to such tax.

Beyond the question of expediency, or the desirability of lodging any such power in the Federal Government, there is an important consideration which the committee can not waive at this time. It would be most unwise with those sharp differences of opinion among competent lawyers to attempt to incorporate into this bill any provision that might be of doubtful constitutionality. The income tax levied in this bill should be certain in its authority that it will not be possible to delay its collection by the incorporation of provisions that might give occasion to prolonged litigation. For that reason I shall not support the amendment.

There is one thing else I wish to suggest. There seems to be an opinion quite prevalent throughout the country that under the terms of the bill the compensation of Members of Congress is exempt from the tax levied by the bill. Any one who has examined the bill knows that that is not the fact. I read within a day or two an editorial in a very prominent paper in which it was intimated that perhaps the attitude of the House on this matter might be affected by the fact that the income or compensation of Members of Congress would not be affected by the bill.

It should be made clear that under the bill, as it now stands, the salaries of Members of Congress, if it be their net income, would be taxed 1 per cent on $3,500, the excess above $4,000.

Mr. MADDEN. Members of Congress are not considered officers of the Government, and consequently they would be taxed under this bill.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Members of Congress have been in several decisions, if I remember correctly, held to be a part of the Government of the United States. They are neither State officers nor officers of the Federal Government. There is no question but that their income is subject to the tax levied in this bill. It only excepts officers of States, counties, and municipalities; it does not except Members of Congress.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, much of that upon which I desire to get information has been answered by the last speaker, the gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD], and it will be unnecessary for me at this time to advert to that. I would like the attention of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL], who has had charge of the income-tax provision of the bill. I would ask him whether there has been any judicial interpretation of the provisions of the Constitution of the United States under which it is proposed in this bill to exempt the present President of the United States and the judges of the Supreme Court and inferior courts of the United States from the payment of an income tax?

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, during the Civil War the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States filed a written opinion with the Treasury Department to the effect that by reason of the constitutional provision which prohibited the diminishing of the salaries of the judges of the Supreme Court during their terms of office they were not subject to the tax. That applied equally to the members of the Supreme Court and of the inferior courts of the United States. Following the war the Attorney General of the United States, Mr. Hoar, filed a written opinion to the same effect. In the individual opinions of the members of the Supreme Court rendered in the Pollock case in 1895 a number of the judges gave this as their view, but there has never been a majority opinion of any kind upon the question. It was not necessary to pass on it in the Pollock case.

Mr. MANN. They did not collect the income tax from them?

Mr. HULL. The tax was never collected by the Government from these officials during their respective terms of office, as I recall. It applies to their successors.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will permit, Mr. Lincoln paid a tax, and in one of his letters speaks of the fact of paying an income tax upon his salary as President of the United States. That is my firm memory now.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, as I stated, Chief Justice Taney early in the war filed his statement declining to pay the tax. Following the war the Attorney General rendered his opinion to the same effect. Of course, I do not recall who paid the tax, voluntarily or otherwise, during the war.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, it was my impression that there was no adjudication of this question, and it seems to me that it is clear that the Congress of the United States has power to impose an income tax and affect even these gentlemen. I would like to see the question raised and tested, because this classification is not an agreeable one. I, therefore, present the following amendment to this section.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

Mr. MANN. The Calder amendment has not been disposed of.

The CHAIRMAN. That is true. The recollection of the Chair is that under the order made by unanimous consent amendments may be offered at any time.

Mr. MANN. That is true.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM].

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 137, line 1, after the word "taxation" strike out the words "Also the compensation of the present President of the United States during the term for which he has been elected and of the judges of the Supreme Court and inferior courts of the United States now in office, and the compensation of all officers and employees of a State or any political subdivision thereof."

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, I have also an amendment which I desire to offer, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 137, line 6, after the word "thereof," strike out the period, insert a comma, and add the following:

"And of honorably discharged soldiers, sailors, and marines who served in the United States and Confederate Armies 1861–1864 and the War with Spain."

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 136, lines 23 and 24, after the word "excluded," strike out the words "Upon the obligations of a State or any political subdivision thereof and."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDER].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM].

The amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN].

The amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. MOORE. Does the arrangement preclude discussion at this time?

The CHAIRMAN. It does.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to strike out lines 1, 2, and 3, page 137, as follows:

Also the compensation of the President of the United States during the term for which he has been elected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 137, lines 1, 2, and 3, strike out the following words:

"Also the compensation of the President of the United States during the term for which he has been elected."

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MANN) there were—ayes 52, noes 72.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. Paragraph D is open for amendment. Are there any amendments to paragraph D?

Mr. DILLON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 137, line 16, after the word "ward," strike out the balance of line 16, all of lines 17 and 18, and the figures "$4,000" in line 19.

Mr. DILLON. Mr. Chairman, my motion seeks to eliminate the following language:

Except that in case where two or more wards are comprised in one family and have joint property interests the aggregate deduction in their favor shall not exceed $4,000.

I favor the income-tax schedule and offer this motion, not for the purpose of destroying the effect of the schedule, but to assist in making it effective.

Every law should be fair and just and should not discriminate among people of the same class. This exemption violates every rule of equality. For instance, one child under guardianship is entitled to an exemption of $4,000. Two children under guardianship must join together in their exemption, and thus would each have an exemption of $2,000. Five children under guardianship must join together and have an exemption of $800 each.

Not only does this provision discriminate in reference to the exemption, but it also discriminates in reference to the taxes.

For instance, one ward under a guardianship with a net income of $4,000 pays no tax, while two wards with an income of $4,000 each pay $40 tax, while three wards with an income of $4,000 each pay $80 tax, and five wards under guardianship with an income of $4,000 each must pay $160 tax. This law compels them, because they are under guardianship, to join together in one exemption while the law allows you and I full exemption.

The Supreme Courts of Minnesota and Wisconsin have held that the exemption clause in the inheritance tax law must be uniform and affect all citizens alike, and because the exemption discriminated among the owners of property the inheritance tax laws of those States were held unconstitutional.

Under this unfair provision, if there be more than one child under guardianship and the property be owned jointly, they must join in one exemption, but if the children owned the property individually they would have full individual exemption. If the ward owns individual property he gets the full exemption, but if he owns property jointly with his brothers and sisters he gets only part of an exemption. When the ward is under 21 years of age, if he has brothers and sisters, he only gets a part of an exemption, and when he reaches 21 years of age he gets a full exemption.

You exempt yourselves on your joint and individual properties, but you deny the same right to these minors. I submit that this provision is unfair and unjust, and in my humble judgment can not be sustained by any court.

I was in hopes that this tax measure would be considered schedule by schedule, so that each schedule might stand or fall upon its own merits, and thus avoid all logrolling methods. We as lawmakers ought to place patriotism above politics and pass an honest judgment on each and every schedule.

I would like to support the income-tax schedule, because it casts the burden of taxation upon those who are able to pay it. Likewise I would like to support the provision for free lumber, because our forests have been depleted. I am convinced that this bill is not in the interest of the farmers, the laboring men, and the factories of this country, and that the bad features of the bill outweigh those of the good therein contained.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have a vote on this amendment, so that we can rise, unless some gentleman wishes to discuss this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. DILLON].

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I merely wanted to dispose of the present amendment, not the paragraph.

Mr. MANN. Let us dispose of the paragraph, if there are no amendments to it. Are there any other amendments to paragraph D?

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. DILLON].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If there are no other amendments, we will pass to paragraph E.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there no amendments to paragraph D? [After a pause.] If not, we will pass to paragraph E.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the committee rose; and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, and had come to no resolution thereon.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

Mr. COX. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. COX. I rise for the purpose of asking unanimous consent to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, papers in the case of H. R. 28498, H. R. 5191, H. R. 16879, H. R. 18351, Sixty-second Congress, no adverse report having been made thereon.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

There was no objection.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 11 o'clock and 5 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Wednesday, May 7, 1913, at 11 o'clock a. m.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, a letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on examination of St. Francis River, Ark., from its mouth to Madison, and the L'Auguille River, from its junction with the St. Francis to Marianna, for the purpose of ascertaining the feasibility and cost of providing permanent navigation thereon (H. Doc. No. 45), was taken from the Speaker's table, referred to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors, and ordered to be printed, with illustration.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. FLOOD of Virginia: A bill (H. R. 4760) for the erection of a monument to the memory of Gen. George Rogers Clark; to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. COX: A bill (H. R. 4761) to pay the wives and children a part of the salary of enlisted men in the Army and Navy, etc.; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FREAR: A bill (H. R. 4762) to amend the general pension act of May 11, 1912, as amended by act approved March 4, 1913; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. NELSON: A bill (H. R. 4763) to extend to certain publications the privileges of second-class matter as to admission to the mails; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. MURRAY of Massachusetts: A bill (H. R. 4764) to authorize, empower, and direct the Secretary of Commerce to construct certain tidal indicators in Boston Harbor, Mass.; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. BROUSSARD: A bill (H. R. 4765) to amend and reenact an act of Congress entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911, and acts of which said act is amendatory; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. BATHRICK: A bill (H. R. 4811) to institute a system of lending money to farmers on agricultural lands; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HAWLEY: A bill (H. R. 4812) to create a revenue fund in the Crater Lake National Park; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

By Mr. MURDOCK: A bill (H. R. 4813) to create a tariff commission; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HAYDEN: A bill (H. R. 4825) opening the surplus and unallotted lands in the Colorado River Indian Reservation to settlement and entry under the provisions of the Carey land acts, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. BRITTEN: Resolution (H. Res. 93) requesting the Committee on the Judiciary to present to the House of Representatives a resolution directing the Department of State and the Attorney General to take necessary steps toward a judicial test of the California alien land law; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. BATHRICK: Resolution (H. Res. 94) creating a standing committee of the House to be known as the committee on buying and selling; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. GARDNER: Memorial of the General Court of Massachusetts, relative to national forests; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. HAYES: Memorial of the Legislature of California, favoring appropriation for the protection of orchards from frosts; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. MURRAY of Massachusetts: Memorial of the Legislature of Massachusetts, opposing State control of national forests; to the Committee on Agriculture.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. AINEY: A bill (H. R. 4766) for the relief of Edwin F. Chamberlin; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4767) for the relief of Loyal F. Russell; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. ANTHONY: A bill (H. R. 4768) admitting to citizenship and fully naturalizing George Edward Lerrigo, of the city of Topeka, in the State of Kansas; to the Committee on Immigration and Naturalization.

By Mr. BLACKMON: A bill (H. R. 4769) granting a pension to Thomas F. Martin; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4770) for the relief of Frances C. Hoffman; to the Committee on Claims.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4771) for the relief of the estate of Robert Pruitt, deceased; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CALDER: A bill (H. R. 4772) to amend the military record of Richard Parke; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. COX: A bill (H. R. 4773) granting a pension to Cornelius W. Morrison; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4774) granting an increase of pension to Jack Meissner; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4775) granting an increase of pension to Lewis R. Morgan; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4776) granting a pension to Martha Fitzpatrick; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4777) granting an increase of pension to Thomas J. Parsons; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4778) granting an increase of pension to Williams H. Knapp; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4779) granting an increase of pension to Abraham Crist; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4780) for the relief of the estate of Louise Muelchi; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. HELM: A bill (H. R. 4781) for the relief of Francis Geenty; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. KEY of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 4782) granting a pension to Alexander Bradley; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4783) granting a pension to Barbara Heider-Bauman; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4784) granting an increase of pension to Simon E. De Wolfe; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4785) granting an increase of pension to Joseph N. Rodgers; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4786) granting an increase of pension to Edmond R. Ash; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4787) granting an increase of pension to Andrew J. Thomasson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4788) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Krieger; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4789) granting an increase of pension to Eliza J. Barnd; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4790) granting an increase of pension to William A. Miller; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4791) granting an increase of pension to George Mundary; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. MOSS of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 4792) granting an increase of pension to Sarah P. Deem; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4793) for the relief of John H. Gatts; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. NELSON: A bill (H. R. 4794) granting an increase of pension to James B. Martin; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. PORTER: A bill (H. R. 4795) granting a pension to Catherine Mann; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4796) granting a pension to Margaret W. Nichol; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. POST: A bill (H. R. 4797) granting an increase of pension to Levi Brown; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4798) granting an increase of pension to James A. Carter; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RAUCH: A bill (H. R. 4799) granting a pension to Edward F. Denny; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SCULLY: A bill (H. R. 4800) granting an increase of pension to Helen T. Byard; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. SMITH of Minnesota: A bill (H. R. 4801) granting a pension to Maurice Luby; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4802) granting a pension to Augusta Wassom; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4803) granting an increase of pension to William H. Leavitt; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4804) to correct the military record of Charles D. Pillar; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4805) to correct the military record of Silas Overmire; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4806) to remove the charge of desertion from the military record of William Alonzo Williams; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. STEPHENS of Texas: A bill (H. R. 4807) granting a pension to Benjamin A. Lester; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4808) for the relief of W. R. McGuire; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. TRIBBLE: A bill (H. R. 4809) granting a pension to May Thornton; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WINSLOW: A bill (H. R. 4810) for the relief of David Snow; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FESS: A bill (H. R. 4814) granting a pension to Minnie Nordyke; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4815) granting a pension to Hannah Leverton; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4816) granting a pension to Amanda Crawford; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4817) for the relief of James G. Work; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. HAWLEY: A bill (H. R. 4818) granting an increase of pension to Benjamin O. Getter; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. O'SHAUNESSY: A bill (H. R. 4819) granting a pension to Mary A. Lewis; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4820) granting an increase of pension to Mary Ella Fales; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4821) granting an increase of pension to Sarah J. Millikin; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. REILLY of Connecticut: A bill (H. R. 4822) granting a pension to Elizabeth J. Phelps; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4823) granting an increase of pension to George H. Thomas; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4824) granting an increase of pension to John H. Narmon; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER (by request): Petition of I. H. Manntel, against mutual life insurance in income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also (by request), petition of the Richmond Chamber of Commerce, of Richmond, Va., against reorganization of the customs service; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also (by request), petition of R. D. Meyers, of St. Louis, Mo., against mutual life insurance in income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. AINEY: Petition of sundry citizens of the fourteenth congressional district of Pennsylvania, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the directors of the Provident Life & Trust Co., of Philadelphia, Pa., suggesting amendments to the income-tax bill relative to mutual life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BELL of California: Petition of Mr. J. E. Heath, of Norwalk, and 117 other beet growers, farmers, and other citizens of the following towns in the State of California: Anaheim, Chino, Colusa, Concord, Downey, Garden Grove, Huntington Beach, Los Angeles, Norwalk, Ontario, Santa Ana, San Francisco, and West Berkeley; and also from the following firms and companies: Joseph Dixon Crucible Co.; San Francisco Labor Council; Hawaiian Fertilizer Co., of San Francisco; the Holly Sugar Co., of Huntington Beach; and the California Corrugated Culvert Co., of West Berkeley, Cal., protesting against the proposed reduction in the tariff on sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CARY: Petition of the Richmond Chamber of Commerce, of Richmond, Va., against reorganization of the customs service; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Mary A. Shea, against mutual life insurance in income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DALE: Petition of Hogan & Son., of New York City, against mutual life insurance in income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Loose-Wiles Biscuit Co., of New York City, N. Y., against importation of biscuits free of duty; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Men's League for Woman Suffrage, of Kings County, N. Y., relative to investigation of insufficient police protection for the parade of March 3 in Washington; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of the Richmond Chamber of Commerce, of Richmond, Va., against reorganization of the customs service; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DYER: Petitions of sundry citizens of St. Louis, Mo., against mutual life insurance in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of G. M. Dinges and H. A. Schmidt, of St. Louis, Mo., against mutual life insurance in income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Business Men's League of St. Louis, Mo., against the clause in the sundry civil bill forbidding certain money to be spent in the prosecution of labor or farmers' organizations; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. GARDNER: Petition of the Turners Falls Board of Trade, against reduction of the duty on paper and placing newsprint paper on the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GOULDEN: Petitions of sundry citizens of Philadelphia and New York, against mutual life insurance in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GREENE of Vermont: Petitions of sundry citizens of Vermont, against mutual life insurance in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GRIEST: Petition of 80 citizens of Lancaster County, Pa., protesting against that feature of the income-tax provision of the tariff bill which relates to life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HAMMOND: Petition of August Schiek and 25 others, of Wells, Minn., protesting against provisions of income tax relating to taxation of life insurance companies; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HAYES: Petitions of sundry citizens of California, against the reduction of the duty on sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of sundry citizens of California, against mutual life insurance in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HOUSTON: Affidavit to accompany bill for Edmund Judkins; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, affidavit to accompany bill (H. R. 2372) for Albert G. Jenkins; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska: Memorial of the Commercial Club of Morrill, Nebr., in behalf of the sugar-beet industry; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LEVY: Petitions of sundry citizens of New York against mutual life insurance in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Loose-Wiles Biscuit Co., of New York City, N. Y., against reduction of the duty on biscuits; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Richmond Chamber of Commerce, of Richmond, Va., against reorganization of the Customs Service; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. J. I. NOLAN: Petitions of A. Knowles, Julius Berendun, Leopold Oppenheimer, George H. Janssen, Philip Taussig, Albert Taussig, and F. Wohlander, of San Francisco, Cal., against mutual life insurance in income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. O'BRIEN: Petition of Percy F. Hogan and John R. Hogan, New York, N. Y.; Henry F. Meyer, Clarence Marshall, Charles R. Kurka, Darwin P. Kingsley, and Bernard Greenberg, of Brooklyn, N. Y., protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the legislative committee of the Cigar Makers' International Union of America, Washington, D. C., protesting against the removal of the duty on Philippine tobacco and cigars; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Long Island Game Protective Association, New York, favoring the passage of legislation prohibiting the importation of feathers and plumes of wild birds for commercial use; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. PLUMLEY: Petitions of A. C. Mason, Carroll Huntington, and W. B. Keyes, of Vermont, against mutual life insurance in income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Bellows Falls and North Walpole Merchants' Association, of Vermont and New Hampshire, against removing the duty on paper; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. REILLY of Connecticut: Petition of sundry business concerns and citizens of New Haven, Conn., protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SCULLY: Petition of Philemon L. Hawley, of Newark, N. J., against mutual life insurance in income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SLOAN: Petition of D. J. Wood, of Fairbury, Nebr., favoring the passage of legislation exempting railway mail clerks from working on Sundays; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, petition of G. E. Aldrich and 16 others, against mutual life insurance in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of D. J. Wood, of Fairbury, Nebr., relative to Sunday closing of post offices; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

Also, petition of sundry citizens of Nebraska, against mutual life insurance in income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SMITH of Michigan: Petition of T. H. Lee and 40 other citizens of the second congressional district of Michigan, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. TAVENNER: Petition of the D. M. Sechler Implement & Carriage Co. and the Deere & Mansur Co., Moline, Ill., against placing agricultural implements on the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of C. A. Banister, treasurer Moline Plow Co., Moline, Ill., protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. UNDERHILL: Petition of the members of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, protesting against the proposed changes in the rates in the tariff bill relative to cotton manufactures; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of H. W. Sanford, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Peter Lerner, New York, N. Y., protesting against the removal of the duty on Philippine tobacco and cigars; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Washington Millers' Association, Tacoma, Wash., asking that an equal tariff be placed on wheat and its products; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of sundry citizens of Shelby, N. C., protesting against a further reduction of the tariff on monasite; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WILSON of New York: Petitions of sundry citizens of Brooklyn, N. Y., against mutual life insurance in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Men's League for Woman Suffrage of Kings County, N. Y., relative to investigation of insufficient police protection for the suffrage parade in Washington March 3; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Also, petition of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, favoring putting a clause in the income-tax bill providing for collection of tax directly from individuals; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the North American Brewing Co., of Brooklyn, N. Y., favoring removal of the tariff on barley and malt; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of John F. Thompson, of New York, against placing Bibles on the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SENATE.

WEDNESDAY, May 7, 1913.

The Senate met at 12 o'clock m.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

VISITORS TO THE NAVAL ACADEMY.

The VICE PRESIDENT appointed Mr. SMITH of Maryland and Mr. PAGE members of the Board of Visitors on the part of the Senate to attend the next annual examination of midshipmen at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., under the requirements of the act of February 14, 1879.

ALLEGED SLAVERY IN THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS (S. DOC. NO. 22).

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, stating, in response to a resolution of the 1st instant, that there is not in the War Department to the knowledge of the Secretary of War or of the head of the bureau having charge of insular affairs a record regarding any facts bearing directly or indirectly upon the truth of the charge publicly made that human slavery exists at this time in the Philippine Islands and that human beings are bought and sold in such islands as chattels, which was referred to the Committee on the Philippines and ordered to be printed.

VALORIZATION OF COFFEE.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a communication from the Attorney General, transmitting certain reports, correspondence, and so forth, from the Department of Justice in response to a resolution of the Senate of April 21, 1913, pertaining to the importation of coffee.

Mr. NORRIS. I ask that the letter of the Attorney General be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the letter.

The Secretary read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
Washington, D. C., May 6, 1913.

To the PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

SIR: Pursuant to the request of the Senate contained in resolution adopted April 21, 1913, I have the honor to transmit herewith the following papers:

1. A copy of the pleadings filed, including (a) the Government's petition; (b) the affidavit of defendant, Herman Sielcken, in opposition to the continuance of the temporary restraining order; (c) answer of the New York Dock Co., made party as bailee; (d) demurrer of defendant, Sielcken; (e) galley proof of brief prepared in opposition to the demurrer.

2. The answer to No. 4 of the resolution comprehends (a) section C of the files, containing the reports and memoranda of the special assistant attorney in the matter; (b) section D of the files, being special agent's reports touching particular points of investigation.

3. In answer to No. 6, which (except the pleadings already listed) includes or answers Nos. 1, 2, 3, and 5. The following are all the material and relevant file numbers, omitting the correspondence between the Department of State and Department of Justice:

No. 52. Letter of instruction, May 21, 1912, to United States attorney, New York.

No. 55. Letter, May 22, 1912, United States attorney, New York, stating time

No. 60. Letter, May 27, 1912, of Attorney General to Senator LODGE, giving information.

No. 73. Letter, June 3, 1912, Attorney General to the President, giving information.

No. 77. Letters and telegrams, June 8, 9, and 10, 1912, Sielcken to Kennedy and return, proposing settlement, and letter Solicitor General, suggesting acceptable term of settlement.

No. 78. Letter June 11, 1912, Kennedy to Solicitor General, with three telegrams, Sielcken to Kennedy attached, touching proposed settlement.

No. 79. Letter June 7, 1912, Solicitor General, transmitting letter and telegram of Sielcken to Kennedy.

No. 81. Letter July 5, 1912, Solicitor General to United States attorney, New York, to withhold action pending possible settlement.

No. 82. Letters July 5, 8, 9, 1912, Solicitor General transmitting letter from and to Kennedy.

No. 88. The demurrer, filed August 5, 1912, of Sielcken to petition.

No. 88½. Letter August 17, 1912, of Kennedy to Attorney General, discussing proposed settlement.

No. 101. Memorandum September 16, 1912, of Attorney General for Mr. Chantland, directing preparation of brief and investigation of evidence against Sielcken, with view to criminal action.

No. 110. October 25 and November 6, letter of United States attorney, New York, advising settling of the date for argument of demurrer, and letter of Attorney General asking deferment until conference with Secretary of State to ascertain status of pending settlement negotiations.

No. 115. November 9, 1912, letter of Attorney General to Mr. Chantland, directing no further proceedings until reply from State Department.

No. 120. November 25, letter of Attorney General to the President, conveying information.

No. 125. November 29, memorandum for Attorney General calling attention to syndicate of insiders for bidding in valorization coffee at sale.

No. 181. March 7, 1913, (a) letter of United States attorney, New York, to Attorney General, inclosing copy of letter from Sherman & Sterling, attorneys for Sielcken, requesting dismissal; (b) March 15, 1913, answer of Assistant to Attorney General, Mr. Fowler, to said letter.

No. 186½. April 16, statement of the Attorney General as to dismissal of the case.

No. 187. April 19, letter of United States attorney, New York, to Attorney General advising that suit will be dismissed as per directions.

These are all the material papers on file in the department relating to the subject matter of the resolution, except the correspondence between this department and the State Department, and by direction of the President I beg to say that in my opinion it is not compatible with the public interest to transmit to the Senate copies of said correspondence.

With but few exceptions the papers transmitted are the originals and not copies, and I respectfully request that when they shall have served all purposes desired by the Senate they be returned to the department.

Very respectfully,

J. C. MCREYNOLDS,
Attorney General.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Nebraska will state it.

Mr. NORRIS. Would it be in order at this time for me to ask that the letter of the Attorney General and the accompanying documents lie on the table until to-morrow, so that I may have an opportunity of examining them and then be permitted to offer some observations if upon examination I shall desire to do so?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is in order.

Mr. NORRIS. I make that request, then, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection to the request of the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. ROOT. May I inquire whether the documents are voluminous or bulky, so that it would be inconvenient to print them?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New York must determine for himself whether they are voluminous or not. The Secretary will show him the package.

Mr. ROOT. I should be very glad to have them printed.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, when I have examined them it is my intention, if I find what I think I will, to ask at least that some of them be printed.

But, Mr. President, while we are on the question now, will it be in order to-morrow or at the next meeting of the Senate, at this time or at the close of morning business, for me to address the Senate on this subject, if I find upon examination that I shall desire to submit any observations?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator refers to the present session?

Mr. NORRIS. No; I mean with reference to the session to-morrow, or, at least, the first session after to-day, whether it be to-morrow or within a day or two.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will state that the Senator will have a right to address the Senate whenever he can get the recognition of the Chair.

Mr. NORRIS. The proposition I submit to the Chair is, whether it would be in order prior to the conclusion of the morning business?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is proper for the Senator to give notice that he will address the Senate at any particular time upon the question, but, of course, his notice must give way to anything that has precedence or that it has been agreed by the Senate shall take precedence.

Mr. NORRIS. That I understand, of course. I give notice, then, that to-morrow, immediately after the reading of the Journal, or as soon thereafter as I can get the recognition of the Chair, I shall offer some observations on the subject under consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The communication and accompanying papers will lie on the table until to-morrow.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by J. C. South, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the amendment of the Senate to House concurrent resolution 7, authorizing the printing of 20,000 additional copies of the report of the Ways and Means Committee on House bill 3321, to reduce tariff duties and provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. SHEPPARD presented petitions of sundry citizens of Kimball, Alpine, Barry, Kyle, and Cuthand, all in the State of Texas, praying for a reduction of the duty on sugar, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. NELSON presented resolutions adopted by the city council of Two Harbors, Minn., favoring an investigation into the existence of combinations in restraint of trade with reference to the wholesale and retail sale and distribution of anthracite and bituminous coal, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. JACKSON presented a telegram in the nature of a memorial from the Board of Trade of Baltimore, Md., and a telegram in the nature of a memorial from the Lumber Exchange of Baltimore, Md., remonstrating against the adoption of the so-called restriction clause in the sundry civil appropriation bill, preventing the use of money to prosecute labor organizations for violation of the Sherman antitrust law, which were ordered to lie on the table.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Baltimore, Md., praying for the exemption of mutual life insurance companies from the operation of the income-tax clause of the pending tariff bill, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. BURTON presented a memorial of sundry citizens of Cincinnati, Norwood, Mount Auburn, Evanston, and Hyde Park, all in the State of Ohio, remonstrating against a reduction in the duty on lithographic products, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. WEEKS presented a resolution adopted by the Board of Trade of Turner Falls, Mass., remonstrating against placing news print paper on the free list, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. McLEAN presented petitions of sundry citizens of New Haven, Waterbury, Bridgeport, and New Britain, all in the State of Connecticut, praying for the exemption of mutual life insurance companies from the operation of the income-tax clause of the pending tariff bill, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. LODGE presented the petition of Leonard W. Cain and 24 other citizens of Weymouth, Mass., praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented the memorial of Lewis R. Sullivan, a member of the Legislature of Massachusetts, and 128 delegates of the Central Labor Union of Boston, Mass., remonstrating against the importation, free of duty, of cigars from the Philippine Islands, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. CLAPP presented petitions of sundry citizens of St. Paul and Minneapolis, in the State of Minnesota, praying for the exemption of mutual life insurance companies from the operation of the income-tax clause of the pending tariff bill, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Minneapolis, Minn., praying for a reduction in the duty on sugar, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the City Council of Two Harbors, Minn., favoring an investigation into the existence of combinations in restraint of trade with reference to the wholesale and retail sale and distribution of anthracite and bituminous coal, which were referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. GALLINGER presented petitions from John W. Hamer, of Beverly, N. J.; Robert L. Mishler, of Lansdowne, Pa.; Lewis Dexter, of Manchester, N. H.; Ida F. Wallace, of Nashua, N. H.; Mitchell & Thomas, of Wilmington, Del.; John G. McQuilken and Fred L. Clark, of Concord, N. H.; E. Eldridge Pennock, Walter A. Bailey, Robert Dornan, John F. Buchanon, and R. C. Williams, jr., of Philadelphia, Pa., praying for the exemption of mutual life insurance companies from the operation of the proposed income-tax clause in the pending tariff bill, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. FLETCHER presented a petition of sundry citizens of Miami, Fla., praying for the enactment of legislation to prevent the sale of opium and cocaine except for medicinal purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

He also presented a memorial of the State Horticultural Society of Florida, remonstrating against the removal of the duty on oranges and grapefruit, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented the petition of W. C. Temple, of Tampa, Fla., praying for the exemption of mutual life insurance companies from the operation of the income-tax clause of the pending tariff bill, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the Board of Trade of Tampa, Fla., favoring the enactment of legislation relative to the manufacture of cigars of imported tobaccos in bonded warehouses, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

PAINT CREEK COAL FIELDS, WEST VIRGINIA.

Mr. GRONNA. I have a telegram in the nature of a petition from John P. White, president, and Edwin Perry, secretary, of the international executive board of the United Mine Workers of America, which I ask may be read.

There being no objection, the telegram was read and ordered to lie on the table, as follows:

[Telegram.]

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May 3, 1913.

ASLE J. GRONNA,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.:

At a meeting of the international executive board of the United Mine Workers of America, held in Indianapolis Saturday, May 3, 1913, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Whereas a resolution, introduced by Hon. JOHN W. KERN, providing for an investigation of conditions in the West Virginia coal fields is now pending in the United States Senate; and

Whereas such an investigation, if made, will disclose conditions of peonage, if they exist, and make public the facts regarding the illegal exercise of power by the military authorities, as has been publicly charged: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we favor and welcome this proposed investigation. Let the facts be known; give the public the truth; and to that end we respectfully urge the support of each Senator in the adoption of this resolution.

JOHN P. WHITE, President.
EDWIN PERRY, Secretary.

DISTRIBUTION OF IMMIGRANTS (S. DOC. NO. 21).

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I have received through the mails a pamphlet entitled "Schemes to Distribute Immigrants," by Samuel Gompers. It is a very interesting and instructive paper, and, I think, worthy of publication as a public document. I ask that it be printed as a document.

Mr. SMOOT. I did not hear the request of the Senator as to the paper.

Mr. FLETCHER. It is a pamphlet entitled, "Schemes to Distribute Immigrants," by Samuel Gompers.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Florida? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

BILLS INTRODUCED.

Bills were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. WILLIAMS:

A bill (S. 1840) to reopen the rolls of the Choctaw-Chickasaw Tribe, and to provide for the awarding of the rights secured to certain persons by the fourteenth article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit Creek, of date September 27, 1830; to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

By Mr. JACKSON:

A bill (S. 1842) for the relief of Frank M. Travers; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BRISTOW:

A bill (S. 1843) granting an increase of pension to James R. Davis (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WEEKS:

A bill (S. 1844) for the relief of Sardine G. Williams and others; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. SHERMAN:

A bill (S. 1845) granting an increase of pension to Irvine Carman; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. GOFF:

A bill (S. 1846) granting an increase of pension to William Lawson;

A bill (S. 1847) granting an increase of pension to Seymour Norman; and

A bill (S. 1848) granting an increase of pension to Reuben B. Taylor; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. SMOOT:

A bill (S. 1849) granting an increase of pension to Alexander Cowan; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. CHAMBERLAIN:

A bill (S. 1850) granting a pension to Birdie McMains (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MARTIN of Virginia:

A bill (S. 1851) for the relief of the legal representatives of the estate of Henry H. Sibley, deceased; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. McLEAN:

A bill (S. 1852) granting an increase of pension to Martha E. Pinks (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 1853) granting an increase of pension to Herman H. Hamilton (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. O'GORMAN:

A bill (S. 1854) for the relief of Nelson D. Dillon (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. OWEN:

A bill (S. 1855) granting a pension to Theodore S. Hook (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 1856) granting an increase of pension to Thomas F. Gardner (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

INTERVENTION IN CUBAN AFFAIRS.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I introduce a bill authorizing the President of the United States to use the Army and Navy of the United States for the maintenance of government in Cuba adequate for the protection of life, property, and individual liberty, and for other purposes. Before the reference of the bill I desire to say one word.

The bill (S. 1841) authorizing the President of the United States to use the Army and Navy of the United States for the maintenance of government in Cuba adequate for the protection of life, property, and individual liberty, and for other purposes, was read twice by its title.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, this identical bill was introduced by me in the last Congress but never acted upon. At the time of its introduction there were some troubles in Cuba which caused some talk in the press and otherwise of possible intervention, and it was thought by myself and others that it was very important that the conditions which should justify intervention and the purposes which should influence intervention should be prescribed by law.

We have, in what is known as the Platt amendement, not only a right but a duty under certain circumstances which would involve intervention on the part of the United States. We have exercised that right in the past. I am one of those who think that it was then exercised in an unfortunate manner and with an unfortunate effect.

There is nothing now calling for intervention, and I would not wish the introduction of this bill to be construed as a recognition of the fact that there is anything at present in the existing conditions calling for intervention. But we never know when those conditions will again appear, and now, when there is nothing which could influence the action of the Congress as to the particular method which should be prescribed and the particular conditions which should be recognized as justifying intervention, I think it important that this matter should be settled.

The great and important feature, Mr. President, which it is sought by this bill to accomplish is that intervention shall hereafter be for the purpose of sustaining the authorities in Cuba and not for the purpose of displacing any existing authority in Cuba. That was the unfortunate feature in the former intervention, which might be repeated in the absence of some specific requirement of law. It is with that particularly in view that I again introduce this bill, in order that there may be defined by law what shall be the authority of the President in making an intervention, and when those circumstances exist which will justify it under that law what shall be the purpose and the particular method pursued in such intervention.

I thought it proper that I should make this statement now in order that the introduction of the bill might not be construed into any recognition of existing conditions calling for intervention. There is nothing of that kind in contemplation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

THE TARIFF.

Mr. GRONNA submitted two amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, which were referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

Mr. JACKSON submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

Mr. SHERMAN submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENT TO INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. JONES submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $1,800 to provide water for the irrigable lands of the Yakima Indian Reservation, State of Washington, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

AMENDMENT OF THE RULES.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I desire to present a notice of a proposed amendment to the rules of the Senate. I do not know whether or not the notice should be read to the Senate under the rules. I rather think it should be read.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Let it be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the notice.

The SECRETARY. The Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] gives notice that he intends to propose the following amendment to the standing rules of the Senate:

Amend, paragraph 2 of Rule VII, by striking out, in the third line thereof, the words "after the morning hour may" and inserting the word "shall."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The notice will lie over.

ARMOR PLATE FOR VESSELS OF THE NAVY.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, which will be read.

The Secretary read Senate resolution 78, submitted by Mr. ASHURST, as follows:

Whereas bids were opened by the Secretary of the Navy in February, 1913, for furnishing armor plate for the dreadnought Pennsylvania; and

Whereas the representatives of three firms manufacturing armor plate in the State of Pennsylvania, while pretending to bid as competitors, after a conference submitted bids which did not vary more than $1 per ton; and

Whereas the then Secretary of the Navy, notwithstanding an intimation made on the floor of the Senate of the United States that it was alleged there existed collusion among different manufacturers to advance the price of armor plate and divide the profits of the contract, awarded the contract on March 3, 1913, by dividing, for all practical purposes, the award of 8,000 tons of armor plate among the three companies; and

Whereas it is alleged that this action of the said firms reveals that they comprise an armor-plate trust, and that the price named in the contract awarded by the Secretary of the Navy is in the neighborhood of about $25 per ton higher than the previous awards by the Department of the Navy for armor plate: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Navy be, and he is hereby, directed to forward to the Senate, at as early a date as practicable, a report on the amount of armor plate ordered by the Department of the Navy during the past 25 years, the prices paid in each award, and the names of the firms or corporations to whom the contracts were awarded.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, the senior Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] interposed some objection to this resolution on yesterday. I am loath to have it taken up in his absence; but I desire to press the resolution at the earliest possible moment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Arizona desire the resolution to lie on the table, subject to his call?

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, in the absence of the senior Senator from New Hampshire, I would ask the Senator from Arizona to allow the resolution to go over for to-day, although I have not been asked by the Senator from New Hampshire to make the request. In his absence, however, I think it is the proper thing to do, if the Senator from Arizona has no objection.

Mr. ASHURST. Is the Senator from Utah able to state whether or not the Senator from New Hampshire will be in the Senate to-day?

Mr. SMOOT. I think, Mr. President, he will be; but I will say one thing about the senior Senator from New Hampshire, and that is that he is generally in his seat all of the time.

Mr. ASHURST. I know that to be true.

Mr. SMOOT. I can not say where the Senator from New Hampshire is at this particular time, but I believe that the Senator from Arizona feels that it would hardly be proper to bring up the resolution in his absence.

Mr. ASHURST. That is the very reason I made the observation that I would not call up the resolution in the absence of the Senator from New Hampshire.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will suggest that the resolution lie on the table, subject to the call of the Senator from Arizona.

Mr. ASHURST. I would like to state that as soon as the senior Senator from New Hampshire returns to the Chamber I shall make an effort to call up the resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Morning business is closed.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, in pursuance of the unanimous-consent agreement of yesterday, I ask that the Senate resume the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, resumed the consideration of the bill (H. R. 2441) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes, the pending question being on the amendment proposed by Mr. GALLINGER on page 129, line 13, to strike out all after the numerals "$300,000" down to and including the word "products," in line 24, as follows:

Provided, however, That no part of this money shall be spent in the prosecution of any organization or individual for entering into any combination or agreement having in view the increasing of wages, shortening of hours, or bettering the conditions of labor, or for any act done in furtherance thereof, not in itself unlawful: Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended for the prosecution of producers of farm products and associations of farmers who cooperate and organize in an effort to and for the purpose to obtain and maintain a fair and reasonable price for their products.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, while the particular question involved in the pending amendment has been before Congress several times, I have always been otherwise engaged and have never been able to give it the consideration that I think it deserves until within the last two or three days, when I have, to the best of my ability, examined somewhat into the question. After such examination I have come to the conclusion that I am opposed to the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] and in favor of the provision of the bill as it came from the other House.

Mr. President, the discussion so far has led into channels that seem to me do not directly apply to the amendment that is now before the Senate. So far as I have been able to find, there has never been under this provision of the antitrust law a criminal prosecution brought by the Government against a combination of laborers or of farmers. If I am in error, I should be glad to be set right by any Senator who knows of any such case.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. GRONNA. I think the Senator from Nebraska is mistaken in his statement. I believe that a farm organization in the State of Kentucky was proceeded against by the Attorney General for combining to enhance the price of their product.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I ought to have said, perhaps, to have been more explicit, that I did not believe there was a case, and was unable to find a case, where the United States Government had proceeded in a criminal action, or even in a civil action, against combinations of this kind, unless it was a case where some illegal act, or an attempt to commit an illegal act, was charged. I presume that would be true of the case in Kentucky. While I am not familiar with it and did not look it up in particular, yet I think if we would examine the case to which the Senator from North Dakota has referred we should find that allegations were made there, perhaps established—I do not remember what became of the case—that crimes were committed and that violence did take place, so that there would be no application of the provision of the bill now under consideration.

The Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] the other day delivered a very able address on this subject, and referred to some cases. He referred to the famous Danbury Hatters' case, for instance; and yet that was a civil suit, Mr. President. The United States did not commence that suit or prosecute it, but a similar suit could be prosecuted just the same if we passed the bill as it came from the House as though we adopted the amendment striking out the two provisos in accordance with the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire. That case, therefore, can have no application. It applies to a state or condition of affairs that will not be affected by the provisions of this bill, regardless of what may become of the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire.

The Senator from Idaho also referred to a case in the Fifty-fourth Federal Reporter. While the Senator did not cite the case, I presume it was the case in which the United States Government commenced a suit against an organization of laborers known, I believe, as the Workingmen's Amalgamated Council, of New Orleans. In the bill in that case it was alleged that violence was not only threatened, but that violence had taken place; and, I take it, that means that an unlawful act had not only been threatened but that unlawful acts had been committed. The court in rendering the decision in that case found both of those allegations true; that is, that there had not only been a threatened violence, but that violence had actually taken place. It seems to me, therefore, Mr. President, that the discussion of this question is almost entirely of an academic nature. So far as this amendment is concerned, I do not believe it will make a particle of difference with the administration of that law or the expenditure of that money, whether the motion is voted up or is voted down.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. NORRIS. Certainly.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I understood the Senator a moment ago to say that, in his opinion, there had been no criminal prosecutions of labor organizations or of farmers' organizations for violations of the statute.

Mr. NORRIS. I ought to have modified that, I will say to the Senator, by saying unless an unlawful act had been charged.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I do not recall the exact proceedings in the case or the exact allegations that were made, but the Cassidy case, which arose in California, was a criminal prosecution—the case of the United States against Cassidy.

Mr. NORRIS. Was that a criminal prosecution, I will ask the Senator?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. It was.

Mr. NORRIS. Then there were alleged in that case, were there not, acts that in themselves were unlawful?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I say I do not recall what the exact allegations were. The defendants in that case were indicted for a violation of the antitrust act. They were members of a labor organization.

Mr. NORRIS. As I have said, Mr. President, in the limited time that I have been looking up the question I have not found any cases wherein there was a criminal prosecution by the United States Government unless an unlawful act was charged. I mean act made unlawful by general law. I have not said that there have not been such cases. I am open to conviction, and if any Senator knows of any case in the past where a prosecution has been commenced where no act in itself illegal was charged, I should be glad to have him cite the case. The case which the Senator from Utah cites may be one of those, although he himself is unable to say that it is so.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield.

Mr. CUMMINS. Some time ago there were indictments found in the district court of the United States in Florida charging certain laboring men with no other offense than that of concerting together for the purpose of declaring a strike. Those indictments were put before the Committee on Interstate Commerce during a series of hearings held by that committee last year and the year before. I was astonished, of course, to learn that any officer of the Government considered that the antitrust law could be so interpreted as to cover a combination or an agreement between laboring men peacefully to quit the employment in which they were engaged. I do not know what has become of those cases. I have not followed them, and have no information with respect to them. I only know that the mere fact that an officer of the Government believed that such a combination was a violation of the law ought to have led the Congress of the United States to an amendment of the law, making it absolutely certain that laboring men may peacefully agree with each other that they will quit a common employment. That is one case.

Mr. NORRIS. I will ask the Senator if he knows whether in those indictments there was any illegal or unlawful act charged or alleged?

Mr. CUMMINS. It was charged that the act itself of combining or agreeing to quit a common employment was an unlawful act. The indictment charged nothing more than a concert of action among the employees leading to a strike.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Nebraska yield to the Senator from Idaho?

Mr. NORRIS. I should like first to say a word in reference to what the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS] has just said.

Mr. CUMMINS. I want to add one thing——

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, I ask for order, and ask that Senators speak a little louder.

Mr. CUMMINS. I do not believe in any such interpretation of the law; but if anybody believes in it, the law ought to be amended so as to leave it without any uncertainty whatever. But I may say to the Senator from Nebraska that the clause in this bill which relates to farmers or agricultural unions is not qualified by the phrase to which he is giving a good deal of emphasis.

Mr. NORRIS. I understand that it is not qualified in that way. Now, I yield to the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, the Senator made a statement a moment ago with which I think I am in entire accord, if I understood him correctly, and that was that, even if these provisos should prevail, it would not in any wise embarrass the enforcement of the Sherman antitrust law.

Mr. NORRIS. I agree with that; and I think I said that in substance.

Mr. BORAH. Then, as a matter of fact, the other statement of the Senator is entirely correct. It is purely an academic discussion, is it not?

Mr. NORRIS. I think, to a great extent—and that is what I was going to show when I was interrupted by the Senator—it is an academic discussion.

Mr. BORAH. Then, let me ask the Senator what, in his opinion, is the object to be attained by passing the provisos?

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, in the course of my remarks I will, I think, answer the Senator's question. At the present time I want to refer to what the Senator from Iowa said and say that he has perhaps given an illustration which only adds, in my judgment, to the necessity and the advisability of amending the Sherman antitrust law.

Now, I want to consider, first, the bill as it comes to us from the House. The particular paragraph to which the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire applies reads, so far as it applies to this question, as follows:

> For the enforcement of antitrust laws, $300,000: Provided, however, That no part of this money shall be spent in the prosecution of any organization or individual for entering into any combination or agreement having in view the increasing of wages, shortening of hours, or bettering the conditions of labor, or for any act done in furtherance thereof not in itself unlawful: Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended for the prosecution of producers of farm products and associations of farmers who cooperate and organize in an effort to and for the purpose to obtain and maintain a fair and reasonable price for their products.

The motion of the Senator from New Hampshire is to strike out those two provisos. In that connection I want to read the first section of the Sherman Antitrust Act. It is as follows:

> Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, is hereby declared to be illegal. Every person who shall make any such contract or engage in any such combination or conspiracy shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and on conviction thereof shall be punished by fine not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

If these provisos should be retained in the bill, Mr. President, the effect would be to prohibit the use by the Department of Justice of any portion of the $300,000 for the purpose of prosecuting combinations such as are named in the two provisos. As I have said, the history of the past shows that very few, if any, prosecutions on the part of the Government have ever taken place against those kinds of combinations. It is alleged here in the Senate, and no doubt it is true, that if the amendment succeeds, and these provisos are stricken out of the bill, the present administration will not use any of the money, even though it has the authority to do so, to prosecute combinations such as are named in the two provisos. Then we must remember, also, that the Sherman antitrust law, in other sections, and other trust acts that we have, give rights to individuals to proceed under their terms. This proviso in no way affects any of them. As I said, the famous Danbury Hatters' case could not be affected in any way, whether this provision is left in or is stricken out of the bill. No other civil suit that has ever been commenced anywhere in the United States, or that could be commenced under this provision of the Sherman law, could be in any way affected, whether this amendment is adopted or whether it is rejected.

After all, I believe, as I said, that while the discussion is mostly academic and can have no practical effect as far as concerns the administration of the law during the life of this appropriation act, upon whether or not there shall be prosecutions of these classes of combinations, yet it is an attempt, futile though it may be, to some extent at least, to differentiate between good trusts and bad trusts. However we may disagree upon what is a good trust or what is a bad trust, that question, I think everyone will admit, is one of great importance, and one that ought to be considered and decided by Congress.

It may be that Congress will be able to reach a solution of the problem by which it will determine what trusts are good and what are bad. In the last Congress a great many bills were introduced on the subject. A very comprehensive one was introduced by the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE]. This question has been discussed for several years. It has been the subject of presidential messages. I believe that, as defined by the section which I have read of the Sherman antitrust act, there are many combinations now, and others contemplated by farmers and fruit growers, that are in violation of the law.

I believe that there is an organization of fruit growers in California that has done a great deal of good for the fruit growers of California and for those who consume fruit as well. Yet, as I understand, they are acting in violation of this statute as construed by the courts of our country. I understand that that association gathers together the fruit raised by the members of the association in California, and ships it to various parts of the United States. For instance, they will ship a carload of oranges to St. Louis. If, before the car arrives in St. Louis, they discover that other oranges have been shipped into St. Louis, and there are too many there for the market, and there is a scarcity of oranges in some other place, like Omaha or Chicago, they will by wire divert the car and send it to the place where there is more demand for the particular fruit which they are shipping. They have been doing this for years.

No one, I think, will deny that if this combination goes no further, while it will produce beneficial results to the shippers of the fruit, it is likewise a good thing for the country. If all those who had oranges to sell should ship them into Omaha, Nebr., on the same day, oranges in Omaha perhaps would go down in price; they would perhaps rot, because the people there would be unable to consume them; while at the same time in Chicago, Philadelphia, or New York there might be a scarcity of the fruit and nobody but a millionaire would be able to have an orange on his table. And yet the work of this organization is, I believe, illegal under the terms of the law I have quoted.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a question?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. BORAH. Suppose this orange combination, so far as it has gone, is to be considered a good trust, and therefore entitled to the beneficent protection of the Government; but suppose it were strong enough to say, "We will ship no oranges to Omaha or to Chicago until the price reaches a certain point." It would be a very difficult matter for the Government to mark the transition period, in that instance, from a good trust to a bad trust.

Mr. NORRIS. Yes.

Mr. BORAH. It seems to me, with all due respect to that argument, that you are coming to the proposition which perhaps is one which we will all have to arrive at after a while, namely, to permit these combinations and trusts to exist as a whole, and then have some bureau at Washington to supervise them and see that they do not do us too much harm.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I shall not undertake now to answer the question suggested by the Senator from Idaho. I shall not undertake now to decide between what shall be considered good trusts and what shall be considered bad trusts. As I said, I admit that it is a great question that we can not decide to-day or to-morrow or while we are considering this bill, but it is something that we shall have to meet. At the present time, however, so far as I know, no charge has been made against this particular association or any association similar to it that it is undertaking to do anything like what is suggested by the Senator from Idaho. If it did, and were able to accomplish what it undertook in that direction, there is no question but that it ought to be prosecuted. There is not any doubt of it.

At the present time there is on the way to Europe a large delegation of American citizens, going there for the purpose of studying the rural credit system of Europe. That is a question to which I have given considerable attention. At the last session of Congress I introduced a joint resolution providing for the appointment by the President of a commission to go over to Europe and study their farm credit system, with a view of adopting it, with such modifications as may be necessary, in our own country. This body passed a resolution on the same subject, unanimously, as I understand. It went over to the House, and during the closing days of the session, having failed to get any action on my resolution, I appeared before the Agricultural Committee of the House and plead with them to report out the resolution without amendment in order that we might pass it before we adjourned. It was not passed, but the agitation and the discussion of the subject resulted in sending, in part by the States and partly by private subscription, a large delegation over to Europe for the purpose of studying that question. The very object of it all is to bring about a means by which the farmers of our country could combine in order to better their condition.

I have believed that such combination was not only desirable, but almost necessary. I have seen the farmers of this country who were raising wheat, for instance, compelled to sell their wheat the minute they harvested it, in order to meet their obligations. They were not able to borrow money at a rate of interest that they considered it would be advisable for them to pay and hold their wheat. There is not any doubt but that if all the farmers of the country were not compelled to sell immediately after harvest we would have an equalization of the price that would run through the year, and the prices of staple products would not vary nearly so much, would not go up and down, as they do now. There would be almost a standard price for them, running from one end of the year to the other.

I believe everybody admits that it would be desirable if we could approach such a condition. Yet, in the face of the section of the Sherman Antitrust Act that I have just read, every such combination would be illegal, and every man engaged in it would be liable to criminal punishment.

I believe it has been universally conceded everywhere, and particularly within the last day or two in this Chamber, that it is perfectly proper for laboring men to combine and to organize. Almost all of the Senators who have spoken on this question have said they believed in organized labor. But suppose an organization of railroad men should undertake to strike, as they have in the past. There is a question pending now between the railroads and some of their men in regard to higher wages. Every such organization, unless it were confined entirely to some little railroad within the limits of a State, would have to do with interstate commerce; and every man who engaged in such a strike, everyone who had anything to do with it, would be liable to punishment under the section of the Sherman Antitrust Act that I have just read.

Mr. NELSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. NELSON. I desire to call the Senator's attention to the fact that the United States courts have universally decided, where the question has come up, that laboring men have a right to organize, that they have a right to engage in strikes, and that they have a right by peaceable means to urge others to abstain from working—in other words, to abstain from becoming strike breakers. There has never been anything in the decisions of our courts to the contrary. The law has never been interpreted by any of our judges to mean that labor organizations of any kind are in themselves illegal. It is only when labor organizations have resorted to criminal methods, to violence, to lawlessness, resulting in interference with interstate commerce, that they have been held to be illegal. They have never been held to be illegal in themselves, nor is there anything in the law that makes them illegal.

Mr. NORRIS. If the Senator's statement is correct, it is certainly, as I look at it, a very good argument why we ought to vote against the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER]. If the Senator's statement is correct, the bill as it came from the House can do absolutely no harm to anyone, because it is expressly stated that this relief from prosecution exists only when no unlawful act has been committed, where men are pursuing a lawful and legitimate course.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. I should like to proceed just a little further before the Senator interrupts me.

I believe, however, that the case I have already referred to, cited by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH], and the case cited by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS], show conclusively that the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] is wrong in his conception of the law. I think it is generally conceded now by those who have studied the legal phase of the matter that if an organization of railroad men, for instance, agrees to strike, and the railroad is engaged in interstate commerce, there can be but one result as far as interference with interstate traffic is concerned. It must follow that they do by their action interfere with and restrain interstate traffic, and that, according to the definition of the Sherman antitrust act, is what constitutes a trust that is illegal.

I yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, I understood the Senator to say that this proviso would be applicable only to cases where the act or acts were themselves unlawful.

Mr. NORRIS. That is true of the proviso applying to laboring men. The proviso applying to farmers does not contain that provision.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Yes; I understand that. The provision reads:

> That no part of this money shall be spent in the prosecution of any organization or individual for entering into any combination or agreement having in view the increasing of wages, shortening of hours, or bettering the conditions of labor—

As I understand, that is one proposition, and a complete proposition. Then it proceeds:

> Or for any act done in furtherance thereof, not in itself unlawful.

So, as it seems to me, in that aspect—and I ask the Senator's view of it—it first provides that the money shall not be used in the prosecution of any organization or individual for entering into any combination or agreement which has in view these objects; second, that it shall not be used for the prosecution of any act which may be done in furtherance thereof if the act itself is not unlawful.

The point to which I desire to invite the Senator's attention is this—and it will be necessary to read the provision again in order to make my point clear:

> That no part of this money shall be spent in the prosecution of any organization or individual for entering into any combination or agreement having in view the increasing of wages, shortening of hours, or bettering the conditions of labor—

Would not that apply to an agreement or to a combination which was criminal in itself and contemplated the use of criminal means, provided the combination or agreement had in view the increasing of wages, the shortening of hours, and so on? There is nothing in the language which limits that part of the section to combinations or agreements which are themselves lawful. The only test is, Is it a combination or agreement which has in view the increasing of wages, shortening of hours, and so on? If so, then it is excluded from the operations of this appropriation.

Mr. NORRIS. I catch the point the Senator makes. While I have the greatest respect for any construction the Senator might place upon language, I do not believe this language will bear the construction he places upon it.

I can not conceive, Mr. President, of an organization such as he suggests, having for its object something criminal, carrying out that object without doing anything in furtherance thereof that is unlawful. In other words, if the organization to which the Senator refers has for its object a criminal purpose, as he suggests, how can we conceive of that purpose being carried out without doing anything in carrying it out except that which is lawful and right? It seems to me that to carry out that kind of an agreement they must necessarily be guilty of criminal acts such as are defined in this provision.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. GALLINGER. I am much interested in the Senator's discussion of the question. I regret that I was unavoidably detained from hearing all that the Senator has said. Did I understand the Senator to say the courts have decided that labor organizations in themselves are illegal and in contravention of the Sherman antitrust law?

Mr. NORRIS. I think so, if they are engaged in the restraint of interstate commerce.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator will permit me, I should like to read just a few lines from what I think might be called the most recent case, that of Gompers against The Bucks Stove & Range Co., which, it seems to me, so far as the opinion of the Supreme Court is concerned, does not quite agree with the contention of the Senator.

Mr. NORRIS. I will say to the Senator that I am somewhat familiar with the case. It is one of the cases in which the United States Government is not a party. It is a civil suit. It can not be affected by the Senator's amendment whether we adopt it or whether we reject it.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will say to the Senator that I was not discussing that phase of the question. I was simply trying to establish the fact that the Supreme Court of the United States has specifically said that while a boycott may be illegal, laboring men have an undoubted right to form combinations, and that the court recognizes such combinations as being legal combinations unless they violate the law by some procedure on their part.

Mr. NORRIS. There is not any doubt but that they have a right under the law to organize, and they have a right to strike; but if in the organization or in the strike or in carrying out any of the purposes of the organization they restrain interstate commerce they have violated the first section of the antitrust act.

Mr. GALLINGER. I think I will agree with the Senator in that proposition. The only point I wanted to clear up——

Mr. NORRIS. I think that is as far as I have gone. That is my idea of the law.

Mr. GALLINGER. The only point I wanted to clear up was that the court in that famous case decided clearly and unmistakably that laboring men have a right to organize and form combinations for legal purposes.

Mr. NORRIS. I am not contending to the contrary, and I do not think anyone does, so far as I know.

Mr. President, one would think on reading the debate which has taken place here that those of us who are opposed to this amendment and in favor of the bill as it came from the House are in favor of, at least to some extent, lawlessness and of permission being granted to one class of people to commit unlawful and criminal acts. I do not want to be, and no one can put me, in that class. I do not believe that what the Senator from New Hampshire, for instance, said about Haywood and Ettor has anything to do with this question. I am not one who has any sympathy for Haywood or Ettor, or the things, as I understand it, that they stand for. Anything that we may do here upon this amendment can not affect that question, as I understand it. I do not doubt but what many times in a strike things have been done that were wrong; that some things, perhaps, have occurred which ought to have been enjoined or which ought to have been punished. This bill will not prohibit the punishment of any illegal acts.

I do believe, however, that from the time the Sherman Act was passed down to within a few years ago it has been the general idea that it did not apply to farmers' organizations or to organizations of laboring men, and yet I am willing to admit that if it were possible to so form a combination of all or nearly all of the farmers in this country as to control the price of products that are used in commerce, that are used by the people generally for food, it would be a combination that would be as damaging and as heartless and as cruel as anything that the human mind could think of.

If I thought there was any danger or indication that in either one of these directions there would come about such an organization or such a condition, I would certainly be just as anxious to punish them as I would be to punish those great aggregations of wealth that have in the past formed combinations which have been detrimental to society, combinations which were the very reason for the enactment of the Sherman antitrust law.

It was, Mr. President, an attempt to protect the weak and the ordinary citizen against the combinations of wealth and capital, knowing its danger, knowing the possibilities that could come, and which had commenced to come, at the time of the enactment of the Sherman law, and it was to meet that condition that our fathers before us enacted the Sherman antitrust law. They did not think then, and I do not believe anyone seriously thinks now, that there was any indication of organizations of laboring men or of farmers that could do the harm or injustice that can be done and that has been done in the past by combinations of great wealth.

It may be that in the future we will have to meet conditions that are not before us now. At least we have not solved the great trust question, and when we come to solve it, if we ever do solve it in some way, we will have to define by statute the particular trusts that we want to prohibit and the particular trusts that we want to permit. Many bills have been introduced attempting to do this. At the present time, however, even though there may be doubt, I conceive it to be my duty, at least, to resolve that doubt in favor of those men and those organizations that, at least as far as I am able to see now, are not attempting to violate the law but are attempting to accomplish good for all humanity.

Mr. CLAPP. Before the Senator takes his seat—I was necessarily called out of the Chamber for a moment and it may be that the Senator covered the point, but I should like to know his view upon the concrete question, whether the proviso in the sundry civil bill, if passed, would exempt the labor unions from any legal consequence that now exists by virtue of the language of the Sherman antitrust law as amended in construction by the courts? Do I make the question plain?

Mr. NORRIS. The Senator makes his point clear, I think. In answer to the Senator I will say that if it would relieve anybody or anything, I think myself the relief would be very slight. I regard this legislation more as an expression of the legislative opinion as to what ought to be the law. I do not believe, as I said, I think, before the Senator came into the Chamber, that whether we amend the bill or whether we pass it without the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire, as far as any practical effect is concerned, there will be any difference during the year that this appropriation act has legal effect.

Mr. CLAPP. That is my view of the proviso, that it does not change the Sherman antitrust law as it is now upon the statutes, as interpreted by the courts.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, I regret to find myself at issue with the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] on this proposition, a Senator with whom I have found myself so much in accord on general propositions. But, Mr. President, it seems to me that a pertinent inquiry here is, What is the Sherman Act and the scope and meaning of the provisions of the Sherman Act, not the scope and meaning as determined by judicial legislation, as some would have it, but the scope and meaning of that act as determined by proper judicial interpretation and judicial definition? What under such interpretation does the act do or accomplish? The immediate question here is as to whether we shall exempt two classes of individuals from the provisions of a law appropriating $300,000 for prosecutions under the antitrust law.

So, what is this antitrust law? We all recall some of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States which seemed to adopt the literal interpretation and include within its every provision, combination, or agreement which in any manner or for any purpose was in restraint of trade. These literal interpretations are found in the Trans-Missouri Freight Association case and they are found in the Joint Traffic case, there being in each of those two great cases, however, four dissenting opinions to the view of the majority in regard to the literal construction to be put upon that act.

Later, however, we have the decision of the Northern Securities Co. case. At that time, by reason of the specially concurring opinion of Justice Brewer in that case, there were five to four of the Supreme Court justices holding to the opinion that the reasonable restraint of trade is what is meant by the Sherman antitrust law.

Mr. President, I simply wish to read here that part of Justice Brewer's decision bearing upon the particular point.

Instead of holding—

He says—

Instead of holding that the antitrust act included all contracts, reasonable or unreasonable, in restraint of interstate trade, the ruling should have been that the contracts there presented were unreasonable restraints of interstate commerce, and as such within the scope of the act. The act, as appears from its title, was leveled at only "unlawful restraints and monopolies." Congress did not intend to reach and destroy those minor contracts in partial restraint of trade which the long course of decisions at common law had affirmed were reasonable and ought to be upheld. The purpose, rather, was to place a statutory prohibition * * * upon those contracts which were in direct restraint of trade, unreasonable, and against public policy. (193 U. S., 197, 361.)

Notwithstanding the literal construction put upon the terms of this act up until this time, the court found itself obliged to exempt a large number of classes of contracts and combinations from the operation of the law, holding that they were simply in reasonable restraint of trade, that they were necessary, and that contracts of that kind were legal.

Now, I refer briefly to some of the agreements which in the various cases, either by dictum or by direct decision upon the point involved, have been held to be exempt from the operation of the Sherman law.

Agreements by a vendor or lessor of property or business with his vendee or lessee not to engage again in such business within a specified time and within a particular locality. These technical common-law contracts in restraint of trade were valid at common law if reasonable, and the same rule has been applied under this statute. (Cincinnati Packet Co. v. Bay, 200 U. S., 179; dictum in Addyston Pipe Case, 85 Fed., 271, 281.)

Now, coming to some such associations as mentioned by the Senator from Nebraska, these were exempted: Associations or agreements between private persons or corporations and those engaged in private service to secure stable and uniform rates for service and otherwise regulate the same. And such are grain, fruit, real estate, and stock exchanges. They may directly affect competition between the members, but they are lawful if their provisions are fair and reasonable, as held in United States v. Hopkins (171 U. S., 578) and United States v. Anderson (171 U. S., 604).

Agreements between manufacturers or producers and a distributor or distributors by which each agrees to deal exclusively with the other in the sale and purchase of particular commodities. (Dictum in Joint Traffic case, 171 U. S., 505, 567.) And there is the dictum in the Joint Traffic case, found in One hundred and seventy-first United States, to the effect that agreements between manufacturers or producers and a distributor or distributors by which each agrees to deal exclusively with the other in the sale and purchase of particular commodities, is not within the prohibition of the law.

And then, of course, the union, under contract, of individual competitors in business by the formation of a partnership or a corporation; or of competing corporations by a consolidation of them; or of competing properties by their purchase by one competitor or by a new corporation—there being in such case an actual change in the ownership of the formerly competing properties—these all are lawful business transactions, and the fact that they affect competition does not vitiate them. This was laid down in the Traffic and Northern Securities opinions, though the precise question was not involved.

Now, then, a further class of cases are agreements by which competitors in production—manufacture, live stock, fruit, grain, or tobacco—employ the same sales or commission agent.

And finally, come the agreements, through associations of workmen, tradesmen, or merchants for the regulation and improvement of the relations between their members without any agreement as to prices or territory or compensation, such as the wholesale and retail drug, grocery, and other trade associations and labor unions and federations. Their right to exist for the purposes named has been sustained again and again.

Now, Mr. President, my position simply is this, that the Sherman antitrust law as it is, not as it is by judicial legislation, but as it is by true and proper judicial interpretation to-day, is the very best shield and protection of the laboring man and of the farmer.

I want to call attention now to a few of the statements made by Justice White in the Freight Association case in his dissenting opinion, showing the reasonableness of the "rule of reason," which he afterwards so thoroughly applied in the Standard Oil and the Tobacco Trust cases. Among other things he says:

Progress and not reaction was the purpose of the act of Congress. The construction now given the act disregards the whole current of judicial authority and tests the right to contract by the conceptions of that right entertained at the time of the yearbooks instead of by the light of reason and the necessity of modern society. To do this violates, as I see it, the plainest conception of public policy, for, as said by Sir G. Jessel, master of the rolls, in Printing, etc., Co. v. Sampson (L. R., 19, Eq., 462), "if there is one thing which more than another public policy requires, it is that men of full age and competent understanding shall have the utmost liberty of contracting, and their contracts when entered into freely and voluntarily shall be held sacred and shall be enforced by courts of justice."

The remedy intended to be accomplished by the act of Congress was to shield against the danger of contract or combination by the few against the interest of the many and to the detriment of freedom. The construction now given, I think, strikes down the interest of the many to the advantage and benefit of the few. It has been held in a case involving a combination among workingmen that such combinations are embraced in the act of Congress in question, and this view was not doubted by this court. (In re Debs, 64 Fed. Rep., 724, 745–755; 158 U. S., 564.)

Further, as to the interpretation to be put upon this statute, Justice White said:

The interpretation of the statute, therefore, which holds that reasonable agreements are within its purview, makes it embrace every peaceable organization or combination of the laborer to benefit his condition either by obtaining an increase of wages or diminution of the hours of labor.

How pertinent to the very issue involved in these proposed provisos to this law. Criticizing the construction put upon it by the majority, he further says:

It follows that the construction which reads the rule of reason out of the statute embraces within its inhibition every contract or combination by which workingmen seek to peaceably better their condition. It is, therefore, as I see it, absolutely true to say that the construction now adopted which works out such results not only frustrates the plain purpose intended to be accomplished by Congress but also makes the statute tend to an end never contemplated and against the accomplishment of which its provisions were enacted.

Then, Mr. President, there are the great Standard Oil and Tobacco Trust cases, in which the rule of reason long contended for at last triumphed, in which the Sherman antitrust law was thus properly interpreted to suit the modern conditions and modern industrial development. Permit me to say that these successive interpretations of the Constitution which Senators have now and then been pleased to term "judicial legislation" have been interpretations analogous to the common law itself, to suit new exigencies, new conditions, and the developments of our modern society. Conditions hardly realized at the time of the enactment of the Sherman antitrust law have grown up since then and have called for the application of the Sherman antitrust law to such new conditions. Instead of the Sherman antitrust law, as it reads, being a sword to be used against the laboring man or against the farmer, it is, as I say, his shield and protection. It is only the unreasonable restraint, the unreasonable obstruction of trade against which the Sherman antitrust law is aimed. It is a narrow and technical construction, as I view it, Mr. President, which says that under this provision there may be prosecutions under the general law and that there simply can not be any of this $300,000 used for the purposes of prosecutions of the kind named in the bill. That is a narrow construction. What do we do when we put that into this law? We do something more than enact the law. We declare a policy, for it will be interpreted by the Nation that this is a new policy we have now entered upon. It will be so interpreted, or it is likely to be so interpreted, by the prosecuting authorities of the Nation, and the inquiry will be: Did not Congress intend to say by the enactment of these provisos that there shall be no prosecutions directed against organizations of labor or against organizations of farmers whatever their purpose or whatever their conduct? That will be the danger. If there was ever confusion and uncertainty in the interpretation of the Sherman antitrust law, or under it, we shall have "confusion worse confounded" when it comes to the interpretation of the language of these provisos.

What of the acts that shall themselves be deemed unlawful or which are "in themselves unlawful"? What are the "reasonable prices" for which the farmer may combine under this law? Various questions of construction, various questions of doubt and uncertainty will arise. I say, Mr. President, that I think we can ill afford now to change the Sherman antitrust law, protection and shield, as it is, to the farmer and to the laborer, protecting them in every laudable, lawful, reasonable enterprise, to promote their best interests, to secure better prices, to secure shorter hours, and to secure the increase of wages. All these are protected, and that is all that any class of individuals or any class of society should have a right to demand under the law.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, I offer an amendment to the amendment proposed by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER].

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from Illinois to the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to amend the amendment offered by Mr. GALLINGER by adding the following:

Provided, however, That no part of this money shall be spent in the prosecution of any organization or individual for entering into any combination or agreement or for any action otherwise lawful having in view the increasing of wages, shortening of hours, or bettering the sanitation, safety, or other condition of labor, without violence or interference with the lawful rights of another: And provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended for the prosecution of producers of farm products and associations of farmers who cooperate and organize in an effort to, and for the purpose to, obtain and maintain a fair and reasonable price for their products.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. President, I do not care to go into a discussion of this question at this time at any great length. There is a difference of opinion on the respective sides of the aisle as to what a labor union or an organization of agriculturists or farmers may properly do. There seems to be a pretty clear understanding among the laymen, but as usual the lawyers can not understand it. I have an idea, Mr. President, that the layman has the correct idea of this when it is practically applied. It does not take a professional man to understand what is a lawful act; it takes a pair of litigants and a court to find that out. At this time there is a well-defined status of farmers' or horticulturists' associations and of unionized labor in this country. That is true of the decisions both of State courts and of Federal courts generally throughout this country. I believe, as some Senators have already said, and especially one Senator, labor organizations may now lawfully combine for the purpose of increasing wages, of shortening their hours, and of bettering their sanitary condition, or to safeguard their surroundings. I do not believe that any just prosecution, either civil or criminal, can be had under existing law of an organization designed for those proper purposes.

Outside of two or three areas from which Senators come, I doubt very much whether there is any greater controversy or more dispute in the whirlpool of industrial trouble than there is in the city of Chicago. I have been entirely familiar with the course of labor legislation, so called, and of the difficulties that have occurred between the employer and the employee for the last 14 years in that particular jurisdiction, both in State and Federal litigation and legislation.

I do not believe that any labor organization can complain of this amendment. I do not believe they will do so. I am quite certain that for any lawful purpose any labor union ought to combine, and it may do so under the provisions of this amendment to the amendment. It expressly reserves the right to organize for lawful purposes. Those lawful purposes may be those that are not embraced in either civil or criminal prosecutions. I understand that a civil prosecution would be unlawful—that is, a prosecution in a civil sense that may involve a penalty or for debt or the collection of damages on judgment by execution. A labor union, whatever its purpose may be, if it conducts itself along lawful lines will not be prosecuted under this amendment.

I believe the laboring men have a right to organize, and I myself would not vote for nor support any amendment to any existing law or any pending bill that would deny to them that right. If they have the right to organize for lawful purposes, this amendment protects that right. That lawful purpose may be carried out without either civil or criminal liability if not within the prohibition of the statute. If it is lawful so far as civil liability is concerned, they may organize for shortening the hours of labor, for raising wages, for improving the sanitary condition and the safety under which the employee performs his service. For those lawful purposes—and I do not understand they are prohibited by the Sherman antitrust law as it is now interpreted and applied by the courts and by the departments of justice either in State or in Federal jurisdiction—with that limitation, I am perfectly willing that organized labor in whatever form shall continue to have that right.

There is a difference of opinion here, as I have suggested—and it is only that difference that prompted me to make these observations—there is a difference of opinion as to what a labor organization may lawfully do. I understand, within the limitations stated, that they may lawfully combine to shorten their hours; I am in favor of that; they may combine to increase their wages; I am in favor of that; they may combine to better their sanitary condition as to light, air, and freedom from dangerous gases, dust, or anything incident to the numerous forms of risk arising from modern industrial efforts; I am in favor of that; they may combine for the purpose of securing more adequate factory inspection, in order that machinery driven by powerful and dangerous agencies may be safeguarded, in order that life and limb may no longer be exposed to what is sometimes called the "assumed hazards of the business." I am in favor of that within all lawful limits. Where they may combine for that purpose, I will not by any effort of mine take away from them that right. If they go beyond that, if they seek a right by secondary boycotts, which are quite well known, and insist upon the right to trespass upon private property to reach their ends and intrude upon the private possessions of others, I do not concede they have that right, but public places and public highways are open to pickets as to others.

If they go further—as is frequently unfortunately the case, out of which arises a considerable prejudice in matters of this kind—if, unfortunately, they go further and undertake by physical violence to gain the honorable ends I favor, then they are within the inhibition of the law, and ought to be within its prohibition. If they go beyond the immediate organization or action that demands an increase of wages, the shortening of hours, improved sanitary conditions, and the safeguarding of the machinery or conditions under which they work, so that they embrace within the area of their operation not only a State, but the entire country, and affect every employer who may be situated in a like manner, although no controversy exists as to him, that becomes a secondary boycott; it is an interference with the rights of others; and it is covered by this amendment. All who serve a common employer may quit singly or all together, at pleasure, with or without cause.

Within the lawful limits, Mr. President, of labor to organize itself to conduct its operation for these necessary ends, I have always, within the limits of my official conduct, met them on common ground, and we have adjusted our difficulties, if any existed, without serious dispute. I have no fear of any reasonable labor representative in the country where I must submit myself to their jurisdiction and to their efforts for or against me at the polls. They have a sense of justice and fairness, and to it I appeal. I myself, Mr. President, would rather never hold a seat in this Senate beyond the two fleeting years that I shall have it than to act contrary to my better instincts and vote to encourage the rampant lawlessness that is now abroad in this country.

I have no fear of any reasonable man representing organized labor in this country. I have met them in their local unions; I have met them in conventions; I have met them in legislative committees; I have met them on labor days, and elsewhere when these questions were up for general discussion, and, within the limits that they may lawfully engage in raising their wages, in shortening their hours, and bettering their condition, I favored then and I favor now anything that may be done along those lines. If any part is to be used of this $300,000 in order to prosecute with a view to destroying the right of laboring men to organize, I am against it. If any of it is to be used to prosecute a union for quitting work, either one member of the union alone or in concerted action all the members of that particular organization in the employment in question, I oppose such prosecution. That is their right.

There can be no order from any judicial tribunal, no injunction, no judgment, no sort of an award by any arbitral tribunal that will enforce upon one or more members of any organized body the duty of continuing in any fixed line of service. That is the limitation. If it goes beyond that, there is no right either to trespass on private property, to invade civil rights, or to indulge in acts of physical violence.

In order that this difference of opinion that appears to exist among my professional brethren may be given a line of cleavage and a distinct division; in order that we may discriminate, taking what the unions may lawfully do at this time, putting it on one side, and separating it entirely from what is civilly or criminally prohibited on the other side; in order that that line may be drawn, and that I may understand how I will eventually vote on this question, I have offered my amendment to the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER].

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, before the Senator takes his seat I should like to ask him a question. I understood the Senator to say, in the course of his remarks, that the amendment offered by him recognizes no right in the laboring man which he does not possess under existing law. Am I correct in that?

Mr. SHERMAN. Yes; my amendment is simply designed to preserve all the rights he has to organize, to increase his wages, to shorten his hours, and to improve or safeguard his sanitary conditions.

Mr. WALSH. I understood the Senator to say that he may have some other rights, but he undoubtedly has all these embraced in the amendment.

Mr. SHERMAN. The object of my amendment is that every lawful right that a union has under existing laws shall be preserved.

Mr. WALSH. I take it, from the Senator's remarks, that he is in accord with the general sentiment of the proviso now incorporated in the bill?

Mr. SHERMAN. No, sir; from a statement to be hereafter made, if the Senator will pardon me. I shall be glad to yield to him in a moment.

Mr. WALSH. I should like to ask the Senator, then, to make clear what there is in the language of the section as it appears in the bill which differentiates it from the amendment offered by him.

Mr. SHERMAN. I have offered my amendment because, judging from the discussion developed here in the last two days, it does not appear, from reading the decisions of courts or from listening to the opinions of my professional brethren, that any of them are in entire accord as to the lawful rights of unions at this time.

Mr. WALSH. Then, I simply desire to inquire of the Senator, in view of the fact that this bill comes from the other House, having already received its approbation, and that this feature is the only one that is under discussion in this body, whether he regards the distinction between his amendment and the proviso as it stands of sufficient importance in the present case to justify an amendment of the bill and the resulting necessity of a ratification by the other House?

Mr. SHERMAN. It causes little delay. It is with a view, Mr. President, of drawing the line sharply, in order that prosecutions may not be had hereafter against an organization which is simply endeavoring to shorten hours or increase wages. The opinion has been expressed here quite freely within the last two days that that kind of an organization was within the prohibition of the Sherman antitrust law. If that is so, I want to remove it by some proper amendment, although if I had my choice I should, in the first instance, prefer to vote directly for the amendment of the act itself, without going about it in this evasive way.

I do not believe the general statutes of the country ought to be amended by indirection. The better way would be to attack the act directly, or to seek to amend it directly, whichever is the proper course. In that event there could be no misunderstanding. But as to this proviso, I wish to go on record here as favoring the protection of any organization of employees in this country in the right to organize to shorten their hours, to increase their wages, and to better or safeguard the sanitary and other conditions under which they perform their service.

It has been stated here that some, or possibly all, of these things come within the express prohibition of the first section of the antitrust act. If that is so, I think it ought to be relaxed. I believe the industrial development of the country would justify a relaxation. It was generally supposed in the initial stages of the consideration of this law, which I do not wish to consider at all now, that it did not include combinations of this kind. Afterwards, beginning about 1901, it was supposed that it did. The construction placed upon the act later by courts seemed to include organizations for the purpose of raising wages, putting them on exactly the same basis with manufacturers who combine to raise the price of a finished commodity. Such of the courts as take that view of the law put their decision upon exactly the same ground as combining to raise the price of a commodity. In that event these organizations would now be within section 1 of the act. If that is true, I think it ought to be relaxed.

I do not believe any organization ought to be prosecuted that has in view any one of these three laudable purposes, or all of them. There is a limitation beyond which they ought not to go and can not go. Beyond that they interfere with the civil rights of others. Beyond that, if they undertake to exercise physical violence, it may ripen into criminal conduct that ought to be prohibited.

As I see this amendment—and I drew it for that purpose only—its object is that this line of division may be ascertained, and that it may be finally declared by the Senate in its consideration of this matter that unions may lawfully engage in carrying out any one of these three purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the motion of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SHERMAN] to amend the language of the bill which the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] has moved to strike out.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I assume that the amendment proposed by the Senator from Illinois is an amendment to the text of the bill.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. No; it is an amendment to the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GALLINGER. No; it would not be an amendment to my amendment, but an amendment to the text of the bill. The Chair has stated it accurately, I think. A motion to strike out can be suspended pending the desire of the friends of the measure to amend the text, and that is what the Senator from Illinois purposes to do. The motion to strike out will still remain, subject to future action, after the motion of the Senator has been acted upon.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is the understanding of the Chair.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I should like to have the amendment to the amendment read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the amendment to the amendment.

The SECRETARY. In lieu of the words proposed to be stricken out by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER], it is proposed to insert the following:

Provided, however, That no part of this money shall be spent in the prosecution of any organization or individual for entering into any combination or agreement or for any action otherwise lawful having in view the increasing of wages, shortening of hours, or bettering the sanitation, safety, or other condition of labor, without violence or interference with the lawful rights of another: And provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended for the prosecution of producers of farm products and associations of farmers who cooperate and organize in an effort to and for the purpose to obtain and maintain a fair and reasonable price for their products.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Virginia suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gronna	Norris	Smith, Md.
Borah	Hitchcock	O'Gorman	Smith, Mich.
Brandegee	Hollis	Oliver	Smith, S. C.
Bristow	James	Overman	Smoot
Bryan	Johnson, Me.	Page	Stephenson
Burton	Johnston, Ala.	Perkins	Sutherland
Clapp	Jones	Pomerene	Swanson
Clark, Wyo.	Kern	Robinson	Thomas
Clarke, Ark.	La Follette	Root	Vardaman
Colt	Lane	Saulsbury	Walsh
Cummins	Lea	Shafroth	Weeks
Dillingham	Lippitt	Sheppard	Williams
du Pont	McCumber	Sherman	Works
Fletcher	McLean	Shields
Gallinger	Martin, Va.	Simmons
Goff	Martine, N. J.	Smith, Ga.

Mr. GALLINGER. I have been requested to announce that the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL] has been called away from the city on important business, and that he is paired with the Senator from Arizona [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. ASHURST. I wish to announce that my colleague [Mr. SMITH] is absent from the Chamber on important business, as has been announced, and that he is paired with the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL].

Mr. KERN. My colleague [Mr. SHIVELY] is absent from the city on important business. He is paired with the Senator from Maine [Mr. BURLEIGH].

The VICE PRESIDENT. Sixty-one Senators have answered to the roll call. A quorum of the Senate is present.

Mr. ROOT. Mr. President, the pending question has been so fully and fairly discussed that I shall not detain the Senate by making any argument upon it further than to explain the position which I feel bound to take.

I am in favor of the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] to strike out the provisos to the appropriation for the enforcement of antitrust laws and opposed to those provisos.

The junior Senator from New Jersey [Mr. HUGHES] yesterday, with a frankness which is commendable, stated what I am sure we will all agree to, that there is in fact no danger of the Attorney General or any officer of the Department of Justice bringing prosecutions during the year for which this appropriation extends against either of the classes of citizens referred to in the provisos. Other Senators have in a different form expressed the same idea. I think it is well understood, and it has been repeatedly declared, that there is no practical occasion for these provisos. Nothing will be done or omitted with the provisos in the bill different from what would be done or omitted with the provisos out of the bill.

The sole practical effect, then, of including these provisos is a declaration on the part of the Congress of the United States, and it is because I think that declaration will be injurious, because I think it will tend to lessen respect for law, the willingness of our people to obey the law, and the just confidence of our people in the fairness and impartiality of the Congress which makes the laws, that I think we ought to omit the provisos. Let me state what it seems to me they accomplish.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Will the Senator from New York suspend for one moment? The morning hour has expired, and the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. Order of Business 10, Senate resolution 37, authorizing the appointment of a committee to make investigations of the conditions in the Paint Creek district, W. Va.

Mr. KERN. I ask that the unfinished business be temporarily laid aside, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there is no objection, that action will be taken. The Chair hears none, and the Senator from New York will proceed.

Mr. ROOT. Twenty-three years ago Congress provided in the Sherman Act by section 1 that—

> Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States or with foreign nations is hereby declared to be illegal. Every person who shall make any such contract or engage in any such combination or conspiracy shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, on conviction thereof, shall be punished by fine not exceeding $5,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

These provisos do not undertake to amend or change the Sherman Act. They leave the form of any contract, combination, or conspiracy in restraint of trade still illegal. They leave every person who engages in such a contract, combination, or conspiracy a criminal. What they undertake to do is to say that certain classes of the people of the United States may commit such criminal acts and shall not be prosecuted while certain other classes who commit the same criminal acts shall be prosecuted and punished.

Mr. CLAPP. Will the Senator pardon an interruption?

Mr. ROOT. Certainly.

Mr. CLAPP. Did not the Senator perhaps inadvertently misstate it and intend to say that the provisos mean that this particular fund shall not be used in those prosecutions?

Mr. ROOT. No, Mr. President, that limitation, as the Senator from New Jersey stated the other day, was designed to avoid a point of order against general legislation upon an appropriation bill, and the provision was put in the form of a limitation upon the appropriation so that it could not be put out by the point of order. But the real meaning of it is that the Congress of the United States gives notice to the Executive that a laboring man who commits the crime described in the Sherman Act or the producer of agricultural products who commits the crime described in the Sherman Act shall not be prosecuted. The people of the country do not refine and distinguish on particular forms of language. That is the broad and unmistakable meaning of Congress in its declaration.

Sir, it may be that the Sherman Act should be modified, that the principle which is declared there should be restated more carefully and less generally, so that some things included in it now should no longer be included. But, Mr. President, it is now the law. The question presented to this Congress is whether we shall issue to the people of the country a declaration that we are in favor of permitting some people to violate the law with impunity and punishing with fine and imprisonment other men who violate the same law.

We declared in the Sherman Act the principle of freedom of trade. We adopted that as the test to determine whether combinations and agreements were lawful or unlawful. That is still the test. That principle is still embodied in the law, and who shall say, so long as it is the test, so long as it is embodied in the law, that any part of the people of the United States shall be approved in disregarding it and violating it?

These provisos assume the commission of the offense. The Sherman Act says:

> Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce—

Shall be illegal. The proviso says that—

> No part of this money shall be spent in the prosecution of any organization or individual for entering into any combination or agreement having in view the increasing of wages—

And so forth.

The further proviso says that no part—

> Shall be expended for the prosecution of producers of farm products and associations of farmers who cooperate and organize in an effort to and for the purpose to obtain and maintain a fair and reasonable price for their products.

That is to say, sir, although these two classes of American citizens enter into contract or combination or conspiracy in restraint of trade and commerce which is declared to be illegal, nevertheless they shall not be prosecuted. It is immunity for illegal contracts that these provisos give, and nothing else. It is immunity against punishment for the commission of a crime under the laws of the United States that these provisos give, and nothing else.

So, sir, whatever might be wise in treating the terms of the Sherman Act, whether it should be modified or not, it seems to me that we are doing a wrong to our country, that we are doing a wrong to the laws of our country, that we are doing a wrong to the ideal of justice which, thank God, still remains in the minds of the people of our country, to say, while this law stands upon the statute books, that some may disregard it and others shall regard it.

The Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS], in his very admirable and fair statement upon the other side of this question this morning, described the situation which would exist in the case of the fruit growers of California if they found it desirable, or when they do find it desirable, to combine to regulate their shipments of fruits to one market or the other, so that there shall not be an oversupply. No one can fail to see, sir, that what he said had great reason in it. But, Mr. President, does not that same reason apply to other producers? This country is covered all over by hundreds of thousands of small producers, small manufacturers, whose success in their business depends upon not having an oversupply of the articles they produce.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. ROOT. Certainly.

Mr. WORKS. I was unfortunate enough to be out of the Chamber when reference was made to what is called the combination of the fruit growers of California. If the Senator will allow——

Mr. ROOT. Certainly.

Mr. WORKS. I should like to say that there is no combination among the fruit growers of California to control the prices or even to control the places to which the fruit is to be shipped. It is only a mutual organization, and it is always left entirely to the shipper or owner of the fruit to determine the price at which his fruit shall be sold and the market in which it shall be sold.

I only say this in justice to the fruit growers of California, because I do not believe they have in any sense brought themselves within the terms of the antitrust law.

Mr. ROOT. I wish to say to the Senator from California I made no statement regarding the fruit growers of California. I was commenting upon some remarks made by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. NORRIS] which were rather hypothetical, indicating that the interests of the fruit growers of California did require that they should have the authority, the power, the right to divert their shipments to one point or to another.

Mr. WORKS. I did not understand that the Senator from New York was in any way criticizing the organization of the fruit growers of California. I only referred to it in this connection because I did not have the opportunity to do so when the Senator from Nebraska had spoken.

Mr. ROOT. Mr. President, let me return to my proposition that there are hundreds of thousands of American citizens who are engaged in a small way in producing a vast variety of articles by processes of manufacture, and whose success in business depends upon not having an overproduction of those articles. Now, what are they to say and what are they to feel if the Congress of the United States says that the producers of citrus fruits shall be at liberty to violate the Sherman Act if they see fit, but these manufacturers shall not be at liberty to do so?

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. ROOT. Certainly.

Mr. WORKS. I should say, Mr. President, that if the Congress of the United States should say that to the fruit growers of California, it would be a reflection upon the fruit growers of my State.

Mr. ROOT. I should hope, Mr. President, that the fruit growers of California would resent the gift of the right to violate the law, and I do not believe, sir, that the farmers of the United States anywhere desire such permission. But, sir, that is what this proviso does. It retains the restrictions of the Sherman Act for the multitude of small manufacturers and it takes off the restrictions of the Sherman Act from the multitude of agricultural producers.

We all know, sir, that combinations among manufacturers and traders have been productive of more evil than combinations among any other classes or kinds of our people, but we know, too, that it is quite possible for combinations among farmers to pass the limit of the real evil at which the Sherman Act was aimed. We know it is quite possible for combinations among laborers to pass the limit of the real evil at which the Sherman Act was aimed. And are we to say that there shall be no limit to the violations of law which shall go unpunished on the part of these two classes of American citizens?

Mr. President, the real power which enforces law is not the power of the Attorney General or the district attorney or the marshal. It is the power of public opinion. The reason why the enforcement of the Sherman Act has been progressively more and more effective is that the public opinion has grown up to the legislation. The reason why it was possible to secure judgments against the great combinations in tobacco and oil, when a few years before it was recognized as impossible, is that public opinion has grown up to the statute. Without it you can not enforce any law. Without it you can not get juries to convict or grand juries to indict.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Will the Senator from New York yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. ROOT. Certainly.

Mr. NORRIS. I agree most heartily with what the Senator has just said, but I was attempting to show that there have been instances where with a great deal of ability and considerable reason men have wanted to have laws made that would give exceptions to certain industries. I should like to call the Senator's attention to the fact that several years ago when we were engaged in the passage of the last amendment to the interstate-commerce act the President had introduced a bill which gave to the railroads under certain conditions, with the consent of the court that was provided for in the bill, the right to combine contrary to the Sherman antitrust law, and that for a while that particular provision was left in the bill. It was introduced, as I understand it, at the suggestion and approval of the President.

I am not speaking of it in criticism of the men who favored it, but simply to give the Senator an illustration that this is not the only instance. There are, perhaps, several others which might occur to the minds of those who have studied the question somewhat. It is not the only instance where exceptions to laws have been deemed necessary for the proper carrying out of the real purposes of the law.

Mr. ROOT. Mr. President, I am not arguing against exceptions to laws. The instance which the Senator from Nebraska mentions was an instance of a clause in an act which amended the interstate-commerce law, and which provided that railroads over whose rates the Interstate Commerce Commission had authority given to it might make agreements regarding those rates with the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I did not have reference to the same law the Senator now speaks of. I had reference to that provision of the law which permitted railroads to combine, and which to that extent, as far as the railroads were concerned, repealed the Sherman Antitrust Act.

Mr. ROOT. There may have been such a provision at some time in the bill. I never heard of any provision recommended by any President that railroads should be at liberty to combine except under the approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. NORRIS. I may be mistaken, but, as I remember it now, the approval for this combination was to be secured from the Interstate Commerce Court. It may have been the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. ROOT. It was the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Mr. NORRIS. I have forgotten now. It was one or the other.

Mr. CLAPP. The Senator from New York, I think, will recall that the provision relating to rates was subject to the approval of the commission, and that the provision relating to the consolidation of railroads was subject to the approval of the court, as proposed in the bill of 1910.

Mr. ROOT. That is a matter of detail I do not recall. It was to substitute a regulative action for complete prohibition.

Mr. BACON. Possibly the Senator will recall the fact that that bill was generally known as an administration bill. It was brought in here and generally stated and conceded to have been drawn in the Executive department, and to have been sent and introduced at its instance. If I recollect aright—the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS], who was very active in that debate, will correct me if I am wrong—it contained a provision which permitted any railroad to combine or acquire control of any other railroad if it had 50 per cent of its stock. Am I not correct in that?

Mr. CUMMINS. There was such a provision in the act as originally introduced.

Mr. BACON. That would be a combination of the worst sort.

Mr. CUMMINS. I am very glad to say, however, that that attempted exception from the operation of a general law was——

Mr. BACON. Defeated.

Mr. CUMMINS. Defeated——

Mr. BACON. In this Chamber.

Mr. CUMMINS. As every such exception ought to be.

Mr. ROOT. Now, Mr. President, if there is no other discussion of other proposed legislation, let me go back to the producer of agricultural products who is to be allowed to violate the Sherman Antitrust Act with impunity in order to prevent overproduction or a glut in the market, and the multitude of small manufacturers who are to be punished if they undertake to do the same thing. Granting that in regard to all classes it is possible not only for such well-intended and perhaps excusable attempts to be made, but also for wicked attempts at monopoly and prevention of competition to be made, some things may be done by members of all the producing classes of our country which we would not wish to prevent and which are prevented by the Sherman antitrust law; some things may be done by the members of all the producing classes of our country that we would wish to prevent, and which are prevented by the Sherman antitrust law; but as to the classes named in this proviso, immunity is given both for the things we do not care to prevent and for the things that ought to be prevented.

Let me ask you, sir, how will this present itself to the multitude of our citizens not included in these exempted classes? Where will be the willingness to abide by the law; where will be the confidence in the justice of the law; where will be the sense of obligation to the law because it is law on the part of these multitudes of American citizens who find themselves constrained against doing what is necessary for the protection of their livelihood and other classes permitted to violate the law for the same purpose? How can we fail to create a sense of injustice; how can we fail to create opposition to the law, to create a feeling that it is right for men themselves to assert and to exercise the same freedom that is given to their neighbors?

I can conceive of no more injurious blow to this great statute—for it is a great statute, which has declared the rule of freedom in trade, the rule of free competition as the rule of conduct for all people for the past 23 years—I can conceive of no more fatal blow to the enforcement of that statute than a law which exempts approximately half the people of the United States from responsibility for obedience to it; for you can not enforce a law, sir, which is not an equal law for all the people of our land; you can not get juries to indict and to convict one man for doing what is permitted to his neighbor under the same law. You can restate your principle, you can make a different law, but it should be stated, so that whatever act violates the principle embodied in the law shall be illegal. If we attempt to retain the principle, to retain the declaration of illegality, and exempt a part of our people from responsibility for obeying the law, we bring the law into necessary contempt and make it impossible to enforce it; and, Mr. President, it is not this law alone but it is all law. We have a responsibility, not to the laboring man alone, not to the farmer alone; we have a responsibility to the peace and order of our country. We, the makers of law for a hundred million people, have a responsibility to maintain that respect for law, that reverence for law, that confidence in the justice of our country which was handed down by our predecessors. Because I believe that to enact these exemptions would be to sap the foundations of that confidence in the justice and impartiality of our law, I am opposed to the exemptions and am in favor of the motion to strike out made by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER].

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I have listened to this debate with a great deal of interest and have derived much instruction from it. Whatever the result of the motion under consideration may be, the discussion has certainly been most beneficial, because it has served, among other things, to again focus public attention upon the great question which must be the subject of legislation by this Congress. It brings again conspicuously to the front another phase of one of the most prominent, if not the most celebrated, statutes ever enacted by this body.

I took occasion during last month to make it the subject of discussion from another standpoint, and what I said then and the conclusions which I then drew have been emphasized in this debate to such an extent that I indulge the hope that this law will be so amended as to become an efficient weapon in the hands both of the courts and of the executive departments for the correction of the great industrial evils and abuses of the day.

The Senator from New York [Mr. ROOT] has very truly said that the purpose of this statute was to prescribe a rule of universal application from which no class or condition was excepted, with freedom of trade as its cardinal principle and purpose. He has also, in my opinion, conclusively demonstrated the injury that will be inflicted upon the law itself, and perhaps upon public opinion, by legislation which limits the operation of that statute to a portion only of the people. I fully concur in that conclusion, but possibly for reasons which are to some extent different in their character and in their origin.

I fully agree, too, Mr. President, that the great conserving force of society, without which all statutes are practically innocuous, is a healthy and powerful public opinion, without which laws themselves are of no importance, because opposed to the general trend of popular judgment.

Mr. President, there is, however, a cause for all these things, and there is a reason why this bill comes to us with a proposal to limit the application of one of these appropriations in a certain direction. I think it can be found in the fact that this law as administered has not been a law of universal application. I believe that as individual controversies have arisen demanding adjudication and receiving it through the construction of a statute which is so plain that he who runs may read, it has long been so administered as to have been justly condemned by public opinion because not of universal application, for there have been distinctions declared, first here and then there, limiting and controlling the practical application of the law to individual cases, until the time arrived when a word was written into the statute that, to my mind, has done it far more injury in public estimation than all such amendments as the one which is now under consideration can inflict upon it. Because it has been so construed, because it has so been applied, because it has thereby become a rule of application to be determined in each individual case, instead of a law of universal application, it is not strange that those to whom it has been generally applied should feel justified in coming to the Congress of the United States and demanding that, since certain industries have been exempted from the operation of this law by judicial construction, others should be exempted from its operation by legislative enactment; and the one seems to me to be quite as consistent, certainly as lawful, as the other. In other words, the precedents which have been set by the courts in the application of this statute to existing conditions are being availed of, and their injustice has been made the basis of asking exceptions to be prescribed in other directions.

But I contended the other day, Mr President, as I shall always assert, that where a statute is perfectly plain, needing no construction whatever for the purpose of determining what it means, no construction can be made of it without doing violence to its purposes and its objects, and that when its construction is carried to the extent of interpolation a power is exercised which can not be justified; a power which can only be exercised by the legislative authority proceeding along constitutional lines and by constitutional methods. So believing, it is impossible, Mr President, for me to be consistent without also denying the right of Congress, as the distinguished Senator from New York has so clearly pointed out, of leaving the law in its pristine condition and at the same time by collateral legislation seeking to make its provisions innocuous and inoperative as to certain classes of the people.

I have no doubt in the world, Mr President, that when this statute was enacted everyone was justified in drawing the conclusion that it did not and was not designed to comprise within its terms the organizations which are interested in this proviso; and yet, to my mind, it is somewhat remarkable that this is so, for its language admits of no other than the interpretation which the courts have applied to it; and however much we may disagree with judicial opinions, however much we may protest against their injustice, they are binding upon us all, the high and the low, the rich and the poor, until they shall have been changed by succeeding opinions or by properly enacted legislation. It is therefore the law, as judicially construed, that these organizations are included within the phraseology of the antitrust act, in consequence of which indirect attempts to exempt them seem to me to be almost beyond the power of Congress.

I welcomed the proposed amendment of the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. GRONNA] notwithstanding my repugnance to legislation of that character, by which I mean legislation foreign to the purpose of a bill but introduced within the body of it as a so-called rider. I regretted to see any point of order raised against it, for however much it may conflict with the scientific principles of legislation it is something that is frequently done in Congress, there being nothing in the Constitution to limit legislation to the title of a measure or a bill. I believe that that amendment would have been a solution of this entire difficulty; in addition to which it would have comprised a legislative statement of what the law was intended to have been and of what, in my judgment, it ought to be; but that we can not consider now, although we should consider and enact it, in my judgment, before this session adjourns or at the next session, if possible.

Mr. President, this proviso, if I may call it thus, is one which seems to me to be subject to all the criticisms that have been made against it or to most of them at least. It was well said by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE] that one of its vices consisted in the fact that it created exemptions from the general operation of a statute. A fair analogy would be to suppose that in the agricultural appropriation bill some appropriation of a general character should be accompanied by a provision exempting the State of Colorado or of Louisiana or of New York from its operations. It seeks, in other words, to place an exemption or a limitation by exemption from the operation of a statute in favor of a particular class, thereby accomplishing by indirection what may not be accomplished directly. Apart from its inherent objectionable character, such a proviso may constitute a precedent that will be productive of a great deal of future mischief.

The trouble with a precedent that is wrong is the evil it subsequently produces, because it is followed and followed again, until by custom it becomes an established rule of authority or principle of conduct; and if we can write an exception of this sort in the law then we can write exceptions exempting other classes or portions of other classes from the operation of a general law with the same impunity and with the added force given to it by our action on this occasion. If we can write this exemption into the law we can write others as well.

Now, let us see. Suppose that, instead of reading as it does, this exemption should provide "that no part of this money shall be expended in the prosecution of the International Harvester Co.," or some other of the great combinations of the country; suppose it should provide that all of this money should be used exclusively for the prosecution of violations of the statute by labor and farming organizations, and for none others. A cry of protest would go up at once from one end of this country to the other against making such exemptions in the law, and justly so, because they would be opposed to every principle of equity and of justice. In what respect does the proposed one differ in principle?

We on this side of the Chamber may not always be in the majority. A party may come into power which may displace both of those which at present occupy the seats in this Chamber; it may represent a conservative condition consequent upon the swinging of the pendulum to the other extreme. Can the agencies and the enginery of this law be utilized for the purpose of carrying out and effectuating the purposes which they represent? Why not? Can they not do what we are doing? Shall we supply them with a precedent, Mr. President, which will justify, at least by imitation, repetitions of the same vicious principle in legislation? We may condemn it; we ought to condemn it; we would condemn it; but, notwithstanding that fact, we would be justly charged with having begun this course of legislation by the enactment of the measure now being considered.

Those, Mr. President, who know anything about me generally complain that I am rather too radical than otherwise in my views upon political, industrial, and economic questions. It is not necessary, therefore, for me to express any opinions upon existing industrial and economic conditions in this connection, except to say that I am ready to go as far as any man, consistently with my oath of office, in making organizations of men and women—and I believe that women have the same rights politically, and ought to have them, as men in this country of universal suffrage—I am ready to go as far as anyone in protecting them in every legitimate purpose for which organization can be utilized, but I speak in their behalf when I say here and now that, in my judgment, the incorporation of a measure like this in its reactionary effect and in the possible consequences which it may have upon the future, far outweighs any immediate benefit or advantage that can be obtained by virtue of it.

I do not believe that such an organization, designed to accomplish a lawful purpose, can or ought to be within the purview of the Sherman Act; but under the law as it has been construed these organizations, although lawful per se, are within the purview of the statute. They are not exempt from the operations of the law, and it is unwise to exempt them by processes like this. It should be done by direct legislation upon the subject.

There are some criticisms of the phraseology of the proposed statute to which I wish to refer for a moment. To my mind there is nothing ambiguous about either of the provisos. Their meaning is clear. They evidently were very carefully drawn. I think it has been stated in debate that they have been in bills of similar character heretofore. I know we enacted such a measure at the last Congress without any question arising, in this Chamber at least, so far as I am able to remember, with reference to either of these provisos. Speaking for myself, I believe the measure passed during the closing hours of the last session of Congress, at a time when it was difficult, if not impossible, to give close and careful attention to its phraseology.

The first proviso is—

> That no part of this money shall be spent in the prosecution of any organization or individual for entering into any combination or agreement having in view the increasing of wages, shortening of hours, or bettering the conditions of labor, or for any act done in furtherance thereof not in itself unlawful.

Who is to determine the question of the lawfulness or unlawfulness of a given act? If you exclude it from the domain of judicial controversy, if it can not be the subject of investigation in the courts, does it not become impossible to determine the illegality or legality of an act or to punish the one and allow the other to go unpunished? Suppose the officers of justice begin a proceeding against a labor union upon the theory, however well founded, that its act is unlawful and the decision of the courts is to the contrary. It seems to me the conclusion is inevitable that the officers of justice have thereby violated this provision. On the other hand, if they fail to prosecute a given case founded on an act which public opinion condemns as unlawful and meriting punishment, they will be justly condemned for failing to perform their duty under their oaths of office. Apart from this resulting embarrassment, all actions which might otherwise come within the purview of the statute, whether lawful or unlawful, are exempt from its operations.

That, to my mind, constitutes perhaps the most serious objection that can be urged against the wording of the proviso. It is quite as though the last clause had been entirely eliminated from the body of the section.

I intended to use a memorandum, which I see I have mislaid, for the purpose of illustrating the proposition that many violations of this antitrust act are committed with absolute impunity by those against whom it unquestionably applies. No proceedings under the statute are so much as commenced against them, to say nothing about their subsequent prosecution. They are given immunity as though there were no restrictions such as are embodied in the Sherman Act, in consequence of which combinations of men feel justified and ought to feel justified in asking for similar immunity through such legislation as is here contemplated.

I have found the document to which I referred, Mr. President, which presents a striking example of the character of conduct which I have just outlined. It is that sort of conduct which is justly creating a public opinion strong enough to justify not only the enactment of legislation of this sort here proposed, but legislation of a far more drastic character.

I hold in my hand part of a newspaper bearing date the 6th of May, 1913, published in the city of Troy, N. Y. I received it from an unknown correspondent this morning, probably sent to me because I am a member of the Senate Finance Committee. It refers to the action of certain manufacturers in the city of Troy consequent upon the pendency of the Underwood bill and comprises, among other things, a circular just issued by these manufacturers to their workmen, which I will read for the information of the Senate.

The circular is dated on the 5th day of May, or day before yesterday:

> The Underwood tariff bill providing a rate of 25 per cent ad valorem on cotton collars, 30 per cent on linen collars and on shirts, will probably pass the House of Representatives without amendment within a very few days. The bill will then go to the Senate, where there is some chance of its being amended.
>
> You can greatly assist in the effort to have this bill amended by writing two letters, one to Hon. JAMES A. O'GORMAN, United States Senator, Washington, D. C., the other to Hon. ELIHU ROOT, United States Senator, Washington, D. C., stating that you depend on this industry for your living and that you do not approve of a rate of duty that will put your work into competition with the cheap labor of Europe and Japan. Urge the Senators to use all their influence to have the rates on collars and shirts raised to 40 per cent ad valorem.
>
> Your letters, when written, may be left at the office for mailing.
>
> Postage paid, I presume.
>
> This is signed by the United Shirt & Collar Co.

Simultaneously with the issuance of this circular to the employees this company cut their wages, the two movements being inaugurated together and having for their common object the intimidation of the Congress of the United States by holding over the heads of its Members the threat of bankruptcy and ruin to favored industries; utilizing the power of employment as a club for compelling those dependent upon these organizations to comply with a command—for such is this circular—and by force of numbers to seek not only to influence but to control the votes of the Senators of the United States from the great State of New York upon the subject of tariff revision.

This article goes on to say that the employees, resenting these tactics, not only refused to obey the mandate of the circular, but would not submit to the reduction of wages so evidently intended for their coercion.

This conduct of the United Shirt Co., Mr. President, is not only a conspiracy in restraint of trade, it is a crime, both at common law and under the statutes. I contend that under the provisions of the Sherman antitrust law the United Shirt & Collar Co. is subject to prosecution and ought to be proceeded against for the issuance of this circular, accompanied by a reduction of wages, in order to make its mandate effectual. If that is not a conspiracy in restraint of trade plus a conspiracy to intimidate national legislators, what is it? And when things of this sort are done with perfect impunity, is it surprising that the laborers of the country should insist upon exemption from the operations of a law designed to be universal, but not so operating because of repeated construction given to it by the Supreme Court of the United States?

Mr. President, this is only the beginning of the campaign that is to be waged through these conspiracies, to be repeated time and again, against the representatives of the people, whereby they are to be intimidated and thwarted from carrying out the pledges they have made to the consumers of this great Republic and which they must recognize and fully perform.

Until such conduct and such tactics are punished, and punished rigorously, they will continue. Until such conduct and such tactics are punished, and punished rigorously, the unions of the country will continue to knock at the doors of Congress and ask for exemptions from the operations of the same statutes, such as are embodied in this particular proviso.

Suppose these employees of the shirt and collar company go upon a strike because of this cut in wages, as they threaten to do. Suppose the unions picket these establishments after a strike is declared. Suppose, as a result of it, violence occurs. They will doubtless be proceeded against at once as combinations in restraint of trade, and which actually engaged in restraining trade. Yet the employer which has driven them to those conditions enjoys immunity through its exemption made in practice, at least, in the application and enforcement of the statute.

Unless these conditions are abandoned, unless they are properly punished, the exemptions here demanded will ultimately be granted, and ought to be granted, in extenso, since if exemptions are to be made for the great and the powerful, either through the construction of a statute needing none, or through the inaction of the properly constituted authorities failing to recognize these infractions and proceeding against them, we must expect—because it is nothing more than just and right—that the oppressed should rebel against the application of the statute to them, armed as they are and always will be with the fact, historic in character and subject to proof at all times from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, that the act was never intended, was never designed, to apply to combinations such as those to which they belong.

Mr. President, let us act as we should with reference to this particular measure. Let us see to it that the law is enforced as written and against all men until it is changed. I think it was President Grant who said that the best method of relieving a people of the effects of a bad law is to rigorously and unsparingly enforce it. It is better, in other words, so far as ultimate results are concerned, that no exceptions be made in the application of a statute to existing conditions. If it embodies a vicious principle public opinion will ultimately become sufficiently aroused to sweep it aside. Such a course is far preferable to one which makes exceptions and exemptions which necessarily create class conditions in the country.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, as a member of the Committee on Appropriations, I desire to say a few words with respect to the provision of the bill, in the interest of getting the measure passed.

We have had a very learned discussion upon the antitrust law. We have heard a great many things stated with respect to this proviso which I do not think the language warrants, and I do not think the inferences drawn therefrom have any foundation whatever. Senators have proceeded to construct a man of straw and then to tear him to pieces. In this discussion they have lost sight of one important fact.

Senators have been discussing this proposition as if there were no moneys in the United States Treasury for the prosecution of persons guilty of violation of law except that which is appropriated by this section. That is not true. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are appropriated in the general appropriation bill for the prosecution of every offense under the laws of the United States. On the preceding page of this bill there is an appropriation of $475,000 to be expended in the detection and prosecution of crimes under the direction of the Attorney General. Large appropriations are also made for the regular force of the Attorney General's office and for district attorneys throughout the country. Consequently, when they try to limit this section simply to saying that certain persons will not be or could not be prosecuted, it seems to me it is a violation of the very language that is contained in the section.

In the first place, nearly every Senator who has spoken has said that he is in favor of exempting these labor organizations and farmers' combinations from the operations of the Sherman Antitrust Act, but that he does not wish to do it indirectly. In other words, if they were exemptions, it would simply carry out and further Senators' own ideas as to what the law should be, namely, that a combination having in view the increasing of wages of laborers and an association of farmers for the obtaining of fair and reasonable prices for their products should not of themselves alone constitute a violation of any law. I can not understand how Senators can consistently say they are in favor of such organizations being exempted from the operations of the Sherman Act, and yet at the same time say that they do not believe in the passage of a declaration to the same effect as to an appropriation for one year.

What is the provision which is under discussion here? Its language is plain. It reads as follows:

Enforcement of antitrust laws: For the enforcement of antitrust laws, including not exceeding $10,000 for salaries of necessary employees at the seat of government, $300,000: Provided, however, That no part of this money shall be spent in the prosecution of any organization or individual for entering into any combination or agreement having in view the increasing of wages, shortening of hours, or bettering the conditions of labor, or for any act done in furtherance thereof, not in itself unlawful: Provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended for the prosecution of producers of farm products and associations of farmers who cooperate and organize in an effort to and for the purpose to obtain and maintain a fair and reasonable price for their products.

It is an appropriation of $300,000. Suppose Congress wanted to prosecute specially one of the big trusts of the country—the Tobacco Trust, or the Union Pacific Railroad, or any of the combinations that are supposed to be violating the Sherman antitrust law. It would be perfectly proper, in the sundry civil bill, to appropriate $300,000 for that purpose, provided there was no express limitation upon prosecution of other offenders. Other offenders would be prosecuted under the other general appropriations for the prosecution of crime.

That seems to me to have been ignored in the discussion of this question. The theory has been indulged in that this appropriation of $300,000 is all that can be spent in the prosecution of any person guilty of an offense against the Sherman antitrust law; but that is not true. That assumption is not correct.

Suppose an individual wishes to file a complaint against the Tobacco Trust or against some individual of the Tobacco Trust for violation of this law. He can present the same to the United States district attorney, who, free of cost, will prepare the case and prosecute the same to the end. If any person wants to prosecute a labor or farmers' organization, he can do it just as well whether this $300,000 item is in this act or not.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. SHAFROTH. I do.

Mr. WORKS. The Senator from Colorado has stated broadly that there are ample funds otherwise provided for prosecuting every offender under this statute. I should like to ask him if he knows, then, why this specific appropriation of $300,000 is made?

Mr. SHAFROTH. I do not know what guided the person who wrote this particular clause. It may be, as public sentiment has been somewhat aroused by reason of combinations of these great interests, that he wanted a special examination into the books or into the conduct of the persons who were in certain combinations in restraint of trade. It may be that the author of the provision had in mind one particular case. I do not know; I can not tell; but when we consider the fact that these great combinations, by their intricate systems of bookkeeping, can conceal their actions in restraint of trade it will take a large amount of money to bring to light such violations of the law.

That being the case, it is proper, if any have violated the law, to single them out and provide adequate appropriations for their prosecution. It seems to me it is a perfectly proper appropriation. You can not prosecute a combination without having a full investigation.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. SHAFROTH. In just a moment I will yield.

As to labor organizations, you can still prosecute them in the ordinary course at little expense. No intricate examinations are necessary to expose concealed violations. You can bring your action before the district attorney where the act is committed. Consequently this section does not in any manner limit the right or power of any citizen of the United States or of the United States itself, to prosecute any person under the Sherman antitrust law.

I now yield to the Senator from Utah.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, from the statement made by the Senator, I judge that he is of the opinion that this appropriation of $300,000 is made for a particular class of prosecutions.

Mr. SHAFROTH. No; I said I had no idea what was the intention of the person who drew it.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator said it was a proper appropriation, as I understood, and I took it to mean that the department had asked for this appropriation for a certain purpose.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Oh, no; I disclaim any knowledge of that kind. I have no idea whether——

Mr. SMOOT. I wanted to know whether the Senator did have any such idea or any such information.

Mr. SHAFROTH. No, sir; I have none whatever. All I know is that this bill was presented to the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate in this form.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] tells me that the Senator from Colorado said he did not know who drew the provision, who offered it, or why. The amount contained in this item is appropriated upon an estimate of the department, and that is why the appropriation is made. It was estimated for by the department, and a request was made by the department for the appropriation to be used for the prosecution of such cases in the department, but the proviso that was put here was never suggested by the department. That is what I wanted to bring to the Senator's attention.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I do not know whether it was or not. All I know is that it came over from the House with this proviso in it. We talked about the matter in the committee and said that it had been thoroughly discussed in the previous session, and that we ought to put this bill through as nearly as we could in the exact form in which it came from the House.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, the Senator does not mean to intimate that that conclusion was concurred in by all the members of the committee?

Mr. SHAFROTH. Oh, no; I meant by the majority of the committee.

Mr. GALLINGER. There was a very sharp division.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Yes; there was a division; although there was very little discussion with relation to it. It seems to me, from the wording of this provision, that there is nothing in it that can be construed as prohibiting the prosecution, under the Sherman Antitrust Act, of labor organizations or of any other combinations.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Colorado further yield to the Senator from New Hampshire?

Mr. SHAFROTH. Yes, sir.

Mr. GALLINGER. If that be so, Mr. President, what is the object or purpose or meaning of it? Why have it in the statute at all?

Mr. SHAFROTH. Any Senator can take a clause in an appropriation bill and write another clause that will be a little different from it; but if we are going to dispute whether my language or your language shall prevail, we never can agree upon measures.

Here is an amendment which has been presented by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SHERMAN]. That amendment, in my judgment, is of almost identically the same force as the clause which is in the bill. I do not see any distinction. I understood him to say that he himself did not think that the difference was sufficiently great to send the bill back to the House of Representatives for concurrence in it.

Senators seem to forget that the limitation, even if this be considered a limitation, is controlled by the words "not in itself unlawful." That makes the appropriation available for any crime committed in furtherance of the combination. Nearly every Senator has admitted that the Sherman Act ought to be amended by exempting the combinations of laborers and of farmers. If the proviso is simply an expression of the opinion of Congress as to the matter, what harm can arise in expressing it? This provision as it stands, having passed the House and received the approval of the Committee on Appropriations, in my judgment should be approved by the Senate.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I shall add a very few words to what has been said in respect to this provision. The provision is in accordance with a very common practice. Congress has a perfect right, when it makes an appropriation, to limit the uses of the appropriation, and that is all that has been done in this case. In addition to the amounts appropriated for the Department of Justice in all its ramifications of business, the bill proposes to appropriate a specific sum of $300,000 for the enforcement of the antitrust law. In giving this additional sum to the Department of Justice for this specific purpose it provides that it must not be used for prosecutions in certain cases. It is a little extraordinary that almost every Senator who has spoken on this subject has stated that he is opposed to prosecutions in the cases as to which the use of this fund is forbidden. They think that the Sherman antitrust law ought to be amended so as to prevent prosecutions against labor unions and farmers' unions. There are not more than one or two exceptions to that proposition. The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] I do not think expressed himself. I do not know whether he thinks that the labor unions ought to be prosecuted or not. He did not express himself on that point.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me, I have no concealment about it.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I had no idea of that; the Senator is always frank, but he has not expressed himself on the subject.

Mr. GALLINGER. I think if a labor union or a farmers' organization commit a crime against any law they ought to be prosecuted as well as other people and other organizations. That is my view.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. But the Senator has not answered the question. Does he think the law ought to be so framed as to permit labor unions to be prosecuted for a combination?

Mr. GALLINGER. I think the law ought to stand precisely as it is.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. That is exactly what I suspected.

Mr. GALLINGER. I think the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Gompers versus the Buck's Stove & Range Co. specifically declares that principle, and I will before the discussion closes read an extract from that decision which I think covers the case absolutely. I think they have no right to complain of the existing status so far as the courts are concerned.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. The courts have not been complained of to-day by anyone, so far as I have heard. I do not question the soundness of the decision which the court made. But if I thought it was unsound I am too devoted to the law and to law and order, which has been so much commented on by the Senator from New York [Mr. ROOT]—I am too devoted, I say, to the decisions of the courts to come here in rebellion against them, except to legislate to correct them when I think the decisions have settled the law in a manner not promotive of the public welfare.

The law stands to-day—and should be respected to-day—as including the labor unions and the farmers' unions. That is what the Supreme Court has construed the law to mean, and I think that interpretation ought to be respected by the people until Congress changes that law. I am in favor of Congress changing that law. But the Senator from New Hampshire, as I now understand him, does not think Congress ought to change that law, but should make permanent the law as interpreted by the Supreme Court. Perhaps, though I can not state it definitely, the Senator from New York concurs in that same position. I do not know that he stated it distinctly, but he left me under the impression that he occupies that position. I do not think any other Senator who has addressed the Senate on this question has declared in favor of the permanent continuation of the antitrust law as construed by the Supreme Court, making that law include labor unions and farmers' unions.

But while insisting that that law was not according to the purposes and the intent of the legislative body, that it was not intended to include organizations of the farmers and laborers, I say with those two exceptions all the Senators who have spoken have advocated a change in the law. I can understand the logic of the Senator from New Hampshire and the Senator from New York, who desire to strike those two provisos out of the bill. It is because they think the Sherman law ought to be applied to labor unions and to farmers' unions. That is logical; it is clear; but I have not been able, Mr. President, exactly to appreciate the position of Senators who say they do not believe that the law ought to be made applicable to labor unions and farmers' unions and yet want to strike this provision out of the bill.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I yield.

Mr. WORKS. I think I should not allow the statement of the Senator from Virginia to pass as applying to all the Senators except those named, in view of my own convictions with respect to this matter. I do not believe, as I stated before, that the Sherman antitrust law as it stands to-day applies to labor unions or farmers' unions in the ordinary sense of that term and for the legitimate purposes for which they are usually organized. On the other hand, organizations of that kind may form such combinations as are distinctly unlawful, and I am not ready to allow my own language to be so construed as to excuse that sort of a combination. Neither do I think the Senator from Virginia will go to that extent. If the farmers' unions or the labor unions commit unlawful acts within the provisions of the Sherman antitrust law, they should be held responsible just the same as other organizations.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I understand, then, that the Senator from California thinks the Sherman law should stand exactly as it is; that it ought not to be amended, and its enforcement ought not to be mitigated or interfered with.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, if the antitrust law can be so construed as to include labor unions or farmers' unions in the ordinary sense of that term, then it should be amended.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, the Senator from California does not speak with his usual clearness in that reply. He has an "if" to it. If I understood him incorrectly he can correct me, but I understood him in his explanation first made to say that he wanted the antitrust law, sometimes called the Sherman Act, to remain unamended as it is.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I made no such statement.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Then I ask the Senator, does he want to have it amended?

Mr. WORKS. I want to have it amended if it can carry any such construction as some Senators seek to place upon it; but that is not my construction.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. The Senator from California reminds me of a man engaged in a campaign in my State who was asked if he was for a certain measure. He said, "I am for it if it is right, and I am against it if it is wrong." That is all I can gather from the Senator from California by the several explanations of his attitude toward this bill. I do not know now, after his explanation three times made, whether he thinks the Sherman antitrust law ought to stand as it is or whether it ought to be amended or mitigated.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I do not want to be held responsible for the want of understanding of the Senator from Virginia.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. It would be a great responsibility, Mr. President, and one I am sure much greater than the Senator from California could safely undertake to carry. But there are others in the Senate, and I do think some of them have some little power of understanding. I am sure that none of them understand what is the Senator's attitude about the amendment of the Sherman law. I understand English and I can understand a straightforward statement when it is made, but I have not had a clear or straightforward one from the Senator from California. He has evaded this question, and he has not stated, and I believe he is afraid to state, whether he wants the Sherman law to stand as it is or whether he wants to have it amended in any particular. He has not told the Senate, and I ask him now to tell the Senate or admit that he is afraid to tell the Senate.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I do not see any occasion for any feeling with respect to this matter. I am somewhat astonished at the Senator from Virginia. I am not often accused of not having the courage of my convictions, and I am not afraid to express my views upon this or any other legislation, let it be what it may. My views have been clearly stated with respect to this matter, and if the Senator from Virginia does not understand it that is his misfortune.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I again ask the Senator from California the question that I have put to him time and again. He speaks the English tongue, and if he has an opinion upon this subject and is not afraid to express it, I ask him to answer this question: Do you favor leaving the Sherman antitrust law as it is or do you think it ought to be amended or mitigated in its application to labor unions and farmers' unions?

Mr. WORKS. I stated very distinctly, Mr. President, that, as I construe the Sherman antitrust law, it does not need amendment, and I do not believe it should be amended. If it can be properly construed, as some Senators here claim it should be, then I insist that it should be amended. My position is this, and I think any intelligent man can understand it: If the antitrust law can be so construed as to include labor organizations established for the purpose I have already mentioned, then I think it is unjust and should be amended. My own conviction about it is that it does not cover that sort of an organization; and if not, it does not need to be amended.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. There are so many qualifications in the language used by the Senator from California that I think it is fair to say that he has reached the conclusion that the law ought not to be amended in any particular, but that it ought to stay like it is.

Mr. President, I say I am not able to understand the attitude of Senators who think the Sherman antitrust law ought not to apply to labor unions and farmers' unions, who think that that law ought to be amended so as to show clearly that it was not intended to apply and shall not apply to those organizations, and yet know that under the construction of the courts it is now applicable to those organizations can vote against these provisos in the bill.

Now, let us notice those provisos very briefly, for I have occupied a good deal of time in trying with my dull comprehension to take in the profound ideas of the Senator from California. If it took a good deal of my time I could not help it. I am dull, I suppose; but still I plodded and plodded and pounded and pounded until it was beaten into my dull brain. I can now come back and see what this provision is. What is it? There is an appropriation of $300,000 to be used for the enforcement of the antitrust law, but no part of this $300,000 "shall be spent in the prosecution of any organization or individual for entering into any combination or agreement"—now, note for what. This money can not be spent to prosecute any organization or combination of individuals "having in view the increasing of wages."

Now, I ask you, Do you want the laborers of the country who enter into combinations for increasing their wages to be prosecuted under the Sherman law? It is plain and it is simple. If you want the labor unions of this country prosecuted in case they form an organization for the purpose of raising wages, then you ought to vote for the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, can the Senator cite a case where they have ever been prosecuted for attempting to raise their wages?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I do not recall one.

Mr. GALLINGER. No; the Senator can not, and if the Senator lives to be older than I am he will not find one.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I will not, if I can prevent it, for I will put it in the law that it shall not be done.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Virginia——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from New Jersey?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I yield to the Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. HUGHES. I will state to the Senator that if he will call at the Department of Justice, he will obtain the information he desires. I do not recall the names of the cases now, but as I recollect it, up to the time that provision was offered originally, the whole of the criminal prosecutions under the Sherman antitrust law were brought against organizations of labor.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. My impression was that there had been such cases; but I could not name them and I did not undertake to do it.

Mr. GALLINGER. If such things have happened the data ought not to be in the hands of the Attorney General, it ought to be in the court records. I say that no such case has ever been tried.

Mr. HUGHES. The Senator is mistaken. I got the record myself for the purpose of debate on this provision in another body. It was sent to me by the Department of Justice. One of the cases, I remember, was a New Orleans case, the case of some dock laborers who were prosecuted for entering into a combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade because they went on a strike for the purpose of raising their wages or shortening their hours. As to those details my recollection does not serve me.

Mr. NORRIS. If the Senator will allow me, I will state that that is the case in Fifty-fourth Federal Reporter, page 994—the case of the United States against the Workingmen's Amalgamated Council of New Orleans.

Mr. HUGHES. I hope the Senator from New Hampshire is now satisfied.

Mr. GALLINGER. But the Senator from New Hampshire is not satisfied.

Mr. HUGHES. I trust the Senator will be.

Mr. GALLINGER. Was not that a case where a labor union undertook to prevent non-labor-union men from getting employment, and did not the court decide that they had no right to do that thing?

Mr. HUGHES. If the Senator from Virginia will permit me——

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. HUGHES. I will state that in the decision of the court in the Danbury hatters' case the court laid down the doctrine that the provision of this law is broader than the provision of the common law with reference to combinations in restraint of trade, and that actions and conduct such as would have been permitted at common law are prohibited by this act. Yet the common law, I will say to the Senator, in his own State and in every State where the common law obtains, such a combination or agreement between two or more persons is a conspiracy and a crime, and wherever the statute has not intervened to change the common law in that respect it is the law of the land to-day.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator rapidly got away from that famous New Orleans case. I repeat that no such case has ever been tried and adjudicated in the courts of the United States where the contention has been that the laborers have not a right to combine to increase their wages.

Mr. HUGHES. I think if the Senator will look at the case which the Senator from Nebraska has given us the citation of, he will find that it is the case I was referring to, and that this prosecution was brought because there was a combination, agreement, and conspiracy to quit work simultaneously.

Mr. NELSON. If the Senator from Virginia will allow me——

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I yield to the Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. NELSON. The case referred to, the United States versus The Workingmen's Amalgamated Council of New Orleans, was not a criminal prosecution. There was no indictment. It was simply a suit to restrain the defendant, a combination of workingmen, from interfering with interstate and foreign commerce in violation of the antitrust law. It was simply a case to restrain them from interfering with other people who wanted to engage in that work. It was no criminal prosecution.

Mr. HUGHES. I will say to the Senator that could not have been the case to which I referred, because according to the information given to me by the Department of Justice it was a criminal prosecution. I called on the department myself when the same statement was made in another body, and they informed me that it was a criminal prosecution.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, according to the Senator from New Hampshire——

Mr. NORRIS. Will the Senator yield to me just a moment?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Certainly.

Mr. NORRIS. It may be that I misled the Senator from New Jersey. I understood the question was whether it was a case commenced by the Government. I did not intend to say that the case I cited was a criminal case. The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. NELSON] has given it correctly. It was to settle a case commenced, however, by the United States Government against this association of organized labor.

Mr. HUGHES. If the Senator from Virginia will permit me, I will state that I have had my recollection refreshed as to another case, the case against certain tobacco men in the State of Kentucky, falling under the second proviso in the statute. They were not only indicted, but convicted, and owing to the standing of the men, as the court put it, they were simply fined, although it was the intention to send them to jail.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I was under the impression, and I still am, that there have been numerous cases against farmers and against labor organizations under this law. But the Senator from New Hampshire insists that there have been none. If there have been none, then we may reasonably conclude there will be no occasion for any, and no harm whatever will result by saying that the department shall not use this money to prosecute them.

Mr. GALLINGER. If the Senator will permit me, no harm would be done if we inserted the Ten Commandments in this law. It would not do a bit of harm and it might do some people good; but it is unnecessary.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. It would not be at all appropriate or germane, and would perhaps be somewhat sacrilegious. It would be objectionable on many scores. But surely if there are to be no violations of this law by labor unions and farmers' unions no harm will result by incorporating this provision that the money shall not be used to prosecute them.

But, Mr. President, the question is raised that they can be prosecuted. It is contended by Senators on the floor in the present debate that they are amenable to the provisions of this law and might be prosecuted for the very things that are mentioned here and provided against. The question up to each Senator is, Does he want to have the farmers' unions and labor unions prosecuted for doing the things that are mentioned in this proposed statute? I do not think they ought to be prosecuted in case they do these things.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Iowa?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I do.

Mr. CUMMINS. If the Senator from Virginia believes what he has just said, and I have no doubt he does, why does he not attach this proviso to the entire appropriation for the maintenance of the Department of Justice, so that no moneys appropriated out of the Treasury of the United States can be used for any such purposes?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I can answer that much more easily than my friend the Senator from California was able to answer the question propounded to him. I would rather have half a loaf than no bread at all. I do not believe it is practicable at this time and in this bill to get any better measure of relief than the bill contains as it came to us from the House. If I thought I could get a fuller measure of relief I would take the whole loaf. I am in favor of making the law of this land so that the Sherman antitrust law shall not be made applicable to labor unions or farmers' unions. That is where I stand.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Virginia yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I do.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I should like to ask the Senator from Virginia whether in his judgment any labor union or farmers' organization which actually violates the antitrust law may be prosecuted, notwithstanding the limitation upon this appropriation of $300,000?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Technically, no doubt it can be done; but with this bill in the face of the Department of Justice it will not be done unless there is some act unlawful in itself; and if there is an act unlawful in itself they can not only be prosecuted outside of this law but with this $300,000.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Does the Senator from Virginia think that this constitutes a direction to the Attorney General not to prosecute such cases?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I do not go that far, but I say it shows so distinctly a purpose on the part of Congress that it shall not be done that I do not believe it will be done unless the acts complained of are unlawful in themselves.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Does the Senator think that the passage of this proviso is declaratory of the intention on the part of Congress that these organizations should not be prosecuted if they actually do violate the antitrust act?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I think it goes this far, that Congress thinks, and the Department of Justice ought to think, that there is an abundant field for their efforts against the enormous violations of law that are being perpetrated by the combinations of capital in this country to occupy their time and talent and consume this $300,000, and they can devote themselves to that enormous work before they get down to quibbling about supposed violations of this law by the labor unions and the farmers' unions. It distinctly shows a purpose on the part of Congress to direct the attention of the department to plain and big violations of the law, and indicates a desire that they shall forego pursuing these labor organizations and farmer organizations, and it indicates that it should not be done at all unless there is some act unlawful in itself.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, I am afraid the Senator from Virginia, in his answer to my question, is doing precisely what he accused the Senator from California [Mr. WORKS] of doing a moment ago—not giving a very straight answer to the question which I asked.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I will not accuse the Senator from Utah of any lack of understanding, but I regret I did not make myself clear, and I will now endeavor to do so.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I do not charge the Senator from Virginia with any lack of understanding; I think he does understand the question I put; but what I say is that his answer is not quite a categorical answer to the question I put. Let me repeat it. Is the position of the Senator from Virginia that by this proviso, which limits the appropriation of $300,000, Congress thereby declares its intention that labor organizations and farmers' organizations which actually do violate the antitrust law shall not be prosecuted?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. This proposed amendment does not take away from the Department of Justice the power to prosecute the labor organizations and farmers' unions with the other funds and with the regular staff of the department if violations of the law occur. They have a perfect right to do it, and it is their duty to do it; but I say that when the Department of Justice see that the chief objective point of Congress is combinations of capital, I do not think it is likely that they will bestow much care or attention on these minor organizations until they suppress the great combinations of capital. I do not say that it is an instruction to the Attorney General; it is not. I do not say it takes away from him his power, for it does not. It simply forbids him to use this particular money and leaves him free to use any other money appropriated for the Department of Justice for the purpose of prosecuting acts which he considers in violation of the antitrust law.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. And is not intended to constrain him in any other way.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. It is intended simply to express the opinion of Congress that the great point, and the point that calls for its special consideration and its specific appropriation, is the combinations of capital, but it does not intend to take away from him any power that he has under any other law of this country.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Let me ask the Senator another question, if he will permit me. Does the Senator himself think that if a labor organization or a farmers' organization actually violates the terms of the antitrust act, such an organization ought to be prosecuted?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I do, except in so far as this bill changes the law. This bill is intended to change the law so far as the use of this appropriation is concerned; but as to any other appropriation it is the duty of the Attorney General to prosecute all violations of law.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Then, does the Senator think that the Attorney General ought to utilize other appropriations to prosecute such cases as I have described?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I think he ought; but he ought to use a discriminating judgment and first go after the most guilty and the big fish before he goes to catching minnows.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. But the Senator thinks he ought to go after them all?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I do, for every violation of law. He has sworn to do that; but he ought, in carrying that out, to take them in the order of their evil doing, and if he will do that he will get as old as Methuselah before he gets through with the big ones and reaches the minnows.

The provision is:

That no part of this money shall be spent in the prosecution of any organization or individual for entering into any combination or agreement having in view the increasing of wages—

If you do not want them prosecuted for doing that, you ought to vote against the amendment and vote for this bill. It will not do to say that you are going to wait until the Sherman law is amended. If you want to stop these prosecutions for these particular things, it seems logical for you to stand by this bill. If a combination is made for the purpose of "shortening of hours or bettering the conditions of labor, or for any act done in furtherance thereof, not in itself unlawful," they are to be exempted from prosecution. Do you want them prosecuted when they have not done any act in itself unlawful, simply because they are getting together and trying to lessen the hours of labor and to better their condition in life? If you want to say to labor unions, "You shall not combine for the purpose of lessening the hours of labor and bettering your condition in life," if you say you are not willing for them to do that, even though they do nothing unlawful in itself, then you ought to vote for the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire.

I want them to have the privilege to lessen the hours of labor and to better their condition in life, provided they do not do an unlawful act. Is that any great generosity? Do you want to deny that to these men, on whom more depends than on all the capital in the world? You may destroy the capital, and labor will make more capital; but if you destroy the labor your capital will never be added to nor will it be of any value.

I say I want these laboring men to have the privilege, under the law, of combining in organizations for the purpose of lessening their hours of labor and for the purpose of bettering their condition in life, provided they do not do anything unlawful in itself. I want them to have that privilege; and for that reason I shall vote against the amendment offered by the Senator from New Hampshire and shall vote for the bill as it came from the other House.

The Senator from New York [Mr. ROOT] thinks this proviso will interfere with law and order. All the sophistry, all the ingenuity, and all the ability of the learned Senator from New York and of the other learned Senators who have engaged in this debate will never convince the people of this country that law and order will be interfered with by doing justice to the laborers and the farmers of the United States. If you want disorder and lawlessness, treat them with injustice; deny them a fair and equal opportunity in the battle of life. Then you may have some disorder. I hope they will submit to any law that is passed, and I will go further and say I believe they will; but I say the tendency to disorder comes from the unjust and cruel exactions of the laws of the country.

The Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] read from some newspaper and showed that the combinations of capital were being used so unjustly, so harshly, so violently, and so in violation of the antitrust laws as to strike terror among the laborers in some shirt factory, I believe it was. Yet, after showing that the combinations of capital were destroying human rights and trampling on human life, he winds up his speech by saying that we must not allow these poor laborers—who have not got three days' ration ahead—to combine without doing anything unlawful and to combine peacefully and lawfully to get some redress from the tyranny and the cruelty practiced upon them.

So far as I am concerned, Mr. President, I want to give them the right to combine and the right to protect themselves from the tyranny and the cruelty of such capitalists as those in control of the shirt factory the Senator alluded to; and I think the Department of Justice will have ample occupation if it will devote its energies first to the punishment of these aggregations of capital which have been so well described by the Senator from Colorado. I say surely the laws should protect them from these cruelties and discriminations and that violence, and ought, at least, to permit them, so long as they do not violate the law by doing any act in itself unlawful, to combine for self-protection against such cruelty as that.

I think, Mr. President, that the law and order of this country is more in danger from the unjust encroachments of capital than it is from the unjust acts of the laboring man. He has shown a great deal of forbearance; he has not always been blameless—and who of us has been blameless at all times? But, I say, we must treat the laborers and the farmers of this country justly and generously if we want them to respect the law and to observe order in our country.

Mr. President, this bill came from the other House as a completed piece of legislation enacted at the last session of Congress. On account of these two provisos it was then vetoed by the President. When it came to a vote in the House the vote was 264 for it—264 votes for these particular specific provisos. They were the only points in issue. There were 264 votes against 48. There were only 48 votes against these provisos in the other House. The majority of the Republicans in the House of Representatives voted for these provisions. Their party associates in the Senate will have to go on record a little later, and I hope that there will be as much of human kindness, of generosity, of fairness, and of justice to these laboring men shown by their votes as was shown by the votes of the Republicans in the other House.

I believe, Mr. President, that until the Sherman law can be amended as I want it amended, and as I will vote to amend it, this is the best provision we can make; it is the only legislation practicable now, and I sincerely hope that the Senators on both sides of the Chamber—and I do not want to make any political argument or any political point; I have no doubt every Senator will vote according to his convictions, as he ought to do, and, if he does not think this is right, of course he will not vote for it—I say, Mr. President, I hope it will be the pleasure of the Republicans of the Senate, as well as of the Democrats of the Senate, to vote down all amendments offered to this provision and to pass the bill with these two provisos in it, thus doing justice to the laboring men and to the farmers, just as the bill came to us from the other House. If they will do that, in a very few days the bill will be a law and the laboring men and the farmers will have reasonable protection, if not full and adequate protection, until the Sherman law can be amended.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I seem to have said something, innocently and unintentionally, that gave offense to the Senator from Virginia. If I did so, it was not intended, and I desire to enter my apology if anything I said could have been so construed.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, I desire to say only a few words with reference to this question. It does not seem to me that the history of the antitrust law is of any particular consequence in this discussion.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Will the Senator from Utah yield to me for a moment?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Virginia?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Certainly.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I was diverted and did not hear fully what the Senator from California [Mr. WORKS] said, but I am informed of what he said, and I want to assure him, and to assure the Senate, that while my earnestness of manner might lead to the impression that I had some feeling about this matter, I had none at all. I had no sort of idea that the Senator had said anything with any intention of wounding me in any sense, for he did not, and I certainly did not intend to wound him in any sense. I want that to be clearly understood, for my manner is sometimes so earnest that I am misunderstood.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I am glad to yield for these peaceful and delightful amenities.

I was just saying when the Senator from Virginia interrupted me that it did not seem to me that the history of the Sherman Antitrust Act, or, rather, the history which led up to the passage of that act, is of any particular consequence in this discussion. Some Senators have insisted that it was the intention of Congress in passing that act to exempt labor organizations and farmers' organizations from its operation. I do not think it was. The situation at that time was that the bill was introduced by Senator Sherman, and in the course of the discussion of it an amendment was proposed which in terms excepted these organizations from the operation of the law.

The day after that amendment was introduced it was passed without any particular debate upon it. That was while the bill was pending as in Committee of the Whole. Other amendments were adopted. Finally, when the bill was reported to the Senate it had grown, as I remember, from an original proposition of 3 sections to one of 17 sections. A great many of the amendments which had been made were very strongly antagonized. In the discussion which ensued in the Senate itself they were again objected to, and among the amendments which were objected to, and quite strenuously objected to, was this particular one exempting labor organizations and farmers' organizations from the effect of the bill. As a matter of fact, that bill was never voted upon in the Senate at all. Therefore the amendment which had been put upon the bill as in Committee of the Whole never was adopted in the Senate, but pending the disposition of the bill in the Senate it was referred to the Judiciary Committee, it having originally come from the Finance Committee of the Senate, with directions to the Judiciary Committee to report within 20 days. Within that time a report was made, which proposed in place of the bill which had been referred to the Judiciary Committee a substitute which was, I believe, in the precise words in which the Sherman Antitrust Act now appears in the statutes. In the meantime the proposition to exempt labor unions and farmers' unions had entirely dropped out of consideration. It does not appear to have been suggested any more. The bill was drawn in such comprehensive terms and the law itself was passed in such comprehensive terms that it seems to me no one can doubt that it includes labor organizations and farmers' organizations within its terms, precisely as it includes other organizations and individuals. The language is as comprehensive as it is possible for language to be. Every contract or combination in the form of a trust or otherwise, or conspiracy in restrain of trade, is declared to be illegal.

It would make no difference what the secret intention of some particular Senator might have been or what the secret view of some particular Senator might have been as to the construction of that language; indeed, it would make no difference what the intention or the view of every Senator and of every Member of the other House might have been with reference to the construction of the language. The language speaks for itself. We do not make laws by what we intend to do, but we make laws by what we actually put into the statute. If the rule were otherwise, there would be no certainty in the law. We must not only intend to declare a particular thing, but we must actually declare in specific words what we mean in order that the law may carry out our intentions.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. REED. Does the Senator from Utah mean to make the statement so broad as to say that in construing a law a court does not look at the legislative intent at all?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Oh, no. I have not intimated any such thing. The court always looks to the legislative intent, but it gathers the legislative intent from the language of the statute, unless the language is of doubtful meaning.

Mr. REED. Just one further question. Does it not gather the legislative intent also from the circumstances under which the statute was passed——

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Undoubtedly it may——

Mr. REED. And from the wrongs it was designed to remedy?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The court may consider the circumstances under which the legislation was passed, the mischief which was to be remedied, and the history which led up to the passage of the law. All of those things may be considered. Undoubtedly that is so; but the court has no business to consider what was the secret intent of the legislature in passing a law unless that intent is expressed in the language of the act. So that I say it makes no difference what assurances might have been given by individual members of this body or of the other body to labor organizations as to what was meant by this law; the law must speak for itself; and I for one have not the slightest doubt that the interpretation which has been put upon it by the various courts of the country has been a correct interpretation. It was construed within a year or two after its adoption as applying to labor organizations, and it has been continuously so interpreted by the district courts, by the circuit courts, by the circuit courts of appeal, and by the Supreme Court of the United States. So that, as it seems to me, there can be no longer any doubt that the Sherman antitrust law applies to labor organizations and to farmers' organizations just as it applies to other organizations. I do not mean by that to say——

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. In a moment. I do not mean by that to say that an organization of labor is itself a violation of that law, because it is not. I only mean to say that when these organizations, lawful in themselves, having a perfect right to organize for the purpose of increasing wages, of bringing about a better condition of labor, and all that sort of thing, do things which are in violation of the antitrust law, then they are subject to its provisions the same as other organizations that may do things which are opposed to the law are subject to it. I now yield to the Senator.

Mr. WORKS. The Senator has just answered the very question that I was going to put to him—whether a mere organization was in itself a violation of the law or whether it was some act done by that organization in restraint of trade?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Certainly the latter only, Mr. President.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President——

Mr. NORRIS. Will the Senator yield there for a question?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I yield first to the Senator from Iowa.

Mr. CUMMINS. I should like to ask the Senator from Utah to be entirely explicit on this point, as I have no doubt he has considered it: A combination of manufacturers—we will say of manufacturers of iron and steel—brought together for the express purpose of increasing the price of the product which the various members manufacture and sell would be an illegal combination, would it not, even though it never had attempted to increase the price? It could be proceeded against by the Government before it had entered upon the business for which it was created, could it not?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. If it had actually entered into an agreement which, if carried out, would amount to a restraint of trade, it would be an illegal agreement.

Mr. CUMMINS. I am asking the Senator from Utah whether, in his opinion, that would not be an illegal agreement because it would be an agreement in restraint of trade and commerce?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I think it would.

Mr. CUMMINS. Now, what is the difference between an agreement of that kind and an agreement between workingmen having for its object the increase of their wages?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The essential difference, as it appeals to me, is that wages are not a matter of commerce.

Mr. CUMMINS. Precisely; it is not a matter of trade; and that is the reason that when the bill came from the Judiciary Committee using the phrase "in restraint of trade," the amendment proposed by the then distinguished Senator from Mississippi, Mr. George, was not offered to the bill. The bill as it was originally offered by the then Senator from Ohio, Mr. Sherman, in its three sections—and it had but three sections—contained a prohibition, not against the restraint of trade, but against the suppression of competition; and it was well understood that a prohibition against the interference with competition would apply to an agreement among laboring men that had for its object the increase of wages; but when that was changed to the phrase now in the statute, I think most of the men who were concerned in it honestly believed that it would not apply to a combination of men having for their object the increase of wages. I hope the Senator from Utah will have gathered that conclusion from the history of the legislation.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, I think the confusion under which some people have labored—at least they have so labored in my judgment—arises from not distinguishing between a combination to increase wages per se and a combination to do something else. A body of workingmen no doubt have a right to enter into an agreement or to enter into a combination or to organize for the purpose of increasing their wages or bettering their condition, and, in so far as the agreement is for that purpose, it is not subject to the provisions of the antitrust law; but that same body of men may restrain trade by doing something else. If their combination indirectly has the effect of operating in restraint of trade, still it is not subject to the provisions of the antitrust law, but if several of these organizations, legitimately gotten together for these legitimate purposes, should afterwards combine for the purpose of restraining trade among the States they would be subject to prosecution under this law, precisely as would anybody else. The thing which the Sherman antitrust law is aimed at is not capital; it is not labor; it is not farmers' organizations. The thing which the Sherman antitrust law is aimed at is the restraint of trade. The restraint of trade among the several States of the Union is regarded as an evil which ought to be punished by law, and it is no less an evil if brought about by a number of organizations of workingmen than if done by a number of organizations of capital.

We are not punishing under the antitrust law capitalists because they are capitalists, or because they are engaged in business to make money out of business, or to increase their profits in their business; but we are punishing them because they restrain trade. So, in the same way, we do not undertake to punish organizations of laborers because they are organizations of laborers, or because they are undertaking to increase their wages or to better their conditions, but only when and only because they engage in such combinations and conspiracies, if they ever do, as to result in restraint of trade. Then it is just as much a violation of the Serman Antitrust Act as if it were done by anybody else.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Yes; I yield to the Senator.

Mr. STONE. The Senator speaks of industrial controversies being in restraint of trade. If any act done by a manufacturing corporation, a mining corporation, a transportation corporation, or by anybody else, is done to restrain or to interfere with interstate commerce, I can understand how an act of that kind might be made amenable to the antitrust law, and forbidden by judicial inhibition in the form of injunction or some other form.

But take the condition prevailing to-day at Paterson, N. J. There is a concrete case. I know very little about it. I have no definite information to warrant me in expressing an opinion as to the merits or demerits of the contention upon the one side or the other. But here is a fierce controversy between employers in silk manufacture and the men and women whom they engage to carry on that industry. It concerns wages; it concerns hours of work; it concerns labor conditions. The working men and women may be in the wrong. As to that I do not express an opinion. The manufacturers say they are. I know not. But is that a movement in restraint of trade that would come under the antitrust laws? Can the Federal court issue a mandatory injunction against these people and command them to disperse and cease the efforts they are making?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. If I understand the statement made by the Senator from Missouri, I should say certainly not. A body of workingmen, whether they are in a labor organization or outside of a labor organization, have a perfect right to quit work. They have a right to quit work for the purpose of bringing about an increase in their wages. They have a perfect right to induce other people to quit work to bring about the same result. If their quitting work, and if their inducing other people to quit work, has the effect of curtailing trade, still it is not a combination, or an agreement, or a conspiracy in restraint of trade, because it only effects that result indirectly. But if they enter into a combination for the purpose of preventing trade among the States, so far as the antitrust act is concerned, if that is their purpose and they enter into arrangements in such a way as to be reasonably calculated to effect that purpose, that would amount to a restraint of trade.

Mr. STONE. The Senator is just as nebulous and indefinite and impossible of understanding as all others are when they undertake to say just what they mean by labor organizations that are fighting for better terms and conditions being in restraint of trade.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I think perhaps either the mind of the Senator from Missouri or my own mind is in a nebulous condition; but there might be a difference of opinion as to which mind it is.

Mr. STONE. Then it does not make much difference.

Mr. CUMMINS. I am very sure the mind of the Senator from Utah is not in a nebulous condition, because I am about to appeal to him, believing it to be very clear. He has just reached the very point that gives rise to all this trouble. Every man who knows anything about this controversy knows that this provision is intended to prevent prosecutions for what is known as the secondary boycott. I am one of those who do not believe that a secondary boycott is within the terms of the antitrust law, notwithstanding the decisions of the courts upon that subject.

But I desire to put this question to the Senator. He has said that laboring men may meet together and combine, or in concert may leave their employment, in order to coerce their employer to pay more wages. I agree with the Senator about that; and, so far as I know, the courts of the country have not declared that such an agreement is a violation of the law.

Suppose that is unsuccessful; and, to put a concrete case, and one that takes us at once into interstate commerce, suppose the employees of the American Sugar Refining Co. were to leave the employment of that company because they thought they were not receiving sufficient pay; we will assume they left peaceably; but that influence was not sufficient. Then the orders to which they belong meet and say: "These men have a just complaint against that company; we agree among each other that we will not buy sugar manufactured by the American Sugar Refining Co. from any grocery store in the country." Any man has a right to do that individually and for himself, but to do it individually and for himself is to be ineffectual. To be effectual it must be a concerted movement among those who are interested. Does the Senator from Utah believe that for a thousand or ten thousand persons, who are thus interested, to agree amongst each other "We will not buy from any store any sugar manufactured by that particular company," constitutes a restraint of trade among the States? That is the real question that we have here. That is the reason I think the antitrust law ought to be amended, and I shall presently offer the Senate an opportunity to amend it, rather than to degrade the law by directing our Department of Justice not to enforce the law as it is.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, the Senator from Iowa has stated substantially the Danbury hatters' case.

Mr. CUMMINS. I have stated substantially the Danbury hatters' case, with one exception, although I do not think it is material. In that case the agreement was that the members of the order would not buy hats made by those concerns, and that they would not buy anything from any store that handled the goods made by the Danbury manufacturers.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. In other words, in the Danbury hatters' case the various constituent organizations of the American Federation of Labor entered into a scheme by which they were to prevent people dealing in hats in various States from buying hats from the association against which the strike was directed; and that scheme was so extensive in its operations, as I remember, that it included practically the entire membership of the American Federation of Labor, something over 1,700,000 men.

Mr. CUMMINS. Oh, I do not think so.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The direct thing they were undertaking to accomplish there was to prevent the goods of that man being sold, and therefore to prevent their being circulated in interstate commerce. I think it was a perfectly clear case of a violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

Mr. CUMMINS. On the contrary, I do not think it was a violation at all. I think it was a restraint upon a trader, but not a restraint upon trade.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Of course the Senator and I differ about that.

Mr. CUMMINS. I know there are different views about that; and the Senator from Utah has on his side the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States. I bow to that decision and yield implicit obedience to it. But the fact that that is the law of the land makes me very anxious to see a modification of the law through legislation.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Nebraska?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. If the Senator will pardon me just one moment, I will yield to him.

The Senator from Iowa spoke about these various acts upon the part of the individuals being lawful in themselves. That is true. It is perfectly legal for an individual to refuse to trade with another, with or without reason. It is perfectly legal for a hundred individuals to decline to do that. But it is illegal for the hundred individuals to combine and conspire together to prevent other people from trading with that man.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I expressed no opinion upon the general law of conspiracy. My opinion was confined to a statement of the belief that such a combination was not a combination in restraint of trade or commerce among the States.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I now yield to the Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NORRIS. I interrupted the Senator from Utah primarily for the purpose of saying, as one who favors this bill, that I can not agree to the statement of the Senator from Iowa that those who favor the bill and oppose this motion to strike out these provisions do so because they want to make legal the secondary boycott. I understood the Senator from Iowa to state that that was the purpose of those who were in favor of the bill.

Mr. CUMMINS. Oh, no; I did not. I stated that the real controversy here was as to whether a secondary boycott, carried on in the way I suggested, ought to constitute a restraint of trade or commerce. That is the real issue.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, with the permission of the Senator from Utah, I should like to suggest to the Senator from Iowa that the illustration he has given to the Senator from Utah and the illustration of the Danbury Hat case which the Senator from Utah has given are not affected in any way by the particular amendment now pending before the Senate. That was a civil case to which the United States Government was not a party, and in which under no circumstances could the use of this money, appropriated here, be brought in question.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, in my opinion the Senator from Nebraska is mistaken about that. I say it with all deference. The facts that supported the civil case in what is known as the Danbury hatters' controversy would have sustained a criminal prosecution. If those facts constituted a violation of the law, the men who were guilty of the acts could have been convicted criminally.

Mr. NORRIS. That may be.

Mr. CUMMINS. It seemed to me the Senator from Nebraska this morning gave altogether too limited scope to the word "prosecution." I think this proviso relates to a civil prosecution just as fully as to a criminal prosecution.

Mr. NORRIS. I do, too; but——

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, I must decline to yield to permit these two Senators to fight out their differences. I am perfectly willing to yield to either Senator if he desires to ask me anything.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Utah declines to yield.

Mr. CUMMINS. I beg the Senator's pardon. I ought not to have done that.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, as the Senator is at a pause in his speech, I should like to ask him if he will not give us his views as to what a labor organization may do that is not in restraint of trade and what it may not do.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, I have tried to do that. I had no intention of entering upon a general discussion of that subject. I have already stated that a labor organization has a perfect right to be organized, in the first place; it has a right to strike; it has a right to advise its members to quit work in order to increase their wages; its members have a right to appeal to other men to stop work or to refrain from going to work. All of those things it has a perfect right to do.

Mr. REED. But, as I understand the Senator, its members have not a right to agree among themselves not to purchase certain goods?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, I should not like to answer that question as it is put. It is pretty difficult to tell whether or not a particular arrangement goes to the extent of being in restraint of trade. That must depend upon a variety of circumstances. If it amounts only to an indirect restraint, of course it is not within the terms of the law. I do not care to go into a discussion of the matter any further than I have done, because it would lead me entirely afield from what I had intended to say.

Mr. REED. I had hoped we might get some kind of a definition, because I have heard it said here for three or four days now that some of the Senators want labor organizations to have broad rights, do not want to interfere with them, but want the Sherman law to apply to them. Just how far they want it to apply would be an interesting question. I thought perhaps the Senator would be willing to tell us.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. There are many things in the law upon which it is very unsafe to venture definitions. The Supreme Court of the United States for more than a hundred years has been dealing with the phrase in the Constitution "due process of law," and yet it has repeatedly said that it would not undertake to define it. It would only take the cases as they arose, and proceed to arrive at its meaning by a process of exclusion and inclusion. The antitrust law is couched in general terms, and I should not undertake to make a comprehensive definition that would include all restraint of trade, or restraint of trade upon the part of labor organizations, or anybody else, and I do not think any court has undertaken to do it.

All that I intended to say about this subject when I rose—I have been led away from my original intention—was that this law is to be enforced impersonally. It is not concerned with the individuals or with the character of the individuals. It is concerned only with the quality of the acts which the individuals perform. If those individuals or those organizations, no matter what they may be, do such acts as amount to a restraint of interstate commerce they are amenable to the provisions of this law.

It is a little difficult for me to understand exactly the position of the various advocates of this provision with reference to its meaning. Some of the Senators insist, if I understand them, that the effect of it will be, if adopted, to prevent the prosecution of these labor organizations at all. Others of them seem to think that the only effect of the legislation is to carve an exception out of this one appropriation of $300,000, so that the Attorney General will be forbidden to resort to that $300,000 to prosecute these cases, but that it will be entirely open to him to utilize any other appropriation for the purpose of prosecuting labor organizations that may violate this law.

If the first of these gentlemen are right about it—namely, that so far as these organizations are concerned it amounts to a repeal pro tanto of the Sherman antitrust law—then I think it is vicious, as being ingrafted upon an appropriation bill. Even if we were warranted in making that sort of a change in the law, it ought to be done directly; it ought to be done after thorough consideration; and it ought to be done by an amendment to that law. If the other view which Senators entertain is correct—namely, that the only effect of the provision is to carve out of this appropriation this one exception, or these two exceptions, with reference to labor organizations and farmers' organizations—it is a perfectly silly proposition, because it accomplishes nothing. If Senators are correct about that, what they are doing to these labor organizations is simply handing them a gold brick, because certainly the labor organizations of the country understand that something more than these Senators concede with reference to this proviso is intended to be accomplished.

I think the provision is not so innocent as it may appear to be upon its face:

Provided, however, That no part of this money shall be spent in the prosecution of any organization or individual for entering into any combination or agreement having in view the increasing of wages, shortening of hours or bettering the conditions of labor.

The provision is complete down to that point. What is it that the Attorney General is forbidden to prosecute so far as this appropriation is concerned? He is forbidden to prosecute any organization for entering into any combinaton—mind you, any combination or agreement. There is no limitation upon it. It is not a combination or agreement of some specific character, not a combination or agreement lawful in itself, reasonable, not to be carried out by criminal methods, by the use of force, or in any other improper way; but any combination or agreement whatsoever. This is the limitation upon it:

Having in view the increasing of wages.

Why, a criminal agreement—an agreement to be carried out by force—may have in view the increasing of wages; and that is the only limitation. If it has in view that purpose, then it becomes, under the language of this proviso, not subject to be prosecuted.

The next proviso is:

That no part of this appropriation shall be expended for the prosecution of producers of farm products and associations of farmers who cooperate and organize in an effort to and for the purpose to obtain and maintain a fair and reasonable price for their products.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, before the Senator passes to the second proviso, I ask why the Senator omitted to read the balance of the first proviso?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I had no purpose in doing it. I will read it.

Mr. BACON. That is followed by the words "not in itself unlawful."

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Yes—

Or for any act done in furtherance thereof, not in itself unlawful.

The phrase "not in itself unlawful" manifestly and evidently qualifies only the phrase "or for any act done in furtherance thereof." It does not qualify the preceding language in any way whatsoever. The proviso, first of all, forbids a prosecution of any organization or individual for entering into any combination or agreement, no matter what its character may be. Then, further, in addition to that, it forbids the prosecution of any act done in furtherance of that combination not in itself unlawful—that is, any act not in itself unlawful.

Mr. BACON. But why do not the words "not in itself unlawful" limit the words "combination or agreement," as well as the word "act"? If the Senator were on the bench, I do not think he would ever decide that as a judge.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Because the first part of the proviso is complete in itself, and the clear grammatical construction of it is that the qualifying phrase refers to its immediate antecedent only.

Mr. BACON. Oh, no.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The Senator is welcome to his opinion about it. If it applies to the whole thing, the proposition becomes mere silly twaddle, amounting to nothing, because under the law as it now exists no organization can be prosecuted for doing a lawful thing. What sense is there in saying in a statute of this character that no man or organization shall be prosecuted for entering into a lawful combination or a lawful agreement?

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I am sure the Senator is too skilled in the construction of language to come to that conclusion, if he were himself sitting upon the bench with an open mind and an unbiased disposition. All that means, as I presume has been pointed sufficiently clearly already in this debate, is an act which would be unlawful even if there were no antitrust act. That is what that means when it says "not in itself unlawful." It does not limit it to acts which are against the antitrust act, but when it says "not in itself unlawful" it means an act which, while it may be unlawful under the antitrust act, would not in the absence of the antitrust act be itself unlawful.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, is a combination or an agreement in violation of the antitrust act not a combination or agreement in itself unlawful?

Mr. BACON. Not necessarily so. There are certain acts or combinations which are condemned by the common law, which would be unlawful even if there were no antitrust act. Forestalling is an old, well-known offense against law.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Is it not unlawful to violate a statute?

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, that is arguing in a circle. I think it is the finest illustration of an argument in a circle that I have ever come in personal contact with.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The Senator seems to make it necessary that I should repeat the proposition in other terms.

Mr. BACON. I think it necessary for the Senator to argue in that way to get around that proposition.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Of course, if a combination or agreement is in violation of the antitrust law it is a combination or agreement unlawful in itself. It seems to me there can not be the slightest doubt about that, and if we are——

Mr. BACON. Mr. President, I would nominate and elect the Senator as the prince of casuists upon that proposition.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I did not understand the Senator.

Mr. BACON. I simply meant to compliment the Senator's intellectual activity by saying that upon the proposition just announced by him I would nominate him and elect him as the prince of casuists.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. If the Senator were not so good a lawyer I would not be so astonished that he could come to the conclusion that an agreement which was in specific violation of a statute law was not an agreement which in itself was unlawful. It seems to me that there can not be a plainer proposition than that.

Mr. BACON. It seems to me, Mr. President, there can not be a plainer proposition than this: That when that language is used it meant the antitrust law non obstante, if the act itself in the absence of that law would be unlawful, then this provision does not apply to it, but if in the absence of that law the act of itself would be unlawful without reference to the antitrust law, then this provision will not apply.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The Senator interprets this language as though it read "any combination or agreement not in itself unlawful."

Mr. BACON. Undoubtedly.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Now, if he says that does not include a combination or agreement which is in violation of the antitrust law, then the converse of that necessarily follows, that a combination or agreement which is in violation of the antitrust law is in itself lawful.

Mr. BACON. No; the Senator is wrong. Now, Mr. President——

Mr. SUTHERLAND. It must be either in itself lawful or unlawful. Which position does the Senator take?

Mr. BACON. Possibly, Mr. President, in my poverty of language I can make myself understood by an illustration. Under the antitrust law as construed by the Supreme Court of the United States such a combination as that given by the Senator from Iowa as an illustration would be an unlawful combination of parties agreeing among themselves, a thousand of them, that they would not patronize a certain house which sold a certain class of goods. That, under the antitrust law, would be unlawful; it would not be an act unlawful of itself, but unlawful simply under that act.

Now, the other illustration is this: If parties agree to enter into combinations to forestall the market, they are by such an agreement committing what would be, if there were no antitrust law, an offense under the common law. There is the illustration. There are two offenses under the antitrust law, one of them not in itself unlawful—that is, not unlawful in the absence of the antitrust law. The other one is unlawful under the antitrust law as well as unlawful in itself.

I think those are concrete illustrations of what is meant by the language of this law. It does seem to me so very clear, at least it is to my mind, that I must admire the agility and mental activity of one who can draw and recognize a legitimate distinction between the two, and, in other words, he does not recognize the fact that the expression "not unlawful in itself" necessarily relates to that which would be unlawful in the absence of the antitrust law, or, as suggested to me by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS], varying the language but conveying the same idea, a matter in itself per se criminal.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, when the language is applied to "any act done in furtherance thereof not in itself unlawful," it is perfectly understandable that it must be an act which standing alone that is, dissociated from the agreement or combination which it was intended to further, is not unlawful. When we apply the same language to a combination or agreement, which is the peculiar language of the antitrust act itself, and then qualify it by saying "not of itself unlawful," of course the language must be construed to mean not unlawful within the meaning of any statute or in any other way. A combination is in itself unlawful or an agreement is in itself unlawful which comes within the inhibitions of the antitrust act.

However, the Senator and I never could agree upon the matter, and I think it is probably useless to pursue it further.

Mr. President, just a word with reference to the second proviso, and then I am through. The second proviso is—

> That no part of this appropriation shall be expended for the prosecution of producers of farm products and associations of farmers who cooperate and organize in an effort to and for the purpose to obtain and maintain a fair and reasonable price for their products.

If the producers of farm products or an association of farmers cooperate and organize in such a way as to bring about a restraint of trade under the terms of the antitrust act, should they not be prosecuted precisely the same as if it were a combination of lumber dealers? Is there anything sacred in the calling of a farmer? Is it any more sacred to be a farmer than it is to be a lumber dealer or to be anything else?

Again, we must pay attention to the quality of the act which these men perform. If the farmers' organization actually do such things as amount to a restraint of trade within the meaning of this act they ought to be prosecuted, and it is wholly indefensible to talk about excluding them from the operation of the law.

If it were suggested here to rewrite this proviso so as to read "that no part of the appropriation shall be expended for the prosecution of producers of lumber who cooperate and organize in an effort to obtain and maintain a fair and reasonable price for their products," there is not a man in the Senate who would think for one moment of voting for it. Yet it is just as wrong for the farmer to violate the antitrust law as it is for the lumber dealer.

Mr. President, if this provision accomplishes anything at all, it simply amounts to a declaration on the part of Congress that a law which now includes within its terms certain organizations and certain individuals ought not to be enforced as to those organizations and individuals. It is not within the province of this legislative body to declare that a law still upon the statute books, unrepealed and unamended, ought not to be enforced. The Constitution of the United States in express words provides that the President shall take care that the laws shall be faithfully executed. That means all the laws. It then becomes the sworn and solemn duty of the Attorney General of the United States, as one of the arms of the President of the United States, to execute this law against anybody who violates it, no matter who he may be, just as he executes every other law against everybody irrespective of personality. Congress therefore will have declared, if it shall have declared anything, that the Attorney General of the United States ought not to perform a duty which the Constitution itself imperatively enjoins.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I do not rise to continue the debate upon the amendment now before the Senate. I have a word, and only a word, to say with regard to a motion which I shall present in a moment.

It is obvious that a great majority of the Senate believe that the antitrust law should be modified with regard to its application to labor unions and farmers' organizations. Probably not all those of us who believe in some modification are united with regard to the character of the modification; but now is the time, the best time I have ever seen since my membership in the Senate began, to modify the antitrust law so as to do justice to labor unions and to farmers' organizations. It is the psychological moment, and if we allow it to pass we will be neglecting our duty.

It is very hard to challenge the attention of the Senate to these things; and inasmuch as this appropriation bill will not go into effect until the 1st day of July, as its appropriations will not be available until then, I move that the further consideration of the bill be postponed until May 17, and that the Committee on Interstate Commerce be directed to make a report to the Senate not later than Wednesday, May 14, whether the organizations and unions mentioned in the pending amendment to the bill under consideration should be excepted in whole or in part from the operation of the statute commonly known as the antitrust law; and if the report of said committee shall be in favor of such exception, it is further directed to accompany the report with a bill to accomplish the purpose.

Mr. President, by proceeding in this way and holding in abeyance this bill, with the provision or amendment now under discussion, we can before the time fixed in my motion, if we are sincere, and I doubt not that we are, pass such a modification of the antitrust law as will do long-delayed justice to the organizations that are named in the provision under consideration.

Upon this motion, whenever it shall reach a vote, I ask for the yeas and nays.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I am exceedingly sorry that such a motion should have been brought in here at this time. I can conceive of no reason whatever for postponing an appropriation bill to await the passage of another law, which law can be passed just as well after the appropriation bill pending becomes a law as before.

Mr. CUMMINS. But, Mr. President, it will not be.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. It will not be?

Mr. CUMMINS. There is nothing in the world that will so effectually insure the passage of such a law as the Senator from Virginia and myself want passed as the presence of the appropriation bill now before us.

Mr. BACON. Mr. President——

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I have not yielded the floor. Mr. President, the Senator from Iowa knows that the committees in the House have not been appointed, and there is no sort of possibility even of their being appointed within the time mentioned in his motion.

Mr. CUMMINS. No, Mr. President; they will not be; and if we can pass a bill modifying the antitrust law next week, the committees in the House will be appointed very shortly, I understand, after the disposition of the tariff bill, and while we are considering the tariff bill the House can deal with the measure which we ought to pass next week.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I yield to the Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GALLINGER. I will ask the Senator from Virginia whether he has any knowledge concerning the intention of the House to take a recess after they pass the tariff bill.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I will say to the Senator from New Hampshire I have no authentic information on that subject. I know it is under consideration, but the conclusion that will be reached I, of course, can not predict.

Mr. GALLINGER. Of course the Senator can not tell.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. There is in contemplation a purpose to take a recess of about 30 days. But whether they take a recess or not, I have no idea that the committees of the House will be appointed and that the House will be ready to proceed with the legislation which the Senator from Iowa, as well as myself, desires to see.

I want to call the attention of the Senate to the fact that in this appropriation bill there are $14,000,000 appropriated for public buildings which are under construction, and which money is to be available immediately, not the 1st of July. It was made available immediately because there is urgent need for it, in order that these public buildings may be proceeded with.

Mr. CUMMINS. There is an item of that kind; but I remind the Senator from Virginia this motion only postpones the bill until a week from Saturday. There will be no harm to come to the general public if those appropriations are not made available before that time. The Senator from Virginia knows that we have now the chance, so far as the Senate is concerned, to modify the antitrust law, and it may not come again for a long, long time.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. It is not a matter of knowledge, it is a matter of opinion with either of us; but I have not the slightest idea that it is possible to accomplish the legislation desired by the Senator from Iowa in the time which he mentions.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President——

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I do not yield to the Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I thought the Senator had finished. I saw the Senator from Georgia [Mr. BACON] rising, and I concluded that the Senator had finished.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. It is not from any indisposition to yield to a Senator, but I know what the Senator from Mississippi wants to have the Senate do.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I did not ask the Senator to yield to me. I thought the Senator had completed his remarks, and I addressed the Chair.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I had not.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I wish to attract the attention of the Chair as soon as the Senator is through.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. The Senator from Mississippi, if I am not mistaken, wants to move an adjournment of the Senate, and I am exceedingly anxious that we shall finish the consideration of this bill before we adjourn. I may be mistaken, but I was under the impression that if the Senator from Mississippi got the floor he would move to adjourn. Quite a large number of Senators have agreed with me that it is very desirable to sit awhile longer, with the hope that this bill may be finally disposed of. But I will be through in a few minutes, and then of course the Senator can make the motion and the Senate can act upon it.

Besides the $14,000,000 for public buildings there are $10,000,000 appropriated by the bill for river and harbor work, and that also has been made available immediately. While the appropriations for the other items of the bill are not available until the 1st of July, these two items are made immediately available because of the urgent necessity to continue pending work at once.

I do not believe that we can accomplish the legislation in the time mentioned, and it can be done just as well after the sundry civil bill is enacted into law as it can before. I can hardly think that the idea of the Senator from Iowa is to hold up the bill as a coercive measure to bring about the legislation which he desires.

Mr. CUMMINS. No, Mr. President; I do not mean as a coercive influence, but I mean as a persuasive influence.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Well, Mr. President, I think that all the persuasive force that can be brought to bear can be brought to bear just as well after the passage of the bill as before; and I hope the motion will not prevail.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, it is now 20 minutes after 5 o'clock. There is nothing remarkable or out of the ordinary going on in the Senate. This body ought to have some sort of an agreed time at which to adjourn. In the other wing of the Capitol they ordinarily adjourn at 5 o'clock. I think the Senate will work better if it has regular hours. We go on here every day—and when there is something extraordinary claiming our attention we ought to go on; if there is a party clash which must be fought out, or something of that sort—but just to let the ordinary run of business one day complete itself at 5 o'clock, and then another day at 7 o'clock, to the disorganization of the households of all of us, so that a Senator does not know at what time he may have his dinner, is carrying it a bit too far. If we remain here until a certain hour—5 o'clock or half past 5 o'clock—then we ought to adjourn.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

Mr. WILLIAMS. I am going to give notice now that hereafter, when the hour of half past 5 o'clock has been reached, unless something extraordinary is going on in the Senate, if nobody else moves to adjourn, I shall. I now yield to the Senator from New Hampshire for a moment.

Mr. GALLINGER. Before the Senator from Mississippi makes the motion to adjourn, Mr. President, I desire to ask unanimous consent to have inserted in the RECORD a carefully prepared chronology of the Sherman Act. I think it will be found to be accurate, and I think it will be of some interest to Senators.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Does the Senator from New Hampshire desire that it shall be read?

Mr. GALLINGER. I simply want it inserted in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from New Hampshire? The Chair hears none; and it is agreed to.

The matter referred to is as follows:

CHRONOLOGY OF SHERMAN ACT.

S. 3445, original bill by Senator Sherman, Fiftieth Congress, first session, August 14, 1888.

Referred to Committee on Finance. Reported January 25, 1889. Debated January 28. Never again called up.

Second Sherman bill, out of which grew debate leading to formulation of existing law.

Senate bill 1, introduced by Senator Sherman December 4, 1889, first day first session Fifty-first Congress.

Referred to Finance Committee. Reported January 14 with amendments. Debated, re-referred to committee, amended, reported, and further debated.

Final debate begins in Senate March 18, 1890.

From March 18 to 26, inclusive, bill was debated in Senate as in Committee of the Whole, various amendments being adopted, until, on March 27, the bill had grown from original 3 sections to 17.

March 25, motion to refer the bill to the Judiciary Committee defeated.

March 26, motion to recommit to the Committee on Finance defeated.

March 27, bill referred to Judiciary Committee with instructions to report within 20 days.

April 2, bill reported by Judiciary Committee, striking out all after enacting clause and substituting identical form of present law.

April 8, bill passed the Senate with one dissenting vote—Blodgett, of New Jersey.

April 25, referred to Judiciary Committee of the House.

May 1, reported by the Judiciary Committee of the House; passed with so-called Bland amendment.

Referred to Judiciary Committee of the Senate May 12 with an amendment to the House amendment.

May 13 to 16, debated in the Senate.

June 11 and 12, conference report debated in the House and rejected.

June 16, debated in the Senate.

June 20, conference report debated in both Houses and each receded from respective amendments.

June 20, passed both Houses.

LABOR AMENDMENTS.

March 24, 1890, Senators Teller, George, and Hiscock pointed out that bill will apply to labor organizations.

March 25, Senator Morgan pointed out that such a measure should apply to labor combinations.

March 25, Senator Sherman, in Committee of the Whole, proposed amendment drawn by Senator George, as follows:

"Provided, That this act shall not be construed to apply to any arrangements, agreements, or combinations between laborers made with the view of lessening the number of hours of labor or of increasing their wages, nor to any arrangements, agreements, or combinations among persons engaged in horticulture or agriculture made with the view of enhancing the price of agricultural or horticultural products."

March 25, Senator Aldrich proposed an amendment defining acts and agreements of labor organizations in these words:

"That this act shall not be construed to apply to or to declare unlawful combinations or associations made with a view, or which tend by means other than a reduction of the wages of labor, to lessen the cost of production or to reduce the price of any of the necessaries of life, nor to the combinations or associations made with a view or which tend to increase the earnings of persons engaged in any useful employment."

March 26, Senator Sherman opposed the Aldrich amendment, declaring:

"In my judgment this amendment practically fritters away the substantial elements of the whole bill."

March 26, Sherman amendment agreed to without debate in Committee of the Whole.

March 27, the Senate considered all amendments made in Committee of the Whole and debate evidences plainly that many amendments agreed to in Committee of the Whole were objectionable, and Senator Edmunds points out that as the bill is now reported back to the Senate from Committee of the Whole, saying—

"Every part of this whole thing, text and amendments—it does not make the least difference which—is open to motions to strike out and insert and every other available motion. Therefore no Senator can be gotten into a trap, as it might be called, or be misled in respect of losing any right to propose to change the bill, to leave something out, or put something in anywhere in it from top to bottom: * * *.

March 27. On this date Senator Edmunds sharply opposes the proposal to exempt labor combinations from the bill, and debates with Senators Hoar and George, Senator Hoar making extended argument and Senator George interposing various questions. After Senator Edmunds's concluding speech the question of exempting labor combinations is not again raised.

It is to be observed that Senator Sherman's amendment exempting labor combinations, agreed to in Committee of the Whole, was never adopted by the Senate.

Amendment exempting labor organizations adopted by House June 2, 1900, and failing in Senate.

June 2, 1900, House adopted following amendment to section 7, Sherman Act:

"That nothing in this act shall be so construed as to apply to labor unions or other labor organizations organized for the purpose of regulating wages, hours of labor, or other conditions under which labor is to be performed."

Amendment referred to Senate Committee on the Judiciary.

February 21, 1901, Senate considered motion to relieve Senate Committee on Judiciary from further consideration of amendments to Sherman Act.

Senator Hoar, debating this proposal, made the following statement February 21, 1901:

"There is a further provision that no labor organization or association shall be liable under the act to which this is an addition. I gave, as chairman of the committee, several full hearings to the representatives of the labor organizations of the country who were interested in promoting this legislation and also to the representatives of that great organization, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and they agreed with me, all of them, that these objections were well taken and that the legislation ought not to pass."

Senator Hoar then proposed the following amendment as a substitute:

"SEC. 4. That nothing in said act shall be so construed as to apply to any action or combination, otherwise lawful, of trade unions or other labor organizations, so far as such action or combination shall be for the purpose of regulating wages, hours of labor, or other conditions under which labor is performed, without violence or interfering with the lawful rights of any person."

Senator Spooner, in debate February 21, 1901, made the following remarkable statement about action on labor amendment in Senate Judiciary Committee:

"This bill passed the House. After it was reported by the Senator from Massachusetts to the committee, with every clause of it stricken out which came from the House, except the proposed amendment as to labor organizations, we had three meetings of that committee devoted to no other subject, at which we talked over as lawyers do and as lawyers should, the constitutional phases of this legislation frankly and fairly; and I have not heard any man, with perhaps one exception, in that committee express his approval of this bill—only one."

Senator Edmunds's statement of the purpose of the Sherman Act in Chicago Inter-Ocean, November 21, 1892:

"It is intended to, and I think it will, cover every form of combination that seeks in any way to interfere with and restrain free competition, whether it be capital in the form of trusts, combinations, railroad pools, or agreements, or labor through the form of boycotting organizations that say a man shall not earn his bread unless he joins this or that society. Both are wrong, both are crimes, and indictable under the antitrust law."

The first application of the Sherman Act to a labor combination appearing in the courts was in the following year in the case of United States v. Workmen's Amalgamated Council of New Orleans (Circuit Court, Eastern Dist., 54 Fed., 994, Mar. 25, 1893).

Membership Judiciary Committee of Senate, 1890: Edmunds (chairman), Ingalls, Hoar, Wilson of Iowa, Evarts, Pugh, Coke, Vest, George.

Following history of the authorship of each section of Sherman Act given by Senator Edmunds, North American Review, December, 1911:

First section, Edmunds, except words "in the form of trust or otherwise," by Senator Evarts.

Second section, Edmunds.

Third section, Edmunds.

Fourth section, George, rewritten from Senator Sherman's original draft.

Fifth section, Edmunds.

Sixth section, Edmunds.

Seventh section, Hoar, rewritten from Senator Sherman's original draft.

Eighth section, Ingalls.

(See hearings Committee on Interstate Commerce, U. S. Senate, 62d Cong., S. Res. 98, vol. 2, p. 2424.)

Mr. WILLIAMS. I move that the Senate do now adjourn until 12 o'clock noon to-morrow.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Mississippi moves that the Senate adjourn. [Puting the question.] By the sound the noes appear to prevail, and the motion to adjourn is not agreed to.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I call for a division upon the motion.

The question being put, there were, on a division—ayes 17, noes 26.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Did a quorum vote, Mr. President?

The VICE PRESIDENT. No quorum has voted. The Secretary will call the roll.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I ask for the yeas and nays on the motion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

Mr. STONE. What is this roll call for?

The VICE PRESIDENT. To disclose whether or not there is a quorum present. The vote on a division disclosed that there was not.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Hughes	Norris	Smith, Mich.
Bacon	James	O'Gorman	Smith, S. C.
Borah	Johnson, Me.	Oliver	Smoot
Brandegee	Johnston, Ala.	Overman	Stephenson
Bristow	Jones	Page	Sterling
Bryan	Kern	Perkins	Stone
Clapp	La Follette	Pomerene	Sutherland
Clarke, Ark.	Lane	Ransdell	Swanson
Colt	Lea	Reed	Thomas
Crawford	Lewis	Robinson	Thornton
Cummins	Lippitt	Root	Tillman
Dillingham	Lodge	Saulsbury	Townsend
du Pont	McCumber	Shafroth	Vardaman
Fletcher	McLean	Sheppard	Walsh
Gallinger	Martin, Va.	Sherman	Warren
Goff	Martine, N. J.	Shields	Weeks
Gronna	Myers	Smith, Ga.	Williams
Hollis	Newlands	Smith, Md.	Works

The VICE PRESIDENT. Seventy-four Senators have answered to their names. There is a quorum present.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I ask for the yeas and nays upon the motion to adjourn.

[A message was received from the House of Representatives, which appears in the proceedings following the executive session.]

The VICE PRESIDENT. Will the Senator from Mississippi delay for one moment that motion, so that the Chair may lay before the Senate resolutions with reference to the death of the late Representative MARTIN of New Jersey?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I will withhold my motion long enough for that.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the message.

The Secretary read as follows:

In the House of Representatives, May 5, 1913——

Mr. HUGHES. I ask the Senator from Mississippi to withhold his demand for the yeas and nays until I can submit a resolution.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I withhold the demand for the yeas and nays long enough for that. I understand it is a matter of privilege.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I object. I call for the regular order.

Mr. GALLINGER. Do I understand that the message has been laid down from the House of Representatives?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It has been.

Mr. GALLINGER. It has not been read.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. I object to it for the present.

SEVERAL SENATORS. Regular order!

Mr. WILLIAMS. I yielded for that purpose.

Mr. BACON. The Senator could not yield for that purpose.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I have the floor, and I yielded for that purpose.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, as I understand, the message from the House is handed down by the Chair. The Chair can withhold it if he so desires; and, of course, the Senator from Mississippi has the floor.

Mr. WILLIAMS. This is the announcement of the death of a colleague in the other House, and, knowing what it was, I yielded for the purpose of having it submitted to the Senate and acted upon.

Mr. SMOOT. Does the Senator from Mississippi claim that the Vice President can not withdraw it after having presented it to the Senate?

Mr. WILLIAMS. I suppose that the ordinary motion that the Senate do now adjourn out of respect to the memory of the deceased Representative is a part of the motion.

Mr. SMOOT. There is no doubt of it.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Then it will take the place of my motion, of course.

Mr. HUGHES. I have not yet sent the resolution to the Secretary's desk. The resolution is on my desk, and I simply give notice that before the adjournment of the Senate I shall ask leave to submit it.

Mr. GALLINGER. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President. Is this a message from the House of Representatives?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is a message from the House of Representatives.

Mr. GALLINGER. The rule is clear, then, that it shall be laid down by the Chair, and that, upon the demand of a Senator, it shall be so laid down.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It has already been laid down, and the Chair has no intention of withdrawing it. The Secretary will read it.

The Secretary read the message from the House of Representatives communicating to the Senate intelligence of the death of Hon. LEWIS J. MARTIN, late a Representative from the State of New Jersey.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] has called for the yeas and nays on the motion to adjourn. Is the demand seconded?

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. KERN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BRADLEY]. I transfer that pair to the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN] and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. OLIVER (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. CHAMBERLAIN]; but, observing the way in which most of the Senators on the other side of the Chamber are voting, I take it for granted that if present he would vote against adjournment, and I therefore take the liberty of voting. I vote "nay."

Mr. STONE (when his name was called). I am paired with the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CLARK] and therefore withhold my vote.

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CLAPP. Mr. President, I was out of the Chamber——

Mr. OLIVER. I call for the regular order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The regular order is the call of the absentees.

Mr. CLAPP. I rose to the roll call.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. President, the rule provides that the names of absentees shall be called immediately upon the conclusion of the roll call, as I understand.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the names of the absentees.

The Secretary called the names of Senators absent or not voting.

Mr. ASHURST (when the name of Mr. SMITH of Arizona was called). My colleague [Mr. SMITH of Arizona] is necessarily absent from the Chamber on important public business. He is paired with the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL]. I will let this announcement stand for the day.

The Secretary concluded the calling of the names of Senators not recorded.

Mr. CLAPP (after having voted in the affirmative). I was out of the Chamber when the roll call commenced and desire to vote "nay" instead of "yea."

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I desire to announce the pair between the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. CHILTON] and the Senator from Maryland [Mr. JACKSON].

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] has announced the pair between his colleague [Mr. SMITH of Arizona] and the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL]. I desire to add to that announcement that the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. FALL] is absent from the city on important business. I also desire to announce the pair of the Senator from Maine [Mr. BURLEIGH] with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. SHIVELY], and the pair of the Senator from New Mexico [Mr. CATRON] with the Senator from Alabama [Mr. BANKHEAD].

Mr. DU PONT (after having voted in the negative). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON]. As he is absent from the Chamber, I desire to withdraw my vote.

The result was announced—yeas 20, nays 53, as follows:

YEAS—20.

Borah	Cummins	McLean	Thomas
Brandegee	Dillingham	Nelson	Townsend
Bristow	Jones	Norris	Weeks
Burton	Lane	Sherman	Williams
Crawford	Lippitt	Sterling	Works

NAYS—53.

Ashurst	Johnson, Me.	Overman	Smith, Mich.
Bacon	Johnston, Ala.	Page	Smith, S. C.
Bryan	Kern	Perkins	Smoot
Clapp	La Follette	Pomerene	Stephenson
Clarke, Ark.	Lea	Ransdell	Sutherland
Colt	Lewis	Robinson	Swanson
Fletcher	Lodge	Root	Thompson
Gallinger	McCumber	Saulsbury	Thornton
Goff	Martin, Va.	Shafroth	Tillman
Gore	Martine, N. J.	Sheppard	Vardaman
Hitchcock	Myers	Shields	Walsh
Hollis	Newlands	Simmons
Hughes	O'Gorman	Smith, Ga.
James	Oliver	Smith, Md.

NOT VOTING—23.

Bankhead	Chilton	Jackson	Reed
Bradley	Clark, Wyo.	Kenyon	Shively
Brady	Culberson	Owen	Smith, Ariz.
Burleigh	du Pont	Penrose	Stone
Catron	Fall	Pittman	Warren
Chamberlain	Gronna	Poindexter

So the Senate refused to adjourn.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the motion of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS] to postpone until May 17 the further consideration of the bill, with certain instructions to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President——

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I move that the motion of the Senator from Iowa be laid on the table.

Mr. CUMMINS. Upon that I call for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the motion which it is proposed to lay on the table.

Mr. GALLINGER. Forgetting for the moment that the Senator from Iowa had made that motion, I rose a moment ago to say that while I had intended to occupy the attention of the Senate for a few minutes in the further discussion of my amendment, if we could get a vote on the matter this evening I should be very glad to relieve the Senate from the necessity of listening to me. I hope we will get that vote after the present motion is disposed of.

The SECRETARY. The Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS] moves that the further consideration of this bill be postponed until May 17, and that the Committee on Interstate Commerce be directed to make a report to the Senate not later than Wednesday, May 14, whether the organizations and unions mentioned in the pending amendment to the bill under consideration should be excepted, in whole or in part, from the operation of the statute commonly known as the antitrust law; and if the report of said committee shall be in favor of such exception it is further directed to accompany the report with a bill to accomplish the purpose.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is, Shall this motion lie on the table? Upon that question the yeas and nays have been ordered. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DILLINGHAM (when his name was called). Owing to the general pair which I have with the senior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN], who is absent from the Chamber, I withhold my vote.

Mr. DU PONT (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON]. As he is absent from the Chamber, and I do not know how he would vote if present, I will withhold my own vote.

Mr. KERN (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BRADLEY] to the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN] and will vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. OLIVER (when his name was called). I again announce my general pair with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. CHAMBERLAIN]. Not knowing how he would vote upon this question, I withhold my vote.

Mr. REED (when Mr. STONE's name was called). My colleague [Mr. STONE] has just been called from the Chamber by a matter of very great importance. He is necessarily absent. He is paired with the senior Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CLARK].

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE]; but having good reason to believe that if he were present he would vote the same way I do, I will take the liberty of voting. I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. MCLEAN. I wish to announce that the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BRADLEY] is unavoidably absent. He is paired with the junior Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN].

Mr. CUMMINS. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. KENYON] is absent from the city. He is paired with the junior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN]. If he were present and at liberty to vote, he would vote "nay."

Mr. JONES. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. POINDEXTER] is necessarily absent from the Chamber on important business.

The result was announced—yeas 43, nays 31, as follows:

YEAS—43.

Ashurst	Johnson, Me.	Overman	Smith, Md.
Bacon	Johnston, Ala.	Pomerene	Smith, S. C.
Bryan	Kern	Ransdell	Swanson
Clarke, Ark.	Lane	Reed	Thomas
Fletcher	Lea	Robinson	Thompson
Gallinger	Lewis	Saulsbury	Thornton
Gore	Martin, Va.	Shafroth	Tillman
Hitchcock	Martine, N. J.	Sheppard	Vardaman
Hollis	Myers	Shields	Walsh
Hughes	Newlands	Simmons	Williams
James	O'Gorman	Smith, Ga.

NAYS—31.

Borah	Dillingham	McLean	Smoot
Brandegee	Goff	Nelson	Stephenson
Bristow	Gronna	Norris	Sterling
Burton	Jones	Page	Sutherland
Clapp	La Follette	Perkins	Townsend
Colt	Lippitt	Root	Weeks
Crawford	Lodge	Sherman	Works
Cummins	McCumber	Smith, Mich.

NOT VOTING—22.

Bankhead	Chilton	Kenyon	Shively
Bradley	Clark, Wyo.	Oliver	Smith, Ariz.
Brady	Culberson	Owen	Stone
Burleigh	du Pont	Penrose	Warren
Catron	Fall	Pittman
Chamberlain	Jackson	Poindexter

So Mr. CUMMINS's motion was laid on the table.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment offered by the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SHERMAN] to the part proposed to be stricken out on motion of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER]. The Secretary will read the amendment.

Mr. GALLINGER. The yeas and nays have not been ordered upon that, Mr. President.

Mr. CRAWFORD. I ask for the reading of that amendment again. I did not have a chance to follow it closely.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair was about to ask the Secretary to read it, so that Senators might vote intelligently.

The SECRETARY. In lieu of the matter proposed to be stricken out by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER], the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SHERMAN] proposes to insert the following proviso:

Provided, however, That no part of this money shall be spent in the prosecution of any organization or individual for entering into any combination or agreement or for any action otherwise lawful having in view the increasing of wages, shortening of hours, or bettering the sanitation, safety, or other condition of labor, without violence or interference with the lawful rights of another: And provided further, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended for the prosecution of producers of farm products and associations of farmers who cooperate and organize in an effort to and for the purpose to obtain and maintain a fair and reasonable price for their products.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I shall not detain the Senate; but before I vote on this proposition I desire to make a statement.

I am in favor of all of the clause which it is proposed to strike out except the last two lines. I do not believe it is wise or prudent ever, directly or indirectly, to sanction the fixing of the price of any commodity by and through a combination. If I thought that any practical harm would come from the clause which by indirection sanctions combinations among farmers for the purpose of fixing prices, if I did not consider that possibility so remote as to be substantially beyond danger, I should not support this measure in its present form. But, believing that there is no real danger of that character, and being generally in favor of the policy which is indicated by this proviso, disagreeing almost entirely with the arguments which have been adduced by Senators who are advocating the motion to strike out, I shall support the bill in its present form. But I do not want to vote without expressing my dissent from any doctrine which at any time, by direction or indirection, sanctions any combination to fix the prices of commodities, however remote the possibility of harm or danger may be. Because of the length of the debate on this bill and the manifest desire of the Senate to dispose of it to-night I refrain from further remarks as well as from presenting an amendment I had intended offering.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is upon the amendment of the Senator from Illinois [Mr. SHERMAN].

The amendment was rejected.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question now recurs upon the motion of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] to strike out the proviso in the original bill.

Mr. GALLINGER. On that I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DU PONT (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON]. I transfer that pair to the junior Senator from Idaho [Mr. BRADY] and vote. I vote "yea."

Mr. KERN (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BRADLEY] to the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN] and will vote. I vote "nay."

Mr. CUMMINS (when Mr. KENYON's name was called). I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. KENYON] is paired with the junior Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN]. My colleague has authorized me to state that if he were present he would vote "yea" upon this amendment.

Mr. OLIVER (when his name was called). On account of my general pair with the senior Senator from Oregon [Mr. CHAMBERLAIN] I will withhold my vote. If I were at liberty to vote, I would vote "yea."

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I have a pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE], which prevents me from voting. Were he present, I should vote "nay."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. DILLINGHAM. I have a general pair with the senior Senator from South Carolina [Mr. TILLMAN], who I notice is absent from the Chamber. If he were present and I were permitted to vote, I would vote "yea."

Mr. KERN. I desire to announce that my colleague [Mr. SHIVELY] is absent from the city on important business. He is paired with the Senator from Maine [Mr. BURLEIGH]. This announcement will stand for the day.

Mr. REED. I make the same announcement in reference to the absence of my colleague [Mr. STONE] and with reference to his pair which I made a few moments ago, and I will let the announcement stand for the day.

Mr. GALLINGER. I was requested to announce that the Senator from Wyoming [Mr. CLARK] is paired with the Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE]. The Senator from Wyoming requested me to state if he were present and could vote he would vote "yea" on this proposition.

Mr. MCLEAN. I wish to announce that the senior Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BRADLEY] is unavoidably absent and is paired with the junior Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN].

Mr. WILLIAMS. I wish to transfer my pair with the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] to the Senator from Oregon [Mr. LANE] and vote. I vote "nay."

The result was announced—yeas 32, nays 41, as follows:

YEAS—32.

Borah	du Pont	Nelson	Stephenson
Brandegee	Gallinger	Page	Sterling
Bristow	Goff	Perkins	Sutherland
Burton	Gronna	Pomerene	Thomas
Clapp	Lippitt	Root	Townsend
Colt	Lodge	Sherman	Warren
Crawford	McCumber	Smith, Mich.	Weeks
Cummins	McLean	Smoot	Works

NAYS—41.

Ashurst	Johnston, Ala.	O'Gorman	Smith, Md.
Bacon	Jones	Overman	Smith, S. C.
Bryan	Kern	Ransdell	Swanson
Clarke, Ark.	La Follette	Reed	Thompson
Fletcher	Lea	Robinson	Thornton
Gore	Lewis	Saulsbury	Vardaman
Hitchcock	Martin, Va.	Shafroth	Walsh
Hollis	Martine, N. J.	Sheppard	Williams
Hughes	Myers	Shields
James	Newlands	Simmons
Johnson, Me.	Norris	Smith, Ga.

NOT VOTING—23.

Bankhead	Chilton	Kenyon	Poindexter
Bradley	Clark, Wyo.	Lane	Shively
Brady	Culberson	Oliver	Smith, Ariz.
Burleigh	Dillingham	Owen	Stone
Catron	Fall	Penrose	Tillman
Chamberlain	Jackson	Pittman

So Mr. GALLINGER's amendment was rejected.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I wish to call up the amendment I gave notice of some time ago, and which is now pending. I wish to address myself to it for a moment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendment.

The SECRETARY. On page 70, after line 13, insert the following as a new paragraph:

For placing the Government approach roadway to the Vicksburg National Cemetery, Vicksburg, Miss., in a state of permanent repair, $10,000.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, in explanation of the amendment I desire to read a letter addressed to me dated March 28, 1913, and signed by Gen. Aleshire, of the Quartermaster Corps of the United States Army.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF THE QUARTERMASTER CORPS,
Washington, March 28, 1913.

Hon. JOHN SHARP WILLIAMS,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR: 1. On September 20, 1912, your private secretary left in this office a transcript from the records of the meeting of the board of supervisors of Warren County, Miss., held at Vicksburg on September 6, at which meeting it was ordered that you be requested to take up with the proper authorities the matter of the condition of the Government approach roadway to the Vicksburg (Miss.) National Cemetery for the purpose of having it put in good condition; and in office letter of that date you were informed that a special estimate would be submitted to Congress for placing this roadway in permanent repair.

2. As stated in the hearing on the sundry civil appropriation bill before the House Committee on Appropriations (p. 504) the original estimate as submitted for repairing this roadway was for $5,000, but subsequent damage rendered it necessary to send a superintendent of construction of this corps to Vicksburg for the preparation of plans and specifications to place the roadway in first-class permanent condition. His estimate called for approximately $14,000, but was reduced in this office to $10,000 and a supplemental estimate for the additional $5,000 required was submitted to Congress.

3. I have the honor to inform you that on examination of the sundry civil bill which passed the last session of Congress, but which was vetoed by President Taft, it is found that this item was omitted. Unless favorable action is taken on this estimate when the sundry civil bill for fiscal year 1914 is again taken up by Congress, it will be necessary to limit the expenditures for repairs on the roadway during that fiscal year to those of a temporary nature, as the annual appropriation of $12,000, "repairing roads to national cemeteries"—which is the only one available for such purpose—are the only funds provided for the care and maintenance of the 19 Government approach roadways to national cemeteries covering a total of approximately 15 miles.

Very respectfully,

J. B. ALESHIRE,
Chief Quartermaster Corps, United States Army.

Before the House committee, when this matter was up, Gen. Aleshire testified as follows:

The CHAIRMAN. National Cemetery, Vicksburg, Miss., for repairs to the Government roadway to the Vicksburg National Cemetery, $5,000.

Gen. ALESHIRE. The $5,000 estimate was based upon the condition of the road last summer when the estimates were made, and late in the fall report was received that the road had been further damaged by reason of rains and high water. Then we sent an engineer down there and went over the case again, and his estimate as brought in was for fourteen thousand and odd dollars, and that was revised again, and now the estimate is $10,000. The condition is this, Mr. Chairman, the road has sunk in places like that [indicating on map]. This was the natural grade of the road, and they propose to put a culvert there, as I understand it.

The CHAIRMAN. Is this road much traveled?

Gen. ALESHIRE. Yes, sir; there is a street car track along by it.

The CHAIRMAN. What do they pay toward maintaining it?

Gen. ALESHIRE. I do not think they pay anything.

The CHAIRMAN. Why should they not pay something?

Gen. ALESHIRE. At the time we made the estimate for this road they were washed out more than we were. They keep their roadbed and 4 feet on either side of it in repair. There is only a section of the road that they really parallel, and then they leave it and go across the fields. We do not have any trouble with the part they parallel. These red lines here [indicating] indicate where the culverts are to go across the road.

Now, Mr. President, in some manner, when the matter was being considered in the House, that item for $5,000 was not raised to $10,000, but the entire item was omitted, and upon that Gen. Aleshire called my attention to it in the letter which I have read. This is eminently an appropriation which ought to have been made, and I had hoped very much to have an opportunity to present it to the Senate at a time when the Senate was not on an empty stomach and when it had not been kept in session so long when everybody was impatient of every possible amendment that could be offered to the bill. But I am compelled to do my duty by my constituents and in accordance with my own sense of what is right by addressing myself to it even at this time of day and under these circumstances. I have therefore sought to explain it to the Senate as well as I could in the disorder which always accompanies the close of a session when men are fatigued and impatient of any further consideration or discussion.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I might raise the point of order, I think, against this item. It has not been estimated for in the technical sense. This is a mere letter from the Chief of the Quartermaster Corps.

Mr. WILLIAMS. The Senator is mistaken.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Oh, it is signed.

Mr. WILLIAMS. But there it is. The $5,000 estimate was based upon the condition of the road last summer, and then he says in his letter to me that he submitted a supplemental estimate to make it $10,000.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Certainly; there was $5,000 estimated, and the amendment is for $10,000.

Mr. WILLIAMS. And the supplemental estimate, is for $10,000.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. The supplemental estimate would have to come from the department, and not from the chief of the Quartermaster Corps.

Mr. WILLIAMS. It came from him. He says in his letter he sent it in.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. It is not here. We have nothing but the letter from the chief of the Quartermaster Corps.

Mr. WILLIAMS. But I have a letter from the chief of the Quartermaster Corps saying that he sent in the supplemental estimate.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. We have not seen it. It has not reached Congress.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Here is what he said. I take it for granted he is telling the truth. He says, referring to the expert:

His estimate called for approximately $14,000, but was reduced in this office to $10,000, and a supplemental estimate for the additional $5,000 required was submitted to Congress.

It got lost in the shuffle somehow, and the entire item got lost—the original appropriation of $5,000 as well as the supplemental appropriation of $5,000.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. The supplemental estimate is not here, but I am not going to make the point of order against the amendment and I am not going to detain the Senate. I am just going to say that I have explained as fully as I am capable of explaining what I consider the unwisdom of amending this bill. It is a completed piece of legislation which has been agreed to, and if the Senate is going to open it now to amendment, it will have to open it for all. It is no hardship on the Senators who feel that their items have been omitted to wait until next December. I would consider it exceedingly unfortunate to have the bill opened for amendment now, and I hope the amendment will be voted down.

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, I agree perfectly with the chairman of the committee. I should be glad to see the subject matter of the amendment agreed to, but at another time and on another bill. I understand that we are to have a deficiency bill at the present session. I hope the pending bill will receive no further amendment and that it will be speedily passed.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I do not desire to detain the Senate, but, as I understand it, there is no objection to this amendment in the world except that the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations thinks that no amendment at all ought to be made.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. If the Senator will permit me, it is not the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, but it was a vote of the Committee on Appropriations instructing me to take that position in the Senate, which I have done in accordance with its instructions.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Then I will say that, in the opinion of the committee, no amendment ought to be made; in other words, that a committee of the Senate is to bind the Senate not to amend the bill because in its estimation it is inopportune to offer any amendment of any description, so that an amendment can not be considered upon its own merits, but must be considered in accordance with the ipse dixit of the committee before the bill is brought to the Senate.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Mississippi that when the tariff bill gets in we will join him in his fight.

Mr. WILLIAMS. When the tariff bill gets here, I imagine that every Senator will be permitted to offer amendments to it, and the amendments will be considered. The only trouble is there will be too many of them; that is all.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. They will be promptly voted down.

Mr. WILLIAMS. We will vote each one down on its merits, too.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I want to say just one word. Of course, the Senator from Mississippi can not mean what he says. A committee is bound to give the Senate its judgment; it is not hampering the vote or the course or the purpose of any Senator, but it is the duty of the committee to which this bill was referred to report its views; and we have done that for the consideration of the Senate. In the consideration of the bill every Senator will, of course, vote according to his judgment as to what will best promote the public welfare.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I have not meant to impugn the committee nor to attack it. I meant merely to narrate a historical fact, to wit, that the committee, by its own ipse dixit, before the bill came before the Senate, said that all amendments regardless of their merit should be voted down; that is all. I am not impugning the committee; that may be the height of wisdom, I do not know; but I had a right, of course, to refer to a fact historically related by the chairman of the committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, on page 169 of the bill there is a provision for the expenses of compiling, preparing, and indexing an edition of the Congressional Directory for the first session of the Sixty-third Congress, to be immediately available. On March 17 of this year the Senate passed a resolution appropriating $800 for that same purpose. Now, I am informed by a Member of the other House that that resolution has not yet passed that body. Therefore I shall not ask that an amendment be made in the appropriation bill, but I shall ask that Senate resolution No. 3, passed by the Senate on March 17, 1913, be recalled from the other House.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? [A pause.] There being none, that order will be made.

Mr. SMOOT subsequently said: Mr. President, a moment ago I asked that the Senate recall a certain resolution from the House; but I find that it is a Senate resolution and was amended in the Senate by a proviso which reads as follows:

That the House of Representatives shall pay one-half of the said sum.

Of course, the resolution should have been further amended so as to make it a concurrent resolution, but that was not done. Therefore the resolution was not sent to the House. I move that the vote by which the resolution was ordered recalled from the House be reconsidered.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, that action will be taken.

Mr. SMOOT. I now move that the Senate resolution be indefinitely postponed.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, encouraged by the fate of the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS], I desire to offer an amendment, on page 181, line 1, to strike out the words "or private," so that it will read:

Including the construction in the United States in Government yards.

When the bill passed the Senate at the last session it carried an amendment on this subject, which read as follows:

Including the construction in Government yards, in accordance with plans and specifications to be prepared by the Navy Department, and to have a cargo capacity of 12,000 tons of coal and a speed of at least 14 knots per hour, two colliers, to cost not exceeding $1,000,000 each.

As I remember, when that amendment was reported from the committee it contained the words "or by purchase," and those words were stricken out in the Senate. The amendment was adopted by the Senate as I have read it, limiting the construction to Government yards. When the bill reappeared from conference the House had agreed to the Senate amendment, but had inserted in it the words "or private yards."

Mr. President, of course, on the conference report, when it came back from the other House in the last day of the last session, there was no possibility of discussing any amendment or any change that had been made in an amendment in conference. The purpose of the Senate was to confine the construction to the Government yards.

I myself have always believed in giving most of the new building work to the private yards, as all the repair work goes to the Government yards; but it is to my mind extremely important that the Government yards, on which we must depend in order to keep prices in the private yards within bounds, should not be allowed to lose their organization and be to a certain extent crippled by not having the work kept up there. As it is now, when a battleship is ordered built in a Government yard, it can be built in only one yard, and that is the Brooklyn yard. There are other great yards thoroughly equipped for general building; but the effect of not having any work at Norfolk, at Boston, at Philadelphia, and at Mare Island is that men are laid off and taken on, and laid off and taken on again. The Government expenses are very much increased by that continual shifting of force, and the efficiency of the yards is thereby impaired.

Of late years the cost in the Government yards has been very greatly reduced. I was informed by the last Secretary of the Navy, the predecessor of the present Secretary of the Navy, before he retired, that these two boats could be built in the Government yards as cheaply as in private yards, and that it would be a very great advantage to the yards to have them built in two Government yards. I think it is therefore very desirable that these should go to Government yards. It can not make any increase in the cost, because the cost is fixed in the bill. There is competition amongst the yards themselves. Each yard is required to send in its estimate, and the yard that sends in the lowest estimate gets the work. I do think in present conditions it is very important that the Government yards should be kept in the highest state of efficiency, and that it is only fair to the working force in those yards to keep them in reasonably steady employment. The adoption of the amendment will not add to the Government expense, and it is for these reasons, Mr. President, that I have ventured to offer it.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I am in accord with the Senator from Massachusetts in respect to furnishing a reasonable quantity of work to the Government navy yards. They have not by any means been neglected, and on proper occasion I certainly should not oppose a liberal recognition of them. I do not think, though, that the Senator from Massachusetts will get for the Boston yard any of this work.

Mr. LODGE. I assure the Senator that I certainly do not expect to get a ship sent to the Boston yard under this administration. It never occurred to me that it would go there; but I do think it possible that one may be sent to Norfolk, and that it is not impossible that one may be sent to Philadelphia. I am speaking for the navy yards generally, for a general policy. There are three or four yards in which I should like to see these boats built. Such requests as I have had in regard to the matter have not come from the Boston yard or from any particular yard. The subject was very largely discussed in the American Federationist in an article by Mr. Gompers—a very good article, too—taking up the question of the cost of these vessels, which drew my attention to it. I do not recall that I have had any requests about these colliers from the Boston yard or from any particular yard.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Although the Senator from Massachusetts thinks that the work would probably come to a yard in my State, I want the bill to stay as it is. For the reasons which I have already given I do not want to see this bill amended. I think it is unwise to amend it, and I hope the Senate will treat it with the same generosity, liberality, and good sense that it treated the amendment offered by the Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS]. I hope the amendment will be voted down.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I hope that the bill will be regarded as sacred. Having been so regarded in one instance, I think it is but right that no profane feet should defile its sanctuary. [Laughter.]

Mr. LODGE. The Senator from Mississippi probably did not hear me when I began my remarks. I said I was so much encouraged by the kindly attention given to his amendment that I ventured to offer mine.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I have been so much discouraged by it that I have retreated bodily.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I was somewhat surprised that the Senator from Massachusetts should say he did not expect a ship to be sent to the Charlestown yard during the present administration. I expect that at least one, and perhaps more, will be sent to the Portsmouth yard, a yard which the Senator from Massachusetts forgot to mention in his enumeration of the navy yards.

Mr. President, Portsmouth has made a bid on one of these colliers, and I am of opinion that if that is a lower bid than the other yards will make, we will build one of these ships in New Hampshire. I hope so at any rate.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. We want competition.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts [Mr. LODGE].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, I desire to offer an amendment. After line 10, on page 58, I move to insert what I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 58, after line 10, it is proposed to insert:

And provided further, That the clause in section 28, public building act, approved March 4, 1913, reading as follows: "And no person now in the employment of the Supervising Architect's Office shall be eligible to such employment," is hereby repealed.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I make the point of order against that amendment that it has not been estimated for.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. And it is general legislation.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Yes; and it is also general legislation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. McCUMBER. I offer the amendment, which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 176, line 2, it is proposed to strike out "$4,500" and insert in lieu thereof "$6,500"; and, in line 3, after the word "blanks," to insert "and for printing a report of the proceedings of the National Convention of State Railway Commissioners."

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, there is an item in the bill of $4,500 for printing the blanks which are sent out by the Interstate Commerce Commission to each of the railroad commissions of the several States, so that uniform blanks may be used and the reports may be uniform in all respects. I understand that $4,500 will probably pay for merely the bare printing of the blanks. They are sent out in book form. I have one book here [exhibiting]. It is the one which is sent to Alabama, and contains 123 pages, which means 123 separate blanks. If they were printed by the States, it would involve an expenditure of about $2,000 per State.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President——

Mr. McCUMBER. I wish to add that it would only require $6,500 for the Government to print the entire number for the several States and also to print in addition thereto——

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I have succeeded in my object. I wanted to make a point of order that the Senate was in such disorder that nobody could possibly hear; but the loudness of my voice in addressing the Chair has finally brought about order.

Mr. McCUMBER. I knew that, Mr. President, but I did not assume that it would make much difference in the final result.

As I was saying, there are about 123 separate blanks in each one of these books. The amendment that I have offered provides $2,000 in addition to the amount which has been allowed by the committee. That will also print the proceedings of the annual convention of the State railway commissions of the several States. The material which they furnish for the benefit of the Interstate Commerce Commission is so important, so material, and so valuable, not only to the commission, but also to Congress, that I am asking for the $2,000 so that their report may be published in connection with this printing.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Mr. President, I rise to make the point of order against the amendment that it has not been estimated for. I will say, in that connection, to the Senator that there will be a deficiency bill along very soon, to be sent over from the other House.

Mr. McCUMBER. On the contrary, Mr. President, I understand it has been estimated for, so I think the Senator is mistaken. The committee allowed the $4,500, but did not allow the other $2,000 which was requested.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. No estimate has been sent to the committee; we have no estimate for it at all.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The point of order is sustained.

Mr. MYERS. Mr. President, I offer an amendment to which a like point of order can not be made, I believe. I move that the bill be amended, in line 12, on page 120, by striking out the figures "$100,000" and inserting in lieu thereof "$188,000." It is an appropriation to build roads and bridges in the Glacier National Park in Montana.

That park has been established by the Federal Government. There is no use of having parks unless you have them so improved that people can travel in them over roads and bridges. The Department of the Interior, in a very conservative manner and on a very economical basis, figuring on the least dollar that would possibly answer the purpose, estimated that $188,000 was necessary for this purpose.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Montana [Mr. MYERS].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. ASHURST. On page 143, line 14, if an amendment has not heretofore been adopted to correct what appears to be an error, according to my mind, I move to strike out the word "Secretary" and to insert the word "Secretaries."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 143, line 14, before the words "of Commerce and Labor," it is proposed to strike out the word "Secretary" and to insert the word "Secretaries."

Mr. WARREN. Mr. President, that is entirely unnecessary——

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. It is entirely unnecessary.

Mr. WARREN. Because the appropriation bill which was passed the other day——

Mr. ASHURST. I withdraw the amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. CUMMINS. I offer the amendment which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment will be stated.

The SECRETARY. On page 176, line 3, after the word "blanks," it is proposed to strike out the period and insert in lieu thereof a comma and add the following: "and $2,000 to print the proceedings of the annual convention of the National Association of Railway Commissioners," so as to read:

For the Interstate Commerce Commission, $100,000, of which sum $4,500 shall be available to print and furnish to the States report-form blanks and $2,000 to print the proceedings of the annual convention of the National Association of Railway Commissioners.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, if I may say a word before the Senator from Virginia rises, this amendment is very much like the one just offered by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCUMBER]. The difference is that in his amendment the $4,500 was raised to $6,500. This leaves the amount mentioned in the bill untouched, but provides that $2,000 of the $100,000 can be used to print the proceedings of the national convention of the State railway commissioners.

It is impossible for me to conceive of $2,000 spent more wisely or profitably than for printing the report of the proceedings of this national association of State authorities, and I very much hope that the Senator from Virginia will not raise the point of order, although I will say in advance that the point of order would not be well taken. This amendment does not increase the appropriation, and the rule invoked by the Senator from Virginia against the amendment proposed by the Senator from North Dakota applies only when the proposition is to increase the appropriation.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I do make the point of order. It is using money for a purpose that has not been reported to the Congress as necessary. There is no estimate made for any money for that purpose, either to be taken out of the Treasury or to be taken from this appropriation.

In addition to that—though I think that ought to satisfy the Senator from Iowa—Mr. Marble, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, said as follows at the House hearing in reference to this printing:

Undoubtedly it will continue to be printed, even if it is not printed by the commission—that is to say, by the members of this association—and the Interstate Commerce Commission will be called upon to make up their quota of this expense.

That shows that it is entirely unnecessary; but if there is any occasion for an appropriation, when the general deficiency bill comes along it will be provided for.

Mr. CUMMINS. May I say a word on the point of order? I have more interest in the integrity of the rule than I have in the particular amendment involved.

The rule suggested by the Senator from Virginia applies only when it is sought to increase an appropriation. This amendment does not increase the appropriation, but directs the use of a portion of the appropriation in a certain way.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I desire to correct the statement of the Senator from Iowa that the amendment which I offered increased the appropriation.

Mr. CUMMINS. I did not say so, Mr. President.

Mr. McCUMBER. It was in effect exactly the same. It provided for $6,500 instead of $4,500; and then it provided, in addition, that $2,000 of the $6,500 should be used for the purpose of defraying the expense of publishing the report of the commission. So the effect of it was exactly the same.

Mr. CUMMINS. Yes; the effect was precisely the same. But I did not say what the Senator from North Dakota understood me as saying. I said that the difference was that his amendment increased the $4,500 to $6,500. I did not say that it increased the appropriation of $100,000. I hope the Senator from North Dakota will remember that I said that.

Mr. McCUMBER. But the two are in that respect exactly the same.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Will the Senator from Virginia restate his point of order?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. My point of order is that there is no estimate of any sum for this purpose, and it is appropriating money to a purpose which has not been estimated for at all, though it does take it out of money already appropriated for another purpose.

The VICE PRESIDENT. May the Chair inquire whether there was an estimate from the Interstate Commerce Commission?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. None at all. There was no estimate for the use of the money of the Government for this purpose. There was no estimate at all.

The VICE PRESIDENT. May the Chair inquire whether there was an estimate for anything?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. None for this purpose.

The VICE PRESIDENT. For any use of the Interstate Commerce Commission?

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. Oh, there was a great deal of money appropriated for the Interstate Commerce Commission; but this is for publishing the reports of an association of State commissions. They ought to pay for their own reports, anyway; but certainly there is no estimate whatever here showing that this amount of money belonging to the Government ought to be used for this purpose.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair rules that the point of order is not well taken. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS].

The amendment was rejected.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendments were concurred in.

The amendments were ordered to be engrossed and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL FRIDAY.

Mr. KERN. I move that when the Senate adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Friday next, at 2 o'clock p. m.

The motion was agreed to.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. BACON. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After seven minutes spent in executive session, the doors were reopened.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE LEWIS J. MARTIN, OF NEW JERSEY.

A message from the House of Representatives, by J. C. South, its Chief Clerk, communicated to the Senate the intelligence of the death of Hon. LEWIS J. MARTIN, late a Representative from the State of New Jersey, and transmitted resolutions of the House thereon.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had appointed Mr. HAMILL, Mr. KINKEAD of New Jersey, Mr. SCULLY, Mr. MCCOY, Mr. TOWNSEND, Mr. TUTTLE, Mr. BAKER, Mr. EAGAN, Mr. BREMNER, Mr. WALSH, Mr. BROWNING, Mr. REILLY of Connecticut, Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH, Mr. SLOAN, Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota, Mr. KELLEY of Michigan, Mr. GOOD, Mr. LANGLEY, Mr. LAFFERTY, and Mr. SELLS as the committee on the part of the House to attend the funeral.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate resolutions from the House of Representatives which will be read.

The Secretary read the resolutions (H. Res. 92), as follows:

IN THE HOUSE OF RERESENTATIVES OF THE UNITED STATES,
May 5, 1913.

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. LEWIS J. MARTIN, a Representative from the State of New Jersey.

Resolved, That a committee of 20 Members of the House (with such Members of the Senate as may be joined) be appointed to attend the funeral.

Resolved, That the Sergeant at Arms of the House be authorized and directed to take such steps as may be necessary for carrying out the provisions of these resolutions, and that the necessary expenses in connection therewith be paid out of the contingent fund of the House.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect this House do now adjourn.

Mr. HUGHES. Mr. President, I offer the resolutions which I send to the desk and ask that they be read.

The resolutions (S. Res. 79) were read, considered by unanimous consent, and unanimously agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with deep sensibility the announcement of the death of the Hon. LEWIS J. MARTIN, late a Representative from the State of New Jersey.

Resolved, That a committee of seven Senators be appointed by the Vice President to join the committee appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to take order for superintending the funeral of Mr. MARTIN, at Newton, N. J.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate a copy of these resolutions to the House of Representatives and to the family of the deceased.

The VICE PRESIDENT appointed Mr. HUGHES, Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey, Mr. CUMMINS, Mr. TOWNSEND, Mr. HITCHCOCK, Mr. REED, and Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas as the committee on the part of the Senate under the second resolution.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, I move as a further mark of respect to the memory of the deceased that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was unanimously agreed to, and (at 6 o'clock and 50 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Friday, May 9, 1913, at 2 o'clock p. m.

NOMINATIONS.

Executive nominations received by the Senate May 7, 1913.

COLLECTORS OF CUSTOMS.

Frederick C. Peters, of South Carolina, to be collector of customs for the district of Charleston, in the State of South Carolina, in place of Edward W. Durant, jr., whose term of office expired by limitation April 18, 1913.

James C. Congdon, of South Carolina, to be collector of customs for the district of Georgetown, in the State of South Carolina, in place of Isaiah J. McCottrie, whose term of office expired by limitation May 31, 1912.

John Purroy Mitchell, of New York, to be collector of customs for the district of New York, in the State of New York, in place of William Loeb, jr., resigned.

PROMOTIONS IN THE REVENUE-CUTTER SERVICE.

Second Lieut. James Albert Alger to be first lieutenant in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from September 12, 1912, in place of First Lieut. Frederick Chamberlayne Billard, promoted.

Third Lieut. William Kirk Scammell to be second lieutenant in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from September 12, 1912, in place of Second Lieut. James Albert Alger, promoted.

First Lieut. of Engineers Charles Francis Nash to be senior engineer in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from April 23, 1913, in place of Senior Engineer Charles Warren Munroe, retired.

Second Lieut. of Engineers California Charles McMillan to be first lieutenant of engineers in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from August 23, 1912, in place of First Lieut. of Engineers Herbert Winfield Spear.

Second Lieut. of Engineers William Lindsay Maxwell to be first lieutenant of engineers in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from April 23, 1913, in place of First Lieut. of Engineers Charles Francis Nash, promoted.

Third Lieut. of Engineers Charles Edward Sugden to be second lieutenant of engineers in the Revenue-Cutter Service of the United States, to rank as such from August 23, 1912, in place of Second Lieut. of Engineers California Charles McMillan, promoted.

AMBASSADOR.

George W. Guthrie, of Pennsylvania, to be ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary of the United States of America to Japan, vice Larz Anderson, resigned.

COMMISSIONER OF PENSIONS.

Gaylord M. Saltzgaber, of Van Wert, Ohio, to be Commissioner of Pensions, vice James L. Davenport.

REGISTER OF THE LAND OFFICE.

Richard Strobach, of North Yakima, Wash., to be register of the land office at North Yakima, vice Harry Y. Saint, term expired.

COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE.

Ben Marshall, of Kentucky, to be collector of internal revenue for the seventh district of Kentucky, in place of Timothy A. Field, resigned.

POSTMASTERS.

ALABAMA.

Charles S. McDowell to be postmaster at Eufaula, Ala., in place of George W. Russell. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

O. M. Reynolds to be postmaster at Anniston, Ala., in place of Charles R. Barker. Incumbent's commission expired March 27, 1912.

Oscar Sheffield to be postmaster at Pine Hill, Ala. Office became presidential January 1, 1912.

ARKANSAS.

H. B. Ingram to be postmaster at Conway, Ark., in place of Owen J. Owen, jr., deceased.

T. L. Pound to be postmaster at Danville, Ark. Office became presidential January 1, 1913.

A. J. Stephens to be postmaster at Morrillton, Ark., in place of George H. Taylor, resigned.

W. F. Turner to be postmaster at Atkins, Ark., in place of James F. Burrus. Incumbent's commission expired December 17, 1912.

CALIFORNIA.

Alice T. Durnin to be postmaster at Colfax, Cal., in place of John L. Butler. Incumbent's commission expired January 28, 1913.

Joseph M. Hackett to be postmaster at Rocklin, Cal., in place of Lena O. Gregory, resigned.

Charles Whited to be postmaster at Willits, Cal., in place of Eli H. Wells. Incumbent's commission expired February 18, 1913.

COLORADO.

M. M. Sutley to be postmaster at Center, Colo., in place of Theodore E. Ickes, resigned.

CONNECTICUT.

John L. Eliot to be postmaster at Clinton, Conn., in place of William H. Kelsey. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

George F. Hammill to be postmaster at Georgetown, Conn., in place of Charles H. Taylor. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

DELAWARE.

William Brockson to be postmaster at Middletown, Del., in place of John A. Jolls, deceased.

E. Pierce Ellis to be postmaster at Laurel, Del., in place of Frank F. Davis. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1912.

John B. Mustard to be postmaster at Milton, Del., in place of John R. Black. Incumbent's commission expired December 17, 1912.

Orlando W. Short to be postmaster at Seaford, Del., in place of Irwin M. Chipman. Incumbent's commission expired January 18, 1913.

GEORGIA.

B. T. Baker to be postmaster at Woodbury, Ga., in place of Mary E. Hinton. Incumbent's commission expired February 27, 1912.

Mary P. Dixon to be postmaster at West Point, Ga., in place of Mary P. Dixon. Incumbent's commission expired January 27, 1913.

Mrs. H. W. J. Ham to be postmaster at Gainesville, Ga., in place of Helen D. Longstreet. Incumbent's commission expired December 8, 1912.

Ada Winslow to be postmaster at Manchester, Ga. Office became presidential January 1, 1911.

ILLINOIS.

D. M. Fullmer to be postmaster at New Athens, Ill., in place of Jacob H. Koch. Incumbent's commission expired January 28, 1913.

Robert E. Gamble to be postmaster at Kirkwood, Ill., in place of John Holliday. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

W. D. Hall to be postmaster at Port Byron, Ill., in place of John McCauly, resigned.

W. H. Harkrader to be postmaster at Hamilton, Ill., in place of F. E. Herold. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1913.

Claude Shaffner to be postmaster at Dallas City, Ill., in place of Wallace Diver. Incumbent's commission expired January 26, 1913.

INDIANA.

James W. Carroll to be postmaster at Otterbein, Ind., in place of John C. Bartindale. Incumbent's commission expired February 1, 1913.

Robert F. Dobbins to be postmaster at Wolcott, Ind., in place of John R. Nordyke. Incumbent's commission expired January 13, 1913.

Levi A. Eaton to be postmaster at Wanatah, Ind., in place of Hattie Yarger. Incumbent's commission expired January 14, 1913.

Daniel Gantz to be postmaster at Odon, Ind., in place of Harry H. Crooke, resigned.

E. R. Niccum to be postmaster at Swayzee, Ind., in place of Isaac F. Lawshe. Incumbent's commission expired February 11, 1913.

Hume L. Sammons to be postmaster at Kentland, Ind., in place of Richard C. McCain. Incumbent's commission expired April 22, 1912.

IOWA.

George W. Bensler to be postmaster at Delta, Iowa, in place of Samuel G. Wilson, removed.

Carl Bentson to be postmaster at Jewell, Iowa, in place of Frederick N. Taylor. Incumbent's commission expired April 13, 1912.

Fred Biermann to be postmaster at Decorah, Iowa, in place of Joseph J. Marsh. Incumbent's commission expired January 26, 1913.

J. B. Conley to be postmaster at Lake Mills, Iowa, in place of Martin A. Aasgaard, resigned.

Arthur Goshorn to be postmaster at Winterset, Iowa, in place of W. H. Vance. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

Christian Konrad to be postmaster at Lacona, Iowa, in place of James W. Thorn. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

Edward E. Swank to be postmaster at Richland, Iowa, in place of Fred J. Fearis. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

William Wallace Finn to be postmaster at Wesley, Iowa, in place of Olie H. Anderson. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

KANSAS.

Alfred D. Carpenter to be postmaster at Oswego, Kans., in place of Robert H. Montgomery. Incumbent's commission expired April 1, 1913.

Madison D. Gallogly to be postmaster at Hoxie, Kans., in place of Charles T. Dallam. Incumbent's commission expired March 31, 1912.

John McKee to be postmaster at Clay Center, Kans., in place of Harry C. Achenbach. Incumbent's commission expired December 18, 1911.

Joseph Pelishek to be postmaster at Wilson, Kans., in place of James M. Brown. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1913.

E. L. Pepper to be postmaster at Conway Springs, Kans., in place of Joel J. Booth, resigned.

James A. Thompson to be postmaster at White Water, Kans. Office became presidential October 1, 1912.

KENTUCKY.

Robert I. Blagg to be postmaster at Benton, Ky., in place of W. S. Griffith, resigned.

Sandy P. Cooke to be postmaster at Smiths Grove, Ky., in place of William J. Wade. Incumbent's commission expired January 14, 1913.

Coney Kitchen Lewis to be postmaster at Grayson, Ky., in place of John D. Littlejohn. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

Morgan Kuykendall to be postmaster at Kevil, Ky. Office became presidential January 1, 1913.

William G. O'Hara to be postmaster at Williamstown, Ky., in place of John W. Shields. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

LOUISIANA.

Rene L. Derouen to be postmaster at Ville Platte, La. Office became presidential April 1, 1913.

George A. Payne to be postmaster at Winnfield, La., in place of Edward Eagles. Incumbent's commission expired May 14, 1912.

Augustus P. Windham to be postmaster at Merryville, La. Office became presidential October 1, 1912.

MASSACHUSETTS.

Henry E. Madden to be postmaster at West Medway, Mass., in place of Daniel S. Woodman, deceased.

MISSOURI.

J. W. Allen to be postmaster at Mountain Grove, Mo., in place of John W. Key. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

Harlie F. Clark to be postmaster at Harrisonville, Mo., in place of Charles L. Harris. Incumbent's commission expired March 20, 1912.

De Coursey D. Hitt to be postmaster at Rockville, Mo. Office became presidential October 1, 1912.

J. Walter Hogan to be postmaster at Willow Springs, Mo., in place of Charles Ferguson, resigned.

Benjamin R. Lingle to be postmaster at Warsaw, Mo., in place of Warren T. Myers. Incumbent's commission expired January 14, 1913.

Richard B. Wilson to be postmaster at Montrose, Mo., in place of Charles M. Clark. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1913.

MONTANA.

Charles L. Beers to be postmaster at Judith Gap, Mont. Office became presidential October 1, 1912.

Mordena C. Busey to be postmaster at Eureka, Mont., in place of Emma Dimmick. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

Grant Robinson to be postmaster at Lewistown, Mont., in place of Albert Pfaus. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

Thomas H. Rush to be postmaster at Wibaux, Mont., in place of Walter E. Williamson. Incumbent's commission expired February 20, 1913.

Henry H. Smith to be postmaster at Joliet, Mont. Office became presidential October 1, 1912.

J. A. Wright to be postmaster at Chester, Mont. Office became presidential April 1, 1911.

NEVADA.

Jennie R. Backus to be postmaster at Golconda, Nev., in place of Mary E. Langwith, resigned.

J. R. Foreman to be postmaster at National, Nev., in place of Joseph M. Lyon, resigned.

NEW JERSEY.

Walter M. Miller to be postmaster at Netcong, N. J., in place of Abram J. Drake. Incumbent's commission expired January 28, 1912.

NEW YORK.

Charles J. Beams to be postmaster at Oneonta, N. Y., in place of Charles F. Shelland. Incumbent's commission expired January 14, 1912.

George L. Brown to be postmaster at Elizabethtown, N. Y., in place of Harry H. Nichols, deceased.

William H. Harding to be postmaster at Roscoe, N. Y., in place of Marshall H. Dean, resigned.

Herbert McMullen to be postmaster at Marlboro, N. Y., in place of James A. Johnston. Incumbent's commission expired April 10, 1913.

Morris J. O'Neill to be postmaster at Centerville Station, N. Y., in place of Lee V. Gardner. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1912.

NORTH CAROLINA.

J. D. Bivins to be postmaster at Albemarle, N. C., in place of Albert R. Kirk, resigned.

Richard A. Bruton to be postmaster at Mount Gilead, N. C. Office became presidential January 1, 1912.

James Gordon Hackett to be postmaster at Northwilkesboro, N. C., in place of J. Walter Jones. Incumbent's commission expired January 13, 1913.

Virgil D. Guire to be postmaster at Lenoir, N. C., in place of W. Eugene Miller. Incumbent's commission expired December 17, 1911.

E. E. Hunt, sr., to be postmaster at Mocksville, N. C., in place of Benjamin O. Morris. Incumbent's commission expired December 17, 1912.

R. B. Terry to be postmaster at Hamlet, N. C., in place of Elisha C. Terry. Incumbent's commission expired January 28, 1912.

David J. Whichard to be postmaster at Greenville, N. C., in place of Roy C. Flanagan, resigned.

F. M. Williams to be postmaster at Newton, N. C., in place of Walter H. Everhart. Incumbent's commission expired February 10, 1912.

NORTH DAKOTA.

William Strehlow to be postmaster at Casselton, N. Dak., in place of Anna Callahan, resigned.

OHIO.

O. S. Earnest to be postmaster at Plymouth, Ohio, in place of Samuel E. Nimmons, resigned.

John W. Sanford to be postmaster at Clarington, Ohio, in place of Samuel F. Rose. Incumbent's commission expired January 20, 1913.

OREGON.

E. E. Bragg to be postmaster at La Grande, Oreg., in place of George M. Richey. Incumbent's commission expired January 6, 1913.

C. W. Brown to be postmaster at Canyon City, Oreg., in place of Ella V. Powers. Incumbent's commission expired January 20, 1913.

William A. Elder to be postmaster at Stayton, Oreg. Office became presidential January 1, 1912.

H. Y. Kirkpatrick to be postmaster at Lebanon, Oreg., in place of William M. Brown. Incumbent's commission expired January 20, 1913.

H. E. Mahoney to be postmaster at Oakland, Oreg., in place of William C. Underwood. Incumbent's commission expired March 2, 1913.

Ira C. Mehrling to be postmaster at Falls City, Oreg., in place of John E. Beezley. Incumbent's commission expired January 20, 1913.

Ada H. Studer to be postmaster at Sumpter, Oreg., in place of Harvey S. Buck, removed.

Herman Wise to be postmaster at Astoria, Oreg., in place of Frank J. Carney. Incumbent's commission expired January 26, 1913.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Eugene L. Aldrich to be postmaster at New Milford, Pa., in place of Frank M. Butterfield. Incumbent's commission expired February 9, 1913.

Patrick F. Campbell to be postmaster at Portage, Pa., in place of Joseph C. Lauffer. Incumbent's commission expired January 29, 1911.

J. B. Esch to be postmaster at Spangler, Pa., in place of Eliza Mitchell. Incumbent's commission expired December 11, 1911.

Matthew C. Fox, jr., to be postmaster at Media, Pa., in place of Harry J. Makiver, resigned.

Ellsworth F. Giles to be postmaster at Altoona, Pa., in place of George Fox. Incumbent's commission expired March 2, 1913.

H. D. Jackson to be postmaster at Freedom, Pa., in place of Arthur H. Rider. Incumbent's commission expired April 8, 1913.

Henry J. Lemon to be postmaster at Port Allegany, Pa., in place of Joseph B. Colcord. Incumbent's commission expired January 13, 1913.

John H. Mitchell to be postmaster at Newtown, Pa., in place of George W. De Coursey. Incumbent's commission expired January 25, 1913.

Russell T. Mogle to be postmaster at Rossiter, Pa., in place of Thomas F. Bourke. Incumbent's commission expired April 5, 1913.

Roy R. Rowles to be postmaster at Philipsburg, Pa., in place of John Gowland. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1913.

Marion S. Schoch to be postmaster at Selinsgrove, Pa., in place of George C. Wagenseller. Incumbent's commission expired January 29, 1911.

A. R. Traugh to be postmaster at Hollidaysburg, Pa., in place of Frank J. Over. Incumbent's commission expired March 2, 1913.

Oscar F. Weiand to be postmaster at Perkasie, Pa., in place of Henry G. Moyer. Incumbent's commission expired January 14, 1913.

RHODE ISLAND.

James Brennan to be postmaster at River Point, R. I., in place of Edward W. Jones. Incumbent's commission expired December 14, 1912.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

W. Clarence Clinkscales to be postmaster at Belton, S. C., in place of W. Clarence Clinkscales. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1912.

Francis B. Gaffney to be postmaster at Gaffney, S. C., in place of Thomas Hester. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1913.

James F. Hunter to be postmaster at Lancaster, S. C., in place of James F. Hunter. Incumbent's commission expired April 8, 1913.

Leila Jackson Huntley to be postmaster at Cheraw, S. C., in place of Leila Jackson Huntley. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1912.

Arthur G. King to be postmaster at Easley, S. C., in place of Alonzo T. Folger, resigned.

John T. Lawrence to be postmaster at Seneca, S. C., in place of James G. Harper, resigned.

Rachael H. Minshall to be postmaster at Abbeville, S. C., in place of Frederic Minshall, deceased.

E. D. Raney to be postmaster at Beaufort, S. C., in place of George A. Reed. Incumbent's commission expired April 29, 1912.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

William Brady to be postmaster at Beresford, S. Dak., in place of Charles A. Ramsdell, deceased.

Dennis Foley to be postmaster at Menno, S. Dak. Office became presidential January 1, 1912.

George C. Knickerbocker to be postmaster at Eureka, S. Dak., in place of Philip Schamber, resigned.

Matthew F. Ryan to be postmaster at Mobridge, S. Dak., in place of John G. Vawter, resigned.

W. R. Veitch to be postmaster at Groton, S. Dak., in place of John G. Ropes, removed.

TENNESSEE.

Eugene Blakemore to be postmaster at Shelbyville, Tenn., in place of Leonidas T. Reagor. Incumbent's commission expired January 31, 1912.

TEXAS.

H. L. Brooks to be postmaster at Pearsall, Tex., in place of Lora L. Rowell. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

W. G. Carpenter to be postmaster at Kerrville, Tex., in place of Charles Real. Incumbent's commission expired January 27, 1913.

M. A. Chancey to be postmaster at Hondo, Tex., in place of Joseph Fohn. Incumbent's commission expired March 29, 1913.

Calvin C. Davis to be postmaster at Iowa Park, Tex., in place of William L. Yanger, deceased.

E. F. English to be postmaster at Cameron, Tex., in place of Thomas A. Pope. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1912.

J. T. Fulcher to be postmaster at Thorndale, Tex., in place of Gerhard Dube. Incumbent's commission expired April 2, 1912.

Marvin P. Gillis to be postmaster at Kosse, Tex., in place of Albert S. Jones. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1912.

J. S. J. Gober to be postmaster at Sanger, Tex., in place of Howell D. Greene. Incumbent's commission expired April 2, 1912.

Laura V. Hamner to be postmaster at Claude, Tex., in place of David C. Dodge. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1912.

W. J. Harkey to be postmaster at Palmer, Tex. Office became presidential October 1, 1912.

S. R. Haynes to be postmaster at De Leon, Tex., in place of Clarence R. Redden. Incumbent's commission expired April 2, 1912.

M. J. Kivlin to be postmaster at Kingsville, Tex., in place of J. S. House. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1912.

E. T. Oliver to be postmaster at Caldwell, Tex., in place of Edmund A. Potts. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1911.

Bessie Peterson to be postmaster at Port Lavaca, Tex., in place of Charles Rubert. Incumbent's commission expired December 16, 1911.

Charles C. Porter to be postmaster at Meridian, Tex., in place of John Harvey. Incumbent's commission expired April 28, 1912.

S. A. Roberts to be postmaster at Blooming Grove, Tex., in place of Alva P. Langston. Incumbent's commission expired February 11, 1913.

John A. Shapard to be postmaster at Rockdale, Tex., in place of Ben Lowenstein. Incumbent's commission expired January 14, 1913.

W. B. Smith to be postmaster at Shamrock, Tex., in place of Hugh E. Exum. Incumbent's commission expired March 1, 1913.

G. P. Tarrant to be postmaster at Aransas Pass, Tex. Office became presidential April 1, 1910.

VERMONT.

Alton G. Baird to be postmaster at Orleans, Vt., in place of Henry S. Webster. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

James McGovern to be postmaster at North Bennington, Vt., in place of Heman I. Spafford. Incumbent's commission expired May 19, 1912.

Patrick H. Thompson to be postmaster at Arlington, Vt., in place of Edward C. Woodworth. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1913.

VIRGINIA.

S. L. Cecil to be postmaster at Pennington Gap, Va., in place of M. L. Slemp. Incumbent's commission expired January 11, 1913.

Leslie F. Ferguson to be postmaster at Appomattox, Va., in place of Robert Irby. Incumbent's commission expired April 5, 1913.

E. M. Morrison to be postmaster at Smithfield, Va., in place of Benjamin P. Gay. Incumbent's commission expired March 11, 1912.

H. I. Tuggle to be postmaster at Martinsville, Va., in place of Charles P. Smith. Incumbent's commission expired February 5, 1910.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Herbert T. Davis to be postmaster at West Union, W. Va., in place of William R. Brown. Incumbent's commission expired February 18, 1913.

Fred F. Jasper to be postmaster at Glen Jean, W. Va., in place of Edgar C. James, resigned.

David W. McConaughey to be postmaster at Cameron, W. Va., in place of Robert B. Watson. Incumbent's commission expired January 23, 1910.

WISCONSIN.

Albert J. Hemmy to be postmaster at Hartford, Wis., in place of Irving L. Bonniwell. Incumbent's commission expired April 24, 1912.

Frank J. Maher to be postmaster at Omro, Wis., in place of Oliver W. Babcock. Incumbent's commission expired January 22, 1913.

E. R. Peck to be postmaster at Bangor, Wis., in place of James Carr. Incumbent's commission expired January 12, 1913.

George H. Schmidt to be postmaster at Kewaskum, Wis., in place of August G. Koch, deceased.

John Vander Linden to be postmaster at West De Pere, Wis., in place of Wallace S. Hager. Incumbent's commission expired December 11, 1911.

WYOMING.

Malcolm R. Merrill to be postmaster at Wheatland, Wyo., in place of Frederick E. Davis. Incumbent's commission expired December 17, 1912.

George Whittaker to be postmaster at Yellowstone Park, Wyo., in place of Alexander Lyall, resigned.

WITHDRAWALS.

Executive nominations withdrawn from the Senate May 7, 1913.

POSTMASTERS.

GEORGIA.

B. F. Baker to be postmaster at Woodbury, in the State of Georgia.

INDIANA.

Daniel Ganz to be postmaster at Odon, in the State of Indiana.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, May 7, 1913.

The House met at 11 o'clock a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Our Father in heaven, we realize that apart from Thee we can not exist, for in Thee we live and move and have our being. Every breath we breathe is a new birth; every thought, uttered or unexpressed, a token of Thy care; every act a sufferance of Thy will. Help us, therefore, assiduously to follow the laws of health as we know them and keep ourselves free from the contamination of sin, that we may think clearly, act wisely with Thee, through Thee, to the larger life and possibilities in Christ Jesus, the world's great Exemplar. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

THE TARIFF.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill H. R. 3321—the tariff bill.

The motion was agreed to.

Accordingly the House resolved itself into Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, with Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. When the House adjourned last evening paragraph E was pending. Are there amendments to paragraph E?

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM] offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 141, line 3, after the word "acting," strike out the word "including" and insert the word "excluding."

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, we have had a wide range of debate with reference to the bill now under consideration. Many things have been said that have not been pertinent, and much has occupied the time of the House that has no relevancy to the measure before the House. I am glad to see that in the discussion of the income tax there is a greater observance of the rule that whatever is said must be pertinent to that which is being considered.

The time for debate upon the question as to whether or not we shall have an income tax has long since passed. It is not necessary for one to express one's private views with reference to such a measure. The majority of this House have felt it to be their duty to present a bill upon this subject, and have asked the House to pass it. They have presented the one that is now under consideration, and it seems to me that it is the duty of the Members upon this side of the House not to hinder, obstruct, or interfere with its passage, but to aid in making it such a measure as will give the question of an income tax a fair and full test by the American people when put in actual practice.

While I respect the men who are upon the Ways and Means Committee and their skill and judgment, I must say that a perusal of the second section of this bill leads one to believe that an immature measure is being pressed upon the attention of Congress.

This section of the bill ought to be reconsidered and revised. There is much in it that is fraught with peril in any attempt to execute its provisions, and it seems to me there is no section of this bill that is so imperfect as the one now under consideration.

Let me ask the attention of the House to a few sentences found on page 141:

All persons, firms, copartnerships, companies, corporations, joint-stock companies, or associations—

And so on, and then the section, after naming others acting in a fiduciary capacity, proceeds as follows:

Are hereby authorized—

And not only authorized, but—

Required to deduct and withhold from such annual gains, profits, and income such sum as will be sufficient to pay the normal tax imposed thereon by this section, and shall pay to the officer of the United States Government authorized to receive the same; and they are each hereby made personally liable for such tax.

What does this legislation mean? It means that you are creating a horde of collectors who are not official; that you are constituting every man through whose hands passes a sum of money coming to you as income a collector to collect and withhold from you the amount of the normal tax, and he, not you, must pay it over to the collector.

Was there ever a more shameful provision inserted in any bill—one so insulting and humiliating to the self-respect of every American citizen? A horde of collectors put upon you for the purpose of intercepting your money, and withholding it as though you were a thief and scoundrel, and the legislature in a bill deliberately treating all the people as such.

This is the provision of this income tax to which I have directed your attention. Consider it for a moment and answer for yourselves, Is it or is it not fraught with peril and disturbance to the relations of men in the business of life?

Every lessee, every mortgagor, shall withhold this tax. When the time comes for payment a defense is intervened, a legal question is raised, the right to collect what is due to one is taken away, and what is your remedy? The remedy in this bill requires one to go to this so constituted collector and say to him with your hat in your hand, "I humbly beg leave to call your attention to the fact that I am exempt," or "that this tax is not due from me and you ought not to retain it"; but one's word is not sufficient. He must sanctify it with an oath to this man, and it is no answer to say, "or you may make return to the collector," for the duty is imposed on the individual to seize and withhold this portion of the income, and he will not pass it by lightly when he has been made personally liable for it, in this bill, as a debt of his own. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM] makes the usual argument of those who oppose this or any other just method of taxation. During the past few weeks I have heard more talk about widows and orphans on the part of these big men who represent big interests than I have ever heard before within the same length of time by anybody during my lifetime. The gentleman from Pennsylvania undertakes, either intentionally or otherwise, and I hope otherwise, to make an entirely erroneous impression upon the membership here with respect to the meaning and the effect of the operation of this provision of the law. Even in his own State certain individuals and corporations are required to withhold the tax of other taxpayers and pay to the State, as I am informed. In a large number of States of the Union banks are required to withhold the tax for all shareholders and pay to the State. The gentleman has made no complaint as to the operation of this law, which is similar in Pennsylvania, as I understand.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. Oh, I beg the gentleman's pardon. There is no such law in Pennsylvania as that which is incorporated in the text of this proposed measure.

Mr. HULL. There is a law there that requires the tax to be withheld and paid to the State by one person or corporation for another, is there not?

Mr GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. No; nothing like this at all.

Mr. HULL. I am informed by other Members from that State that there is such a law, and I was simply making the statement upon the strength of what they informed me.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman permit me to make one suggestion?

Mr. HULL. I can not yield. I do know that there are laws in most or many of the States which require banks to withhold and pay taxes, precisely as this provision implies, for every stockholder in those banks, and according to the gentleman's argument that is a gross outrage, it is a gross reflection on all the stockholders because the banks as a mere matter of convenience to the stockholder and the State withhold and pay to the State.

Mr. EDMONDS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HULL. I can not yield. This is a provision that has been in operation for 50 years in England. Every hod carrier understands it, and instead of complaining about it they approve it. It means that double the amount of tax otherwise under the same rate goes into the Treasury, and with a minimum amount of trouble or annoyance to the taxpayer. It simply means that any person, company, or corporation having in their hands at the end of the year taxable income going to another in the way of salary or rent or interest, and so forth, arising from an annual transaction, shall withhold the tax and make return along with their own return, giving the name and address of the other taxpayer, and when that reaches the internal-revenue office the amount of tax is computed and sent back to the person at the source, and he sends a check in payment for it along with his own. No complaint is made of this in other countries; no complaint is made in this country where precisely this method is observed in perhaps a majority of the States on the part of the banks whose duty it is to withhold and pay the tax for their stockholders. I hope that before gentlemen rush into these sweeping criticisms they will take just a little pains to read over the bill and to examine the practice followed by other countries and States that have in operation this identical method of collection. It is no imposition on anyone, it is no reflection on anyone, it is simply a matter of convenience both to the taxpayer and to the Government, with no serious injury or trouble imposed upon anyone.

Now, the gentleman refers here to lessees and mortgagors. The effect of that amendment would be nothing if it was adopted. The first line is the saving part of this section—

All persons, firms, copartnerships, companies, or corporations, etc.

Now, it may be lessees or mortgagors. That which follows is only explanatory, and the only question is whether the lessee or mortgagor at the end of the year has a taxable amount of income going to a taxpayer. If so, he simply withholds the tax on that particular amount. He does not inquire into the taxpayer's other business or his other sources of income. That is a matter between the taxpayer and the Government. He only withholds the tax on this particular item that is in his hands, and he is not personally liable for the tax until this income accrues in his hands and is to be paid to the taxpayer. Then he withholds the amount of the tax, so that no injury is inflicted upon him in this respect. He is simply induced thereby to make safe payment of it to the Government.

Mr. EDMONDS. Mr. Chairman, I have listened to the gentleman's explanation, and I must say that I do not think it covers the case where it comes to an individual. We are not talking about the corporations. They can do this very easily. But suppose a man owns a house and that is all he has in the world. He rents it for $25 a month. Under this bill do you require the tenant to take out 25 cents a month and pay it to the Government?

Mr. HULL. Oh, no; not at all. It means anything except that.

Mr. EDMONDS. How is he going to get out of it?

Mr. HULL. He does not retain any tax at all until it passes the $4,000 mark.

Mr. EDMONDS. I know; but how does the tenant know that?

Mr. HULL. The tenant knows what he owes the landlord at the end of the year. If it is more than $4,000 a year, he retains the tax on the excess. For instance, if it is $5,000 per year he would retain $10, or 1 per cent on the $1,000 excess above $4,000, when he pays it to the lessor, and conveys that $10 to the Government.

Mr. EDMONDS. Yes; but it does not say so in the bill at all.

Mr. HULL. It is very plain in line 11, on page 141:

Exceeding $4,000 for any taxable year.

Mr. EDMONDS. But if the tenant is paying $300 a year rent, how does he know that the amount he is paying will increase the income of the lessor above $4,000?

Mr. HULL. He is simply dealing with this one item. The taxpayer takes up with the Government any other sources of income.

Mr. EDMONDS. I think the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM] is right on the proposition. I do not think it is definite at all.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Chairman, I think it is important that we understand the meaning of this provision. Because I have talked it over several times with the gentleman from Tennessee I want to emphasize what I understand to be the view of the committee touching the meaning of this particular section. That is, that there is an option given to the man who owes the tax either to make to the person who is to pay the tax for him, or to the collector, a statement as to such deductions as he is entitled to.

Mr. ANDERSON. Will the gentleman——

Mr. SHERLEY. Just a moment. I want at least to finish one thought. If it is made to the person who is to pay the tax, why then that is sent with the statement of such person to the collector, and there the amount of tax that is to be paid is ascertained and the person to pay the tax is notified. On the other hand, if he chooses, he may send his statement to the collector. Then his statement is put in conjunction with the statement of the person required to pay the tax in the first instance; and again the collector estimates the direct amount of tax that is to be paid, and notifies the person required to pay it in the first instance. Or in other words, whichever course he takes to claim his deduction, the result is that the collector is required to notify the person having first to pay the tax of the exact amount.

For myself I think it might have been very well if the law had expressly stated that the collector should do that very thing, so that the language which says that the person required to pay in the first instance shall pay and shall be liable for the tax might not be construed as in any sense making him liable for the whole amount without regard to any deduction unless he was notified by the person for whom he pays of such deductions in the first instance; and in order that the construction which the gentleman from Tennessee has put on it, which is the committee's construction, may be clearly understood by the House and understood in connection with the construction of the act if it finally passes in this form, I have thought it wise to make this statement. Now, I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. ANDERSON. I understood the gentleman from Tennessee to say that this would not apply in any case where the interest did not exceed $4,000. Now, I call the attention of the gentleman to the bottom of page 142, to the proviso, which is as follows:

Provided, That the amount of the normal tax herein imposed shall be deducted and withheld from fixed and determinable annual gains, profits, and income derived from interest upon bonds, mortgages, or other indebtedness of corporations, joint-stock companies or associations, insurance companies, and also of the United States Government not now exempt from taxation, whether payable annually or at shorter or longer periods, although such interest does not amount to $4,000.

Does that apply only to interest from Government bonds, or does it apply to any interest upon mortgages, and so forth?

Mr. HULL. It applies alone to interest due from corporations, not from individuals.

Mr. MANN. It does not say so.

Mr. HULL. If the gentleman will permit me, as was stated some days ago here, the only exception to the general rule which requires a person or corporation to withhold the tax of an individual is when the income in his hands exceeds $4,000; that is this exception to which the gentleman from Minnesota calls attention; that is, in case the interest derived from corporate bonds or other corporate indebtedness is going to the taxable individual.

Mr. ANDERSON. I would like to ask the gentleman another question. The provision on page 135 of the bill allows an individual to make a deduction from his gross income of income upon which the tax has been paid at the source. In case of mortgages and bonds, the normal tax of 1 per cent would have been paid by the corporation or collected at the source. Consequently the amount would be deducted from the gross income of the individual and would not be included in his net income upon which the surtax would be levied.

Mr. HULL. The gentleman overlooks the fact that any person who withholds the tax at the source makes a return of income as to that. All the tax is computed at the office of the internal-revenue collector. The amount of the tax is computed and the amount sent back.

Mr. ANDERSON. The corporation is only required to deduct the amount of the normal tax, and when they deduct it the individual is permitted to deduct the amount of the income upon which the normal tax is paid at the source from his gross income, and your surtax is only levied on his net income.

Mr. HULL. That is a different transaction. You dispose of the normal tax and then you come to the surtax.

Mr. ANDERSON. You have specifically provided that the individual is permitted to deduct from the gross income the amount upon which the normal tax has been taken out at the source.

Mr. HULL. I think, if the gentleman will read the bill carefully, he will see that it is perfectly plain.

Mr. ANDERSON. I have read the bill 20 times and I am positive that the construction I put on it is correct.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this section and pending amendments close in 25 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto shall close in 25 minutes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, do I understand that this agreement applies clear up to paragraph F?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. F is reserved.

The CHAIRMAN. To which agreement does the gentleman from Iowa refer?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I refer to the request of the gentleman from Alabama.

The CHAIRMAN. The request of the gentleman from Alabama is that all debate on paragraph E and all amendments thereto shall close in 25 minutes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I said that I only wanted 2 minutes, but if it goes clear up to F I want 5 minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will agree that 18 minutes of that time shall be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois and 7 minutes by myself.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on paragraph E and all amendments thereto shall close in 25 minutes, 18 minutes to be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois and 7 minutes by the gentleman from Alabama. Is there objection?

Mr. CALDER. Reserving the right to object, can I have 5 minutes of that time? Could not the gentleman give 22 minutes to this side?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Very well, Mr. Chairman, I will modify my request and make it 30 minutes, and reserve 8 minutes to this side.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama modifies his request so that there be 30 minutes' debate, 22 minutes to be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and 8 minutes by himself.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. And all pending amendments be disposed of at the end of that time.

Mr. MANN. Let us dispose of the amendments as we go along.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Very well.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM].

The question was taken, and the amendment was lost.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following further amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 141, lines 1 to 22, after the figure "1," strike out lines 1 to 21, inclusive, and the words "such tax" in the twenty-second line.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM].

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I would like to inform the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL] that I have read this bill carefully. I have not made my criticisms of this section without due regard to my own conscientious views and convictions. I said nothing in my remarks about widows and orphans, and the gentleman ought to give me credit for not traveling outside of the record. He has traveled outside of the record and has attempted to impugn my motives.

I want to assure the gentleman, in all kindness, that my motives as a Member of this House are such as have characterized me in the discharge of every public duty I have ever undertaken in all my life. Whether I have represented during my life big or small interests in the country will make no matter to me as a Member of this Congress. Here I am, acting under my oath, and my sense of duty to my constituency and the whole people is as high and as unimpeachable as is that of the gentleman from Tennessee. Now, my criticism is based upon this section, because I feel, as a lawyer and a critic of language in a statute, that this is bound to make trouble to the business world. I said at the outstart I am interposing no motion for the purpose of hindrance or delay in the passage of this bill.

When the gentleman alludes to cases in which corporations retain moneys to pay taxes it is always to those cases where a relationship exists between the parties that can not be said to exist when you constitute an individual, who may be responsible or otherwise, the taxgatherer and taxpayer for you in your name and stead. I want to call the gentleman's attention to a peculiar distinction that is made in the remedy that he says is proposed in this section. First, with relation to claiming the benefit of the $4,000 exemption. In this section the language compels him to claim that benefit from the individual citizen who collects and retains his tax, where the relationship of the man ought to be with his Government and with its officials. Second, in the case when he claims the benefit of those things that are exempted—in other words, the deductions—he has it in the alternative. He may either claim it from the man who has withheld his tax money and paid it to the collector, or he may go to the collector at the end of the year and claim it from him. In the one instance it is imperative that he go to the individual constituted by this section a taxgatherer, but not an official, and claim the exemption from him; and in the other case—that is, claiming deductions—he has the alternative; he may go to this extraordinary collector, or he may to go to the United States internal-revenue collector. I dare say that in the administration of this section there is going to be utter confusion, and the language shows that it has not been considered by those who are competent to judge of the relation of things in such a matter as this. To put a lessee in a position to collect from his landlord his—the landlord's—income taxes and pay them for him, and to put the mortgagor in the position of collecting out of the interest due his mortgagee the amount of this tax and pay it for him is surely an anomalous, unusual, and objectionable feature of this chapter in the history of tax legislation. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MANN. Did the gentleman use all of his time?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman used four minutes of his time.

Mr. MANN. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON].

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to indulge in captious criticism upon this section of the bill, but I do think that it ought to be subject to just and fair criticism in all of its provisions. I think it is to be regretted that it has been coupled up with a party measure so that it can not receive that careful, impartial, and nonpartisan consideration which a bill of this character ought to receive at the hands of this House. No party or no set of men has a monopoly of the income-tax principle, and this section of the bill ought to be considered under conditions which would give fair opportunity for consideration of the matter in a nonpartisan and impartial way. [Applause on the Republican side.] Now, Mr. Chairman, the present Payne-Aldrich law imposes a tax of 1 per cent upon the net incomes or net earnings of corporations. That tax of 1 per cent, or normal tax, is continued in this bill and extended to individuals having an income of over $4,000 and not in excess of $20,000. In addition, a graduated-income tax or surtax is imposed upon incomes in excess of $20,000, but that tax is levied not upon the gross income, not upon the return of the individual, but on his net income as his return shows that income. Now, in determining that net income this bill authorizes him to make certain deductions. These deductions include among others, in the first place, a deduction from his gross income of that part of his income upon which the corporation has paid what amounts to the corporation tax in this bill.

As a result that income will not be included in his net income, and as a further result he will not be taxed upon the income which he receives from a corporation as dividends, except for the normal tax. To illustrate, here is a corporation having 10 stockholders, capitalized at $10,000,000. Its net earnings are $1,000,000. Upon those net earnings of $1,000,000 it pays a normal tax, or $10,000, leaving $990,000 to be distributed among its stockholders, or $99,000 apiece. Presumably under this bill each stockholder will pay an additional tax of 2 per cent on $99,000. As a matter of fact, no such thing will happen, because in determining his net income he should have credit for the amount which he receives from the corporation as dividends, and then he will deduct that amount from his gross income under this bill, because the normal tax has been paid by the corporation. It is perfectly obvious under those circumstances that nothing but normal taxes will be paid upon dividends of corporations.

Mr. HULL. Will the gentleman allow me to call his attention to line 10, page 134?

Mr. ANDERSON. Ah, yes; but that refers to the return and the tax levied, as the gentleman will notice, not upon the amount which the taxpayer returns but upon the net income which his return shows, figured according to the method provided in the bill.

Mr. HULL. If the gentleman will permit, that is the normal tax only, and not the additional tax.

Mr. ANDERSON. Not at all. He pays his tax upon the net income, whether the normal tax or some other tax. There is no distinction, so far as the individual is concerned, in this bill between the normal tax and the income tax. He pays the tax whether it is the normal tax or graduated tax upon the net income, as that income is shown by the return he makes.

Mr. HULL. May I interrupt the gentleman? On page 134, read line 7 down to line 11. That shows conclusively that no part of the tax is paid at the source, but a return is required of the entire amount as to the additional tax.

Mr. ANDERSON. I think the gentleman is entirely mistaken about that. The normal tax in every instance, if it is levied upon dividends or upon the interest of a mortgage, a mortgage or bond, is collected at the source—the gentleman shakes his head, but I call his attention to the paragraph to which I called the attention of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL]. It does not seem to me there is any question about the construction of it. I admit, and gladly admit, that it was not the purpose of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL] to write the bill in that way, but I do maintain that the conclusion I have drawn is the necessary conclusion to be drawn from the language of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MANN. Let us have a vote on that proposition.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I regret that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM] became offended at the impersonal remarks I indulged in in trying to call attention to another phase of this bill. I construed the remarks of the gentleman as a rather vicious attack upon the effect of this section which I considered entirely unwarranted from the face of the language of the section to which he was referring. I perhaps did weave in some arguments that other gentlemen have been making on the floor and elsewhere with respect to widows and orphans. The gentleman denies any disposition to utilize that argument, and I am glad to withdraw that part of my allusion.

Now, Mr. Chairman, as to this section, if gentlemen desire to offer a criticism to this method of collection at the source, they should have commenced at a preceding paragraph. The first paragraph of this bill imposes the tax; paragraph B defines incomes; the second half of paragraph B defines the method of computing net incomes. When you get over to paragraph E you come to the direction for making returns. Three kinds of returns are required for the purpose of the normal tax—one by the individual, another by guardian or trustee for his beneficiary, and the third one by any person or corporation who withholds for another an individual normal tax at the source of the income.

These three kinds of returns are directed. Now, if gentlemen want to assault this phase of the matter, they should have commenced on page 138, down near the bottom, where the return is required. This section, to which the gentleman refers now, merely relates to the payment of the tax after it has been returned by the person or corporation for the taxpayer. This is simply a long-standing and well-understood and well-established and highly satisfactory method of enforcing this tax in England. It has been better developed there than anywhere else, and within the past four years one of the ablest parliamentary tax commissions that has been appointed there perhaps in a generation was directed to make a thorough investigation and report as to whether this method of collection at the source should be abolished in order to permit a graduated tax running up in the usual manner. They reported back at the end of the year that, after making the most exhaustive investigation, this method of collection had doubled the amount of revenue under the same rate; that it had almost entirely removed the objection of inquisitoriousness or annoyance to the taxpayer when the tax was being enforced, and that this, more than any other feature of the entire law, has contributed to the popularity of the tax, making it as satisfactory as any other on the statute books, and that it at the same time had doubled the revenue.

Now, the Treasury Department in their regulations will designate here very clearly the classes of persons or corporations required to withhold the tax, just as the English law designates them in the body of the law, but it required a hundred pages in their law to do that and to prescribe other details. Their regulations will also designate those classes of individual taxpayers who will be required to make a personal return; that is, where their income is not derived from an annual business relationship or connection with some person or corporation, and so forth, and in the case of traders, or professional men, or business men, where their income accrues at different and irregular times, in different and irregular amounts—in all this class of assessments and as to all this class of returns they would make a personal return. But in cases where rents or interest or salaries are due from one person or corporation to an individual taxpayer, subject to the normal tax of 1 per cent, and arising from an annual business relationship, this method of assessment and collection at the source is utilized in this bill.

Now, if this plan has worked so admirably in other countries, if it has worked so well in England particularly, where there are only 40,000 corporations, why would it not work much better in this country where there are more than 200,000 corporations? I can see no reason why it would not work just as practically, and even more so here; and instead of being an annoyance to the taxpayer when it becomes understood and adjusted to the country, I am satisfied, in view of the uniform experience elsewhere, that this will be entirely satisfactory in its general effect and operation.

Now, my friend from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON] is entirely in error in confusing the additional tax with the normal tax.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Tennessee yield for a question?

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. CAMPBELL. If a citizen, say, has five buildings in five several cities, from which he receives a rent of, say, $5,000 a year for each, what method of collecting would apply to the income of that citizen?

Mr. HULL. In each case the lessee, when he made his own return, would note the name and address of this lessor and the $5,000 of accrued income that is to pass through his hands. He would return that to the district collector, who would send it to the Internal Revenue Commissioner's office here in Washington. He would compute the amount of tax, and if the lessor had filed notice with one of these lessees claiming his $4,000 exemption, that would be pinned to that $5,000 return, and when it reached the office the computation of taxes would be made, and in each case $50 of that tax would be sent back, with notice to the lessor, except that in the case where the exemption was claimed the Internal Revenue Commissioner would have deducted the $4,000 and sent back an item of $10 to that particular lessee.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Would it not be less cumbersome to the citizen to pay his own tax?

Mr. HULL. Yes; it might be if he would do so. But, as I said the other day, he only returns on the average about one-tenth of his property according to the experience of the States.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman permit a question?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Tennessee yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. HULL. Yes.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. In the illustration just made would not each one of the lessees retain the tax? And if the rent became due in the first six months of the fiscal or calendar year would they not retain it or keep it until the time of the payment to the collector? And what good purpose to the Government is subserved in that respect?

Mr. HULL. This $4,000 provision about which the gentleman from Pennsylvania complains, down near the bottom of page 141——

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair directs the attention of the gentleman from Tennessee to the fact that he has consumed eight minutes.

Mr. HULL. My time is up, then.

Mr. MANN. I should like to have a vote on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend by striking from line 12, page 144, the words "such person has other net income" and inserting in lieu thereof the following: "The entire net income of such person is of such amount as to make it subject to the additional tax as in this section provided."

Mr. MANN. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa four minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GREEN] is recognized for four minutes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I entirely agree with the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL] as to the necessity of taxing the income at the source. While the income tax is the fairest, the most just, and the most equitable method of levying a revenue, it is at the same time the easiest evaded, and the method which the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL] has undertaken to apply here is for the purpose of preventing such evasions. So far I agree with him, and so far I desire to cooperate with him; but I think that, inadvertently or otherwise, the provisions of this bill fail to carry out his intentions. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL] has entirely failed to answer the argument of the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON], as I view it. It is true that on page 134 there is a provision that every person subject to the additional tax shall make a personal return thereof; but there is also another provision, on page 126, that in making this return he may deduct the amount which is received from dividends upon stock or from the net earnings of any corporation, joint-stock company, association, or insurance company which is taxable upon its net income, as hereinafter provided.

Now, if in making his returns, in order to ascertain the net income, he may make this reduction, then in case he is liable to the surtax, he escapes it entirely on that income.

Mr. HULL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Yes.

Mr. HULL. I wish to direct the gentleman's attention to the fact that the normal tax is paid in three ways, and the additional tax, as it says, is additional to the normal tax, and on the net income which is made subject to the normal tax. Now, the normal tax of 1 per cent——

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. I am sorry that I am unable to yield to the gentleman further, but I have only four minutes. I can not give the gentleman further time. I wish to call attention to my proposed amendment which I have offered here. As the third paragraph on page 144 stands it now reads—

Any person for whom return has been made and the tax paid, or to be paid as aforesaid, shall not be required to make a return unless such person has other net income, but only one deduction of $4,000 shall be made in the case of any such person.

Now, the question arises, What is "other net income"? It can mean but one thing—other net income upon which this tax has not been paid. This normal tax has been paid by the corporation or firm which may retain and pay it, and if the person whose tax is thus deducted has no other income except from stocks or bonds that has been paid in this manner, then, notwithstanding the income may be above $100,000 a year, he will only be required to make a return which will make him pay the normal tax. The amendment that I have offered is in such form that it will specially meet that situation, and if his entire income is in excess of the amount so as to make it liable for the additional tax, then he will be required to make a further return.

Conceding everything that the gentleman from Tennessee has said with reference to other provisions of the bill for the sake of argument, because I do not admit it, this provision in paragraph 144 is in direct conflict therewith, and ought to be—and I am satisfied will—eventually be corrected.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I believe I have nine minutes remaining. Four minutes were to be given to the gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDER], who has an amendment to a subsequent paragraph. I relinquish that four minutes, so that I now have five.

Mr. Chairman, it was a Republican Congress that submitted the income-tax resolution to the States for ratification, and I had hoped that when the income-tax proposition in this bill was reached it would be considered from a nonpartisan standpoint, and that amendments and suggestions from this side of the House might receive careful attention from the other side of the House. But apparently we are to be treated in the same manner on this section that we were on the tariff provisions in the bill, and however meritorious the suggestions may be from this side of the House it is not the intention of the other side of the House to accept them.

Last night I offered an amendment to strike out from the bill the provision which exempts the compensation of the present President of the United States during the term for which he has been elected. This bill provides for a return at the end of this calendar year for all income received during the year. Now, in exempting the present President of the United States we may assume that the exemption is for one of two purposes—one, because the gentlemen desired to curry favor with the President, which I think would be beneath them, and I do not charge; and the other, because of the constitutional provision that the compensation of the President shall not be reduced.

But, if that be the reason, does it not equally apply to the two months and four days during which President Taft drew his compensation? If we can not reduce the compensation of the President of the United States during his term of office, can we reduce it after his term of office expires?

That leads me to the suggestion, what right have we under the constitutional provision to levy an income tax upon incomes received before the ratification of the amendment. Certainly, if we have the right to go back and tax incomes from the first of the year, and you propose to exempt your President—as you delight in calling him, but I will say our present President—from the payment of the tax, then you must exempt the payment of the tax on the salary drawn by President Taft during this year.

I doubt very much whether we have the power to extend the tax back of the time when the amendment was promulgated and ratified. If we can extend the tax back three months, can we not equally as well extend it back three years? If we can extend it back three years, we can extend it back to the foundation of the Government. What right have we under the Constitution to assume that the income-tax provision was in the Constitution before it was ratified? I know the suggestion will not meet with great consideration on the other side of the House. Nothing we can say over here will affect them, but what the people will say the next time they get a whack at them will greatly astonish them. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. SLAYDEN). The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GREEN].

The question was taken, and the amendment was lost.

The CHAIRMAN. Section G is now open for amendment.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 145, line 21, after the comma following the word "member," insert the following: "or to any insurance company or association which conducts all its business solely on the mutual plan and only for the benefit of its policyholders or members, and having no capital stock and no stockholders or shareholders, and holding all its property in trust and reserve for its holders or members."

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Chairman, the provision in the bill to which this amendment applies excepts from the income tax fraternal insurance associations, building and loan associations, mutual savings banks, and other associations of a similar character.

The purpose of this amendment is to include mutual life insurance companies which are carried on solely for the benefit of the policyholders, and holding all of their property in trust, reserved for the members of the associations. Since the bill was first introduced the inclusion of mutual life insurance companies has been remedied in part by a committee amendment adopted yesterday afternoon, which exempts the principal of the amounts paid by the policyholders to these companies from the income tax. But if it is proper, I respectfully contend, to exempt fraternal insurance societies and mutual savings banks from the income tax, then it is proper to extend that exemption to mutual life insurance companies. These large associations are not formed for the benefit of any stockholders or shareholders, but exclusively for the benefit of policyholders. It may be argued that under the corporation tax in the Payne Tariff Act these insurance companies were subjected to a tax of 1 per cent, as is provided here; but if that is the case there is no reason why in this instance, exempting fraternal beneficiary insurance associations, you should not also extend that exemption to mutual life insurance companies. If this tax is going to be levied upon them, every policyholder will bear part of the tax. These amounts that will be taxed—so-called abatements, as referred to by the gentleman from New York [Mr. GOULDEN] last evening—are savings on administrative expense, allowances for greater interest receipts, savings on amounts of premiums, and the like. They will be taxed, and the tax will fall indirectly on the many millions of policyholders, the policies of these mutual companies averaging about $2,000. This income-tax provision, with the $4,000 exemption, will extend only to 1 per cent of the entire population of the country, and by extending this tax to mutual life insurance companies you are levying a tax on millions who are seeking to protect themselves and their families, just as every other individual who enters a savings account seeks to protect himself.

If there is any justification for exempting fraternal insurance companies—and I have no objection to those meritorious institutions being exempted as provided here—certainly the same argument should apply to these insurance societies, because fraternal insurance companies are organized on the same line. Many of them have premiums instead of assessments, and most of them have reserves which are drawing interest for the benefit of the policyholders of those associations, but such funds are exempted from this tax.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STAFFORD. Yes.

Mr. MOORE. The gentleman has indicated that the average policy in these companies does not exceed $2,000. It is surely within the range of $2,000 to $2,500. Is the gentleman informed as to the average amount of premium paid per year?

Mr. STAFFORD. I can not tell the gentleman.

Mr. MOORE. I can tell. It is $100 per annum, and that involves five to six million people who are policyholders of this kind in the United States.

Mr. STAFFORD. That only confirms the statement that this tax will apply to the poorer class of the people who are seeking to invest their funds and provide for relatives or for themselves in the case of endowment policies. The bill exempts an income of $4,000, which may be the interest return of a person worth $100,000, and yet you indirectly tax the policyholder, the average principal of whose policy is from $2,000 to $2,500, who may be, and often is, making many sacrifices to provide for his family on his death.

This is one of the incongruities of the income-tax provision and should be remedied by the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, one moment. I ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph now close.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I would like to offer an amendment to the paragraph.

Mr. MANN. There are a number of amendments to be offered from this side to paragraph G.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will ask unanimous consent that debate on the pending amendment close in five minutes.

Mr. MANN. Suppose we dispose of paragraph G by the subparagraphs that are in it?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would like to know how many gentlemen have amendments to offer—one, two, three, four gentlemen indicate they have amendments.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I desire to reply to the amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD].

Mr. MANN. There are more than four over here.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on the pending amendment of the gentleman from Wisconsin close in 10 minutes, 5 minutes to be allotted to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] and 5 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND].

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, one of the clearest expositions of this question of mutual life insurance companies appears in an editorial in the Philadelphia Record of this morning. The Record is, perhaps, the foremost straight-out Democratic newspaper in the United States, and it fully understands what the people think about this question of taxing the earnings of those who make their investments on this mutual plan for the purpose of protecting their widows and children. I will ask the Clerk to read this editorial.

The Clerk read as follows:

A large part of the "dividend" paid to policyholders in mutual life insurance companies does not represent profit, but is a drawback. To meet possible contingencies, such as abnormal mortality in consequence of an epidemic, the premiums on insurance are larger in amount than would be required under normal conditions. When the anticipated extra hazards fail to materialize these excess premiums are returned to the payer of the same. This part of a life insurance dividend is not "income" in any proper sense of the word, and ought not to be taxed as such. This is one of the features of the proposed income-tax law which needs revision in the Senate if it should not be revised in the House.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, that is an expression from a very high Democratic authority. In addition to that statement it may be said that what it pertains to affects five or six millions of policyholders in mutual life insurance companies. Most of them have less incomes than $4,000. The average of policies in force in all the mutual companies is about $2,500, and the annual premium averages only about $100. It seems in this instance that it is proposed to tax the income, not of a man who is rich, not of a "malefactor of great wealth," but about 6,000,000 industrious men who have undertaken to lay up their savings through the medium of mutual life insurance to protect those whom they leave behind. It is a matter that ought to appeal to those who desire the common people of the land to have a fair chance.

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Chairman, there has been a great deal of literature sent out in the last few weeks by the insurance companies, some by the so-called mutual companies, and some by companies that do not call themselves "mutual," containing a great many criticisms calculated to alarm policyholders in regard to the operation of the income tax. I say these statements are calculated to alarm policyholders; I would not hesitate to say they were designed for the purpose of creating an unnecessary public alarm among people who otherwise know that they would not be reached by this income tax. The idea has been to try to bring home to that class of people the fear that in some way or other they were being reached by the operation of this tax. To say that these circulars are full of misstatements is putting it mildly. Now, we have heard a great deal about the operation of mutual life insurance companies. It is urged that because these companies call themselves "mutual" they are in some sort benevolent institutions, and their earnings should be exempt. As the chairman of the subcommittee well said it is impossible for any man not an actuary to follow in detail all the complications and the juggling of accounts of these insurance companies and to tell how much of their earnings are profit, how much is overcharge of the policyholder they have concluded to return to him, and how much the saving on the cost of their operation. We know that by their own statement a large amount of these so-called dividends are plain overcharges to the policyholder that in the consideration of competition they decide to return to him. While I am a policyholder in two of these companies I am unable to say whether I get any profit out of their earnings or not, but I do know this, gentlemen, that as to the profit they keep themselves, the income tax ought to operate on it, and as to what they return to the policyholder as overcharge or unearned premium, the income tax will not operate upon it. That is what I want to clear up right here and now for the benefit of my own constituents and those of other men who have been affected by such a false charge. These mutual insurance companies, like the Northwestern, like the Massachusetts, like the New York Mutual, like the Connecticut Mutual, have an enormous surplus built up out of some form of profit. If the policyholder is the sole owner of all the earnings, why do not the policyholders get them? But these surpluses are loaned out and invested in competition with other investors who have to pay an income tax. They own mortgages on farms all over your State and all over my State, made out of some form of earnings they have accumulated from your constituents who are their policyholders, and it is on those earnings that they ought to pay the same as any other corporation. Now, I do not know my time will permit me, but I want to call attention of this House to the salaries that are paid by these companies. One of the circulars that has gone out has been signed by Darwin P. Kingsley, president of the New York Life Insurance Co., and according to his own statement he draws $50,000 as president of that company.

Here is one of the men who will have to pay an income tax under this bill, and he is trying to get the small policyholder to help him fight the law.

We have a list here of his other officials. One of them gets $25,000 a year as vice president, another one gets $20,000 a year as vice president. The director general gets in fees and salary $44,700 a year; another director general gets $35,014 a year—from fees and salaries.

Here is another one of these companies of which Mr. Charles Peabody is president, who gets $50,000 a year; James Timson, the second vice president and the financial manager, gets $25,000 a year. And so on, down the list. I do not know what the name of Peabody's company is. The gentleman from New York probably knows, because he is a New York man. What I want to call attention to is this, that the Massachusetts Mutual and the Northwestern Mutual have a large surplus which makes them two of the biggest figures in the financial world. They draw premiums from Missouri, draw them back to Milwaukee, or to New York, or to Hartford, and then they loan them back to us on farm mortgages and on our real-estate loans. They put up office buildings in our cities, and they have an enormous financial power all over this land. Every dollar of that must have been drawn at the very beginning from the policyholder, the little $2,000 policyholder, which the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] talked about. Every dollar that is actually returned to the policyholder ought to be exempt from the income tax and, under the amendments made to this bill by the committee, all such amounts are exempt. If they should return him earnings, and his total earnings are less than $4,000, he will escape the tax, but as to the earnings they do not return him, but keep in the company's invested surplus, they should pay a tax on those the same as anybody else. But there seems to be a deliberate plan on the part of these insurance companies to escape the operation of the income tax. This is the purpose of these misleading circulars. Notwithstanding the fact they have built themselves up into the greatest money-loaning and financial powers in the United States, notwithstanding the fact that for years they have farmed the policyholder of the West, taking his money to the eastern centers and then loaning it back to him upon his own farm and collected the interest and taken that back to the East, they now refuse to bear the income tax.

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. BORLAND. Yes; if I have the time.

Mr. MADDEN. The question arises if the accumulations of which the gentleman speaks are not the insurance funds for the payment of death losses.

Mr. BORLAND. I anticipated that question. The law requires a legal reserve, but it is evident that these companies have a surplus, and it is the fact that they have a surplus far exceeding the legal reserve. They have earnings that are invested in valuable real estate all over the country which far exceed the legal reserve.

Mr. BARTON. To whom does that reserve belong?

Mr. BORLAND. I do not know. I have two policies of that kind, and I wish I did know. I know that none of it has been paid to me. Their return to the policyholder is in the nature of a rebate or an overcharge which they made on him. They charge him too much premium, or they charge him more than necessary to carry his risk, and therefore they are returning him a rebate on his premium.

Whether they return him the full amount that they honestly should, according to the excess of premium collected, or whether they short change him, I do not know. No one but an expert insurance actuary can tell that. The average policyholder must accept the dividend or rebate which they give him. I simply want to assure you that the amendments made to this section provide that money which the policyholder receives in return premiums or surrender value of his policy, or which his widow or beneficiary receives at his death, are exempted from the income tax. The policyholder is protected, and if the operation of the law in practice shows any injustice to the policyholder it will be further amended. As to the companies themselves, however, it is not intended to exempt their earnings. They ought to pay their income tax to the support of the Government, even if they have to cut down a few $50,000 salaries. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND] has expired.

The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD].

The question was taken, and the Chair announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 68, noes 108.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there further amendments?

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 146, line 22, after the word "fire," insert the words "hail, or tornado."

Mr. MANN. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MANN. I suppose this section G is being read by paragraphs. Now, are there any other amendments to the first paragraph of G?

Mr. ROGERS. I have an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there other amendments to the first paragraph?

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. ROGERS] has an amendment to the first paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. Is the gentleman's amendment to the first paragraph?

Mr. ROGERS. Yes; to the bottom of page 145.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will send his amendment to the desk to be reported by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 145, line 25, after the word "charitable," insert the words "benevolent, scientific."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the debate on this amendment close in six minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that the debate on this amendment close in six minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, I wish to express my concurrence in the remarks made a few minutes ago by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON] to the effect that the income-tax portion of the tariff bill is in no true sense a partisan question. It should not be determined by mere considerations of party enrollment. It is a great question, affecting the American people as a whole, and the particular side of the aisle occupied by Members who are expressing an opinion thereon should not be controlling.

It is in this spirit that I offered the amendment which I have caused to be read; and I trust that, although as a matter of party discipline, perhaps, the change can not be accepted at this time, the gentlemen in charge of the bill will at a later time take care of this amendment, which, to my mind, should unquestionably be made a part of the act before its final passage into law.

The words which I have caused to be added will make an exemption in favor not only of religious, charitable, or educational corporations, which are already cared for in the act, but also in favor of benevolent or scientific corporations. In this connection I should like to refer to the language of the Massachusetts statute in this regard, which exempts from taxation literary, educational, benevolent, charitable, scientific, or religious corporations. Three of the six exemptions along this line which the Massachusetts law includes are already in the act as reported, namely, educational, charitable, or religious corporations. I have not included in my amendment the word "literary," although I think there is much to be said for that inclusion also. But I do think that there can be no sound objection to the inclusion of the words "benevolent" and "scientific."

It might be suggested by some that "benevolent" is synonymous with "charitable," and that therefore it is already sufficiently covered by the terms of the act as it has been introduced. But it has been held in Massachusetts that a corporation may be "charitable," within the meaning of the statute, without being "benevolent," and that it may be "benevolent" without being "charitable." Therefore, in view of the undoubted fact, as I conceive it, that we ought to care not merely for charitable corporations, but also for benevolent corporations, it seems to me clear that this word should be added, so as to do no injustice to the latter class of institutions.

As to the inclusion of the word "scientific," I have no especial need, I think, to dwell upon the propriety of that amendment. The great institutions in this country engaged in scientific research—with no purpose of gain or emolument to the institution as a whole or to the members who are concerned therein—certainly ought to be treated on the same basis as religious, charitable, or educational corporations.

Mr. Chairman, how much time have I remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has two minutes.

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Chairman, if I may secure the attention of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL] I should like to ask him a specific question in regard to a matter which I think has been touched upon more or less collaterally once or twice in the discussion, but as to which no definite answer has been given. Take the case, if you please, of a man who owns a very large amount of stock in a great corporation which returns him on the stock which he owns an income of $100,000 a year. May I ask the gentleman from Tennessee whether under this act, if enacted into law in its present form, such a man would in any way, directly or indirectly, pay the Government a greater tax thereon than he has indirectly paid ever since the corporation tax of 1909 was put upon the statute books?

Mr. HULL. On page 134, after the normal tax of 1 per cent, which is really just an extension in effect of the present corporation tax of 1 per cent to individuals—when that tax is collected on the net income of all individuals and corporations then every individual who has an average net income of $20,000 or over from a corporate source, or any other source, or all other sources, is required to assemble that from these respective sources and under oath make his return to the Internal-Revenue Department for the purpose of this additional tax, and he pays the 1, 2, or 3 per cent on all in excess of $20,000.

Mr. ROGERS. But, Mr. Chairman, it is stated in so many words, on page 136, lines 10 to 14, inclusive, that there shall be deducted—the amount received as dividends upon the stock or from the net earnings of any corporation, joint-stock company, association, or insurance company which is taxable upon its net income as hereinafter provided.

Mr. HULL. Because the same normal tax is paid for him through the corporation, but not the additional tax. He assembles each category of his income subjected to the normal tax and combines it, and then it becomes subject to the additional tax.

Mr. ROGERS. But does not the gentleman think that, taking the construction most favorable to the language of the bill as it now stands, there is likely to be unending litigation as to whether or not, in a case such as I have put, even the surtax would be collected from the individual?

Mr. HULL. I can not see any possible room for misconstruction.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. ROGERS].

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I simply desire to say in that connection that this bill contains the usual language exempting all corporations of the different kinds mentioned and indicated in the exemption clause. Of course any kind of society or corporation that is not doing business for profit and not acquiring profit would not come within the meaning of the taxing clause of paragraph G. So I see no occasion whatever for undertaking to particularize, because we could find innumerable kinds of these charitable or educational or other organizations called by different names, and there would be no end to it. I think the better way is to follow the exemption clause that has been well defined and understood heretofore without any particular objection.

Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HULL. Certainly.

Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH. How many income-tax laws have we had in this country?

Mr. HULL. We had those enacted during the Civil War and kept alive until 1871, and then the income-tax law of 1894.

Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH. What was the lowest amount that was taxed in the income-tax law during the Civil War?

Mr. HULL. Six hundred dollars and up.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. ROGERS].

The amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there further amendments to this subparagraph of paragraph G?

Mr. HULINGS. I have an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania desire to offer his amendment to the first paragraph?

Mr. HULINGS. To the second.

Mr. ANDERSON. I have an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will first report the amendment of the gentleman from Minnesota.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 146, line 22, after the word "fire," insert the words "hail and tornado."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I offer this amendment for the purpose of calling the attention of the committee to what seems to me to be a palpable omission in this section.

The pending paragraph provides for the exemption of mutual fire insurance companies from the tax imposed by the bill. My amendment would include in that exemption mutual hail and tornado insurance companies. In the State which I have the honor to represent in part, and, in fact, in all the grain-growing States, hail and tornado insurance is quite as important as fire insurance. In those States there have been organized large numbers of farmers' mutual hail and tornado insurance companies, for the purpose of protection against losses by wind and hail. They are operated on exactly the same plan as mutual fire insurance companies, and so far as I can see, there is no reason why they should not be exempted from the provisions of this section.

Mr. MANN. Ought not live-stock insurance companies also to be exempted?

Mr. ANDERSON. I think so.

Mr. MANN. They are very common in our country.

Mr. ANDERSON. Now, Mr. Chairman, I want briefly to supplement what I said a few moments ago with reference to the application of this tax to incomes derived from dividends of stock and from the interest on bonds, mortgages, and other indebtedness. I direct the attention of the committee to the language of the section which relates to the collection of the normal tax at the source, particularly to the proviso on page 142, which is as follows:

Provided, That the amount of the normal tax herein imposed shall be deducted and withheld from fixed and determinable annual gains, profits, and income derived from interest upon bonds, mortgages, or other indebtedness of corporations, joint-stock companies or associations, insurance companies, and also of the United States Government not now exempt from taxation, whether payable annually or at shorter or longer periods, although such interest does not amount to $4,000.

Now, Mr. Chairman, upon what is a graduated income surtax levied? I direct the attention of the committee to the language on page 133:

In addition to the income tax provided under this section (herein referred to as the normal income tax) there shall be levied, assessed, and collected upon the net income of every individual an additional income tax (herein referred to as the additional tax) of 1 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $20,000.

What is the net income? I direct the attention of gentlemen to the provisions on page 135:

That in computing net income there shall be allowed as deductions the necessary expenses actually incurred in carrying on any business, not including personal, living, or family expenses; all interest accrued and payable within the year by a taxable person on indebtedness; all National, State, county, school, and municipal taxes accrued within the year, not including those assessed against local benefits or taxes levied hereunder; losses actually sustained during the year, incurred in trade or arising from fires, storms, or shipwreck, and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise; debts actually ascertained to be worthless and charged off during the year; also a reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear, and tear of property arising out of its use or employment in the business, but no deduction shall be made for any amount of expense of restoring property or making good the exhaustion thereof for which an allowance is or has been made; no deduction shall be allowed for any amount paid out for new buildings, permanent improvements, or betterments made to increase the value of any property or estate; the amount of income received or payable from any source at which the tax upon such income, which is or will become due, under the provisions of this section, has been withheld for payment at the source in the manner hereinafter provided shall be deducted.

In other words, the net income upon which the surtax or graduated income tax is levied is the income of the individual after the deductions provided for on page 135 have been made.

The gentleman from Tennessee says that that provision only applies to the normal tax, but there is not a line in the section which shows that it only applies to the normal tax; and, in fact, the contrary conclusion is necessarily drawn from its terms, because the section which levies the surtax or graduated tax applies specifically to the net income, while the section on page 135 specifies the way in which that net income shall be determined.

The net income having been determined, the surtax or graduated tax necessarily attaches. Otherwise it can not attach. So that in the case of a man who has an income of a million dollars from mortgages, or from bonds of a corporation, where the normal tax is collected at the source, he will in making out a return say that he received $1,000,000 from a corporation, and upon that $1,000,000 the normal tax has been paid; so he will deduct that million and say that that leaves him no amount at all upon which the surtax can attach.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I merely wish to say in respect to this amendment proposed that if any of these kind of associations, as they purport to be, are not doing business for profit and deriving a profit as an association or corporation, of course no tax would be collected. There are a number of so-called mutual associations of different kinds in this country which do business under such methods that when a policy holder pays a premium it becomes the property of the corporation, while there are others doing business under such methods as that the title to the premium paid and unexpended continues to remain in the payor of the premium. There are so many different ways by which business of this kind is conducted that instead of undertaking to particularize it is only necessary, as in the corporation-tax law, to impose 1 per cent on the net earnings of the corporation. If under a proper construction of that rule it would exclude any funds which they possess as not being taxable, or if, on the other hand, it would embrace as actual profits, as in case of mutual insurance companies, certain classes and kinds of profit accumulations, then the tax would be levied upon it.

This would be a matter that in case of a difference of construction the courts would always say whether it had conducted business in such a method as resulted in a taxable profit to the corporation. Otherwise there would be no tax.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. ANDERSON].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. HULINGS. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 140, by striking out after the word "sums," in line 19, the words "other than dividends or returns of premium payments," and inserting after the word "contracts," in line 21, the words "and any other sums paid during the year to policyholders as excess premiums returned."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this amendment close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HULINGS. Mr. Chairman, I understand how irritating it must be to a gentleman who has given a great deal of thought to an intricate subject to be continually pestered by inquiries directed at him by other persons who have given no such attention to the subject, and who, perhaps, are a little bit bonehead, but I beg he will bear with me. The purpose of this amendment is to give me opportunity to inquire of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL] whether sums returned from an insurance company in the way of policy payments to the policyholder are taxable under this bill?

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, the corporation-tax law expressly embraced the terms——

Mr. HULINGS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman please answer me categorically. Are such sums returned by the insurance company to the policyholder taxable in the hands of the policyholder—yes or no?

Mr. HULL. I can not answer the gentleman without an explanation, as I undertook to make.

Mr. HULINGS. I should think it would be very easy to answer whether those sums are taxable under the act or not.

Mr. HULL. If the gentleman will permit me half a minute, I will try to make it clear. The court, in construing this term, said it was a question of fact, or, rather, a question of mixed law and fact, whether these dividends in every case constituted premium overcharges.

Mr. HULINGS. I was not speaking of the premium overcharges. I was speaking of the sum paid to the policyholder in extinguishment of the policy at the maturity of the policy, or the surrender value at the time the policy is extinguished.

Mr. HULL. I will say to the gentleman that we have construed this amendment to embrace the return of the amount invested, no matter when it is returned, so long as it is returned to the investor during his lifetime.

Mr. HULINGS. If I hold an endowment policy for $10,000 and it came due and the company paid it to me, would I be taxed under this bill for that $10,000?

Mr. HULL. The gentleman would not be taxed on any part of the amount invested which was returned to him in that manner.

Mr. HULINGS. That portion of the sum in the hands of the insurance company that is returned to the policyholder under the misnomer of dividends—excess premiums that had been returned—are they or are they not taxable in the hands of the insurance company?

Mr. HULL. As the courts have construed this term, they are not taxable if they actually constitute naked premium overcharges as distinguished from profits or accumulations derived from other sources.

Mr. HULINGS. I saw a statement the other day that the entire receipts from premiums of one of the insurance companies in New York were $56,000,000, while the gross receipts amounted to $86,000,000, showing a net profit to that concern of some $17,000,000 during the year. That, I understand, is to be taxed in their hands. Of course, they advertise that they have got all this great surplus which belongs to the policyholders, but the policyholders never get any of it. As I understand it, they keep it and allow it to accumulate to stupendous sums, and on those earnings—profits—they surely ought to be taxed. While I am very much in favor of an income tax I regret greatly that it has been brought here coupled with a partisan question, and that it does not receive the attention it ought to receive in this body. Things go right through the other side here under the domination of a caucus. We are obliged to vote this thing up or down. There are a great many intricate questions raised by men of standing and reputation as lawyers and judges concerning the policy, the methods, and the practicability of this bill. They are all at sea as to how this act will be construed by the courts or its effects upon the insurance policyholders. The purpose of this amendment is to make it plain that the insurance companies themselves are not to be taxed on those portions of the premiums which they return to the policyholders.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired. The question is on the amendment.

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 147, by inserting after the end of line 7: "Provided, That in the case of corporations, joint stock companies, or associations, the purpose and amount of the portion or the whole of whose indebtedness has been approved by a board or commission or commissioner vested with the power by any State to make such approval, deduction shall be allowed for interest accrued and paid within the year on the amount of indebtedness so approved."

Mr. CALDER. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this amendment be limited to six minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment be limited to six minutes.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have about two minutes.

Mr. MANN. This is just on this amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this amendment be limited to 7 minutes, 5 minutes to go to the gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDER] and 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin. I will make it 10 minutes, 2 minutes to go to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that debate on the pending amendment be limited to 10 minutes, 5 minutes to go to the gentleman from New York, 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin, and 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER]. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. Chairman, the provision in this bill relative to the subject of interest on bonded indebtedness reads as follows:

Interest accrued and paid within the year on its indebtedness to an amount of such indebtedness not exceeding its paid-up capital stock outstanding at the close of the year, or if no capital stock, the capital employed in the business at the close of the year.

Mr. Chairman, I have introduced this amendment because my attention has been called to a condition of things that happens to exist in the city of New York at this time. On March 19, 1913, the city of New York entered into an arrangement with the public-service corporations of that city by which the city and these public-service corporations will construct an extension of our subway and elevated railway system. The extension of this system will cost in the neighborhood of $400,000,000. The city incurs about one half the expense and the public-service corporations incur the other half. Now, it seems that one of these public-service corporations—the Interborough Co. of New York—has a capital stock of $35,000,000. They propose under this arrangement with the city to issue $170,000,000 worth of bonds, these bonds having been approved by the public-service commission of the State, which commission was appointed by the governor. The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co. proposes to issue $100,000,000 worth of bonds on a capital stock of $2,000,000. Now, it appears that to the extent of $35,000,000, the interest on the bonds of the Interborough Railroad Co. can be charged off as an expense of that company, but the interest on $135,000,000 of their bonds can not be charged off as an expense. In regard to the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co. the interest on $2,000,000 of their bonds can be charged off as expense, but the interest on $98,000,000 can not be charged off as expense of that company. Now, the interest on these bonds which these companies have to pay so they may carry out their agreement with the city of New York, bonds approved by the public-service commission of the State, the interest on these aggregates $11,650,000, which can not be charged as exemptions.

In addition to this inequity to the public-service corporations, the same provision of the bill so injuriously affect the city of New York as to require the amendment suggested. Under the recent contracts for the new subway and rapid-transit railroad system in the city of New York, which the city is to share with each of the grantee companies by way of a division of annual profits after the deduction of certain specified charges from the operating revenue, one of the charges, which is to be deducted before any calculation of the divisible profits is made, is that of all taxes. Therefore, any legally imposed new tax, no matter how inequitable, which would increase the deductions which the operating company is to make from its gross revenue in any one year, decreases the divisible revenue by the amount of the increase or inequitable portion, and consequently decreases the city's proportion. Furthermore, the provisions of the operating contracts are such that the fixed charges which are to be deducted before the divisible revenue is ascertained are cumulative, so that if—as is now believed—the results of operation of the completed subway and rapid-transit system will not show divisible revenue for the first few years, the amount by which the fixed deductions exceeds the gross revenue will be added to and accumulate against the revenue for the succeeding years. Therefore, every additional or unjust tax which the operating companies must pay will, by just that amount, postpone the time when the city will share in the profits. This situation clearly demonstrates the vital interest which the city of New York has in this provision of the bill. So far as the Interborough Co. is concerned the bill in its present form would make the city lose one-half of the annual tax imposed by this unjust provision. That means $33,750 yearly. So far as the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Co. is concerned the bill in its present form would impose an additional loss upon the city of New York of $24,500, making a total annual loss to the city of New York of $58,250, and an equal loss to the companies above referred to.

I know this matter has been discussed with some of the members of the Ways and Means Committee. I know it has been discussed with the gentleman from New York City on that committee, and I think he understands fully the situation. I saw a moment ago a gentleman on the other side of the Chamber, my colleague (Mr. METZ), who was formerly comptroller of the city of New York and who has had to do with the administration of that great city, and if he is in the room I will be glad to call upon him to substantiate my statement that the city of New York will actually lose out of its treasury an amount equal to something over $58,250 unless this bill is amended as I suggest. Now, I know the outcry will generally be that these corporations which issue great quantities of bonds in excess of their stock should be taxed. I want to say to you that this is something that is an unusual thing. It is something that ought to be done to meet a situation in New York City in which we are expending a vast sum of money in developing our transit facilities. All this has been done properly, and has met the approval of our mayor, the board of assessment and apportionment, the public-service commission, and it seems to me very unjust that the city of New York should be called upon to stand this unusual expense.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] is recognized for two minutes.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, when I requested time, I announced that I desired it only for the purpose of asking a question of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL]. Day before yesterday I propounded the question to the gentleman, but it has not yet been answered. The gentleman said that he would reply to it when we reached the proper stage in the bill. This is the question: Suppose that a policyholder is to pay $150 a year as a premium on a life insurance policy and there is $25 of refund; would he, the policyholder, in making his income return, be obliged, if this bill becomes a law, to put in that $25 as a part of his income?

Mr. HULL. If the insurance company had not paid the normal tax of 1 per cent out of its net earnings, on which this dividend was declared to the policyholder, he would. If the company had paid it, he would not. That is, if it was net earnings and not some premium overcharge.

Mr. COOPER. But how would a farmer, living 25 miles from a railroad, know whether the insurance company had done this or not. And yet if he failed to make a proper return of his income he would suffer the penalty imposed by the law.

Mr. HULL. If I understood the gentleman's question, a person who takes out insurance and gets back dividends which constitute a profit——

Mr. COOPER. Oh, that is the whole question. The gentleman does not answer the question.

Mr. HULL. Perhaps I did not grasp the question.

Mr. COOPER. I have asked it three or four times, and nobody has answered it. If a man has to pay a premium of $150 a year on his policy, and the company announces to him that there is a refund of $25, must the holder of the policy in making the income-tax return put in the $25 as income?

Mr. HULL. The gentleman and I understand each other now. I tried to state this morning, and last evening also, that under the construction of the word "dividend" any sum paid back to the stockholder constitutes a part of the premium paid. That portion, as the law has been construed, would not be subject to any tax of any kind, either to the company or to the policyholder.

Mr. COOPER. Would he have to include it, then, in reporting the amount of his income?

Mr. HULL. No; I do not understand it so at all. That is simply capital which he has invested in the company and had returned to him. It does not constitute income.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] is recognized for three minutes.

Mr. PALMER. I wanted to say a word in reference to the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDER]. I did not hear the amendment throughout, but I think I understand the principle which is involved in the objection which is made by the companies he mentions, the New York surface, and elevated, and subway railway companies. The corporation tax law now allows a corporation in making up its return to deduct the interest on its bonded indebtedness only up to an amount equal to its capital. The case of the New York railways is a pretty hard one, because their capital stock is comparatively very small, and their bonded indebtedness is very large, and they insist upon a different rule being made to apply to them, because all their financial operations and arrangements have been made under the supervision of and have received the approval of the Public Service Commission.

Now, if public service commissions were in operation in every State in the Union, and were controlling and approving every issuance of bonded indebtedness, there would be much in the argument presented by these gentlemen from New York, but the trouble is if we would come to their relief in this law we would make an invidious distinction which would operate against the interests of men who have arranged their affairs with equal honesty and with equal desire to do what the law intends in the various States, without the approval of a public service commission or board.

In other words, every State in the Union requires that bonded indebtedness shall be issued only for value, and there are many corporations, probably most of them, where, without the supervision of a public service board or commission, such bonded indebtedness has been issued only for value, and if it so happens that it does exceed the amount of capital stock, they are really in the same position as these New York people. Yet the gentleman's amendment would not give them any relief because they do not have any commission or board in their State to supervise their operations. The rule was in the corporation tax law originally because without it there would be an easy, open avenue for persons, who wanted to do so, to get around these provisions of the law in the various States, and avoid the payment of the corporation tax.

I think, if we were to write the provision in the law as the gentleman suggests, we would be doing more harm to equally honest men in other parts of the country than we would be doing of benefit or fairness to those for whom he speaks.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDER].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. RUPLEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RUPLEY] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 146, by inserting, after line 11 and after the word "property," the following: "Provided, That the tax herein imposed upon annual gains, profits, and incomes shall include all stocks, scrip, or securities of any description issued by persons or corporations of any kind, for them, to them, or by them. Proof that the said stock, scrip, or securities have no value shall not exempt them, said persons or corporations, from a tax imposed by the provisions of this bill."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment close in six minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment be closed in six minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. RUPLEY. Mr. Chairman, I want to say to the gentlemen on the other side of this House that this amendment does not come from one hostile to all the provisions of this bill. I have asked here that watered stock, scrip, and other securities be treated as income and profits and taxed under this bill.

Under the bill passed in 1894 the court decided that—

Frequently a corporation pays a dividend in scrip. Whether such a dividend is evidence of profits, the statute does not declare. (Income act of 1894.)

That is also true with respect to this bill. Now, the court also decided that—

The answer to this question will depend upon what that dividend actually represents. If the security or stock thus issued is pure water and does not represent any actual profits, no tax on that account can be imposed. (See Foster and Abbott on Income Tax Law of 1894.)

Now, I ask by my amendment that we declare here that as to such stock issued, and be such stock valued by the corporation at $50 par or $100 par; or if it is a bond, be that bond valued at $100 or $500 or $1,000, we take the corporation's word for it, that it represents value and that that bond or stock or scrip be taxed under this bill.

My reason for asking for the insertion of this paragraph is that I may go on record against the watered-stock proposition, to wit, counterfeit scrip and bonds issued to cover immense profits not based on real value. This dishonest procedure is a fraud on labor and consumer alike. An honest effort to control this evil and permit the real profits of corporations to stand the scrutiny of the law and the public can not help but improve conditions for labor and the corporations as well, for then the demands made upon corporations can be better regulated and controlled, because the public, by arbitration and otherwise, can support and respect a settlement dealing fairly with the matters involved. Hidden profits, and even suspicion of what, perhaps, does not exist, largely contribute to the cause of labor strikes, and this provision will help to avoid the strike and its effects on business as well as the threatened dangers to government.

The Democratic Party has been the party of negation and opposition. Now, the Republican Party is assuming the same rôle. Why can not we really attend to business and quit playing policy.

In the matter of voting for this bill, I want to say that in the light of the fact that it declares for free wool, free sugar, free meat and other necessities, and while I do not approve of it in toto, its secret caucus appendage and its unscientific preparation in many directions, it is along the line and in the direction of the will expressed by the voters of this Nation at the last election. I am thoroughly in accord with the declaration in our Progressive platform that—

We believe in a protective tariff which shall equalize conditions of competition between the United States and foreign countries, both for the farmer and the manufacturer, and which shall maintain for labor an adequate standard of living.

Primarily the benefit of any tariff should be disclosed in the pay envelope of the laborer. We declare that no industry deserves protection which is unfair to labor or which is operating in violation of Federal law. We believe that the presumption is always in favor of the consuming public.

We demand tariff revision, because the present tariff is unjust to the people of the United States. Fair dealing toward the people requires an immediate downward revision of those schedules wherein duties are shown to be unjust or excessive.

We pledge ourselves to the establishment of a nonpartisan, scientific tariff commission, reporting both to the President and to either branch of Congress, which shall report, first, as to the costs of production, efficiency of labor, capitalization, industrial organization and efficiency, and the general competitive position in this country and abroad of industries seeking protection from Congress; second, as to the revenue-producing power of the tariff and its relation to the resources of Government; and, third, as to the effect of the tariff on prices, operations of middlemen, and on the purchasing power of the consumer."

I want to go on record that in my congressional experience, be it short or long, I will stand solely for the wishes of the constituency of my State and the good of the whole Nation and her people. I can answer my conscience in voting for this bill, and I believe the public want some relief from a condition that has grown intolerable for the reason that the dollar which it earns is not returned to it in value received.

The platform upon which I was elected declared for a reduction of the tariff downward. Pennsylvania, on the Republican Progressive and Democratic tickets, declared for a revision downward. I can not vote for a bill such as the Payne bill and justify my action. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. RUPLEY. Mr. Chairman, beginning where I left off when I was interrupted on the expiration of my time, I will read:

URGE PROGRESSIVISM TO COMBAT SOCIALISM.

We urge a program of progressive government action. Nothing else will still the widespread and menacing unrest. Social and industrial justice must be made the rule and not the exception. Contentment of the people, which rests upon their well-being, will alone in the long run make property secure. This is an irrepressible conflict. It can not be evaded. To temporize with it is to invite great national peril.

Laws for social and industrial justice must be enacted to square with modern economic conditions. The people no longer are held tightly by party ties. Already the dangerous doctrine of socialism is looked upon with favor by millions of our people as the only hope for relief or for revenge. Socialism grows upon social and economic injustice, and upon nothing else. Give to the masses that justice to which they are entitled and socialism in America will cease to be a threatening factor in our civilization.

We do not favor confiscation. We do not favor a redistribution of wealth. We reject the principle that all shall be rewarded equally. But, most strongly, do we demand a restoration and a continuance in this country of equal opportunity for all and special privilege for none.

Great private fortunes were made, in large part, under almost universally sanctioned business practices which our awakened social and economic senses now condemn. But all we ask is that the possessors of these fortunes shall be restrained from using their immense power against the public good. And we sincerely believe that in the future great fortunes will be safeguarded and conserved in the same degree in which their possessors will have ceased to use them in the spirit of social and industrial injustice.

Thus declared the Progressive platform of last summer, passed by the Republicans of the State of Pennsylvania in the State convention, the supreme body of the party in the State. Now, in explanation of the position that I am going to take on this bill as well as on this amendment, I desire to read from a home newspaper to show my consistency in subscribing to this bill. This paper, of large circulation in central Pennsylvania, editorially published the following:

Before the Progressive Party was thought of, Mr. RUPLEY denounced President Taft's veto of the wool schedule presented him by the last Congress. Since then the Progressives have been denouncing the Payne-Aldrich bill on every appropriate occasion. True, their platform calls for a tariff commission, but that is out of the question now. It is a choice between downward revision and the Payne-Aldrich bill, and Mr. RUPLEY, it is reported, will choose the former.

And when the other day I condemned the high-tariff rates of the Payne-Aldrich bill and plead for the true protective system, a newspaper of Pennsylvania of large circulation, and one of the leading organization papers, printed as a news item the following:

RUPLEY LAUDING WILSON.

The attitude of Representative RUPLEY toward the Underwood bill occasioned no surprise among Republicans. In a speech delivered in the House last Friday, he attacked the principle of protection, lauded President Wilson, who, he declared, was making good, and virtually went on record for the Democratic bill when he said: "The present tariff bill is an attempt to meet the demands of an aroused public conscience. They realize that the tariff must be revised downward and that nothing else will appease the public's ultimation." RUPLEY was nominated by a Republican convention in Pennsylvania and was elected as a Republican candidate.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. RUPLEY. I should like to have an extension of a few minutes to explain the position I am taking on this bill.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I should like very much to grant the gentleman's request, but I have uniformly refused to consent to any extensions to anybody, and I will have to ask the gentleman to take his additional time on another paragraph of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. RUPLEY].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. MOORE. I offer the following.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 146, line 19, after the word "cash," strike out all down to and including the word "contracts," on line 21, and insert the following: "Provided, That nothing herein contained shall apply * * * to any insurance company or association which conducts all its business solely on the mutual plan and only for the benefit of its policyholders or members, and holding all its property in trust and in reserve for its policyholders or members; nor to that part of the business of any insurance company which is conducted on the mutual plan, separate from its stock plan of insurance and solely for the benefit of the policyholders and members insured on said mutual plan, and holding all property belonging to and derived from said mutual part of its business in trust and reserve for the benefit of its policyholders and members insured on said mutual plan."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment be limited to 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment be limited to 10 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I desire to have this amendment in the RECORD in this amended form. It relates to the question of the exemption of mutual life insurance companies, an exemption which has been granted to building associations, mutual fire insurance companies, and other associations operated for the benefit of the members.

I do this also for the purpose of saying a word concerning the remarks of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND], which to a certain extent had a provincial touch. I would not accuse the gentleman from Missouri of being unfair even to capital, and I know that he believes he is pleading the cause that he thinks he fairly represents in this House. He finds fault with the eastern insurance companies because they put mortgages upon western farms, because they issue their accumulations of capital to encourage industry in the West. From my point of view that is one of the merits of these mutual insurance companies. They do put money into western farms. They do put money into western enterprises. They put money into southern enterprises, they put money into Pacific coast enterprises, and it is entirely to their credit and to the credit of the men whose money is at stake that these investments are made. It tends to circulate money throughout the country and to improve our general civilization.

Mr. GOULDEN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORE. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. GOULDEN. I should like to ask the gentleman with regard to the surplus of the various mutual insurance companies dwelt upon by the gentleman from Missouri at some length and with emphasis as "these great aggregations of capital" which ought to be taxed. Can the gentleman from Pennsylvania tell us something about this matter?

Mr. MOORE. One of the troubles with the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND] and a number of other gentlemen who have spoken upon this matter is that when they see a statement of figures it staggers them. They can not understand why there should be so much money in the world. They can not understand that it belongs to individuals somewhere; and the trouble with the gentleman from Missouri in the matter of this surplus proposition is that he can not understand that the surplus is substantially a reserve in these companies to meet possible losses from epidemics, panics, or other unforeseen causes. It is fair to assume that if the reserves of fire insurance companies, some of which are exempted in this bill, were not held by them in the form of surplus, then in the event of a great conflagration, like that at San Francisco, they could not meet their losses. So it is presumed that in the event of a yellow-fever epidemic or something of that kind unless a life insurance company was prepared, just as a national bank is forced to be prepared to meet emergencies with a reserve, it could not meet the demands made upon it.

Mr. GOULDEN. Will the gentleman pardon a statement right there?

Mr. MOORE. Certainly.

Mr. GOULDEN. The purposes as the gentleman has stated, but also when depression or panic occurs in the country the first thing the policyholder wants to know is if his policy will be paid 100 cents on the dollar beyond the shadow of a doubt.

Mr. MOORE. He wants to know if his money is safe. That is what the policyholders in the district of Missouri will demand. Let some great crash come in Wall Street, or some large banking institutions fail, let the rumor go abroad that there is trouble in the financial market, and the policyholder who has invested his savings in a policy in an eastern company wants to know if his policy is protected, which is something that the gentleman from Missouri fails to observe. This reserve is to protect the policyholder absolutely.

Mr. GOULDEN. The gentleman doubtless knows that it is less than 10 per cent, and is necessary in times of depression to absolutely guarantee the payment of all claims of every kind and character. Will the gentleman pardon me another question?

Mr. MOORE. Yes.

Mr. GOULDEN. The question of salaries was alluded to at some length by the gentleman from Missouri. Does the gentleman know of any mutual savings banks where they handle less than 20 per cent of the money handled by the larger mutual life insurance companies in which the salaries run up to $25,000 a year and even higher?

Mr. MOORE. They are exempted by this bill, and they pay a president that salary and sometimes more. They do it because they want to secure a man who can, by his reputation and ability, protect the interest of the policyholders and give them that confidence that we want them to have.

Mr. GOULDEN. And they handle immense sums of money—fifty to seventy-five million dollars annually—with little or no loss.

Mr. MOORE. Yes.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MOORE. I do not know that any other Member wants any time on this.

The CHAIRMAN. There are 5 minutes remaining.

Mr. MOORE. I ask unanimous consent that I may have 2½ minutes of that.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent that he may have 2½ minutes of the 5 minutes remaining. Is there objection?

Mr. MOORE. I will print as a part of my remarks the following letter:

THE PENN MUTUAL LIFE INSURANCE CO.,
Philadelphia, April 29, 1913.

Hon. J. HAMPTON MOORE, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We most respectfully but earnestly urge upon you the same exemption from the income-tax bill for mutual life insurance companies that you have granted to beneficial associations, savings-fund associations, building and loan associations, mutual fire insurance companies, etc., with which classes they are fully identified, because they perform equal or greater service without possibility of any profit.

Mutual life insurance companies represent between five and six millions of policyholders, most of whom have less income than $4,000, as indicated by the average policy in force in all the mutual companies being but $2,500 and calling for an annual premium of less than $100.

Notwithstanding the large number of persons holding membership in mutual life insurance companies on whom the tax bill will be imposed, the aggregate revenue from all of them will be comparatively inconsiderable to the Government. Why discriminate against so many persons who should be consistently exempted without materially diminishing revenue?

Mutual life insurance companies were not organized with any idea of profit; have no shares; make no earnings; but realizing the importance of solvency stipulate for a premium to meet every probable emergency. Then as savings are effected they are credited annually to the policyholder in abatement of premium, thus diminishing his payments.

Our effort is not against stock companies, but for the mutual ones. We can not imagine a single stock company mutualizing to escape the tax on its income; the extra cost through the income tax will be trifling in comparison with the opportunities for profits to the stockholders. Mutualization will be most difficult to arrange with equity to all interests, as can be easily demonstrated.

Investments by mutual life insurance companies are made for the same purpose as those by the companies exempted, which is to add to the savings of the policyholder, and are applied to lessen the cost of the insurance and thus lighten the burden of the insured.

With mutual life insurance companies exempted you will relieve all those unselfish organizations incorporated and successfully operated for the benefit of mankind, and especially that institution which by the protection of the family and the encouragement of thrift and ultimate relief of government in the case of the otherwise indigent is most worthy.

What can be the excuse for making this exception, which, in fact, is the one institution that stretches its broad arms wider in its beneficence than any of the others?

The large number of deserving persons relieved will make the action popular; it will be consistent, therefore defensible; it will be in the interest of humanity, therefore a right service; it will not materially lessen revenue, therefore not depart from your purpose. Let us pray that you will place mutual life insurance companies in the exempted class.

Yours, very truly, L. K. PASSMORE, Vice President.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

The question was taken, and the amendment was lost.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 147, line 18, after the word "therein," by inserting "all sums paid by bankers' associations or trust companies for taxes imposed upon shareholders on the value of their shares of stock therein."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment be limited to six minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment be limited to six minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I anticipate that 90 Members out of every 100 in this House are in favor of the income-tax principle. Possibly every Member of the House is in favor of that form of taxation. I favor such a tax. It is extremely unfortunate, however, that this section of the bill is brought in under the gag and binding force of a caucus rule—under the whip and spur of party expediency—so that no amendment, no matter how meritorious or necessary, can be adopted in this House. The effect of such a situation can only be that this House will abrogate its prerogatives in the construction of this revenue bill and permit another body at the other end of the Capitol to really write it in its final form. The amendment which I have offered is a fair illustration of this situation. I am not entirely clear in my own mind as to whether it should be adopted or not, but I do desire by it to direct the attention of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL] and of the members of the committee to an unfairness which I think exists under this bill. In the State which I have the honor in part to represent and in a great many other States banks and banking corporations are required to collect the tax which is assessed against the stockholders of those banks and remit to the proper county and State officials. I can find no provision in this section which would authorize the bank to deduct from its net income, upon which it is obliged to pay the normal tax, the amount of the State tax paid for the stockholders. It is true that possibly the stockholder himself might be authorized to deduct, but if he is not the bank certainly is not authorized to deduct it from its net income, and consequently would be obliged to pay the 1 per cent normal tax upon the amount which it has paid as State tax in the name of and for the stockholder of the bank. I would like to have an explanation of that feature of the bill from the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I would say to the gentleman that on page 135, in lines 7 and 8, there is a provision that the individual in computing his net income is permitted to deduct all national, State, county, school, and municipal taxes accrued within the year. It is immaterial whether those taxes are paid by himself or by the bank.

Mr. ANDERSON. I want to direct the gentleman's attention to this fact. In my State, for instance, the stockholder would have no information as to the amount of tax paid by the bank for him. The bank lists the names of the stockholders with the taxing authority of the State, and the tax is assessed against the bank. The bank is individually liable for the tax, and pays it, so that the stockholder has no information as to the amount he is actually paying, because it is paid by the bank and not by him.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, does not the stockholder know how many shares he has in the bank?

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes.

Mr. PALMER. Does he not know what the law of the State is as to taxes on that kind of property?

Mr. ANDERSON. He has no knowledge of the amount of the tax assessed for State, county, and municipal purposes.

Mr. PALMER. He knows what the law is fixing the tax.

Mr. ANDERSON. The tax is fixed by the State taxing board. It is not a fixed amount. It is fixed annually.

Mr. PALMER. Does the gentleman mean to say that the stockholder does not know what it is?

Mr. ANDERSON. I do not think one out of a thousand would know.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will permit, in making up the income tax in January or February it is for the previous year. They are taxes that really arose the year prior to that, so they would know the amount that had been paid.

Mr. ANDERSON. As long as the bank pays the tax the bank ought to be permitted to deduct that amount from its net earnings. That is, as long as the bank pays the tax to the State it ought to be permitted to deduct that amount from its net earnings in computing the tax that is required to be paid under this bill. There certainly is no consistency in requiring the stockholder to make deductions when the bank pays the tax.

Mr. PALMER. The gentleman's proposition is that the agent shall be allowed to deduct the tax he pays instead of the principal being allowed to deduct the tax paid for him.

Mr. ANDERSON. Yes; I think that would be much easier for both the Government, the bank, and the stockholder.

Mr. PALMER. The proposition here is that as the principal is the person really taxed he should be permitted to make the deduction.

Mr. ANDERSON. I do not think so. The gentleman ignores the facts in the case.

Mr. FORDNEY. In the case of the corporation tax the Government has held and now is enforcing the regulation that money paid by a national bank for State and municipal taxes is not a proper deduction out of the net or total income.

Mr. PALMER. Well, this proposition of the gentleman from Minnesota is entirely different from that, and is intended to cover the law in only four or five States in the Union——

Mr. ANDERSON. There are a good many States.

Mr. PALMER (continuing). Where the law makes the bank pay the taxes not upon its own earnings but the taxes upon the stock of the individual—the individual's taxes.

Mr. FORDNEY. When a State has assessed against a national bank the State tax on its property or on its income, it is not permitted then to deduct it as one of the charges for expenses.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MANN. Has all debate upon paragraph G expired?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If there are no further amendments.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I want to move to strike out the last word.

Mr. Chairman, before we commence the consideration of Section III I wish to call the attention of the House to some communications which I have in regard to the administrative features of the bill, which I now do.

The letters are as follows:

CHICAGO, April 30, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: The proposed new administrative act (par. N, Sec. III) provides for the assessment of a fee when protests are lodged against the assessment of duty by the collector of customs. We herewith register our opposition to the imposition of any such fee, and would request that you endeavor to prevent it.

A very large proportion of the Government revenue is derived from the importations of merchandise, and it is, of course, not the purpose of the Government to harass importers, yet this is precisely what the imposition of a fee on protests would amount to, as the small man would be placed at a serious disadvantage in competition with the larger importers where the proportion of the amount of fee would be next to nothing, as their importations are of much larger and fewer bulk. The small man, on the other hand, imports from time to time the quantities which his business demands, and in the course of a year doubtless makes many more importations than the larger importer, but the aggregate amount of duty would be very much less. You will readily see that this would be a decided burden to the small man and give his larger competitor the advantage.

We are well aware that the Government ordinarily tries to protect the smaller man, and we call this matter to your attention in order to secure your aid in our behalf.

Respectfully, CHAS. RUBENS & CO.

CHICAGO, U. S. A., April 30, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We desire to register our strenuous opposition against the assessment of any fee in relation to the filing of protests against the assessment of duties by the collector of customs.

There are already sufficient difficulties and expense in these matters, and we feel that we are laboring now under a burden which is sufficiently heavy.

Yours, very truly, ATWOOD & STEELE CO.,
Per JULIUS STEELE, President.

CHICAGO, April 30, 1913.

The Hon. Mr. MANN,
Congressman from Illinois, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We take serious objection to the proposed new tariff regulation naming a fee of any amount for the privilege of calling attention to possible error on the part of Government officials in classification and assessment of the rate of duty on merchandise when imported as ridiculous and absurd, and we want to say right here unless the Government ceases tacking on these little red-tape laws to the importer it is going to hurt the import business materially.

The wholesale milliners pay into the Treasury of the United States hundreds of thousands of dollars every year for duties, and if the Government continues to harass our business it will only be a question of time until we will be driven out of it.

We would like at the same time to call your attention to the unjust practice of being obliged to pay a duty on the pasteboard boxes that we do not receive a cent for in which our flowers and foliages are packed. This pasteboard box or retainer in which the goods must be packed in order to carry costs 9 cents to 12 cents apiece in this country, and in Europe we are obliged to pay 1 franc (20 cents) apiece plus the duty, making these boxes cost as 32 cents, for which we do not receive one penny, and are an absolute necessity in order to ship the goods, and as much so as it is necessary to have sardines put up in a can.

We trust you will investigate the unjustness of this charge, and remain,

Yours, very respectfully,

WEISKOPF & CO.,
CHAS. A. BROAD,
Vice President.

—

CHICAGO, April 30, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We desire to register our strenuous opposition against the assessment of any fee in relation to the filing of protests against the assessment of duties by the collector of customs.

As matters are at present we suffer great disadvantages on account of the action which the collector of customs takes in invariably assessing the highest possible rate of duty on the merchandise which we import, and an imposition of any fee on protests will be one more serious difficulty in our way. We feel that we are laboring now under a burden which is sufficiently heavy.

Respectfully,

JOHN L. BOBO & CO.

—

CHICAGO, ILL., April 30, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN,
House of Congress, Washington, D. C.

SIR: We desire to register our strenuous opposition against the assessment of any fee in relation to the filing of protests against the assessment of duties by the collector of customs.

As matters are at present we suffer great disadvantages on account of the action which the collector of customs takes in invariably assessing the highest possible rate of duty on the merchandise which we import, and an imposition of any fee on protests will be one more serious difficulty in our way. We feel that we are laboring now under a burden which is sufficiently heavy.

Respectfully,

BURLEY & TYRRELL CO.,
F. P. ARMBRUSTER,
First Vice President.

—

CHICAGO, May 1, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: The right of voicing protest against illegal exactions or duty has always been a free one, but on March 3 of this year President Taft issued an order providing that unless a fee of $1 be paid within a certain period any protest made to the collector against such illegal collection of duties must be considered as abandoned, and the new tariff law proposes this same fee.

It is true that the provision contemplates the repayment of the fee in case the importer is successful when the case is tried, but the effect of the proceeding is tantamount to placing the importer in the position of a creditor who has a just claim against a debtor and to whom the debtor writes that he will listen to his demand for repayment and consider it, but if the creditor fails to convince him he will charge him an extra dollar.

We would thank you to use your efforts in securing a nullification of this order, and the striking out of the provision in the tariff bill.

Yours, respectfully,

FELSENTHAL BROS. & CO.

—

CHICAGO, May 1, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: The proposed new administrative act (par. N, Sec. III) provides for the assessment of a fee when protests are lodged against the assessment of duty by the collector of customs. We herewith register our opposition to the imposition of any such fee and would request that you endeavor to prevent it.

A very large proportion of the Government revenue is derived from the importations of merchandise, and it is, of course, not the purpose of the Government to harass importers, yet this is precisely what the imposition of a fee on protests would amount to, as the small man would be placed at a serious disadvantage in competition with the larger importers, where the proportion of the amount of fee would be next to nothing, as their importations are of much larger and fewer bulk. The small man, on the other hand, imports from time to time the quantities which his business demands, and in the course of a year doubtless makes many more importations than the larger importer, but the aggregate amount of duty would be very much less. You will readily see that this would be a decided burden to the small man and give his larger competitor the advantage.

We are well aware that the Government ordinarily tries to protect the smaller man, and we call this matter to your attention in order to secure your aid in our behalf.

Respectfully,

M. J. NEAHR & CO.,
Per E. H. WATSON,
Secretary and General Manager.

—

CHICAGO, ILL., May 1, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.

SIR: The right of voicing protest against illegal exactions or duty has always been a free one, but on March 3 of this year President Taft issued an order providing that unless a fee of $1 be paid within a certain period any protest made to the collector against such illegal collection of duties must be considered as abandoned, and the new tariff law proposes this same fee. It is true that the provision contemplates the repayment of the fee in case the importer is successful when the case is tried, but the effect of the proceeding is tantamount to placing the importer in the position of a creditor who has a just claim against a debtor and to whom the debtor writes that he will listen to his demand for repayment and consider it, but if the creditor fails to convince him he will charge him an extra dollar.

We would thank you to use your efforts in securing a nullification of this order and the striking out of the provision in the tariff bill.

Respectfully,

WM. GAERTNER & CO.
WM. GAERTNER.

—

CHICAGO, May 2, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Please protest against the dollar fee which collectors are to demand upon the filing of protests after July 1 under the order made by President Taft on March 3 last, and which is now proposed in paragraph N of section III of the new tariff. The law gives us a right to file protests, but the fee just about takes away the right which the law gives us. The collector takes duties which we think are unjust, but we can not afford, in many instances, to pay the fee to establish our claim where the individual amounts are small. Under the law we have to file a protest on every shipment that comes in while the case is being litigated, and each entry may have only a few dollars involved, while a great deal of money may be involved in the aggregate. Why should we be compelled to pay a dollar for the privilege of notifying the collector he has made a mistake?

Respectfully,

FALK, WORMSER & CO. (INC.),
By M. L. FALK, President.

—

CHICAGO, May 2, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We ask your kind attention to paragraph N of section III of the new tariff, ordering a collection of a filing fee of $1 on protest against the assessment of illegal duties as well as appeals to reappraisement. This order is a great injustice, and we honorably beg that you protest against this order becoming a law. The schedules of the past tariffs have been written in such a manner that they could be read liberally in a half a dozen ways. Therefore the appraiser, in passing on the class of merchandise, would naturally assess the highest rate of duty. We, the importers, were therefore compelled to file protest on the majority of entries passed through the customs, and as the regulations covering protest are considerably complicated it was necessary that we employ counsel at an expense of 50 per cent contingent. There can be no possible doubt but that the present tariff will be worded in the same manner as the past tariffs and we will again be compelled to protest most of our imports. It would be very simple for Congress to pass a tariff that would be more specific, thereby avoiding the necessity of so many protests.

In view of the above you certainly realize the injustice of this fee of $1 for the filing of protest.

May we ask your cooperation?

Very truly, yours,

KUNSTADTER BROS.,
Per W. J. STELZER.

—

CHICAGO, May 2, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We wish to register our strenuous opposition against the assessment of any fee relative to filing of protests against the assessment of duties by the collector of customs.

We suffer a great disadvantage on account of the action which the collector of customs takes in invariably assessing the highest possible rate of duty on the merchandise which we import and an imposition of any fee on protests will be one more serious difficulty in our way. We feel we are laboring under a burden which is sufficiently heavy.

Yours, very truly,

CHAPIN & GORE (INC.),
By C. H. HERMANN, President.

—

CHICAGO, May 2, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We are advised that the new administrative act (par. N, sec. III) provides for the assessment of a fee when protests are made against the classifications of merchandise or assessment of duty by the collector of customs.

We beg herewith to register our opposition to the imposition of any such fee, and would request that you endeavor to prevent its adoption.

There have been numerous instances in our own experience where we have felt that duty had been assessed under the wrong classifications and under misunderstandings on the part of the appraisers of the revenue law as applied to our importations. It would seem to be nothing but right and proper that the securing of corrections in such instances be made as easy and free from expense as possible on the part of the importer. In the course of our business we have on several occasions secured corrections as result of such protests filed with the customhouse, and we protest against the charging of any fee for the privilege of calling attention to errors on the part of Government officials.

While it is, of course, not the purpose of the Government to harass importers, the regulations imposing a charge upon protests would seem to have precisely that effect. It would also place the smaller importer at a disadvantage in competition with larger importers, as the amount of the fee would be next to nothing in proportion with larger importers, while on small importations the charge would be larger in proportion.

We are well aware that the Government ordinarily tries to protect the smaller man, and we call this matter to your attention to secure your aid in preventing the enactment of the proposed law assessing a fee.

Trusting that you may give this matter the attention which we believe it merits, we are,

Very respectfully, yours,

THE NONOTUCK SILK CO.,
F. H. BIGGS.

—

CHICAGO, May 2, 1913.

Hon. J. R. MANN,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We desire to register our strenuous opposition against the assessment of any fee in relation to the filing of protests against the assessment of duties by the collector of customs.

As matters are at present, we suffer great disadvantages on account of the action which the collector of customs takes in invariably assessing the highest possible rate of duty on the merchandise which we import, and an imposition of any fee on protests will be one more serious difficulty in our way. We feel that we are laboring now under a burden which is sufficiently heavy.

Respectfully,

T. BUETTNER & Co. (INC.).

CHICAGO, April 18, 1913.

Hon. JAMES R. MANN, M. C.,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We understand that there is to be no change made in the new tariff bill on articles in our line.

There are some administrative features in the former bill which, we understand, are taken into this new one, but which we should thank you to kindly use your influence to have changed or modified.

First. We are at present compelled to pay duty on the capacity of a cask, less 2½ per cent, even if such a cask arrives with an outage of 50 per cent or more. This should be changed so that wines and spirituous liquors in bulk would bear duty only on the quantity landed in the United States; in other words, on the actual quantity imported.

Second. Wine and spirits in bulk imported in barrels and warehoused in bond must be duty paid within three years, and this duty has to be paid on the original gauge on arrival of the whisky or spirits. This should be changed so as to allow the goods to remain in bond for eight years, the same as domestic goods, and the duty to be paid only on such contents as are really left in the package when it is duty paid.

Third. Samples of wines and liquors shipped to this country in quantities of less than one dozen bottles in a case now have to pay the same duty as if a dozen bottles were imported. This should be changed so that duty would be paid only upon the actual quantity imported.

You will agree that the small demands we ask for are dictated by a spirit of fairness and equity, and for this reason we hope will receive your support, for which we beg to anticipate our thanks.

Yours, very truly,

GROMMES & ULLRICH,
Per F. DIEHL, Secretary.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read:

The Clerk read as follows:

C. That all invoices of imported merchandise shall be made out in the currency of the place or country from whence the importations shall be made, or, if purchased, or agreed to be purchased, in the currency actually paid, agreed upon, or to be paid therefor, shall contain a correct, complete, and detailed description of such merchandise and of the packages, wrappings, or other coverings containing it, and shall be made in triplicate or in quadruplicate in case of merchandise intended for immediate transportation without appraisement, and signed by the person owning or shipping the same, if the merchandise has been actually purchased, or price agreed upon, fixed, or determined, or by the manufacturer or owner thereof, if the same has been procured otherwise than by purchase, or agreement of purchase, or by the duly authorized agent of such purchaser, seller, manufacturer, or owner.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. Chairman, I will not detain the committee, but merely want to ask unanimous consent at this stage to have published in the RECORD an interesting experiment made by some ladies in Louisiana with regard to the use of sugar in the household kitchen.

The article referred to is as follows:

PORT ALLEN, LA., May 2, 1913.

Hon. R. F. BROUSSARD,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR MR. BROUSSARD: Some Louisiana housekeepers modestly beg to be allowed to help in a small way in the fight their Senators and Representatives are making for sugar in Congress.

We stand or fall with our sugar planters, and we really think we know some kitchen sugar secrets that are hidden from "the wise and prudent." A few of these things are revealed in the inclosed sugar experiments. I pass them to you, hoping that the mouse may help the lion.

Very truly, yours,

VIRGINIA CARTER MERWIN.

The following accompanied the above letter:

There is a fashion nowadays—and a very sensible fashion it is, too—for men who have engaged in certain kinds of civil or industrial or educational reform to invoke the cooperation of capable and sagacious women as especially fitted for service in particular phases of their work. It may be presumptuous, but women are beginning to think that the men who are engaged in the fight for a tariff on sugar are overlooking an ally that ought to count in their campaign, and for that reason we are going to volunteer to help them. While men are handling sugar in politics women are handling it in kitchens, and to assert that they know the true inwardness of sugar goes without saying. Who knows so well as a house mother how imperatively necessary a proper amount of sugar is in the daily menu of a healthy family? Who decides how much and in what form it should be dispensed? And who realizes so keenly that it ought to be both cheap and abundant? While not an authority on national economics, the careful housekeeper certainly does know the sugar interests on the culinary side, and in this emergency insists on revealing some of them—those that touch the consumer. "Hear us for our cause," that it be not a "lost cause."

In trying to get at the very heart—the raison d'être—of this apparently useless, and certainly fatal warfare on sugar, some Louisiana housekeepers put their heads together and set their hands to work to test the problem on its economic side in the kitchen—the sanctum of the home. We wished honestly to see what part sugar played in the high cost of living. The experiments were modest and necessarily limited, but the results seem to justify our contention that the price of sugar is low enough to enable every workingman to purchase as much of it as he cares to use.

In the housekeepers' experiments with sugar we used impartially the granulated sugar sold everywhere and the "yellow clarified" plantation product. This last is an absolutely pure, and, to the uneducated eye, a perfectly white sugar. As well as we were able to judge, these were the grades of sugar commonly used and sold by the best grocers for 6 cents per pound. There are good sugars which may be brought in 20-pound lots for $1, or 5 cents a pound, and the Chicago department stores offer it in 25-pound lots for $1, or 4 cents a pound. We made the higher priced sugar the basis of our calculations that no charge of unfairness could be made against us.

We began our experiments, as the workingman begins his day, with a cup of coffee. We carefully weighed a pound of parched and ground coffee, having chosen the brand most in demand by people who are content with good, honest coffee. This brand sold everywhere for 30 cents per pound, and it was found to contain just 30 tablespoonfuls. In southern kitchens, where strong coffee rules, a tablespoonful of ground coffee is considered the proper allowance for each cup. Consequently there were 30 cups of coffee in that pound, and at 30 cents per pound each cup cost just 1 cent.

A quart of milk at 10 cents contains an ample allowance for 10 cups of coffee, which brings the cost of milk for 1 cup to 1 cent.

The carefully weighed pound of 6-cent plantation sugar contained 68 rounded teaspoonsful. With two teaspoonsful to each cup of coffee, we have 34 cups at a cost of about one-sixth cent.

A large plain cake was then made, the ingredients being carefully weighed and prices calculated in fractions. The flour cost 4½ cents; butter, 15 cents; eggs, 10 cents; milk, 2½ cents; sugar, 6 cents; total, 38 cents. These same ingredients made 51 cookies or tea cakes.

A large apple pie was then made, in which was used, flour, 2½ cents; butter, 10 cents; apples, 8 cents; sugar, 2½ cents; total, 23 cents.

A baked custard contained 1 quart of milk, 10 cents; 6 eggs, 10 cents; sugar, two-thirds of a pound, 4 cents; total, 24 cents.

Ice cream: One quart of milk, 10 cents; 6 eggs, 10 cents; three-fourths pound of sugar, 4½ cents; total, 24½ cents.

One quart of blackberry jam contained 1 pound of sugar, 6 cents.

One quart of fig preserves contained 1 pound of sugar, 6 cents.

Two pounds of peanut candy contained 1 pound of sugar, 6 cents.

I suppose a liberal construction of the word would place these articles of food under the head of "necessities." They are certainly "necessary" for any man's perfect contentment of mind, and would no doubt contribute to his health of body, and besides being very filling at the price, in so far as sugar is concerned, easily within the means of any workingman. Sugar is the cheapest thing we eat except salt, cheaper even than flour when in combination, cheaper than any cereal except corn, grits, and rice. Who needs "free sugar"?

So far as we can see, this is the only "sugar question." We refuse to believe that there is an intelligent housekeeper in the whole United States who thinks that the present price of sugar figures at all in the high cost of living, unless she wants to buy it from a bargain counter, and even then the Chicago department stores will accommodate her.

In conclusion, let us say that we would be glad to make a contract with the Government to furnish the soldiers candy, minus adulterants, at the present price of sugar.

Very respectfully,

LOUISIANA HOUSEKEEPERS,
Per VIRGINIA CARTER MERWIN.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be considered as withdrawn.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

E. That, except in case of personal effects accompanying the passengar, no importation of any merchandise exceeding $100 in value shall be admitted to entry without the production of a duly certified invoice thereof as required by law, or of an affidavit made by the owner, importer, or consignee, before the collector or his deputy, showing why it is impracticable to produce such invoice; and no entry shall be made in the absence of a certified invoice, upon affidavit as aforesaid, unless such affidavit be accompanied by a statement in the form of an invoice, or otherwise, showing the actual cost of such merchandise, if purchased, or if obtained otherwise than by purchase, the actual market value or wholesale price thereof at the time of exportation to the United States in the principal markets of the country from which the same has been imported, which statement shall be verified by the oath of the owner, importer, consignee, or agent desiring to make entry of the merchandise, to be administered by the collector or his deputy, and it shall be lawful for the collector or his deputy to examine the deponent under oath, touching the sources of his knowledge, information, or belief in the premises, and to require him to produce any letter, paper, or statement of account in his possession, or under his control, which may assist the officers of customs in ascertaining the actual value of the importation or any part thereof, and in default of such production, when so requested, such owner, importer, consignee, or agent shall be thereafter debarred from producing any such letter, paper, or statement for the purpose of avoiding any additional duty, penalty, or forfeiture incurred under this act, unless he shall show to the satisfaction of the court or the officers of the customs, as the case may be, that it was not in his power to produce the same when so demanded; and no merchandise shall be admitted to entry under the provisions of this section unless the collector shall be satisfied that the failure to produce a duly certified invoice is due to causes beyond the control of the owner, consignee, or agent thereof: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may make regulations by which books, magazines, and other periodicals published and imported in successive parts, numbers, or volumes, and entitled to be imported free of duty, shall require but one declaration for the entire series. And when entry of merchandise exceeding $100 in value is made by a statement in the form of an invoice, the collector shall require a bond for the production of a duly certified invoice.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. Mr. Chairman, with the permission of the Chair, I would like to recur back to page 60 of this bill, where an apparent error has been made. On page 60, line 7, paragraph 245, I would like to call the attention of the gentleman having charge of the bill at the present time to the fact that that paragraph places a tax of $2.60 per gallon on absinthe. It occurs to me that the importation of absinthe is prohibited, and I therefore move, if there is no objection from the other side or the gentleman having the bill in charge, that the word "absinthe" be omitted from that paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. Of course, the paragraph can only be returned to by unanimous consent. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to return to paragraph 245, on page 60, for the purpose of offering an amendment. Is there objection?

Mr. HARRISON of New York. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I would like to state to the gentleman from Illinois that under the executive department of the Government at the present time the importation of absinthe is prohibited. It is not certain that will always remain so, and we might just as well keep this provision in the law which will cover all contingencies in the future. I therefore object to the gentleman's request.

Mr. BRITTEN. The gentleman's committee did consider that?

Mr. HARRISON of New York. Yes; it is carried over from the previous law.

Mr. MANN. This would not permit the importation of absinthe in the United States.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. It would not.

The CHAIRMAN. Objection is heard.

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, as a new Member of this Congress, I came here with a mind free and open to conviction; with a firm desire to assist in this great Congress in every way within my power the enactment of such laws as might reasonably be expected to bring more happiness, prosperity, and contentment to the people of our Nation; with a high resolve to lend my voice and my vote to the support of laws and regulation that shall assist in securing to the toiler everywhere throughout our land—in office, in shop, in factory, and on the farm—the fullest possible measure of compensation and happiness for his hours of labor. Come what may, be my time of service here short or long, I shall ever endeavor to maintain in performing my duties here the same free mind and spirit of patriotism with which I first entered this then quiet but inspiring chamber. At the outset, to be candid, I must confess that I have no great concern for the drones and the idle rich of our population other than this, that in the years to come their number in our Nation may be fewer. My chief concern as a Member of this House is and shall be for the welfare of those who till and toil and for the old and young who are properly dependent upon them.

I am very heartily in accord with the fundamental principles and economic policy upon which the income-tax law included in this bill is based. It is a big step in the right direction of progressive legislation. No good citizen, no matter with what party he may affiliate, should oppose the enactment of a law of this character which clearly tends to distribute the burden of maintaining our Government upon all citizens alike, according to the ability and strength of each to carry his just share of the load. Every member on this side of the chamber has a right to a pardonable pride in knowledge of the fact that the Republican Party first blazed the way for this law. Gentlemen on the other side, I have only words of commendation and approval for your attitude in lending your support in this case to the completion of this needed legislation. I do regret, however, that your side, so largely in the majority, has not had the courage to place this income-tax law before this House separate from the tariff bill. This should have been done so that every Member in the House might have the opportunity of clearly indicating his support or opposition to this measure irrespective of his conclusions on the tariff schedules. If, as suggested, the provisions of the income-tax law were considered separately from the tariff bill, I am certain that a better measure than your caucus has presented to us would be given to the country.

I have sat here during the past month and listened with close attention and interest to your debate in support of the tariff provisions in this bill. As I stated in beginning, I came here with a mind free and open to conviction. I came here intending and desiring to vote for a tariff bill that I hoped and was partly led to believe during the last campaign that your side would propose where the revision would be a downward revision based on a scientific investigation that would give a fair protection to the industries and laborers of our own country against the invasion of cheap foreign labor and industries. I am surprised at the bill you now propose and amazed at some of the statements made by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] and others on that side in defining the free-trade policies of your party and in defending the actions of your secret caucuses. Throughout the debate there has been a dearth of explanation from your side as to how it may be reasonably expected that this tariff measure will bring more prosperity to the factory and the farm or how it will increase what the laborer now receives for his toil. While some unseen power appears to compel practically every member on your side to support this bill, you have from day to day shown a noticeable lack of real confidence in the measure. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] is doubtful as to whether the effect of the bill will be to reduce the cost of living during the time of this administration. Other gentlemen on that side are fearful of what the result may be, but are nevertheless determined to write into the laws of this land at the earliest opportunity the old free-trade notions of your party. To a purely partisan and unscientific measure such as you have now presented I can not subscribe my approval. A free-trade policy such as your party leaders advocate will, in my opinion, never long meet the approval of our American people.

As a representative of a great agricultural State I protest against the wholesale manner in which the interests of the American farmer have been overlooked and forgotten in this bill. The political party that fails to recognize the fact that they who till the soil are the very bone and sinew of the Nation makes a cardinal mistake. As in Goldsmith's time—

> Princes and lords may flourish or may fade—
> A breath can make them, as a breath has made:
> But a bold peasantry, their country's pride,
> When once destroy'd, can never be supplied.

[Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. Chairman, in support of the contention of the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. NORTON], who has just spoken, that the enactment of this bill into law will bring disaster to American farmers and laboring men without any permanent advantage to consumers, I submit the following letter from a Champaign County, Ohio, farmer, together with a news item from the Urbana Daily Citizen, of March 18, 1913:

URBANA, OHIO, April 25, 1913.

Hon. FRANK B. WILLIS, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SIR: When President Cleveland and the rest of the Democrats made wool free there were thousands of pounds of wool in the West hauled by the growers to the railroad station to be shipped to eastern markets. But the railroad companies said to the grower, "You must prepay freight on it as it may not be worth the freight in the eastern market." The growers said, "If it is not worth the freight, it may lie there and rot." So we lost all this free wool that the sheep men had grown and had delivered to the railroad by not having made provision in the free wool bill to pay the freight on it to market. This wool was a complete loss to the Nation at large. Now we want to provide for this in the new tariff bill as we do not want it to happen again. At the same time there were thousands of sheep shipped from Texas and the western ranges to the St. Louis and other big markets that did not actually sell for enough to pay the freight on them to market, so the shippers that were with the sheep had to "hide out" to keep from paying the difference in the freight and the selling price. They were lucky in having a railroad pass for their passage back home. Our sheep men do not want to be humiliated like this again. They do not mind raising free sheep and wool, but when it comes to paying the freight we think that is carrying the free-wool business a little too far. So I would advise you to introduce at once an amendment to the present free-wool tariff bill that the Government be compelled to pay the freight on the free wool and the difference of freight on free sheep to market, and not let this waste of free wool occur again by not having the Government to at least guarantee the freight and pay it if necessary. We do not want the railroads to lose anything again by hauling free wool and sheep to market or to have to "hide out" for lack of money to pay the freight on free wool and sheep. We think it is enough to raise free sheep and free wool without money and without price and not pay the freight. We think the good Democrats ought to grant us this wee small favor at least. We will not oblige them for this favor either, as we expect to quit raising free wool as soon as we can sell our sheep. Last year before the election I had nearly 200 head of sheep on my farm; now I have 28 all told. Many of the sheep raisers of this county (Champaign County, Ohio) have done as I have, knowing the Democrats would put wool on the free list and woolen goods on the high protected list of 35 per cent. We will have to pay as much for woolen clothing this fall as we have ever paid before.

Yours, truly, W. R. RAMSEY.

ANTICIPATED REVISION OF TARIFF SHUTS DOWN URBANA WOOLEN MILLS.

The Urbana Woolen Mills will shut down the 1st of April for an indefinite period of time, thus throwing 40 workmen out of employment as the first tangible result in Urbana of the Democratic administration. W. E. Brown, the only resident member of the company which operates "the factory," as the woolen mill is commonly called, states that the risk is too great to even consider continuing the factory running, with a change from high tariff to low tariff imminent.

Says Mr. Brown: "We might invest $200,000 in yarn right now, and make sales of cloth to the amount of $250,000, but we stand to lose, for the orders for cloth might be canceled or the cloth thrown back on our hands by customers who might refuse to accept it for any reason or no reason.

OPERATED AT LOSS IN 1893.

"Our books show that with the change in tariff in Cleveland's administration this very thing happened at the Urbana Woolen Mill and the factory was operated at a great loss.

"We can shut down the mill now without losing a penny; our finances are in good shape, and as soon as conditions have adjusted themselves following the anticipated tariff revision, the factory will resume operations."

Mr. Brown quoted Government statistics showing that in many foreign cloth-making countries labor is from one-half to two-thirds cheaper than in the United States. "In Belgium, especially. There a weaver gets $6 to $7 a week; here he is paid from $12 to $20 a week. The warper's wages are proportionate. Germany and France also pay low wages to cloth makers. We can not expect to compete with these countries in the price of cloth when the cost of production is so much less for them."

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. PETERS] asks unanimous consent that all debate on paragraph E close in five minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. SLOAN] is recognized.

Mr. SLOAN. Mr. Chairman, I shall not use all the five minutes accorded me; but as history is being recited, I want to see that it is kept on straight and completed. Credit is properly claimed by our minority leader [Mr. MANN] for this side for the origin and passage by House and Senate of the income-tax amendment, and its good features have just been extolled by the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. NORTON]. My purpose in rising is this: While we are talking about the origin of the income-tax amendment I wish to say that a Republican Senator from the State of Nebraska, Hon. Norris Brown, drafted and introduced the resolution in the Senate of the United States. It went forth to the legislatures of this country. A constitutional majority approved it, and it is now a part of the fundamental law of the land. So, in distributing credit, Nebraska as a State is entitled to the credit for the origin of the income tax through her Republican Senator. I regret the ultrapartisanship of the majority has prevented the Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee from aiding in the drafting of this just law under the amendment, and now, through caucus action, reject every amendment, however salutary, which would correct many errors in this crude and imperfect bill.

My friend from North Dakota [Mr. NORTON] says that the farmers of the Northwest were forgotten. We would have been glad if we had been forgotten. But we are like the punished child: we were not forgotten; we would have been mightily pleased if the Ways and Means Committee had forgotten us and not administered the undeserved punishment under which we will suffer by reason of this bill. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

J. That when merchandise entered for customs duty has been consigned for sale by or on account of the manufacturer thereof, to a person, agent, partner, or consignee in the United States, such person, agent, partner, or consignee shall, at the time of the entry of such merchandise, present to the collector of customs at the port where such entry is made, as a part of such entry, and in addition to the certified invoice or statement in the form of an invoice required by law, a statement signed by such manufacturer, declaring the cost of production of such merchandise, such cost to include all the elements of cost as stated in section 11 of this act. When merchandise entered for customs duty has been consigned for sale by or on account of a person other than the manufacturer of such merchandise, to a person, agent, partner, or consignee in the United States, such person, agent, partner, or consignee shall at the time of the entry of such merchandise present to the collector of customs at the port where such entry is made, as a part of such entry, a statement signed by the consignor thereof, declaring that the merchandise was actually purchased by him or for his account, and showing the time when, the place where, and from whom he purchased the merchandise, and in detail the price he paid for the same: Provided, That the statements required by this section shall be made in triplicate, and shall bear the attestation of the consular officer of the United States resident within the consular district wherein the merchandise was manufactured, if consigned by the manufacturer or for his account, or from whence it was imported when consigned by a person other than the manufacturer, one copy thereof to be delivered to the person making the statement, one copy to be transmitted with the triplicate invoice of the merchandise to the collector of the port in the United States to which the merchandise is consigned, and the remaining copy to be filed in the consulate.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. PETERS] offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 173, line 13, by striking out the words "section 11" and substituting therefor the words "paragraph L."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. PETERS].

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

L. That when the actual market value, as defined by law, of any article of imported merchandise, wholly or partly manufactured and subject to an ad valorem duty, or to a duty based in whole or in part on value, can not be ascertained to the satisfaction of the appraising officer, such officer shall use all available means in his power to ascertain the cost of production of such merchandise at the time of exportation to the United States, and at the place of manufacture, such cost of production to include the cost of materials and of fabrication, and all general expenses to be estimated at not less than 10 per cent, covering each and every outlay of whatsoever nature incident to such production, together with the expense of preparing and putting up such merchandise ready for shipment, and an addition of not less than 8 nor more than 50 per cent upon the total cost as thus ascertained; and in no case shall such merchandise be appraised upon original appraisal or reappraisement at less than the total cost of production as thus ascertained. The actual market value or wholesale price, as defined by law, of any imported merchandise which is consigned for sale in the United States, or which is sold for exportation to the United States, and which is not actually sold or freely offered for sale in usual wholesale quantities in the open market of the country of exportation to all purchasers, shall not in any case be appraised at less than the wholesale price at which such or similar imported merchandise is actually sold or freely offered for sale in usual wholesale quantities in the United States in the open market, due allowance by deduction being made for estimated duties thereon, cost of transportation, insurance, and other necessary expenses from the place of shipment to the place of delivery, and a commission not exceeding 6 per cent, if any has been paid or contracted to be paid on consigned goods, or a reasonable allowance for general expenses and profits (not to exceed 8 per cent) on purchased goods, and with reference to the appraisement of all imported merchandise, whether purchased or consigned, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and empowered to determine the existence or nonexistence of a foreign market, and such determination shall be binding and conclusive upon all persons and interests.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. PETERS] offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 176, line 10, by striking out the comma after the word "goods" and inserting in lieu thereof a semicolon.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I want to speak on this amendment for a few moments.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. PAYNE. I want to commend the committee again, as I have done very often heretofore in the course of this debate, on the good sense that flashes out occasionally, here and there, in their consideration of this bill, by copying our provisions. They have adopted so many things that are in the present tariff law that really, if they had not done such unaccountably bad things in other sections of it, they would have reflected a great deal of credit on their sagacity and judgment. [Laughter on the Republican side.]

Here is a paragraph which is a substitute for section 11. Four years ago I spent a good deal of time in drawing the last part of this paragraph. I know that it met the approval of some of the gentlemen on the other side. The Speaker of the House said that if it worked out right he thought I had accomplished more than anybody else in making tariff bills.

That had to do with consigned goods that were brought in here when there was no market for them abroad and when the whole product was consigned to this market. Of course it was proved that there was no market value, and it was impossible to get any other value except that stated in the consignment. So I proposed this proposition, which works backward; that is, it takes the market price here at which these goods are sold as the real market price, and then, after deducting the duties and a reasonable commission paid, not exceeding 6 per cent, it fixes upon that as the value.

The majority of the committee has now extended that method of treatment not only to the consigned goods but to goods actually sold for importation into the United States The committee have shown very good judgment in extending this provision as far as possible, but I doubt whether it will have any practical effect, because this thing of there being no market value on the other side has been applied to consigned goods. When you have an ad valorem the importer proceeds immediately to get around it, and the most effective method that has been employed heretofore has been to take up the entire product of a factory, or to invest in a factory there, so that the matter of price or cost is a mere matter of secret arrangement between the men who run the factories there and the men who run the importing business end of the concerns here, and it is often difficult to get at the frauds which they perpetrate upon the Treasury

One thing that I noticed a little while ago is that they actually detected people belonging to a foreign concern in the act of sending 47,000 francs to their foreign agency to make up the difference in the cost of their goods in the factory over there which these people control. The consignment was so much below not only the actual price, but the actual factory cost, that they had to send 47,000 francs to their foreign agency to make up the difference between the true statement of the cost and the false statement that was sent here with the consignment of goods.

Now, I commend the gentlemen on keeping that and on keeping so many of the good features of the administrative law. It is a long credit mark to them. The same thing is true in the cases where they have adopted the same duties, in the taxing portion of the bill, and have followed it on other matters that were provided in the present law. I have been much gratified by the way in which the present law, during this debate, has received some portion of the credit which is its due. It is so different from four years ago, when people were getting up and shouting in the index and alleging all sorts of false things about it. Of course, they did not know better. I am not accusing them of any wrong intention in the matter. There have been many untruths told about that bill, but the truth is getting out. One of these days history will be written. In fact, history has been written already, commending that bill and the manner in which it was made. Time evens up all things in the end, and by and by, when people see the workings of this bill they will say, "For God's sake, why didn't we take the existing tariff law as it was, amending the wool and cotton schedules, and let the rest of it alone, and let the industry of the country go on."

I thank you, gentlemen, for the consideration which you have given this paragraph and other paragraphs in the administrative features of this bill, and I want to commend your judgment in agreeing to so many of them.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] is commending the committee for the adoption substantially of some of the administrative features of his tariff law. I am willing to admit that the gentleman from New York occasionally stumbled upon some good ideas; but, so far as this feature of the law is concerned, I will point out to him the fact that in changing so many specific duties to ad valorem duties our committee were constrained to carry into our law certain features of the existing law which might appear to be burdensome to importers; and even further to tighten up the administrative features of the law so as to protect the customhouses and the revenues of the Government.

I am frank to say that I should not have voted for the adoption of this feature of the administrative law if it were to be continued to be administered by Republican officials. All of these administrative features impose more or less discretion in the administrative officers, and I am bound to say that the way the law has been administered in recent years has often been a gross hardship and inconvenience to importers, and injustice has occasionally been done.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] will remember, as I do, the appearance before our committee of certain exporters of onions and vegetables from Bermuda, who claimed that the market price in New York was fixed as the point at which the duty was to be assessed, upon the claim at the New York customhouse that they could not ascertain the market value of these vegetables in Bermuda, thus raising the duty considerably over what it would otherwise have been upon these vegetables.

As I say, a law of this kind is capable of great abuse if it is administered unfairly and unjustly, but I have every confidence that under the present administration of the Government honest importers will receive perfectly fair play at the customhouse, that they will not be discriminated against, and I am perfectly satisfied under those circumstances to vote to include in our law such features as are necessary to administer strictly ad valorem duties.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. PETERS].

The amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

"M. That the appraiser shall revise and correct the reports of the assistant appraisers as he may judge proper, and the appraiser, or, at ports where there is no appraiser, the person acting as such, shall report to the collector his decision as to the value of the merchandise appraised. At ports where there is no appraiser the certificate of the customs officer to whom is committed the estimating and collection of duties, of the dutiable value of any merchandise required to be appraised, shall be deemed and taken to be the appraisement of such merchandise. If the collector shall deem the appraisement of any imported merchandise too low, he may, within 60 days thereafter, appeal to reappraisement, which shall be made by one of the general appraisers, or if the importer, owner, agent, or consignee of such merchandise shall deem the appraisement thereof too high, and shall have complied with the requirements of law with respect to the entry and appraisement of merchandise, he may within 10 days thereafter appeal for reappraisement by giving notice thereof to the collector in writing. Such appeal shall be deemed to be finally abandoned and waived unless within two days from the date of filing thereof the person who filed such notice shall deposit with the collector of customs a fee of $1 with respect to each appraisement objected to. Such fee shall be deposited and accounted for as miscellaneous receipts, and in case the appeal in connection with which such fee was deposited shall be finally sustained, in whole or in part, such fee shall be refunded to the importer, with the duties found to be collected in excess, from the appropriation for the refund to importers of excess of deposits. The decision of the general appraiser in cases of reappraisement shall be final and conclusive as to the dutiable value of such merchandise against all parties interested therein, unless the importer, owner, consignee, or agent of the merchandise shall deem the reappraisement of the merchandise too high, and shall, within five days thereafter, give notice to the collector, in writing, of an appeal, or unless the collector shall deem the reappraisement of the merchandise too low, and shall within 10 days thereafter appeal for re-reappraisement; in either case the collector shall transmit the invoice and all the papers appertaining thereto to the board of nine general appraisers, to be by rule thereof duly assigned for determination. In such cases the general appraiser and boards of general appraisers shall proceed by all reasonable ways and means in their power to ascertain, estimate, and determine the dutiable value of the imported merchandise, and in so doing may exercise both judicial and inquisitorial functions. In such cases hearings may in the discretion of the general appraiser or Board of General Appraisers before whom the case is pending be open and in the presence of the importer or his attorney and any duly authorized representative of the Government, who may in like discretion examine and cross-examine all witnesses produced. The decision of the appraiser, or the person acting as such (in case where no objection is made thereto, either by the collector or by the importer, owner, consignee, or agent), or the single general appraiser in case of no appeal, or of the board of three general appraisers, in all reappraisement cases, shall be final and conclusive against all parties and shall not be subject to review in any manner for any cause in any tribunal or court, and the collector or the person acting as such shall ascertain, fix, and liquidate the rate and amount of the duties to be paid on such merchandise, and the dutiable costs and charges thereon, according to law; and no reappraisement or re-reappraisement shall be considered invalid because of the absence of the merchandise or samples thereof before the officer or officers making the same.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I understood my colleague from New York [Mr. HARRISON] to say that section L had worked some injustice in the assessment of duty on onions from Bermuda, as appearing in the hearings. If that appeared in the hearings it was a gross error, because the duty on onions is not an ad valorem one in the present law, but it is 40 cents per bushel of 57 pounds. Nor would it be necessary to invoke this paragraph L, which is section 11 of the former law, in behalf of onions, in this bill, because the committee have departed from their ad valorem rates in regard to onions and have assessed the rate of duty at 20 cents per bushel. It was probably something else that my friend had in mind, or else it was a fairy story that some one told the committee.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PAYNE. I will give the gentleman a chance in just a moment. I want to conclude. But, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman says that there is going to be a stricter enforcement of the law, and also a more liberal enforcement of it under the present administration, and that it is largely a matter of discretion. I hope there will not be any more liberal enforcement than there was in a case that came to my knowledge in regard to this very paragraph, section L of the present administrative law.

There was a case where the manufacturer was taking the entire output of the factory across the water, and the question came up before one of the subboards of general appraisers at New York. Evidence was taken, and the importer showed conclusively that there was no market price for the goods abroad in the country of their origin, and the attorney for the United States then went on to show the market price at which the goods were sold in the United States and what would be a proper reduction for duty paid, and also allowing them full commission of 6 per cent for various charges for commissions, which could not exceed that, and the Government showed a pretty handsome advance over the invoice that had been sent with the goods and the sworn appraisements of the importer himself.

Then the matter was adjourned from time to time for a space of three months until the importer could get time to organize and have three or four fake sales and then come back and testify that there was a market value for the goods. And so the fraud worked.

Now, I hope there will not be any more lax administration of the law than that was. If there is, this section would not be of any use. It has been of use because the importers have been afraid of it and have made more honest returns than they did before. Even under a lax administration it would do good, and if the present administration is to favor the importer, under their administration of the laws it will still do some good and help to catch somebody and work for an honest appraisement, because the importers themselves will make the honest appraisement.

I hope the gentleman does not mean fully what he says. The law ought to be fairly executed; there ought not to be any division on political lines about the administrative features of any tariff law. There was not any such division when I was chairman of the committee. This is the first time that anything of this kind has occurred. Everybody was consulted and had their say about it in the formation of the bill. The desire has been on the part of each member of the committee heretofore that, whatever the tariff rates were, they should be equally and fairly enforced against all people importing these goods into the United States, to the end that if the law was a bad one it might appear by its enforcement, and if it was a good one it should be commended, and at all events it should be equitably enforced against all people.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] is exactly right—that the administrative features of the tariff bill should not be political, that they should be framed to enforce whatever rights are put on the statute book. But the gentleman from New York is entirely mistaken in reference to his own attitude in passing administrative features of the law, because in the bill that bears his name the minority of this House were not consulted in the framing of that bill in committee, so far as the administrative features were concerned. When it came into the House there was a rule adopted that prevented the minority from even offering an amendment in reference to the administrative features of the law, so that the minority had no chance to speak or even offer amendment to it from the time the bill began in committee until it ended in the House.

Mr. PAYNE. I just want to say one word. Perhaps I will remind the gentleman that I stated in open committee at the beginning, in reference to this paragraph and the administrative features especially, what I proposed to do about this. I remember that the present Speaker of the House, leading minority member, said that if I could accomplish that object I would have done good in a tariff bill, whatever else it might accomplish.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I am free to say that the gentleman stated what he proposed to do to our end of the committee, but we were invited out when the hearings were ended. The gentleman then prepared his bill and put in what his party desired, and put it through the House under a rule in which we had no part. I am not complaining of the position the gentleman has taken, but I wanted to call his attention to the fact that in the bill passed heretofore the minority have had no chance to exercise their judgment in reference to the administration features of the law.

Mr. PAYNE. The gentleman will remember that we have had several revisions of the administrative features of the law not connected with a tariff law, and they were before a full committee.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes; but the present law was not written that way.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from New York informed us when the present tariff law passed it was the desire of all the committee that the rates provided in the bill should be adequately enforced. I can assure the gentleman that such is the desire of the majority who frame this bill, and I hope that the minority will share that ambition with us. The gentleman has called attention to a lack of effectiveness in the present law in section 11 of the Payne Act, the provisions of which we adopted with some additions in paragraph L of our present bill. He has called attention to the fact that while a case was under consideration the importers went abroad and made fictitious sales and then came to the Secretary of the Treasury, produced those sales in evidence, and claimed that they established a market, and that that market must be taken by the Treasury Department as fixing the market value of those imported goods. The Treasury was compelled to accept such evidence.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman did not quite understand me. It was where a case was before one of the subboards of appraisers, and evidence was being taken, that all of this occurred.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I am quite familiar with the case referred to. I think I am stating it just as correctly as the gentleman is. We are familiar with that case and have provided specifically against the fraud which was perpetrated on the department by that act. It was a fraud for the importers to establish a market value by fictitious sales. We have added in section L to the provisions of section 11 of the present law the words:

And with reference to the appraisement of all imported merchandise, whether purchased or consigned, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and empowered to determine the existence or nonexistence of a foreign market, and such determination shall be binding and conclusive upon all persons and interests.

If such a case arises under the provisions of this act, the Secretary of the Treasury may refuse to receive the evidence of these wash sales and may maintain that they do not establish a foreign market. This illustrates perfectly the attitude of your committee in respect to the provisions of this law. We mean to make them effective; we mean to give the Treasury Department, in which we have the fullest confidence, the power to collect the rates which we fix in this bill. We intend to confer on the Treasury Department all proper authority to detect and punish fraud.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, this paragraph provides for a fee of $1 to be paid by the importer, consignee, or owner of goods in the event of a request for a reappraisement. Is not that new law?

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I was answering the gentleman from New York, who was speaking on the provision of section L. The provision to which the gentleman from Pennsylvania refers is in paragraph M and paragraph N.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] moved to strike out the last word when we reached the end of the paragraph on page 179, which is paragraph M and which begins on page 176. In that paragraph provision is made for a deposit of a fee of $1 by the importer, owner, or consignee of merchandise who desires to appeal from the appraisement. We are on that paragraph now.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, may I say that the gentleman is strictly in order, but I spoke on paragraph L, and some reply was made and I wished to reply to that, and I waited until the present paragraph was read. Debate has been on paragraph L, and then the gentleman from Massachusetts desired to talk on paragraph L. I am sure the gentleman will be recognized on paragraph M.

Mr. MOORE. The gentleman from New York untangles the mystery delightfully, but what I wanted was to get some information. I do not want to pass paragraph M without it.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will state the situation. Paragraph M has been read, and the gentleman from New York moved to strike out the last word, and on that pro forma amendment debate has been proceeding. The gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDER] is waiting to offer a real amendment just as soon as the debate on the pro forma amendment has concluded.

Mr. HARRISON of New York. Mr. Chairman, I shall not detain the committee for more than a moment. My respected friend, the former chairman of the committee, corrected me in an erroneous statement when I said that this complaint from the members of the Bermuda Parliament was about onions. One may be excused, perhaps, for associating Bermuda with the festive onion, but the fact is that their complaint was based on imports into New York of the following Bermuda vegetables: Parsley, carrots, beets, lettuce, radishes, mint, turnips, and kohl-rabi.

The operation of the law, as drawn by the gentleman from New York and as administered by the last administration, was to assess the New York market value of these vegetables as the rate upon which the 25 per cent ad valorem duty was collected, and that made a difference in the value of parsley, for example, of 87 cents, instead of 30 cents. This complaint was made by Mr. Stanley Spurling, a member of Parliament of Bermuda.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I do this merely to recur to the question of the fee of $1 provided for in this bill to be had from the importer, owner, agent, or consignee who desires to appeal from the customs appraisement. I desire to ask if this is not new?

Mr. PETERS. This is new and is provided for the first time in this section.

Mr. MOORE. Will the gentleman explain the necessity for it? It is complained it will lead to confusion. This $1 is to be deposited upon appeal, and if the appeal is confirmed it is to be repaid. It may be very annoying.

Mr. PETERS. It is at present the custom under the present proclamation changing customs regulations. Now, this is the first time it is put in the provisions of a revenue act.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 177, strike out the word "such" in line 9 and all of the paragraph down to and including the word "deposits" in line 20.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. Chairman, the effect of this amendment, if agreed to, will be to strike from the bill the provision requiring the payment of a protest fee of $1 on the filing of a protest against an excessive valuation at the customhouse. I know, Mr. Chairman, this protest fee was incorporated in the customs reorganization scheme promulgated by President Taft on March 4. Many believe that the President had no legal right to establish this protest fee, and I assume that the committee have incorporated this provision in the bill so as to make sure the protest fee could be collected. Now, in the offering of this amendment I am acting on behalf of the merchants of the city of New York. I am told that upward of 70,000 protests are filed each year in the customhouse at that city. It is the practice to file a protest if an importer or a merchant believes that the customs duty is excessive. Very often it is necessary to file hundreds of protests and in some cases thousands of protests to cover one litigation, because litigations may begin today on the question of excessive valuation on an item covered in several schedules, and a protest must be filed as affecting each one, and then litigation goes on which may last for several years. So to cover every single importation it is necessary for the importer and merchant to file protests during all of this period if he hopes to gain advantage of his litigation on all of the importations entered in the interim before the courts make final decision.

Mr. MOORE. If the gentleman will permit, does he not think this will add very greatly to the confusion now existing in this business with regard to appeals on appraisement and reappraisement?

Mr. CALDER. Undoubtedly it will.

Mr. MOORE. And that it will lead to a tangle of accounts?

Mr. CALDER. Certainly; and it is well known that collectors in cases of doubt invariably assess the higher duty, leaving it to the importer to protest the classification before the Board of General Appraisers. The theory of the protest is to advise the collector that he has made a mistake, and he is presumed in such cases to correct his error and refund the illegal duties. When it is considered how many protests are decided in favor of the importers it will be seen how frequently the collector is in error. Also, when it is considered how slight a doubt may cause him to assess the higher duty it is unjust that an importer should be taxed for the privilege of pointing out this error. It is true that the provision provides for the repayment of this fee in case the importer should prevail. But should an importer be compelled to take the chance of losing, in many cases hundreds or thousands of dollars, for the privilege of contesting a doubtful classification even though he, rather than the collector, might be mistaken in the interpretation of the law?

It has been claimed that many frivolous protests have been filed, which entail needless work on the part of the Government, but experience proves that many protests deemed frivolous by the collectors of customs or the Board of General Appraisers have been sustained by the courts. For instance, in the so-called "Bottle Charges" cases, the Board of General Appraisers refused to sustain protests because they were frivolous, and hundreds of suits were filed in the courts on appeal. All these alleged "frivolous" protests were decided by the court in favor of the protestants.

Furthermore, the fee of $1, while apparently small, is in fact, because of the wording of the provision, very large. The paragraph would require the payment of $1 for each protest and that each protest must be limited to a single issue.

It is a new innovation, unjust to the importer and the merchant, and I sincerely hope my amendment will prevail.

The paper I have in my hand was handed me by the Merchants' Association of New York City. It is a protest against this legislation, and I know of no gentleman in this House who can discuss this subject with more intelligence than my colleague [Mr. METZ]. His name is signed to this protest, which is addressed to the House of Representatives, as I indicated above, by the Merchants' Association of New York City, a great body of men, having more business with the customs service of the country than any other body of like character in the United States.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, the requirement that a fee of $1 shall be deposited with a protest is now a law through a proclamation of President Taft in March, providing for the customhouse reorganization. The provision for a protest fee of $1 is based on the recommendations of the two special committees which have investigated the customs service in the past year. The imposition of a fee is also recommended in the report of the last Secretary of the Treasury. The present practice tends to encourage litigation, and the fee should cut out a large quantity of useless labor. It should eliminate a considerable number of purely speculative and frivolous protests.

All these duplicate or frivolous protests at present require the following handling:

At customhouse: Received, recorded, trasmitted to appraiser.
At appraiser's stores: Received, recorded, report of facts to collector, record of return.
At customhouse: Receipt of report of appraiser, formulate collector's report (often rubber stamp), transmitted to board.
At the board: Received, docketed, placed on calendar, called by the board on calendar (and abandoned), decided.
At the office of Assistant Attorney General: Prepared for hearing.
At customhouse: Receipt of decision, record.

During the year ending June 30, 1912, there were over 96,000 protests filed, and at that time there were pending over 146,000 protests. The committee which investigated the customs appraisers' office estimate that over 50 per cent of the protests are purely fictitious. Now, in all judicial procedure it is the custom to have a fee charged on the commencement of any action of law. The present law offers every opportunity to gamble against the Government with no expense.

I desire to ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph, and amendments thereto, shall be limited to ten minutes, of which the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. Cox] shall have four minutes, the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] four minutes, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. METZ] two minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I want to say a few words in reference to the matter before the committee. This is the first time that I have learned that President Taft before retiring from office put into force by Executive order this requirement of requiring a dollar to be paid in the way of a protest. I think he should be commended for that course. And right now I want to commend him heartily for putting into force a complete reorganization of the customs districts of this country. I think he did his country a great and invaluable service in that way.

Two years ago the little committee over which I presided as chairman, the Committee on Expenditures in the Treasury Department, investigated this identical question. The administration prepared a bill to meet the conditions that were then existing, particularly at New York. My recollection is that the fee they required in that bill was only 25 cents. I suggested to Mr. Curtis, who had the subject under his control and well in hand at that time, that I thought the fee was too low. But we went ahead and investigated it. While our committee did not have the power to report bills, we made our recommendations that legislation of that kind be enacted into law. It is true, gentlemen, I think, beyond a doubt—and I am quoting Mr. Curtis upon that question when I make this statement—that by reason of the countless thousands of protests that are filed in New York City, it actually requires the addition of from 10 to 15 additional clerks to jacket and file and keep these protests in the proper place so that they can get at them quickly. The only persons on earth who will be hurt by this are the "ambulance chasers" over in New York City. If a man has a meritorious protest, it is not believed for a moment that he will object to paying a fee of $1. And if I understand the Executive order issued by President Taft before retiring, if a man wins his protest the dollar is paid back to him. It was the testimony of Mr. Curtis before the committee that even a fee of 25 cents charged upon the protest would reduce the useless protests that are made in New York City practically one-half, and if that would reduce the protests to the amount of one-half it would necessarily reduce the number of clerks working in that office some 10 or 12. So I am glad to see the bill carry an actual provision of law to this effect, requiring a fee of $1. In my judgment it ought to be $5.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. Yes.

Mr. CALDER. I know from actual observation that there are not 13 clerks employed on that work. I am told there are only 2.

Mr. COX. I am quoting the evidence of Mr. Curtis himself, and I received—and I think other members of my committee received at the same time—a large number of protests against the bill that was then pending before our committee, and every one of those protests were from a lawyer who looked after these protest fees; everyone of them.

It is nothing in the world, in my judgment, except the "ambulance chaser" that gets after the importers, and I am told—and the evidence discloses the fact—that these attorneys that look after the importation of merchandise and the filing of protests take these fees on a contingent percentage basis. If they win they get their money, and if they lose they do not get it. If an attorney wants to engage in that kind of practice let him put up the dollar himself, and then let him take his chances on winning the amount of duty. I think this is a wise provision.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] is recognized.

Mr. PAYNE. My colleague [Mr. METZ] is on the other side of the question from what I am. I am with the committee, and I understand my colleague [Mr. METZ] wants to speak in opposition to it.

Mr. METZ. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I do not want to do anything of the kind.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, two minutes' time was reserved for the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE].

Mr. PAYNE. After Mr. METZ.

Mr. METZ. Mr. Chairman, I simply rise to thank my colleague from New York, Mr. CALDER, for the compliment he pays me and to make a brief statement.

I have had some experience in this matter, and I want to say there are two sides to this question. The last speaker who addressed the committee on this subject [Mr. Cox] is quite right. The greatest objection comes from the lawyers who handle these cases on a contingent basis, but the members of the Merchants' Association of New York are nevertheless in earnest in the recommendations which they have made. My purpose in rising is chiefly to present these recommendations from the customs committee of the Merchants' Association of New York and to ask that they be placed upon the minutes; that is all.

Following is the document referred to:

THE MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION OF NEW YORK—RECOMMENDATIONS RELATIVE TO THE ADMINISTRATIVE SECTIONS OF THE UNDERWOOD TARIFF BILL.

To the Members of the Sixty-third Congress, Washington, D. C.:

The Merchants' Association of New York desires to call to your attention the following important matters relative to the customs administrative features of House bill 3321, now pending, and strongly urges that the recommendations set forth below be followed.

While this association has never taken, and does not now take, any action upon tariff schedules or rates, it has always deemed the customs administrative features of the tariff a subject which should have its careful study and attention, regulating as it does the application of the tariff schedules and rates to the three conflicting factors affected. These factors are:

First. The Government, for the revenue which the tariff law is intended to provide;

Second. The domestic manufacturer, for such degree of protection as the tariff law may afford; and Third. The honest importer, for the right of importation under such limitations, fairly administered, as the tariff statutes may prescribe.

It is the conception, therefore, of this association that the administration of the tariff law should be carried on, first, under provisions of the law which are in form fair and equitable as between these conflicting interests, and, second, by customs administrative officers who appreciate the necessity of a fair and judicial attitude in the administration of these provisions.

Predicated upon this conception, this association, through its committee on customs service and revenue law, has conducted its study of customs administrative matters for over 14 years, and has made many recommendations, from time to time, for changes in the administrative features.

In 1899 President McKinley requested this association to make a careful analysis of the customs administrative act of June 10, 1890, as amended by the act of July 24, 1897, and to suggest such changes therein or amendments thereto as we might deem wise for the better protection of the Government, the domestic manufacturer, and the honest importer alike. On March 1, 1900, a report was presented to President McKinley making specific recommendations for changes in the then existing customs administrative act. This report was rendered as the result of a comprehensive study by a large committee which was truly representative of merchants, domestic manufacturers, and importers.

The Ways and Means Committee, responsible for the Payne-Aldrich Tariff Act of 1909, recognized the force of the changes proposed by the Merchants' Association of New York by accepting and by obtaining the enactment of seven of these suggestions.

The administrative provisions in the tariff bill now pending are far more drastic than those in the original administrative act or in any of the amendments thereto. Their enactment into law would, to an alarming extent, counteract any relief intended to be afforded by the reduction of rates in the tariff itself.

Moreover, these proposed provisions are much more stringent and objectionable than the administrative provisions of the then existing law, which so nearly brought about a commercial war between this country and Germany a few years ago. The provisions of the present bill, if put into operation, would create imminent danger of foreign complications of a very series nature which could not fail to have a most injurious effect upon the present efforts so strenuously put forth to increase the foreign commerce of this country.

The more objectionable features contained in the proposed administrative portion of the bill, which have aroused great opposition, are as follows:

PARAGRAPHS M AND N, SECTION III.

PROTEST AND REAPPRAISEMENT FEES.

Undoubtedly the greatest hardship in the proposed law is the levying of a tax upon the importer for the privilege of filing a protest against wrongful assessment of duties. It is well known that collectors, in questions of doubt, invariably assess the higher duty, leaving it to the importer to contest the classification before the Board of General Appraisers. The theory of the protest is to advise the collector that he has made a mistake, and he is presumed in such cases to correct his error and refund the illegal duties. When it is considered how many protests are decided in favor of the importers, it will be seen how frequently the collector is in error. Also, when it is considered how slight a doubt may cause him to assess the higher duty, it is unjust that an importer should be taxed for the privilege of pointing out this error.

It is true that the provision provides for the repayment of this fee in case the importer should prevail. But should an importer be compelled to take the chance of losing, in many cases hundreds or thousands of dollars for the privilege of contesting a doubtful classification, even though he, rather than the collector, might be mistaken in the interpretation of the law?

It has been claimed that many frivolous protests have been filed, which entail needless work on the part of the Government, but experience proves that many protests deemed frivolous by the collectors of customs or the Board of General Appraisers have been sustained by the courts. For instance, in the so-called "bottle charges" cases, the Board of General Appraisers refused to sustain protests because they were frivolous, and hundreds of suits were filed in the courts on appeal. All these alleged "frivolous" protests were decided by the court in favor of the protestants.

Furthermore, the fee of $1, while apparently small, is, in fact, because of the wording of the provision, very large. The paragraph would require the payment of $1 for each protest, and that each protest must be limited to a single issue.

Frequently an issue is not decided for two years or more, and in the meanwhile, through the continuing character of the importing business, this nominally small fee would rapidly accumulate and become very great. We are aware of the fact that a great deal of work devolves upon the Board of General Appraisers in the handling of protests, but there seems to us no reason why these protests could not be held at the customhouse while the issue is pending before the Board of General Appraisers or in the courts. If, then, the issue should be decided against the importers, the protests could be abandoned at the customhouse, or, if the issue is decided in favor of the importer, the protests at the customhouse could be sustained by the collector without sending them to the Board of General Appraisers. The assessment of a fee for the filing of these protests we submit is wrong in principle and should be stricken from the bill.

The same objections would apply to the fee for reappraisement, although in reappraisement the burden is not so heavy as upon protests, because the issues are decided with comparative speed.

PARAGRAPH I, SECTION III.

AND DUMPING CLAUSE.

Paragraph I of section III provides for undervaluation a penalty of 1 per cent on the appraised value for each per cent that the appraised value exceeds the entered value. This should be amended to allow some leeway before the penalty accrues. The undervaluations at the port of New York do not exceed one-tenth of 1 per cent of the total importations. Of this one-tenth of 1 per cent it is safe to say that not one-tenth are fraudulent, but are unintentional and are due to fluctuations in the market and ignorance thereof on the part of the importer. The fact that the law gives an importer the right to add on entry is no answer to this proposition, because it is seldom that one who has honestly purchased goods and entered them at the purchase price is aware that he has purchased below the market. On some few staple goods the market value can be ascertained fairly well, but on the great bulk of goods, especially those purchased in the open market, one man seldom knows what his competitor has paid for the same class of goods purchased from another dealer or even from the same dealer. It is not too much to say that the majority of additions on entry are made only after an importer has found that he has purchased below the market because of additions made by the appraiser. It is therefore manifestly unfair that he should be penalized where the difference is only 1 per cent. Some leeway should be allowed, and this association recommends that no penalty should be assessed on unintentional undervaluation not exceeding 5 per cent.

Arduous as this provision is under the old law, the proposed "dumping clause" (par. R, sec. IV), as to certain goods, increases the burden more than one hundredfold, for it not only doubles the penalty but makes it apply even where the importer himself adds on entry. It provides that "if the export or actual selling price to an importer in the United States, or the price at which such goods are consigned, is less than the fair market value of the same article when sold for home consumption in the usual and ordinary course in the country whence exported to the United States, at the time of its exportation to the United States," there shall be levied an additional duty equal to the difference between the export price and market value.

If, therefore, the goods are found to be below the market value—even where the undervaluation is unintentional—a duty equal to the full undervaluation up to 15 per cent would be assessed in addition to the penal duties provided for by paragraph I. This additional duty would be assessed even though the importer himself adds on entry, for the wording of the provision makes it operative regardless of whether he adds or not. In fact, once an importer has added on entry to make market value, he himself automatically puts the "dumping clause" into operation by admitting that the goods were bought or consigned below the market price.

PARAGRAPH L, SECTION III.

AMERICAN SELLING PRICE.

Paragraph L reenacts subsection 11 of section 28 of the present administrative act with additional burdens on the importer.

This section, after providing that the market value may be found by considering the cost of production, further provides that the "dutiable value of any merchandise consigned for sale or sold for exportation to the United States, and which is not actually sold or freely offered for sale in the open market of the country of exportation to all purchasers, shall not in any case be appraised at less than the wholesale price at which such or similar merchandise is sold in the United States with deductions for estimated duties, cost of transportation, insurance, and other necessary expenses, and a commission of 6 per cent on consigned goods or a reasonable allowance for general expenses and profits not to exceed 8 per cent on purchased goods." This is the provision as found in the present law, and while it has been invoked comparatively infrequently, it is absolutely wrong in principle and impracticable of intelligent application. For instance, if an importer is selling an article at a certain price, it is obvious that with any competition the price can not be higher than will allow him a reasonable profit. This profit, under certain circumstances, may amount to a gross profit of, say, 35 per cent, and it may be necessary for him to obtain this percentage of gross profit if he is to continue to do business at all. The appraisers, however, may think this gross profit too much, and, working backward, may allow him only 25 per cent, thereby advancing his goods 10 per cent. In order to do business he must then advance his selling price so that he will still obtain his 35 per cent, the minimum gross profit under which he can handle the goods. Immediately the goods would again be raised, based on the new selling price, and so on until the importer is compelled to quit importing.

No comment is necessary to show both the injustice and the absurdity of this provision, the only use of which could be as a club to drive importers out of business. Under the provisions of the bill now pending, however, it is proposed to go further and to deprive the importer of the right to contest the appraiser's finding that the goods in question are not sold freely in the country of exportation. Under the present law the importer has oftentimes been able to produce evidence conclusively to show that the goods in question were sold in the country of origin and that this section therefore did not apply. An amendment is now proposed in the pending bill, as follows: "The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and empowered to determine the existence or nonexistence of a foreign market, and such determination shall be binding and conclusive upon all persons and interests."

Manifestly in the determination of what is or is not an open market the Secretary of the Treasury must necessarily depend upon reports from special agents and consuls. Therefore the delegation of this power proposed in the amendment referred to to the Secretary of the Treasury practically means its delegation to the special agents. We respectfully submit that the determination of such a question, so vital to the honest importer, should not be delegated to such minor officials, whose reports, experience shows, are frequently unreliable. The entire section, with the exception of the provision for finding market value upon the basis of cost of production, we submit should be eliminated as impracticable, unjust, and unfair.

PARAGRAPH U, SECTION III.

EXAMINATION OF FOREIGN BOOKS, ETC.

Paragraph U provides as follows:

"That if any person, persons, corporations, or other bodies selling, shipping, consigning, or manufacturing merchandise exported to the United States shall fail or refuse to submit to the inspection of a duly accredited investigating officer of the United States when so requested to do any or all of his books, records, or accounts pertaining to the value or classification of such merchandise, then the Secretary of the Treasury, in his discretion, is authorized, while such failure or refusal continues, to exclude from entry any and all merchandise sold, shipped, consigned, or manufactured by such person, persons, corporation, or other bodies and imported into the United States."

This provision is harsh in its construction and places the importer at an unfair disadvantage. He purchases his goods in the open market and pays the price agreed upon, and then in case the foreign shipper, over whom he has no control, refuses to exhibit his books, including his cost books, to a representative of the Treasury Department, the importer's source of supply would be cut off.

The application of this provision would undoubtedly lead to international complications. Retaliatory measures of like import would be most natural, and our American manufacturers who are seeking foreign markets would bitterly resent the inspection of their books, including records of cost, by representatives of foreign Governments. Manufacturers in this country could ill afford to have their trade secrets become known throughout the world. The adoption of the proposed provision vests in the employees of the Government tremendous power. Experience has shown that many of the frauds on the revenue have been perpetrated through collusion with Government officers, and we respectfully submit that the operation of the proposed provision would constitute a tremendous temptation on the part of any dishonest employee to profit by this great power. We therefore recommend that this provision should be eliminated in toto.

PARAGRAPH V, SECTION III.

INSPECTION OF AMERICAN BOOKS.

This paragraph gives the Secretary of the Treasury power to refuse importations "if any person, persons, corporation, or other bodies engaged in the importation of merchandise in the United States, or engaged in dealing with such imported merchandise, shall refuse to submit any or all of his books, records, or accounts pertaining to the value or classification of any such imported merchandise to the inspection of a 'duly accredited investigating officer of the United States.'" Belief has been expressed in some quarters that this provision is unconstitutional in that it constitutes a violation of the fourth and fifth amendments of the Constitution of the United States as interpreted by the United States Supreme Court. Whether constitutional or not, the provision is extremely objectionable, both because of its violation of the right of privacy and because of its extreme liability to abuse.

It may be claimed that an honest importer should have no objection to throwing open his books, but no business man, however honest, will view with equanimity a demand at any or all times for the divulgement of his innermost trade relations, because in the hands of an unscrupulous special agent the power for harm under this authority is incalculable, and experience in the past has shown that the efforts of special agents are oftentimes more energetic than fair.

Moreover, the wording of the provision is so broad that its literal application would produce results unheard of in any enlightened country. Under the proposed conditions any small dealer in an obscure village might have the power to tie up the importation business of the largest merchant in the country. This paragraph provides that if any person dealing in imported merchandise refuses to show his books, then all merchandise "intended for delivery" to him can be excluded from the country by order of the Secretary. For example: If an importing house should have an order from a retailer in some distant part of the country, and the retailer should refuse to show his books, the importer would be precluded from importing any other goods intended for delivery to the retailer. It should be noted that this paragraph provides for the inspection of books, not by the collector or appraiser, as in the old law, but by any "duly accredited investigating officer of the United States." This would be a great step backward into the past, when merchants were terrorized by special agents, who came into their offices, seized their books and papers, and sealed their safes.

PARAGRAPH P, SECTION III.

PENALTY FOR REFUSING TO APPEAR AND TESTIFY.

This paragraph requires any person, even though a stranger to the matter in dispute, to appear before the collector or appraiser and to produce his books and papers, under penalty of a fine ranging from $20 to $500 to be summarily imposed. No one is exempt from the operation of this provision, for it would lie in the discretion of the Government officer as to whether or not his appearance or testimony is deemed material.

It should be noted that this provision relates not only to goods under appraisement, but also to goods as to which the classification is in dispute. The question as to classification is frequently one calling for expert testimony of men in high stations in life, whose time is extremely valuable and whom it would be manifestly unfair to take from their business in order to testify to a matter in which they have absolutely no interest. The roster of witnesses who have appeared before the Board of General Appraisers on questions of classification includes professors of colleges, heads of museums, expert chemists, and, in fact, the highest types of men in all professions, as well as the heads of our largest business houses. We submit that to place men of this type at the beck and call of interested parties, compelling them to spend their time and give their services gratis on matters in which they can be interested only academically, would be an abuse of process.

The penal provisions in the paragraph are particularly objectionable because there is conferred upon the collector or chief officer of customs in the customs collection district judicial powers which he has never been permitted to exercise before, namely, the power to impose a fine not less than $20 nor more than $500, which fine, when certified to the district court of the appropriate judicial district, shall be forthwith entered upon the docket and shall have the full force and effect of a judgment of said court, without any provision for review on the part of any duly constituted judicial tribunal.

In connection with this paragraph, we desire to call attention also to the amendment in paragraph O, which permits the general appraisers, the local appraisers, and collectors to examine importers or any other person not only as to the merchandise then under consideration but as to "any imported merchandise * * * previously imported." This is oppressive and contrary to the spirit of our laws. The examination of private books and papers generally is onerous and unjust, as we have pointed out, but when this right of search is permitted to be unlimited in its scope and time, authorizing the compulsion of an importer or other person to delve into transactions that may have been closed up years before, it offends the true sense of justice.

The merchants' association is familiar with the report made by the special agents appointed by the Treasury Department and also the report made by the Dennison committee appointed by the President. Each of these reports magnify the evils which we believe exist only to a small extent. As we have shown, the undervaluation of goods is relatively slight, but we believe that their detection, if difficult, is not caused by want of efficient laws. The difficulties that may have arisen in the past and which are spoken of by the two committees mentioned above are not due to the lack of laws, but to the improper application and administration of existing laws. This does not mean that the radical changes recommended are necessary.

We doubt that if the proposed changes in the customs administrative act had been in effect during the life of the last administration they would have prevented any of the frauds that have been detected during the past four years.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

The Merchants' Association of New York therefore recommends and urges—

First. That if section 3 of the proposed tariff bill is to be enacted at this time at least the amendments indicated above should be incorporated in the measure.

Second. That section 3 be eliminated from the bill entirely, thereby permitting the present customs administrative regulations to remain in force for the time being, and that there be created a committee representative of the Ways and Means Committee, the Treasury Department, the customs service, and the factors affected by the operation of the customs administrative provisions, which committee should make a careful and complete analysis and revision of the administrative regulations, and should report to the Ways and Means Committee in ample time for consideration thereof, and action thereon by your committee and by Congress at the regular session convening in December next.

The reason for this second and preferable recommendation is that the customs administrative portion of the present law is a patchwork, which in many respects, in our opinion, is inconsistent and illogical. An attempt adequately to remedy these features by the process of additional amendments in the pending bill, in our judgment, merely adds to the difficulty already existing. Such a complete revision as we recommend would, we believe, produce a far more effective, just, and consistent code for administrative procedure than has ever existed in the past in connection with any tariff law.

Respectfully submitted.

COMMITTEE ON CUSTOMS SERVICE AND REVENUE LAW,
THE MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION OF NEW YORK.
THOMAS H. DOWNING, Chairman.
H. A. METZ.
J. C. MCCREERY.
JOHN C. EAMES.
JOHN JEROME ROONEY.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I am heartily in favor of this proposition and I have advocated the change proposed at great length heretofore. It has been a question before the Committee on Ways and Means on several occasions. We have had a good deal of evidence on the subject and a good many statements, and they all resolve briefly into this, that a great portion of these protests are filed by attorneys who take the cases on shares, generally for a moiety of what they recover, sometimes less and sometimes more. On the other hand, there are some honorable attorneys who appear in these cases who do not take cases on shares, but charge a reasonable fee for their services.

Now, it is a reasonable proposition for the importer. He imports the goods and they are appraised at a higher value than he claims they ought to be, but he goes ahead and sells those goods and gets, of course, the higher duties out of his customers. He charges that all in advance, and gets the money in his pocket, and along comes some "ambulance chaser"—because the profession is not quite dead yet—and suggests to the importer that that is all wrong, and that there is a chance to get the money back, and tells him that he will take up the case on shares and that it will not cost the importer a cent to file a protest or anything else. Of course the importer, who is ready and willing to get back this payment, assents, because it is clear gain to him. He consents to that arrangement, and of course the practice is encouraged and the number of these protests is a good deal more than doubled, I think, because of this thing.

The committee went after them once or twice. I think perhaps a mistake was made in fixing the filing fee too high. I think our suggestion was $5 for filing one case. We wanted to stop the practice, but owing to the multiplicity of business and other changes that were demanded then in the administration of the customs laws none of those things were carried through; and I commend this committee that they have put into law this Executive order of the President of the United States, Mr. Taft, requiring this fee to be paid, in order that the people shall not have a chance to gamble without putting up anything against the Treasury of the United States, for an additional profit on the import of their goods. It will help to stop this thing.

Mr. Chairman, the appraisement at some time should be final. You put a provision in the law that after a certain number of days it shall be final if they do not appeal or if they do not protest, and then you say that they can protest without any expense, and then that carries on the time through an indefinite period; and if some other enterprising man puts his money into it and succeeds in a lawsuit, then they come back on the Treasury for the difference in the duty, although they have done nothing but file a protest, and the difference recovered is divided up between these alleged lawyers and their clients. I think the committee did exactly right in putting this provision in the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment of the gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDER].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. CALDER. Mr. Chairman, I offer another amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from New York offers a second amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 177, line 13, strike out "$1" and insert "50 cents."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from New York [Mr. CALDER].

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

N. That the decision of the collector as to the rate and amount of duties chargeable upon imported merchandise, or upon merchandise on which duty shall have been assessed, including all dutiable costs and charges, and as to all fees and exactions of whatever character (except duties on tonnage), shall be final and conclusive against all persons interested therein, unless the owner, importer, consignee, or agent of such merchandise, or the person paying such fees, charges, and exactions other than duties, shall, within 30 days after but not before such ascertainment and liquidation of duties, as well in cases of merchandise entered in bond as for consumption, or within 15 days after the payment of such fees, charges, and exactions, if dissatisfied with such decision imposing a higher rate of duty, or a greater charge, fee, or exaction, than he shall claim to be legally payable, file a protest or protests in writing with the collector, setting forth therein distinctly and specifically, and in respect to each entry or payment, the reasons for his objections thereto, and if the merchandise is entered for consumption shall pay the full amount of the duties and charges ascertained to be due thereon. Each protest shall be limited to a single article or class of articles, and to a single entry or payment; and issues of classification shall not be joined with other issues in the same protest. Such protest, if overruled by the collector, shall be deemed to be finally abandoned and waived unless within 30 days from the date of filing thereof the person who filed such notice or protest shall deposit with the collector of customs a fee of $1 with respect to each protest: Provided, That the person filing any protest may at any time before action of the collector thereon pay such fee. Such fee shall be deposited and accounted for as miscellaneous receipts, and in case the protest in connection with which such fee was deposited shall be finally sustained in whole or in part, such fee shall be refunded to the importer, with the duties found to be collected in excess, from the appropriation for the refund to importers of excess of deposits.

Upon such protest and payment, the collector shall transmit the invoice and all the papers and exhibits connected therewith to the board of nine general appraisers, for due assignment and determination as provided by law; such determination shall be final and conclusive upon all persons interested therein, and the record shall be transmitted to the proper collector or person acting as such, who shall liquidate the entry accordingly, except in cases where an appeal shall be filed in the United States Court of Customs Appeals within the time and in the manner provided for in this act.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts offers an amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 180, lines 6 and 7, by striking out the following: "If overruled by the collector."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PETERS. I offer another amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts offers another amendment which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 180, line 10, by striking out the word "deposit" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "have deposited."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PETERS. I offer another amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 180, lines 11, 12, and 13, by striking out the words "Provided, That the person filing any protest may, at any time before action of the collector thereon, pay such fee."

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman, I wish to ask the gentleman from Massachusetts whether these are machine-made amendments or not? They look as though they were.

Mr. PETERS. They are amendments to perfect the wording of the section.

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PETERS. I offer another amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 180, line 20, by striking out the words "protest and payment" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "payment of duties, protest, and deposit of protest fee."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PETERS. I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 181, line 6, by striking out the words "in this act" and inserting in lieu thereof the words "by law."

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto be limited to five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto be limited to five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. POWERS. Mr. Chairman, what I am about to say is not germane to this particular paragraph, but I shall consume only a minute or two of time, and I hope no objection will be made.

I am reliably informed that there will be no opportunity given to have a separate vote on the income-tax section of the Underwood tariff bill.

I am in favor of an income tax. I believe it to be one of the fairest methods of raising the revenue with which to defray the expenses of the Government. I regret that this income-tax measure has been made a part of a partisan tariff bill; that the Republicans here have not been permitted to help perfect and pass a fair bill of this sort; and that no Republican can vote for it even in its present form without voting for the entire Underwood tariff bill, which I, for one, can not do.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

O. That the general appraisers, or any of them, are hereby authorized to administer oaths, and said general appraisers, the boards of general appraisers, the local appraisers, or the collectors, as the case may be, may cite to appear before them, and examine upon oath any owner, importer, agent, consignee, or other person touching any matter or thing which they, or either of them, may deem material respecting any imported merchandise then under consideration or previously imported, in ascertaining the dutiable value or classification thereof; and they, or either of them, may require the production of any letters, accounts, or invoices relating to said merchandise, and may require such testimony to be reduced to writing, and when so taken it shall be filed and preserved for use or reference until the final decision of the collector or said board of appraisers shall be made respecting the valuation or classification of said merchandise, as the case may be; and such testimony shall be received in evidence and given consideration in all subsequent proceedings relating to such merchandise.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following committee amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 181, line 17, by inserting, after the word "accounts," the word "contracts."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following further amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 181, line 21, by inserting, after the word "collector," the word "appraiser."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. PETERS. I offer the further amendment, Mr. Chairman.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, on page 181, lines 23 and 24, by striking out the words "testimony shall be received in evidence and" and insert the words "evidence shall be."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

P. That if any person so cited to appear shall neglect or refuse to attend, or shall decline to answer, or shall refuse to answer in writing any interrogatories, and subscribe his name to his deposition, or to produce such papers when so required by a general appraiser, or a board of general appraisers, or a local appraiser, or a collector, he shall be liable to a penalty of not less than $20 nor more than $500, to be summarily imposed by the collector or chief officer of customs in the customs collection district where the citation issued; and upon the report of such officer to the district court in the judicial district where such citation issued the amount of such penalty shall be forthwith entered upon the docket of such court against the person so fined, and such entry shall have the full force and effect of a judgment of said court; and if such person be the owner, importer, or consignee, the appraisement which the Board of General Appraisers or local appraiser, or collector where there is no appraiser, may make of the merchandise shall be final and conclusive; and any person who shall willfully and corruptly swear falsely on an examination before any general appraiser, or Board of General Appraisers, or local appraiser or collector, shall be deemed guilty of perjury; and if he is the owner, importer, or consignee, the merchandise shall be forfeited or the value thereof may be recovered from him.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. I want to inquire of the gentleman from Massachusetts if the words "general appraiser" have not been omitted after the word "which," line 16, page 182? The law includes the words "general appraiser," which seems to have been omitted in that bill.

Mr. PETERS. This is the same as the present law.

Mr. ANDERSON. I think not. The words "general appraiser" come in and are included as well as the Board of General Appraisers.

Mr. PAYNE. The Board of General Appraisers is certainly proper and correct, even if this is correct the way it stands.

Mr. PETERS. I did not at first understand the gentleman from Minnesota. The words "general appraiser" were left out at the suggestion of the Treasury Department.

Mr. ANDERSON. I wanted to inquire, because I noticed the omission.

The Clerk read as follows:

W. That there shall be established in each of the consulates of the United States a registry of commissionaires or purchasing agents; that no person shall be permitted to register as such except upon some affirmative showing of his agency by affidavit indicating the scope of such agency, the parties thereto, the duration, the merchandise to which it relates, the terms and conditions of its exercise, and the commissions involved, the truth of each of which affidavits shall be verified by investigation of the consul before registration is permitted; no such registration shall be permitted unless the agency is operative in the open market exclusively and the commissions provided for are the usual and ordinary commissions prevalent in the trade. Each invoice in which an item of commission appears covering merchandise shipped from any consular district where such registry has been established shall have included in the certificate of the consul a statement that the party claiming in the invoice to be the agent of the purchaser appears on the registry of the consulate as such, and in the absence of such certificate no appraising officer shall allow as nondutiable any item of commission appearing on such invoice or claimed on behalf of any importer.

No consular officer shall certify any invoice unless he is satisfied that the person making oath thereto is the person he represents himself to be and that he is a credible person and that the statements made under such oath are true, and he shall thereupon, by his certificate, state that the person is the person he represents himself to be, is a credible person, and he believes the statements made in his oath to be true. No consular officer shall certify to the truth of the values stated in any invoice.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 187, line 16, by striking out the word "appraising."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts.

The question was considered, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk read as follows:

CC. That any officer or employee of the United States who shall, excepting for lawful duties or fees, solicit, demand, exact, or receive from any person, directly or indirectly, any money or thing of value in connection with or pertaining to the importation, appraisement, entry, examination, or inspection of goods, wares, or merchandise, including herein any baggage or liquidation of the entry thereof, on conviction thereof shall be fined not exceeding $5,000, or be imprisoned at hard labor not more than two years, or both, in the discretion of the court; and evidence of such soliciting, demanding, exacting, or receiving, satisfactory to the court in which such trial is had, shall be regarded as prima facie evidence that such soliciting, demanding, exacting, or receiving was contrary to law, and shall put upon the accused the burden of proving that such act was innocent and not with an unlawful intention.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word. In reference to what was said yesterday about the five mills in Fall River, I have been giving some attention to other sections of the country that have been brought to my attention, and I have in my possession an article that comes from the New Orleans Picayune, a thorough administration paper. The article is under date of April 30, 1913, and it reads as follows:

Telegrams urging their Senators at Washington to refuse to go into caucus on the Underwood tariff bill were sent from New Orleans last evening by presidents of the Farmers' Union in seven cotton-growing States. The appeal, directed personally to the Senators sent to Washington by farmers, insisted that time be given the association for a further study of the Underwood bill, since it is the unanimous opinion of the gentlemen represented in the conference now on at the Hotel Grunewald that if the new tariff law is enacted it will have a serious effect on the price of raw cotton. Represented in the conference are the presidents of the Farmers' Union in Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, Texas, Arkansas, and Oklahoma.

Appeals were sent to National President C. S. Barrett, of the Farmers' Union, and to other leaders in the association, urging them to take the question of the tariff up and to fight it in the Senate in so far as the bill will injure the cotton grower.

TARIFF FIGHT URGED.

The effect of the Underwood tariff bill on the price of cotton has already been severely felt, according to evidence presented at the conference hearing yesterday. J. D. Brown, of the large buying house of Brown & Holloman, New Orleans and Mississippi, testified that the price of raw cotton has declined on certain grades from 3 cents to 5 cents a pound. Mr. Brown testified that he has just disposed of a small lot of 1⅛-inch staple which he bought last December at 21 cents and which he sold yesterday for 18 cents.

"American spinners are not buying. They are frightened out by the tariff legislation," Mr. Brown declared. "As a result cotton is already 100 points lower than it was before the tariff question came up so strongly."

The fate of the American cotton grower if American mills are forced out of the manufacture of finer grades of cloths was forcefully brought out by Mr. Brown when he declared that the exporters' price of raw cotton is always lower than the price paid by American manufacturers, and that all grades of cotton used by American mills are affected by the tariff.

For the information of the committee and the country, I will state that the five cotton mills at Fall River, Mass., that will close on Saturday next, use 80,000 bales of cotton annually, and they produce 200,000,000 yards of cotton cloth per annum. They use 47,000 tons of coal and 40,000 gallons of oil and 600,000 pounds of starch annually. When these mills are idle the demand for all these articles are produced outside the limits of Massachusetts. The city of Fall River uses 446,100 bales of cotton, 324,000 tons of coal, 377,800 gallons of oil, and 3,957,850 pounds of starch annually.

The number of cotton spindles in Fall River are nearly 4,000,000, and in New England there are more than 15,000,000 cotton spindles, and there are more than 17,000,000 spindles in the Northern States. I have not the statistics of the materials used in manufacturing cotton goods throughout the Northern States, but it must be apparent to all that these Northern States are not producers of raw materials, but if the mills are constantly employed they are large consumers of the products of other States of the Union, but if the mills are idle for any lengthy period the raw materials are not purchased, and the products of manufacturing plants are thereby limited.

There was also a similar article in the New Orleans Times-Democrat published on the same date. But the Times-Democrat, as I understand it, is not a supporter of the Democratic administration as, I am informed, the Picayune is. The Times-Democrat is an independent Democratic paper.

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. Do I understand the gentleman from Massachusetts to say that the New Orleans Daily Picayune is an administration paper?

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. I am so informed.

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. The gentleman is not correct.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. It is a good paper, and it is nearly as old as I am. It is a Democratic paper, and I have never heard anybody question its authority, whether it supports the administration or not.

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. I want to say to the gentleman that on the tariff program of the present administration the Picayune has had standing editorials against free sugar——

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Thank God for that.

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. Against free sugar and other features of the bill, and has stood for the protective tariff ideas that your party stands for.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. That is very good, and I am glad there is a body of people outside of Massachusetts that stands for protection. There are a good many of them throughout the country.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the gentleman if that is not an article simply stating facts, and is not an editorial?

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. It is simply a statement of facts published by the New Orleans Picayune, as a matter of public concern not alone in that city, but as affecting the production and price of cotton in seven prominent Southern States and I presume the article would be equally applicable to every cotton-growing State in the Union. Let us see what else there is of interest in the article:

Secretary D. D. Colcock, of the New Orleans Sugar Exchange, was invited to address the conference, and questioned regarding tariff legislation, upon which Mr. Colcock is an expert. Mr. Colcock expressed the belief that the passage of the Underwood bill meant a reduction in the price of raw cotton, and that, most conservatively estimated, it will take not less than $160,000,000 a year out of the pockets of the cotton growers.

Secretary-Treasurer C. B. Bryant, of the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association, testified that since the tariff agitation has become acute and the passage of the Underwood bill was regarded as a certainty, the cotton-goods trade has been in a state of demoralization bordering on panic.

"Some numbers of yarns have declined 6 to 8 cents a pound, and the demand for yarn and cloth has materially fallen off," he declared. "The only business to be had is for small lots for prompt shipment. Large orders for forward shipment are not available."

Mr. Bryant said that if the bill is passed American mills can not operate on the finer counts numbering 50 and above, and all spindles will be forced to go on coarse goods composed of yarn of lower count than No. 50.

LABOR WILL FEEL BLOW.

Mr. Bryant declared that within six months after the passage of the Underwood bill American mills will have turned out more than enough coarse fabrics to overstock the market. "Reduction in operative force will immediately follow," he pointed out. "In the South those operatives will return to the cotton fields to produce a greater quantity of the staple, for which there is no home market. In the East, where the labor is made up largely of foreigners, there will be grave industrial disputes, walkouts, and strikes, with their attendant anarchy.

S. Odenheimer, president of the Lane Cotton Mills, of New Orleans, appeared before the committee early yesterday forenoon, and went over the situation thoroughly from the manufacturers' standpoint. Mr. Odenheimer pointed out the impossibility of the manufacture of the finer grades of goods in competition with the Manchester spinner.

Mr. Odenheimer contended that the cotton manufacturer has not, during the past seven years, paid a dividend on his investment in excess of 5 per cent. He showed how impossible it will be for the cotton-mill operator to pay existing prices for raw cotton, the present wage scale to operatives and break even. "The American spinner now consumes about 5,500,000 bales of American cotton, or a little more than one-third of the entire production, annually," he said. "If American consumption of cotton under this new tariff would decrease 25 per cent, which it doubtless will, that much more cotton will have to be sold in Europe, and as European cotton is not held by cotton mills as in this country, but is carried by cotton merchants, those cotton merchants will have additional leverage to depress the price of cotton."

THE WOOL PARALLEL.

Mr. Odenheimer went into the wool situation, as well as that relating to cotton, and declared that "great quantities of woolen goods are now imported into the United States, which is good evidence that American manufacturers can not compete with Europe on manufactured goods. This heavy lowering of the tariff will bring an immense quantity of woolen goods into the United States, and naturally those woolen goods will take the place of cotton goods, since woolen manufactures will be sold much cheaper than in the past.

"In so far as the cotton farmer is concerned," concluded Mr. Odenheimer, "he should see that cotton consumption is increased and not decreased."

The star witness of the day, in so far as New Orleans and its importance as a cotton market were concerned, was Mr. Brown. Mr. Brown said that he is a cotton buyer; that he buys from the farmer and most generally sells directly to the manufacturer. For 12 years he has specialized in the finer qualities—1¼-inch staple and better. Mr. Brown, upon being questioned, declared that New Orleans is the best cotton market in the South; that cotton here usually brings a better price, and that there is always a market. He said that he transacted a little business in Texas, whereupon D. E. Lyday, vice chairman of the cotton ports committee, Farmers' Union, brought up the rate question as applying on Texas cotton to New Orleans and to Galveston. Mr. Brown was unable to say what is the difference between the rates, but repeated his declaration that New Orleans is the best cotton center in the South, and that Galveston nor any other city in this part of the United States can offer better prices or demand than does New Orleans.

The conference was presided over by R. D. Bowen, chairman of the committee on greater consumption of cotton, appointed by the Farmers' Union, Paris, Tex. Present were:

James W. Biard, secretary committee, Paris, Tex.; D. E. Lyday, vice chairman of the cotton ports committee, northeast Texas division Farmers' Union, Fannin County, Tex.; O. W. Taylor, president Oklahoma State Farmers' Union, Roff, Okla.; T. D. Mitchell, president Mississippi State Farmers' Union, Goodwin; O. P. Ford, president Alabama State Farmers' Union, McFall; H. F. Moberley, president Arkansas State Farmers' Union, Prairieview; R. Lee Mills, chairman Louisiana executive committee, Opelousas. Mr. Mills represented President I. N. McCollester, of the Louisiana State Farmers' Union of Many, who is ill and could not be present.

GEORGIA APPROVES.

President I. A. Smith, of the Georgia State Farmers' Union, who has been detained en route owing to floods and delayed traffic, arrived in time for last evening's session of the conference. The work of the past two days was gone over for Mr. Smith, who heartily approved of the action taken.

At midnight the conference adjourned until this morning, when the conferees will again meet at the Hotel Grunewald at 10 o'clock.

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words. In answer to what the gentleman from Massachusetts has said with respect to the New Orleans Daily Picayune, I desire to say that that paper circulates throughout my district. I am a subscriber to the paper and read it daily, and I know that on the tariff question there is no ranker Republican paper in Massachusetts or any other part of the country.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Does not that prove what Gen. Hancock said—that the tariff is a local issue?

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, so far as Louisiana and the Daily Picayune are concerned it may be a local issue, but I do not believe that paper reflects the sentiment of the people of Louisiana, and I know that so far as it concerns the State of Mississippi it does not reflect the sentiment there at all.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Will not the gentleman say that this report is not an editorial, but a report of an actual proceeding in a meeting held in the city of New Orleans?

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. With respect to the meeting of those representatives of the farmers' unions of seven States, that the gentleman reads about and the actions of whom he quotes, I desire to say that it was not a representative gathering of the farmers of those seven States at all.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. It was a gathering, was it not?

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. They were a few representatives who got together in New Orleans and had a meeting, and, if they are quoted correctly, are trying to create a sentiment there for protective ideas that do not reflect the sentiment of the people of those seven States.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Then, the seed is being sown and the plant protective is beginning to grow?

Mr. HARRISON of Mississippi. It is growing very slowly down there.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. That is all right. I am somewhat familiar with conditions in New Orleans myself.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objecton, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A. That for the purpose of readjusting the present duties on importations into the United States and at the same time to encourage the export trade of this country, the President of the United States is authorized and empowered to negotiate trade agreements with foreign nations wherein mutual concessions are made looking toward freer trade relations and further reciprocal expansion of trade and commerce: Provided, however, That said trade agreements before becoming operative shall be submitted to the Congress of the United States for ratification or rejection.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I will ask the gentleman from Kansas if this is the amendment in respect to the tariff commission?

Mr. MURDOCK. It is.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I desire to make a point of order upon it.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to dispense with the reading of the amendment at this time, but that it may be printed at this point in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Kansas asks unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment may be omitted, but that it may be printed in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The amendment referred to is as follows:

Page 195, line 10, add, after the word "rejection," the following:

"And provided further, That there is hereby created a body to be known as the tariff commission, which shall consist of five commissioners, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. No person shall be eligible to serve as a member of said commission while holding any other public office of either honor or profit, either by election or appointment, or who is a Senator or Representative elect of the United States. Not more than three of said commissioners shall be members of the same political party. The commissioners first appointed under this act shall continue in office for the terms of 2, 4, 6, 8, and 10 years, respectively, and from the 1st day of July, A. D. 1913, the term of each to be designated by the President, but their successors shall be appointed for terms of 10 years, except that any person chosen to fill a vacancy shall be appointed only for the unexpired term of the member whom he shall succeed. Any commissioner may, after due hearing, be removed by the President upon proof of ineligibility or of any violation of any provision of this act, or for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office. No vacancy in the commission shall impair the right of the remaining commissioners to exercise all the powers of the commission. Said commissioners shall not engage in any other business, vocation, or employment. Each commissioner shall receive a salary of $7,500 per year. The President shall designate a member of the commission to be chairman thereof during the term for which he is appointed. The commission shall appoint a secretary, who shall receive a salary of $5,000 per annum, and such other employees as it may find necessary to the proper performance of its duties, and shall fix the salary or compensation of each. Three commissioners shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business as a commission.

"That the principal office of the commission shall be in the city of Washington, and the Secretary of the Treasury shall furnish the commission with suitable offices and equipment thereof and with all necessary supplies. The commission shall, in addition, have full authority as a body by one or more of its members or through its employees, when so authorized by the commission, to conduct investigations at any other place or places, either in the United States or foreign countries, as the commission may determine. Said commission shall promulgate rules and regulations for the safekeeping of all papers, correspondence, tabulations, reports, explanations, and other information gathered by it. All of the expenses of the commission, including all necessary expenses for transportation incurred by the commissioners or by their employees under their orders, in making any investigation in any place other than in the city of Washington, shall be allowed and paid on the presentation of itemized vouchers therefor approved by the chairman of the commission.

"That the commission shall have authority and power and it is hereby directed to ascertain and tabulate for purposes of comparison the difference in the cost of producing articles of the same or similar quality and kind in this country and in actually or potentially competing foreign countries. The commission shall ascertain and tabulate for purposes of comparison where such tabulation is practicable in connection with the several articles covered by its reports in the United States, and in such foreign countries the wages, hours of service, and efficiency of labor employed and the standards of living of such laborers. The commission shall likewise ascertain the cost and selling prices of raw material, the cost of labor, the fixed charges, the depreciation upon the true value of the capital invested, and all other items entering into and determining the true cost and selling price of the finished product. The commission shall ascertain the market conditions and the prices at which protective products of the United States are sold in foreign countries, as compared with the prices of such products sold in the United States. The commission shall investigate the effect of transportation rates upon the markets and prices of dutiable products, and so far as pertinent to the tariffs fixed upon articles on the dutiable list the control of such markets and absence or presence of free competition in the same, and shall, pursuant to the purposes of this act in so far as practicable, investigate all questions and conditions relating to the agricultural, manufacturing, mining, commercial, and labor interests with reference to the tariff schedules and classifications of the United States and of foreign countries, and shall investigate the capitalization, industrial organization and efficiency, and the general competitive position in this country and abroad of industries seeking protection from Congress. The commission shall likewise investigate in general and in regard to particular articles the revenue-producing power of the tariff and its relation to the resources of Government, and shall investigate the effect of tariffs both of the United States and of foreign countries on prices, on the operations of middlemen, on the wages paid for labor, and on the purchasing power of the consumer. The commission shall also make investigation of any particular subject whenever directed by either House of Congress or the President of the United States. The commission shall have the power to call upon any of the existing departments or bureaus of the Government for information on file in such departments or bureaus which it may require in connection with the work which it is authorized to do by this act, and it shall be the duty of every such department or bureau of the Government to furnish such information on request from the commission. It shall be the duty of said commission to hold hearings from time to time at such places as it may designate to determine industrial, commercial, and labor conditions in relation to costs of production and effects and operations of the tariff schedules and classifications in force in the United States and in foreign countries. Such hearings shall be public, except as otherwise herein provided. The commission shall, whenever practicable, give at least 10 days' public notice of any and all such hearings, and at any such hearing any person may appear before said commission, subject to such reasonable limitation upon the amount of and duplication of testimony and arguments as may be provided by the rules of said commission, and be heard or may be represented by attorney and may file any written statement or documentary evidence bearing upon any matter which the commission may have under investigation. The commission may from time to time make or amend such general rules or orders as may be requisite for the orderly regulation of proceedings before it, including form of notices and the service thereof. Every vote and official act of the commission and of each member thereof shall be entered of record. Any of the members of the commission or its secretary shall have the power to administer oaths and affirmations and to sign notices.

"That to assist the President in securing information as to the effect of tariff rates, restrictions, exactions, or any regulations imposed at any time by the United States or any foreign country upon the importation into or sale in the United States or any foreign country of the products affected, and as to any export bounty paid or export duty imposed or prohibition made by any country upon the exportation of any article to the United States which discriminates against the United States or the products thereof, and to assist the President in the application of the maximum and minimum tariffs and other administrative provisions of the customs laws and in obtaining information concerning the economic results of said laws, the commission shall from time to time make report as the President shall direct, and upon direction by the President shall draft a plan for scientific classification of schedules in aid of administration of the provisions of the customs laws.

"That for the purposes of this act in the case of articles on the dutiable list, and such other articles as the commission may decide or may be directed to investigate, the said commission is authorized to require of any person, firm, copartnership, corporation, or association engaged in the production, importation, manufacture, or distribution of any such article or articles the production of all books, papers, contracts, agreements, invoices, inventories, bills, and documents of any such person, firm, copartnership, corporation, or association and make every inquiry necessary to a determination of the value of such property and necessary to accomplish the purposes for which said commission is created. In aid of its powers herein granted to secure information the commission shall have the power, whenever necessary for the purposes of its investigations, to prescribe and enforce uniform systems of accounting for protected industries, for manufacturers, and producers of commodities protected by import duties. The commission is authorized to require by notice the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of all books, papers, contracts, agreements, inventories, invoices, bills, and documents relating to any matters pertaining to such investigation. Such attendance of witnesses and the production of such documentary evidence may be required from any place in the United States at any designated place of hearing, and witnesses shall receive the same fees as are paid in the Federal courts.

"That the district courts of the United States, upon the application of the commission alleging a failure to comply with any order of the commission with relation to the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of documentary evidence, shall have jurisdiction to issue the necessary process or writs for the enforcement of the orders of the commission, and in case of disobedience to a subpœna the commission or a member thereof may invoke the aid of any one of the district courts of the United States in requiring the attendance and testimony of witnesses and the production of books, papers, and documents within the jurisdiction of such court within which an investigation or inquiry by the commission is being carried on. In case of contumacy or refusal to obey a subpœna issued to any person or corporation subject to the provisions of this act, any of the district courts of the United States having jurisdiction as herein provided may issue an order requiring such person or corporation to appear before the commission and produce books, documents, and other papers if so ordered and give evidence concerning the matter under investigation by the commission, and any failure to obey such order of the court may be punished by such court as a contempt thereof. The commission may also order testimony to be taken by deposition in any investigation and at any stage of such investigation. Such deposition may be taken before any person authorized so to do by the commission and who has power to administer oaths. Any person may be compelled to appear and depose and produce documentary evidence in the same manner as witnesses may be compelled to appear and testify and produce documentary evidence before the commission as hereinbefore provided. Such testimony shall be reduced to writing. No person shall be excused from attending and testifying or from producing books, papers, documents, or other things before the commission or in obedience to the subpœna of the commission whether such subpœna be signed or issued by one or more of the commissioners or the secretary of the commission on the ground or for the reason that the testimony or evidence, documentary or otherwise, required of him may tend to criminate him or to subject him to a penalty or forfeiture. But no natural person shall be prosecuted or subjected to any penalty or forfeiture for or on account of any transaction, matter, or thing concerning which he may testify under oath or produce evidence, documentary or otherwise, before said commission in obedience to a subpœna issued by it: Provided, That no person so testifying shall be exempt from prosecution and punishment for perjury committed in so testifying.

"In any investigation conducted by the commission as herein provided, the testimony of any witness in regard to secret processes or trade secrets not contrary to public policy shall not be reduced to writing, nor shall any documents of like character be copied into the records of investigations or otherwise made a part thereof, and for the purpose of obtaining such testimony or of examining such documents, and for such purposes alone, the commission shall have the power to hold secret sessions and take evidence thereat. All other testimony shall be reduced to writing, and, with all other documentary evidence received, incorporated in the records of the commission for the guidance of the commission and for the use of the President and Congress as hereinafter provided: Provided, That no evidence or information secured for the confidential use of the commission shall be made public in such a manner as to be available for the use of any business competitor or rival of the firm, copartnership, corporation, or association from whom or concerning whom such evidence or information was obtained: And provided further, That in case in any investigation authorized by this act the commission shall obtain evidence or information for its confidential use, the commission shall not be required to divulge the names of persons furnishing such evidence or information.

"The commission shall make annual reports to Congress of its investigations and conclusions and such special reports as the President or either House of Congress may direct. The annual reports shall be published and ready for distribution on the first Monday of December of each year. Upon demand of either the President or either House of Congress the commission shall make a report of all testimony and information upon which its reports are based."

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, I will ask the gentleman from Alabama to reserve the point of order.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the point of order.

Mr. MURDOCK. Last Friday I gave notice that I would offer to the administrative features of the bill an amendment embodying a plan for an efficient tariff commission. Yesterday to a previous section in the bill the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] offered his tariff commission amendment. A point of order was made against it and the point of order was sustained. I offer at this point my tariff commission plan on behalf of the Progressives, and the gentleman from Alabama reserves the point of order against it. No doubt the point of order will be sustained when it is made. On the motion to recommit, if the point of order is sustained now, it will be, if made again, sustained then, and I am availing myself of these five minutes for the purpose of explaining what this tariff commission amendment which I have offered provides, which the tariff commission plan offered by the gentleman from New York does not provide. There are two propositions before the House in respect to a tariff commission. One of them has teeth, one of them has efficiency, and the other has not. The one which I have offered has efficiency, and the one which the gentleman from New York has offered has not. The whole crux of a tariff commission bill is found in the power given the commission to elicit all information, not partial in formation, not fragmentary truth, not half truth, but the whole truth.

There is one effective way in which a commission can get at all the truth, and that is by having the power to invoke the aid of the courts in compelling testimony and the production of documents. My amendment does that thing. The bill proposed as an amendment by the gentleman from New York does not. The bill proposed by the gentleman from New York provides that the commission, in the case of failure of testimony, shall have this power over recalcitrant witnesses:

The commission may report to Congress such failure, specifying the names of such persons, the individual name of such firm or copartnership, and the names of the officers and directors of each such corporation or association so failing, which report shall also specify the article or articles produced, imported, or distributed by such person, firm, copartnership, corporation, or association, and the tariff schedule which applies to such article.

That is, wherever a witness is recalcitrant, and inferentially a beneficiary of a high protective tariff, he shall be reported to the House, and with him that schedule in the tariff in which he is interested. To my mind that as an effective measure is absurd. Suppose, for instance, that the officers of the American Woolen Co. refused to testify before the commission as to the facts pertinent to the woolen business. All we could do under the provisions of the bill of the gentleman from New York would be to report those men to Congress, and apparently under the punitive meaning of this paragraph Congress would be expected to take some sort of revenge upon all those in the manufacture of woolens, because of some few recalcitrant witnesses. In other words, under the provisions of the commission bill of the gentleman from New York Congress would be expected to punish the innocent among the manufacturers of wool for the guilt of others, those who had refused to testify. The crux of an efficient tariff commission, then, is the power of the commission to compel testimony, not by the threat of writing a tariff against all because some one witness refuses to testify, but by invoking the aid of the courts in compelling testimony before the commission.

Now, the second proposition which is essential to the efficiency of a tariff commission is a provision for a uniform system of accounting for the great protected industries so that actual needed comparisons may be made as to the cost of production and other factors pertinent to just tariff rates. The recent Tariff Board in its work found that the absence of this power was a serious impediment in its attempt to get at all the facts.

The third proposition which is essential to the effectiveness of a tariff commission——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MURDOCK. I would like to ask the gentleman if I may proceed for three or four minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman I can not violate my rule in regard to the five-minute debate——

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I think under the circumstances the gentleman from Kansas ought to have an opportunity to be heard.

Mr. MURDOCK. It will only take three or four minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If it is understood I am not waiving my rule, I will ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may proceed for five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. MURDOCK. The third proposition is this: Almost all commission bills contain a provision dealing with executive sessions of the commission and the necessity of secrecy in hearings in the matter of trade processes and trade secrets. Provision for secrecy, unless carefully guarded, is a dangerous proposition in any bill, and in the bill which has been offered by the gentleman from New York certain wide latitude is given to the commission which should not be given.

His bill provides—

That in any investigation authorized by this act the commission may obtain the evidence or information as it may deem advisable, for its confidential use; and in case the evidence or information is so obtained, said commission shall not be required to divulge the name of persons furnishing such evidence or information.

There is no provision in the bill of the gentleman from New York for the prohibition of secret testimony if it is against public policy. There is no prohibition in his bill which will prevent any producer or any manufacturer who is a beneficiary of a high protective tariff from getting a secret meeting of the commission merely to hear his testimony. In the measure which I have introduced the provision for secrecy is very carefully guarded against possible abuse. Secret sessions shall not be held merely at the request of the man who is a beneficiary of a tariff. We propose that there shall be no secret session except on the motion of the commission, and then when it is dealing only with trade secrets and secret processes.

Mr. MARTIN. Will the gentleman yield before he goes to another proposition?

Mr. MURDOCK. Certainly.

Mr. MARTIN. As I understood the gentleman, he speaks in favor of a method of dealing with unwilling witnesses in comparison with the one in the bill of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE], that being by an appeal to the Congress. Now, I would like to suggest to the gentleman whether the policy of appealing to the courts in the case of an unwilling witness will not be the very slowest possible remedy, because, pending appeal, by every means known to delay court proceedings, the very object of an investigation might not be indefinitely postponed.

Mr. MURDOCK. On the contrary, it will get all the facts. As the gentleman from South Dakota knows, in our Money Trust investigation we had recalcitrant witnesses and were not able to get the desired testimony.

Mr. MARTIN. I quite disagree with the gentleman. I think we found it to be the quickest way.

Mr. MURDOCK. As a matter of fact, one defiant witness would not testify.

Most of the tariff bills that have been introduced—but not the bill introduced by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE]—provide something that all tariff students have contended for for years—for the right of the commission, at the direction of the President, to draft a scientific classification of tariff schedules. We are here passing a long omnibus tariff bill. If the bill should go upon the statute books and stay there for five or six years, inside of that period, by reason of our antiquated methods of classification, the constructions of the department will change the major part of that bill. I am told, and I think authentically, that the Dingley bill, before it was finally repealed, had been changed by that method of construction in the department in at least 60 per cent of its items.

The scope of the commission to investigate in my amendment is wide and fully defined. In the amendment of the gentleman from New York it is restricted.

In a word, the difference in the bill offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] and the bill offered by myself is this: The bill offered by myself is efficient; it will secure the facts. The bill offered by the gentleman from New York is the same old stone given to the people when they are asking for bread. The bill offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] is vague and nebulous and is as lacking in specification as the platform upon which it is based.

In 1908 the Republican platform attempted to definitely show the position of the Republican Party upon the tariff. It said:

The Republican Party declares unequivocally for a revision of the tariff by a special session of the Congress immediately following the inauguration of the next President and commend the steps already taken to this end in the work assigned to the appropriate committees of Congress, which are now investigating the operation and effect of these schedules. In all tariff legislation the true principle of protection is best maintained by the imposition of such duties as will equal the difference between cost of production at home and abroad, together with a reasonable profit to American industries.

I think that the majority of the Members in this House believe that the same thing was in the Republican platform of 1912; but the Republican Party, in its national convention in 1912, rejected that definition of protection, left it out of its platform, and here is the vague, uncertain tariff plank in the Republican platform of that year:

We hold that the import duties should be high enough, while yielding a sufficient revenue, to protect adequately American industries and wages.

The Progressives stand for the creation of an efficient nonpartisan scientific tariff commission, advisory to Congress, with plenary power to adduce all facts necessary to a just revision of the tariff, including the power to call upon the courts for orders for development of testimony, to prescribe and enforce uniform systems of accounting for protected industries; to draft a plan for scientific classification of schedules; to investigate and report its conclusions on the cost of production, efficiency of labor, capitalization, industrial organization and efficiency, and the general competitive position in this country and abroad of industries seeking protection from Congress; as to the effect of the tariff on prices, on operations of middlemen, and on the purchasing power of the consumer; and as to the revenue-producing power of the tariff and its relation to the resources of Government; and to tabulate for purposes of comparison the wages, hours of service, and efficiency of labor and standard of living in the United States and in competing foreign countries, and to ascertain and report the cost and selling prices of raw material, the cost of labor, the fixed charges, the depreciation upon the true value of the capital invested, and all other items entering into and determining the true cost and selling price of the finished product, together with the market conditions and the prices at which protected products of the United States are sold in foreign countries as compared with the prices of such products sold in the United States; and as to the effect of transportation rates upon the markets and prices of dutiable products, the control of markets, and the absence or presence of free competition; and to investigate all questions and conditions relating to the agricultural, manufacturing, mining, commercial, and labor interests with reference to the tariff schedules and classifications of the United States and of foreign countries. And the Progressives also stand for the revision of the tariff, schedule by schedule, with full consideration of each of the provisions, and record votes on each. In that way a just tariff can be written. It can not be written in an omnibus bill, without information, and under the whip and lash of caucus rule.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, during this session of Congress there have not been many things with which I have been able to be in accord with the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK], and so I am especially glad that upon this proposition he and I are in accord in a great many particulars, for I find that this tariff-commission bill introduced by him, representing the Progressive Party, has been copied almost verbatim—at least three-fourths of it—from a bill introduced by me on the first day of this session, and also introduced by me at the last session of Congress. [Laughter.]

Mr. MURDOCK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. MURDOCK. It is true that wherever I found a good point in the gentleman's bill I took it, and I want to ask the gentleman now in all fairness if his bill is like the bill of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE]?

Mr. LENROOT. There are a great many——

Mr. MURDOCK. Your bill goes further.

Mr. LENROOT. In detail, but not so far as the power conferred upon the commission is concerned.

Mr. MURDOCK. I disagree with the gentleman, and I do not think he is entirely correct in that.

Mr. LENROOT. The gentleman has two propositions in his bill that are not found in other bills that have been introduced. One of them is a provision that his proposed tariff commission shall have the power and it shall be its duty to prescribe a uniform system of accounting for the different industries and factories of the country.

Mr. MURDOCK. Is that in the gentleman's bill?

Mr. LENROOT. No; I am glad to say it is not. That is original in the bill introduced by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK]. Of course, if the gentleman had been a lawyer—which he is not, and therefore he is excusable—he would have known that it is not within the power of Congress to prescribe any such thing as that. The Federal Government has no right to place its hand upon a factory or upon an industry wholly within the limits of a State not engaging in interstate commerce and not engaging in foreign commerce, and prescribe how they shall keep their books. No lawyer in this House would contend for a moment that that provision in the gentleman's bill would stand for a moment. In order to make it stand, the gentleman should have added to his provision the qualification that if these industries are engaged in either interstate or foreign commerce the commission have that power, but not otherwise.

Indeed, if we did have the power that the gentleman would seek to impose in his bill as drawn by him, the Federal Government would have the power to go into every State, into every industry of every State, and not only prescribe uniform systems of accounting, but prescribe and regulate every other thing that they do, taking away the power of the States over them entirely. And while the time may come—and I believe it will come—when we shall have to broaden our power with respect to that, this is the first time that I have ever heard it suggested by anyone that Congress has the power which the gentleman now says he proposes to give it by, to use his language, "putting teeth" into a bill creating a tariff commission.

Now there is one other proposition that the gentleman announced, that of invoking the power of the Federal Government with reference to securing the testimony of witnesses. That is one way of doing it; and it is a question of opinion as to which is the best way, as to which is the most effective way, of securing testimony. And if the gentleman had been studying this question when he was a Republican as thoroughly as he has been studying it of late [laughter], I think he would have come to the conclusion, as other students have, that the most effective way of securing this testimony is to place it directly in the power of Congress. Congress is in session nearly all the time, and there is no difficulty in securing such relief as may be necessary.

But, Mr. Chairman, perhaps the gentleman from Kansas is not aware of the fact that the most effective way of securing information is not through testimony, not through hearings, but by going into the mills of the manufacturers themselves, having their books examined by experts, as was done by the last Tariff Commission. And I want to say in passing that there is only one instance within my knowledge where admission was refused to the mills to the experts of the Tariff Commission. The Congress must not be dependent upon the testimony of interested manufacturers, because when we do depend upon that we have got the same old system—of manufacturers coming before the Committee on Ways and Means and testifying there—without getting down to bedrock facts at all. In order to get this information we must get experts who will go into the mills and into the factories and there find out the costs of production, and not depend upon the testimony of manufacturers.

The principal purpose in giving a commission the power to subpœna witnesses, and so forth, is that in case the manufacturers shall refuse to permit the experts of the Government to go into their factories and examine their books, there shall be a means of compelling them to give the information. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wisconsin has expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the amendment is not germane to the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] makes the point of order that the amendment is not germane. In ruling upon a similar point of order yesterday, namely, on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE], the Chair did not enter into any elaborate argument, but——

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Chairman, will the Chair, before he begins, listen to me just for a moment?

The CHAIRMAN. Yes.

Mr. MURDOCK. My amendment is offered as being germane to the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair understands; and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] makes the point of order that it is not germane to the bill.

In ruling on the point of order made yesterday to the amendment proposed by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE], the Chair did not enter into any elaborate statement of the reasons for his ruling, but contented himself with the statement of his conclusions. The Chair will not enter into any elaborate argument upon the proposition at this time; but he thinks that in justice to himself, as well as to the members of the committee, it would be well to make more clear than was made in the statement yesterday the principle upon which the Chair rested his decision.

The Chair desires to read at this point some reasoning by Mr. Carlisle in the decision which was referred to in the debate yesterday, in ruling upon a point of order in what the Chair regards as a case analogous to the one before the committee:

When, therefore, it is objected that a proposed amendment is not in order because it is not germane, the meaning of the objection is simply that it (the proposed amendment) is a motion or proposition on a subject different from that under consideration. This is the test of admissibility prescribed by the express language of the rule; and if the Chair, upon an examination of the bill under consideration and the proposed amendment, shall be of the opinion that they do not relate to the same subject, he is bound to sustain the objection and exclude the amendment, subject, of course, to the revisory power of the Committee of the Whole on appeal.

It is not always easy to determine whether or not a proposed amendment relates to a subject different from that under consideration, within the meaning of the rule; and it is especially difficult to do so when, as in the present instance, the amendment may, by reason of the terms it employs, appear to have a remote relation to the original subject.

Now, in the amendment proposed by the gentleman from New York on yesterday, and in the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] to-day, there are certain provisions that the President of the United States may utilize this Tariff Commission in the administration of the law. But no one, in the opinion of the Chair, would insist that that was or is in any respect the fundamental purpose involved in the amendment proposed by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] and in the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK]. It has not been argued at any time by any gentleman speaking upon this question of a tariff commission that it was essential for that purpose, or that that was anything more than merely an incidental part. The fundamental purpose of the Tariff Commission proposed in the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas is, as it was in that offered by the gentleman from New York, one entirely different from that, and in the opinion of the Chair that purpose was not germane to this bill, the full intent of which is expressed in the title—

To reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes—

The words "and for other purposes" there, of course, referring to the administrative features of the act, as the Chair understands.

That being true, the fundamental thing in the proposition not being germane, in the opinion of the Chair it does not matter that there were certain incidental features of it that might, if offered in a different way, have been germane to the administrative features of the bill.

The Chair will try to put the matter in two short sentences. The Chair holds that when it clearly appears from the context of a proposed amendment that its real purpose and fundamental intent is not germane to the bill, then the mere fact that some incidental feature of it may be germane to some feature of the bill does not render the whole proposed amendment in order. The Chair thinks the fair and reasonable interpretation of the rules applicable (clause 7 of Rule XVI and the first part of clause 3 of Rule XXI) is that the salient purpose of the proposed amendment, as deduced from its context, must be the measuring rod, and if this be not germane then it must be held out of order.

Following this reasoning, and connecting it with the well-settled principle which has been laid down again and again that if a portion of a proposed amendment be out of order the whole must be ruled out, and having clearly in mind the impression that the salient feature of the amendment proposed yesterday by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE], and of that now proposed, was and is obnoxious to the rules cited, the Chair sustained the point of order yesterday, and the Chair, on the same reasoning, sustains the point of order to-day. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. ANDERSON. I desire to offer an amendment to the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Minnesota offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 195, line 10, by adding at the end of line 10 the following:

"Provided further, That the act entitled 'An act to promote reciprocal trade relations with the Dominion of Canada, and for other purposes,' approved July 26, 1911, be, and is hereby, repealed."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I make the point of order that that is not germane to the subject matter.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama makes the point of order that the amendment is not germane to the subject matter.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. To the bill or the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. To the bill or the paragraph. Does the gentleman from Minnesota desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I think this amendment is germane. This paragraph authorizes the President of the United States to enter into negotiations for reciprocal relations. The amendment which I have offered proposes to repeal an act which carries out on the part of the United States a reciprocal agreement negotiated under this very provision. It seems to me that there can be no question that the amendment which I offer is certainly germane to the bill, and it seems to me germane to the paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. Under clause 3 of Rule XXI, this being a paragraph authorizing the President to negotiate trade agreements, it hardly seems to the Chair that it would be in order to here offer an amendment proposing the repeal of an act. The Chair sustains the point of order.

Mr. ANDERSON. Do I understand the Chair to hold that the amendment is not in order at any point in the bill?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair holds that the amendment is not in order at this point in the bill.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word in order to express my regret that the committee have not provided for a maximum and minimum tariff in this bill.

The maximum and minimum provision in the present law has accomplished much good, so that the various discriminations made against the articles imported from this country by other nations have been entirely done away with, except in cases where there were treaty obligations that they could not get rid of.

It has removed restrictions by way of inspections that we have complained of for many years and it has given us minimum rates in getting our goods into countries that have maximum and minimum rates.

Now we have no provision whatever to meet that. This pretense incorporated into this paragraph does not meet the situation, improve the situation, or change the present law in any particular.

The President already has the power to negotiate commercial agreements subject to the approval of Congress. Under the Dingley law we had a provision, that was suggested in the Senate, whereby he might negotiate treaties to be ratified by the Senate and afterwards to become effective when Congress passed a law carrying out their provisions. But that was simply a reenactment of the Constitution of the United States which allowed the President to make treaties ratified by the Senate and subject to the further condition that the Congress should make a law to carry them into effect when they either involved an appropriation or a change in the revenue system. So that provision of the Dingley law is still in force unless they repeal the Constitution of the United States by an enactment of Congress, and I am not sure but that will be attempted some of these days.

They have, before this paragraph goes into effect, authority in the President of the United States to negotiate these trade agreements. How did President Taft get the authority to negotiate the treaty with Canada for reciprocity? This provision was not in existence then, and yet no one disputed his authority to make that negotiation.

Of course, it had no effect until it was ratified by Congress, approved by Congress by the passage of a law, and it provided also by its terms and by the law that we passed that it still would have no effect until the Canadian Government agreed to it and the Canadian legislative power agreed to it.

There is no difficulty without this paragraph; it is simply here as an excuse to that large body of the American people that would like to see something in the tariff act that will meet trade discriminations by the other civilized nations of the world and give us a chance in their markets.

The maximum and minimum provision ought to have been kept in the bill. If the gentleman wanted to amend it, it was at his option. If he believed his rates should be the maximum, why did not he put in a minimum? A maximum and minimum tariff ought to be in every tariff bill. We need it for our protection to unlock the closed markets of the world while they legislate along the same line and carry their legislation into effect. That is one of the blemishes that appears so prominently in the bill that I did not feel warranted in allowing it to pass at this late hour without making these suggestions on the subject. Of course, I could not offer any amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move to close all debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama moves to close all debate on this paragraph and amendments thereto in five minutes.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I know that my friend from New York [Mr. PAYNE] is wedded to the maximum and minimum tariff theory. It was in the Payne bill, and therefore my friend approves of it. But if there ever was a proposition placed in a bill in the legislative history of this country that was ineffective and inoperative it was the maximum and minimum features of the present tariff law. In the first place, the gentleman put in a system that had been abandoned by European countries years ago. He made the conventional rate in his bill the minimum rate and then increased it to the maximum by authorizing the President to increase the tax 25 per cent. The European nations that first invented this system of minimum and maximum rates attempted that procedure 25 years ago. They went to the balance of the world, as my friend from New York attempted to go, with a big stick demanding trade, and they discovered that you could not build up trade along that line. So, when the gentleman from New York wrote the present maximum and minimum into the law, he wrote into this law an effete system that had been abandoned by its original authors. It is true the countries of Europe to-day, many of them, maintain a minimum and maximum tariff, but they establish as their conventional tariff their maximum tariff and provide a minimum rate below it.

In other words, instead of going to the world with a big stick and saying, "We will shatter your commerce coming into our country if you do not make concessions," modern Europe says to the world, "Our conventional rate is our maximum rate, but if you will trade with us we will grant you concessions." That is the only way that nations or men can deal with each other, and so far as the minimum and maximum rate is concerned, it does not require a demonstration on our part that it was a failure in the present law. President Taft went to Canada with this big stick demanding concessions from Canada, particularly with reference to paper and wood pulp, and the minister of foreign relations in Canada, Mr. Fielding, in stating the case before the Canadian Parliament, said to them, when he carried the Canadian reciprocity treaty before that house, that it originated out of the theory of the American Government to secure concessions under its maximum rate, and the question was not as to whether Canada should yield, but as to how Canada should make some concessions in order to allow the envoys of the United States to return home without being discredited. That is the condition that the minimum and maximum rate put us in. It forced the President of the United States, without warrant of law and without authority of law, to negotiate a contract that subsequently was ratified by law, but without a line on the statute books to justify it, and when that act became a law we wrote into the Canadian reciprocity act a provision similar to this authorizing the President of the United States to negotiate further trade agreements with Canada, and my friend from New York [Mr. PAYNE] supported the proposition in the Ways and Means Committee, and voted for it on the floor of the House. The maximum and minimum tariff rate as contained in the present law was not only repudiated by the President's action, but in the last Congress the Secretary of State, Mr. Knox, sent a communication to this House, which was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means, indicating how ineffective the present law was in developing our commerce with foreign nations, and he petitioned this House to change the law in order that we might expand our commerce. We could have made the rate in this bill the maximum rate and allowed a concession in favor of developing foreign commerce, but we concluded that it would be more effective to absolutely untie the hands of the President of the United States and authorize him to go to foreign nations, by warrant of law, and negotiate a trade agreement. The important question in this provision of the law is that the President of the United States might make some agreement, but when the agreement came back to this House it would be open to amendment; it would not be carried out as an agreement; it could be only passed as an independent law and placed on the statute books. The provision in this bill is that the President of the United States can negotiate a trade agreement, and in order that there might not be confusion about it, in order that the minds of the contracting parties may meet, it is provided that the Congress shall ratify or reject that agreement.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Alabama has expired. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

C. That there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon all articles coming into the United States from the Philippine Islands the rates of duty which are required to be levied, collected, and paid upon like articles imported from foreign countries: Provided, That all articles, the growth or product of or manufactured in the Philippine Islands from materials the growth or product of the Philippine Islands or of the United States, or of both, or which do not contain foreign materials to the value of more than 50 per cent of their total value, or 20 per cent in case of manufactures of tobacco, upon which no drawback of customs duties has been allowed therein, coming into the United States from the Philippine Islands shall hereafter be admitted free of duty: Provided, however, That in consideration of the exemptions aforesaid, all articles, the growth, product, or manufacture of the United States, upon which no drawback of customs duties has been allowed therein, shall be admitted to the Philippine Islands from the United States free of duty: And provided further, That the free admission, herein provided, of such articles, the growth, product, or manufacture of the United States, into the Philippine Islands, or of the growth, product, or manufacture, as hereinbefore defined, of the Philippine Islands into the United States, shall be conditioned upon the direct shipment thereof, under a through bill of lading, from the country of origin to the country of destination: Provided, That direct shipment shall include shipments in bond through foreign territory contiguous to the United States: Provided, however, That if such articles become unpacked while en route by accident, wreck, or other casualty, or so damaged as to necessitate their repacking, the same shall be admitted free of duty upon satisfactory proof that the unpacking occurred through accident or necessity and that the merchandise involved is the identical merchandise originally shipped from the United States or the Philippine Islands, as the case may be, and that its condition has not been changed except for such damage as may have been sustained: And provided, That there shall be levied, collected, and paid, in the United States, upon articles, goods, wares, or merchandise coming into the United States from the Philippine Islands, a tax equal to the internal-revenue tax imposed in the United States upon the like articles, goods, wares, or merchandise of domestic manufacture; such tax to be paid by internal-revenue stamp or stamps, to be provided by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and to be affixed in such manner and under such regulations as he, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall prescribe; and such articles, goods, wares, or merchandise, shipped from said islands to the United States, shall be exempt from the payment of any tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws of the Philippine Islands: And provided further, That there shall be levied, collected, and paid in the Philippine Islands, upon articles, goods, wares, or merchandise going into the Philippine Islands from the United States, a tax equal to the internal-revenue tax imposed in the Philippine Islands upon the like articles, goods, wares, or merchandise of Philippine Islands manufacture; such tax to be paid by internal-revenue stamps or otherwise, as provided by the laws in the Philippine Islands; and such articles, goods, wares, or merchandise going into the Philippine Islands from the United States shall be exempt from the payment of any tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws of the United States: And provided further, That in addition to the customs taxes imposed in the Philippine Islands, there shall be levied, collected, and paid therein, upon articles, goods, wares, or merchandise imported into the Philippine Islands from countries other than the United States, the internal-revenue tax imposed by the Philippine Government on like articles manufactured and consumed in the Philippine Islands or shipped thereto for consumption therein, from the United States: And provided further, That from and after the passage of this act all internal revenues collected in or for account of the Philippine Islands shall accrue intact to the general government thereof and be paid into the insular treasury: And provided further, That section 13 of "An act to raise revenue for the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes," approved August 5, 1909, is hereby repealed.

Mr. GILLETT. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Insert on page 196, line 11, after the word "duty," the following:
"Except cigars in excess of 150,000,000 cigars, which quantity shall be ascertained by the Secretary of the Treasury under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this amendment be limited to 15 minutes, 10 minutes to go to that side.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GILLETT. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is intended to restore the provision which was in the Payne bill, but which is omitted in this bill, limiting the importation of cigars from the Philippine Islands to 150,000,000. The House will remember that when the Payne bill was passed it allowed free access to this country of Philippine products, with the limitation that only 150,000,000 cigars could enter without duty, in order, of course, to protect our cigar manufacturers, and not build up in the Philippine Islands a great island industry for the manufacture of cheap cigars which would flood this country. In order, however, to treat the Philippines fairly, it allowed 150,000,000 to come into this country free, so that a reasonable cigar industry there might have an outlet.

Now, gentleman of this House must be familiar with the fact that in the Connecticut Valley are grown the best wrappers in the world, and there are also manufactured the best cigars in the world, bar none, although perhaps some artificial and unnatural taste may lead some Members to prefer a Havana flavor. Now, in the last campaign, up and down the Connecticut Valley, some Democratic candidates for Congress attacked the Republican Congressmen on the ground that they had voted for the Payne bill, which allowed an entry into the United States of 150,000,000 of Philippine cigars in rivalry and competition with the Connecticut Valley cigars. They claimed that the Republicans were recreant to their duty, were inconsiderate of the tobacco growers and the cigar manufacturers of the Connecticut Valley because they allowed 150,000,000 cigars to come in in competition with them. Naturally, we should expect, then, that in the Democratic bill this importation would be forbidden and no Philippine cigars admitted. But what do we, in fact, find? This Democratic bill proposes to allow not 150,000,000 but an unlimited number of Philippine cigars to come in in competition with American cigars. It opens wide the door. The Payne bill allowed a reasonable number of these Philippine cigars—150,000,000—to come in, but it was not willing to have the whole Philippine population become expert cigar makers and have their cheap labor come in universal competition with the American cigar makers. The cigar makers of my district earnestly oppose this Democratic proposition, and I move this amendment to reinstate the limitation of the Payne bill, and I hope it will be adopted.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Will the gentleman yield for an interruption?

Mr. MOORE. I desire to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. GILLETT. I have yielded the floor.

Mr. BRITTEN. Mr. Chairman, I hold in my hand a petition signed by 1,500 members of the Cigar Makers Union residing in Chicago, the object of the petition being to object to the free and unlimited importation of cigars from the Philippine Islands. The bill as drawn, which is now under consideration, allows 20 per cent of foreign material in the construction or the making of Philippine cigars which come into this country free of a tariff duty. In that particular regard it works a severe hardship against the manufacturers as well as the cigar makers themselves in this entire country.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Will the gentleman yield for an interruption?

Mr. BRITTEN. I will.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. In the gentleman's judgment, is there anything in this provision which would prevent the American Tobacco Trust from going to the Philippine Islands and make there all the cigars the American market can carry, and thereby put the cigar makers of the United States out of business.

Mr. BRITTEN. There is not, I agree with the gentleman. Replying to the gentleman from Missouri, I would recall what happened and what is history in the annexation of the island of Porto Rico. The American Tobacco Co. now controls 80 per cent of the cigar manufacturing and the leaf-tobacco industry of the island, and they will do the same thing in the Philippine Islands after this bill becomes effective. The matter of erecting a cheap hut in which to house that common labor in the Philippine Islands is a paltry consideration, as a few thousand dollars will build a big barn, and with labor in the islands at 30 cents a day, as against our labor at from $2 to $6 a day, the only natural conclusion is that our industry will be wiped out of business in a few years if this particular paragraph of the section is not amended.

Mr. MAHER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BRITTEN. I only have a few moments.

Mr. MAHER. Will the gentleman please tell me where there is a cigar maker earning $6 a day?

Mr. BRITTEN. Making high-class cigars in the city of Chicago. If you are interested in union labor you will agree that our labor gets more than 30 cents a day, and that is all that is paid in the Philippines. It places a hardship on our cigar manufacturers in that they pay a tariff on wrappers and fillers which enter into the construction of our cigars, and the Filipinos do not have to pay that tariff. Philippine manufacturers have sent 65,000,000 cigars into this country in the past eight months, and I am sure that 20,000,000 cigars a month will reach us from there before this year is ended. [Applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. WILLIS. Mr. Chairman, that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. BRITTEN] is correct in his argument that organized labor is opposed to this proposed legislation, and is vigorously protesting against it, is shown by the following communication from the Cigar Makers' International Union of America, which I submit for publication in the RECORD:

LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE
CIGAR MAKERS' INTERNATIONAL UNION OF AMERICA,
Washington, D. C., May 3, 1913.

HON. FRANK B. WILLIS,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We beg leave to submit a few facts why the importation of cigars free of duty from the Philippine Islands should be limited to 75,000,000 annually, and no more. Page 196 of the tariff bill provides for unlimited free trade with the product of Asiatic and Mongolian labor.

Yours, very respectfully, A. STRASSER, Chairman.

MONGOLIAN AND ASIATIC COOLIES V. ORGANIZED LABOR IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

One section of the tariff proposes absolute free trade in cigars imported from the Philippine Islands.

First annual report of the Department of Commerce and Labor, page 152, cigar makers' average daily wages in the provinces are, in pesos, 0.74, equal to 37 cents in United States currency.

Third annual report of the Bureau of Labor, page 15, states: Average wages per annum equal to $93.50 in United States currency, less than $2 a week.

The total number of workers employed was as follows:

Males	5,166
Females	5,143
Boys (under 16)	425
Girls (under 16)	566
Total	11,300

The average number of hours of work reported ranged from 10 to 12 hours per day.

In the United States and in the Philippines cigars are made by hand labor. All attempts to supplant it by machine production within the last 50 years have failed.

For eight months of the fiscal year we received from the Philippine Islands 65,000,000 cigars free of duty.

Unlimited free trade will enable the European and American tobacco trusts to locate factories in the islands and swamp us with the Asiatic product.

One-half of the cigar factories in Manila are owned by Chinese coolies. Is this a fair "competitive tariff"?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, the change in this paragraph of the bill is largely striking out the limitation on the importation of sugar, filler and cigar tobacco and wrapper tobacco. Now, I do not know of any more selfish interest that has been presented in this Congress than that presented by the amendment that is now pending before this House.

When you consider that in all of this tariff bill nearly every man that has been concerned in business in the United States has had his duties reduced from the present law, except these tobacco manufacturers, and that they still have a differential, the difference between 35 cents a pound on filler tobacco and $1.85 on wrapper tobacco, that builds up their business in the United States, and which has not been affected by the work of this committee, because it was on a fair revenue basis and the committee left it alone, they should not come here contending that these dependent people of ours in the Philippine Islands, who, under our law, are compelled to give us free trade with the Philippine Islands, should be deprived of a reciprocal market in the United States. Now, that is what they are contending for, and yet their contention means nothing.

The present law allows the importations of one hundred and fifty million of cigars into the United States free of duty to-day. That law has been on the statute books for four years. The tobacco industry in the Philippine Islands is no new industry. It has existed for many years. It is already developed, and they have had four years under the existing law to bring in one hundred and fifty million of cigars, and the total imports for the last year amounted to 63,852,000.

Mr. BRITTEN. Is it not 73,000,000?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It is 63,852,000. I have just had it added up by the Clerk at the desk.

Mr. MURRAY of Massachusetts. May I repeat the suggestion made to me on the statistics given by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] that, while the importations are as low as sixty-three million of cigars, it has been entirely unnecessary to raise the limit to one hundred and fifty million, and that because of the state of the present importations we may as well leave the limit where it is?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. We may leave the limit where it is, so far as this industry is concerned, but we would leave it where it is to the shame of every American citizen. [Applause on the Democratic side.] We could not honestly face these dependent people who give us free trade in their markets if we close our doors to the only imports that they might possibly send here.

Mr. MURRAY of Massachusetts. I am afraid I did not make myself clear. Certainly there is free trade to the limit of their present importations, which are sixty-three millions.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Certainly.

Mr. MURRAY of Massachusetts. Then why raise the limit to one hundred and fifty millions until the extent of their trade justifies raising the limit of their importations?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Because we do not want to stand and face the world in such a position as that and say that "under our law we command you to open the door, so that American goods can flow into your country," because we have the power to do it, and then turn around and say to them that on the only thing that they can import, practically, into our country and make a market for we will close our doors and prevent them developing their trade. I say that no true-born American citizen who faces this question fairly and squarely and understands the situation—which I do not believe the men who signed that petition did, because they were not informed of the facts—will consent to that.

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman yield for just a moment?

Mr. MADDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Just a moment. No man who understands the honor and integrity of his own country is going to attempt to make a one-sided contract of that kind with a dependent people. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. BRITTEN. Will the gentleman yield to a question, please?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I can not. My time has expired.

Mr. MURRAY of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I understand there were some three minutes of the time——

Mr. MANN. A parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MANN. The time has already been overrun by the gentleman from Alabama four minutes.

Mr. MURRAY of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I did not intend to overrun the time.

Mr. MANN. I am not criticizing the gentleman.

Mr. MURRAY of Massachusetts. Was the division of time 10 minutes on one side and 5 on the other?

Mr. MANN. There was no division of time.

Mr. MURRAY of Massachusetts. I went to the Chair, and the Chair said that there was before the gentleman from Alabama spoke.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. When I asked unanimous consent I asked unanimous consent that that side have 10 minutes and that I might have 5 minutes.

Mr. MURRAY of Massachusetts. Are there 3 minutes remaining of that 10?

The CHAIRMAN. There are 3 minutes remaining.

Mr. MURRAY of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, it is an unfortunate thing to be put in the position of being characterized as un-American and to be criticized as favoring the adoption of a one-sided contract when one asserts the right to stand up for the interests of the people one tries to represent in this Chamber. I do not care to be un-American, and I do not insist upon a one-sided contract, as the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] seems to think when he says that the attitude I take is un-American and one-sided on a matter so highly important to me and the people whom I have the honor to represent.

At the present time the importations of cigars from the Philippine Islands are about 63,000,000. That was the importation in 1912. It is proposed now to raise the limit of 150,000,000 cigars. The importations of 1912 were 90,000,000 below the limit. It was pointed out that that was only a reasonable limit, and it was pointed out that if the present limit is raised and no limit fixed as to the amount of importations, a reasonable fear exists that the Tobacco Trust of the country will go to the Philippine Islands and establish their factories there and then flood the American market with such products and in such quantities as that the tobacco and cigar makers—the men engaged in that industry in this country—may be put out of business. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Now, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] looks at this question from one point of view. Surely, with his reputation for fairness and his absolute desire to be fair, he is not going to charge some of the rest of us with being unreasonable and un-American when we merely take the figures that he submits as correct and consider them from a different point of view and draw from them conclusions different from those which he draws. Our point of view is that because the limit has not yet been reached of 150,000,00 by nearly 90,000,000 of importations, it is a good situation to leave as it is, but that when the time comes that that limit has been reached, when the people of the Philippine Islands may make a reasonable complaint that the trade is being hampered from their islands, it will be time enough to consider the proposition of removing that limitation of 150,000,000 cigars.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURRAY of Massachusetts. I can not yield. This is the first occasion that I have had to differ with the gentleman from Alabama and his colleagues on the Committee on Ways and Means. But it is entirely because the limit has not been reached by almost 90,000,000—more than half as much again as the total amount of importations last year. In this instance I shall vote in favor of the amendment suggested by my colleague from Massachusetts [Mr. GILLETT]. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. HELM). The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired. All time has expired. The question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GILLETT].

The question was taken, and the Chairman announced that the noes seemed to have it.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask for a division.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 53, noes 75.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chairman appointed Mr. UNDERWOOD and Mr. GILLETT.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 103, noes 177.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Section 4, paragraph C, page 196, strike out all after the word "Provided," in lines 3 to 11, inclusive, and substitute the following: "That, except as otherwise hereinafter provided, all articles the growth or product of or manufactured in the Philippine Islands from materials the growth or product of the Philippine Islands or of the United States, or of both, which do not contain foreign materials of the value of more than 20 per cent of their total value, upon which no drawback of customs duties has been allowed therein, coming into the United States from the Philippine Islands, shall hereafter be admitted free of duty, except, in any fiscal year, wrapper tobacco and filler tobacco when mixed or packed with more than 15 per cent of wrapper tobacco in excess of 300,000 pounds, filler tobacco in excess of 1,000,000 pounds, and cigars in excess of 150,000,000 cigars, which quantities shall be ascertained by the Secretary of the Treasury under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment be limited to 7 minutes.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I would like to have 5 minutes for the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY].

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I will ask unanimous consent, then, that all debate on this amendment be limited to 13 minutes; 10 minutes to be controlled by the gentlemeu on that side, while I reserve but 3 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that all debate on this amendment be limited to 13 minutes; 10 minutes to be controlled by the minority and 3 minutes by the gentleman from Alabama. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, this is the Philippine tobacco situation in another form. It was contended by some gentlemen upon the other side—I think by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD]—with regard to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GILLETT] that it was a manufacturers' proposition. I contend that it is a cigar-makers' proposition. The amendment that I now propose is both a cigar-makers' proposition and a farmers' proposition.

We are not attempting now to legislate upon cigars alone, but also upon wrapper and filler tobacco. We get back to the soil itself.

The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GILLETT] was good enough to say that in the Connecticut Valley they raised the best tobacco in the world. I am prepared to say that in Lancaster County, Pa., ably represented here by my colleague [Mr. GRIEST], they raise more good tobacco than in any other county in the United States, the aggregate being about 40,000,000 pounds a year.

Our friends from Kentucky and Virginia are interested in wrapper and filler tobacco, along with those in the Connecticut Valley and in Pennsylvania, and I call their attention to the fact that we are endeavoring by this amendment to retain the provisions of the existing Payne law and to give that protection to the producer of tobacco which is given to the cigar maker as against Philippine importations.

I am not speaking for manufacturers in this instance. I have been requested to speak for the Cigar Makers' International Union of America, which has a membership approximating 50,000 journeymen.

In compliance with the instructions of their international convention, these men appealed to the Ways and Means Committee, and they now appeal to you, not to permit this free infusion of Philippine tobacco nor to permit an increase in the quantity of tobacco manufactured in the Philippines at the expense of the cigar makers of the United States. They say that the bill not only permits cigars manufactured in the Philippine Islands to come in duty free, but it permits such cigars to contain 20 per cent of foreign material. This means that a manufacturer in the Philippine Islands can put into cigars a combination of American tobacco, Philippine tobacco, and 20 per cent of Havana tobacco, which would give the Philippine cigar manufacturer an unfair and undue advantage over the American manufacturer and be a consequent detriment to American workmen and women.

Mr. Chairman, the wages paid to the men who make cigars in the Philippine Islands is about one-quarter the wages paid to the men who are engaged in that industry in the United States. Some of you have been to Porto Rico, perhaps, and have observed who controls the tobacco fields there and who controls the manufacture of tobacco. You have found out in Habana who controls the product there; and by opening up trade free to the Philippine Islands, it is fair to assume that you are going to allow American trust capital to engage cheap Philippine labor to put American workingmen out of business.

This appeal to you is on behalf of the men who have votes, who are a part of 160,000 men engaged in this industry in one form or another in the United States. It is not a sectional question. It pertains to Kentucky as it does to Connecticut, and it pertains to Massachusetts as it does to Pennsylvania. The man who deals in tobacco in the city of Richmond is just as much concerned in this proposition as is any other man in this country. It is a question whether you propose to turn over to trust control in the Philippines the manufacture of cigars for the United States, or whether you propose to continue to employ men in that business in this country, making cigars for American smokers on their own behalf. [Applause.]

I include as a part of my remarks the following correspondence on this subject:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., May 6, 1913.

Hon. J. HAMPTON MOORE,
House of Representatives.

DEAR MR. MOORE: You being a member of the Ways and Means Committee, I invite your attention to the importance of so amending the pending tariff bill as to retain the provisions of the present law limiting the free importation of tobacco and cigars from the Philippine Islands by striking out the unlimited free-trade provisions now incorporated in the bill. The amendment which I suggest is as follows:

"That, except as otherwise hereinafter provided, all articles, the growth or product of or manufactured in the Philippine Islands from materials, the growth or product of the Philippine Islands or of the United States, or of both, which do not contain foreign materials of the value of more than 20 per cent of their total value, upon which no drawback of customs duties has been allowed therein, coming into the United States from the Philippine Islands shall hereafter be admitted free of duty, except, in any fiscal year, wrapper tobacco and filler tobacco when mixed or packed with more than 15 per cent of wrapper tobacco in excess of 300,000 pounds, filler tobacco in excess of 1,000,000 pounds, and cigars in excess of 150,000,000 cigars, which quantities shall be ascertained by the Secretary of the Treasury under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe."

In asking your consideration for this amendment and urging its adoption by the House, I do so not only for my own county in Pennsylvania, which produces out of the soil more tobacco than any other county on earth, but I urge its consideration also in behalf of the farmers, dealers in, and manufacturers of cigar-leaf tobacco elsewhere in Pennsylvania and in many other States; and, more numerously than all of these, the adoption of this amendment is urged in behalf of the 136,000 makers of cigars in this country, the wageworkers who produce by hand $350,000,000 of manufactured output annually and who are showering upon Congress from many sections, as the pages of the RECORD attest, justifiable protests against legislation which, if enacted, will accomplish naught but injury to farmers and independent dealers and manufacturers, as well as the degradation of our workmen by putting them on a competitive basis with skilled labor of the Orient, whose average yearly wage is not in excess of $96.

In my judgment, this provision for free trade in cigars and tobacco with the Philippines contemplates an ill-advised and, in view of the Democratic Party's platform pledge for the independence of these islands, an almost inexplicable and certainly a wholly unjustifiable procedure which should be averted by the adoption of the amendment proposed.

Yours, very truly, W. W. GRIEST.

CIGAR MAKERS' INTERNATIONAL UNION OF AMERICA,
Chicago, Ill., April 22, 1913.

Hon. J. HAMPTON MOORE,
House of Representatives.

DEAR SIR: We inclose herewith a brief in protest against the free importation of cigars from the Philippine Islands, and in behalf of our 48,457 members we respectfully ask you to give it your thoughtful and favorable consideration.

Very respectfully,
G. W. PERKINS,
International President.

A PROTEST AGAINST UNLIMITED FREE TRADE WITH THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

At a convention of the Cigar Makers' International Union held in September, 1912, a resolution was unanimously adopted by the 400 delegates protesting against the importation of cigars duty free from the Philippine Islands and instructing the president to protest to the proper Federal authorities and to the Congress of the United States against such free importation of cigars duty free from the Philippine Islands, which resolution went to popular vote under the referendum and was practically unanimously adopted. Out of a possible 48,457 votes only 186 votes were cast against the resolution.

In compliance with such instructions and in behalf of the Cigar Makers' International Union we earnestly protest against the proposition of the Committee on Ways and Means which provides for absolute free trade in cigars with the Philippine Islands, for the following reasons: The bill not only permits cigars manufactured in the Philippine Islands to come in duty free, but it permits such cigars to contain 20 per cent foreign material. This means that a manufacturer in the Philippine Islands can put in the cigars a combination of American tobacco, Philippine tobacco, and 20 per cent of Habana tobacco, and would give the Philippine cigar manufacturers an unfair and undue advantage over the American manufacturers and be a consequent detriment to American working men and women.

The importation of cigars from the Philippine Islands under the present law has steadily increased. We hold that if Congress gives the Philippine cigars free access, without restraint or limit, to the markets of this country that the American Tobacco Co., which despite the alleged dissolution acts is just as effective as it ever was, would immediately establish large factories in the Philippine Islands and continue the manufacture of cigars there on a scale that would seriously interfere with the industry in this country proper. This is not an idle statement. When Porto Rico was annexed and given free access to the markets of this country the trust immediately proceeded to obtain control not only of the cigar industry but also of the leaf or raw material of Porto Rico, so that to-day they practically control at the very least 80 per cent of the cigar industry of that island. In one year 1,250 cigar factories have gone out of business and thousands of American cigar makers have suffered in employment in this country. The trust, with its exceedingly large capital, will do precisely the same thing in so far as the Philippine Islands are concerned if this bill passes and an opportunity is thus given them to do so.

The proposition of the Committee on Ways and Means we unhesitatingly say is favorable to the trust and strengthens its hand and assists it to more quickly stamp out competition of the independents and to establish an absolute monopoly in the cigar and tobacco industry, though probably not so intended. The Tobacco Trust controls fully 85 per cent of the smoking and chewing tobacco, snuff, cigarettes, and little cigars in this country. It controls 80 per cent, if not more, of the cigar industry of Porto Rico, and it controls fully if not more than 75 per cent of the imported cigars coming from Cuba.

We earnestly protest against giving them an opportunity to further strengthen their strangle hold upon the independents by giving them the Philippine Islands, which they will exploit for the benefit of the trust and to the detriment of independent manufacturers, of working men and women, of the Federal Government, and of society at large.

The notion that American workingmen can compete with oriental, the cheapest labor in the world, of the Philippine Islands is absurd and preposterous and absolutely out of the question. The wage paid for making cigars in the Philippine Islands is less than one-fourth of the wages received by cigar makers in the United States. In the third annual report of the bureau of labor of the Philippine Islands, page 15, issued 1912, it officially states that wages of 11,300 cigar makers in the Philippine Islands in 53 factories were 193 pesos annually, or about $96.50 American money, or 30 cents per day, while the average wages of the cigar makers in this country are at least $1.50 a day, which includes the unorganized as well as the organized. I estimate that the average wages of the union cigar makers is at least $2 per day, and, as a matter of fact, that is pretty nearly the minimum wage, and it ranges from that sum to as high as $5 per day.

The question of transportation should not be lost sight of. A thousand cigars can be shipped from the Atlantic coast to Chicago for about 10 cents and from coast to coast for about 18 cents or 20 cents. A thousand cigars, the wholesale price of which would be $100, weigh about 27 pounds. The question of transportation, then, is not a factor, as because of the lightness of the commodity it can be transported at a negligible cost. There are thousands of Chinese, Japs, who, with the Filipinos, are very apt learners, especially in the cigar industry, as they prefer factory to field work, and the cigar-producing capacity of the islands can be recruited and brought up to any number in a very short time; and this we assert without fear of successful contradiction will surely occur if you give them free access to this country. It is claimed that one-third of the population of Manila is Chinese. If the product of this oriental cheap labor comes into this country, the result would be ruinous to the industry here and would in a measure impair and partly nullify the Chinese-exclusion act. The cigar industry in this country pays the Federal Government in internal taxes alone about $22,000,000 annually, and when we include the tobacco trade, which includes cigars, cigarettes, snuff, and manufactured tobacco, it contributed for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912, $70,500,000. There are employed at cigar making, not counting those engaged in making smoking and chewing tobacco, etc., about 136,000 people, of whom about 110,000 are skilled workers and wage earners, who are directly and indirectly taxpayers and contributors to the maintenance of our Government, while, on the other hand, the Filipinos do not contribute a cent to the maintenance of our institutions. The aggregate wages paid to cigar makers is $50,000,000 annually. The wholesale value of the output of cigars is about $350,000,000 annually. It ranks about the twelfth in the value of its output among the great industries of our country. The cigar and tobacco industry has always been taxed through customs duties and internal-revenue tax. It, as a consequence, is extremely sensitive to hostile legislation. During the last fiscal year over 1,250 small cigar manufacturers have been forced out of business. The union cigar maker receives from $7 to $12 per thousand for making the 5-cent cigar and from $12 to $18 per thousand for making the 10-cent cigar and from $18 to $50 per thousand for making the clear Habana cigar or the two-for-a-quarter and more expensive kind.

Under the present law, which limits the importation of cigars from the Philippine Islands, duty free to 150,000,000 annually, the importation jumped from 22,900,000 in 1911 to 72,800,000 cigars in 1912.

From information received from the Insular Bureau of the War Department we find for the first eight months of this fiscal year 65,000,000 cigars were sent here from the Philippine Islands.

Under the economic conditions prevailing here the allowance of 150,000,000 duty free per annum is more than fair to the Filipinos. Given an unrestricted free market in this country and the Cigar and Tobacco Trust will be enabled to increase the amount produced there and sent here and disposed of through its chain of stores to an extent that will be disastrous to American manufacturers and American working men and women. Owing to climate and the bounties of nature the Filipino lives very cheaply. Clothing is of the cheapest kind; he has no expensive rent to pay, no fuel to purchase, while he has self-sustaining food growing in abundance. We, on the other hand, must buy food and fuel, pay high rent, buy more expensive clothing, and, with the always increasing cost of living, we find the effort to sustain home, family, and life always equal to our income. We earnestly protest against being pitted against oriental labor—the cheapest labor in the world—in our struggle for existence. We protest against the proposed changes in extending the amount of free importation of cigars from the Philippine Islands.

Yours, respectfully,

G. W. PERKINS,
International President.

MONGOLIAN AND ASIATIC COOLIES V. ORGANIZED LABOR IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

One section of the tariff proposes absolute free trade in cigars imported from the Philippine Islands.

First annual report of the Department of Commerce and Labor, page 152: Cigar makers' average daily wages in the Provinces are, in pesos, 0.74—equal to 37 cents in United States currency.

Province.	Pesos.	Cents.
Occidental Negros	0.17	8½
Cebu	.78	39
Cayagan	1.47	73½

Third annual report of the Bureau of Labor, page 15, states: Fifty-three cigar and cigarette factories paid in wages ₱2,183,049; average wages per annum, ₱193; equal to $93.50 in United States currency—less than $2 a week.

The total number of workers employed was as follows:

Males	5,166
Females	5,143
Boys (under 16)	425
Girls (under 16)	566
Total	11,300

The average number of hours of work reported ranged from 10 to 12 hours per day.

In the United States and in the Philippines cigars are made by hand labor. All attempts to supplant it by machine production within the last 50 years have failed.

For eight months of the fiscal year we received from the Philippine Islands 65,000,000 cigars free of duty.

Unlimited free trade will enable the European and American Tobacco Trusts to located factories in the islands and swamp us with the Asiatic product.

One-half of the cigar factories in Manila are owned by Chinese coolies. Is this a fair "competitive tariff"?

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to corroborate the statement made on behalf of the tobacco growers of the Connecticut Valley by my colleague from Massachusetts [Mr. GILLETT]. We appreciate the kind of tobacco grown there and likewise the kind of men employed in manufacturing and raising the tobacco. And further than that I wish to congratulate my Democratic colleague from Massachusetts that he has had the courage of his convictions rather than being compelled to vote against those convictions by the Democratic caucus rule. [Applause on the Republican side.] I have known the gentleman from Boston, my colleague [Mr. MURRAY], for many years. I know his ability, his qualities, and his good party discipline, but certainly he has shown wise judgment at this time in speaking for the side which he knows to be right. Now, in behalf of Local Union 206, of the Cigar Makers' International Union of America, of North Adams, and Local Union No. 28, of the Cigar Makers' International Union, of Westfield, Mass., I want to send two letters to the desk to be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

NORTH ADAMS, MASS., April 26, 1913.

Hon. ALLEN T. TREADWAY.

DEAR SIR: We are informed that a clause in the proposed tariff bill now before Congress would admit all Philippine Islands manufactured cigars into the United States free of duty; and we, the cigar makers of Union 206, of North Adams and the whole of Berkshire County, desire to file our protest against the proposed clause, and urge you, as our Representative, to vote against it for the following reasons:

That it would give employment to the Chinese and Japanese cigar makers of Manila (for these races outnumber the Filipino) and would throw American cigar makers out of employment.

We have positive proof that such would be the result, as when, under a former administration, 150,000,000 cigars a year were to be admitted, and were admitted, it put 5,000 American cigar makers, packers, and strippers out of employment.

But "it helped the Filipino," Mr. Taft would say; and a Democratic Congress would help them still more, to the injury of the American.

Again, Mr. TREADWAY, we do not believe in building up the trade of the German, Chinese, and Japanese manufacturers to the detriment of the American manufacturers. For it is a known fact that 95 per cent of the capital invested in the tobacco and cigar industry of the Philippines is controlled by Germans, Japanese, and Chinese.

It may seem all right to an unthinking or deluded economist, but is the reverse with us who will have to suffer under the conditions that may be brought about. For I tell you, Mr. Congressman, that the well-paid American workman can not compete with the underpaid Asiatics. We can not elevate them to our standard, but they will drag us down to theirs. And the avarice of some Americans for cheap help has brought about a condition in California that smells of war.

And now, Mr. TREADWAY, we again ask you to vote against and do all in your power to defeat the proposed clause which helps at best only a few aliens as against thousands of American and their families.

Respectfully, yours,

E. R. STEIN,
Fin. Sec. Union No. 206, North Adams, Mass.

WESTFIELD, MASS., April 29, 1913.

Hon. ALLEN T. TREADWAY,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: The members of Cigarmakers' Union No. 28 earnestly protest against the proposition of the Committee on Ways and Means which provides for absolute free trade in cigars with the Philippine Islands, for the following reasons:

The bill not only permits cigars manufactured in the Philippine Islands to come in duty free but it permits such cigars to contain 20 per cent foreign material. This means that a manufacturer in the Philippine Islands can put in the cigars a combination of American tobacco, Philippine tobacco, and 20 per cent of Habana tobacco, and would give the Philippine cigar manufacturers an unfair and undue advantage over the American manufacturers and be a consequent detriment to American working men and women.

The importation of cigars from the Philippine Islands under the present law has steadily increased. We hold that if Congress gives the Philippine cigars free access without restraint or limit to the markets of this country the American Tobacco Co., which, despite the alleged dissolution acts, is just as effective as it ever was, would immediately establish large factories in the Philippine Islands and continue the manufacture of cigars there on a scale that would seriously interfere with the industry in this country proper. This is not an idle statement. When Porto Rico was annexed and given free access to the markets of this country, the trust immediately proceeded to obtain control not only of the cigar industry but also of the leaf or raw material of Porto Rico, so that to-day they practically control at the very least 80 per cent of the cigar industry of that island. In one year 1,250 cigar factories have gone out of business and thousands of American cigar makers have suffered in employment in this country. The trust, with its exceedingly large capital, will do precisely the same thing, in so far as the Philippine Islands are concerned, if this bill passes and an opportunity is thus given them to do so.

The proposition of the Committee on Ways and Means, we unhesitatingly say, is favorable to the trust and strengthens its hand and assists it to more quickly stamp out competition of the independents and to establish an absolute monopoly in the cigar and tobacco industry, though probably not so intended. The Tobacco Trust controls fully 85 per cent of the smoking and chewing tobacco, snuff, cigarettes, and little cigars in this country. It controls 80 per cent, if not more, of the cigar industry of Porto Rico, and it controls fully if not more than 75 per cent of the imported cigars coming from Cuba.

We earnestly protest against giving them an opportunity to further strengthen their strangle hold upon the independents by giving them the Philippine Islands, which they will exploit for the benefit of the trust, and to the detriment of independent manufacturers, of working men and women, of the Federal Government, and of society at large.

The notion that American workingmen can compete with oriental labor—the cheapest labor in the world—of the Philippine Islands is absurd and preposterous and absolutely out of the question. The wage paid for making cigars in the Philippine Islands is less than one-fourth of the wages received by cigar makers in the United States. In the third annual report of the bureau of labor of the Philippine Islands, page 15, issued 1912, it officially states that wages of 11,300 cigar makers in the Philippine Islands, in 53 factories, were 193 pesos annually, or about $96.50 American money, or 30 cents per day, while the average wages of the cigar makers in this country are at least $1.50 a day, which includes the unorganized as well as the organized. I estimate that the average wages of the union cigar makers is at least $2 per day, and, as a matter of fact, that is pretty nearly the minimum wage, and it ranges from that sum to as high as $5 per day.

The question of transportation should not be lost sight of. A thousand cigars can be shipped from the Atlantic coast to Chicago for about 10 cents and from coast to coast for about 18 or 20 cents. A thousand cigars, the wholesale price of which would be $100, weigh about 27 pounds. The question of transportation, then, is not a factor, as because of the lightness of the commodity it can be transported at a negligible cost. There are thousands of Chinese and Japs who, with the Filipinos, are very apt learners, especially in the cigar industry, as they prefer factory to field work, and the cigar-producing capacity of the islands can be recruited and brought up to any number in a very short time; and this we assert, without fear of successful contradiction, will surely occur if you give them free access to this country. It is claimed that one-third of the population of Manila is Chinese. If the product of this oriental cheap labor comes into this country, the result will be ruinous to the industry here and would in a measure impair and partly nullify the Chinese-exclusion act. The cigar industry in this country pays the Federal Government in internal taxes alone about $22,000,000 annually; and when we include the tobacco trade, which includes cigars, cigarettes, snuff, and manufactured tobacco, it contributed for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1912, $70,500,000.

There are employed at cigar making, not counting those engaged in making smoking and chewing tobacco, etc., about 136,000 people, of whom about 110,000 are skilled workers and wage earners who are directly and indirectly taxpayers and contributors to the maintenance of our Government, while, on the other hand, the Filipinos do not contribute a cent to the maintenance of our institutions. The aggregate wages paid to cigar makers is $50,000,000 annually.

The wholesale value of the output of cigars is about $350,000,000 annually. It ranks about the twelfth in the value of its output among the great industries of our country. The cigar and tobacco industry has always been taxed through customs duties and internal-revenue tax. It, as a consequence, is extremely sensitive to hostile legislation. During the last fiscal year over 1,250 small cigar manufacturers have been forced out of business. The union cigar maker receives from $7 to $12 per thousand for making the 5-cent cigar, and from $12 to $18 per thousand for making the 10-cent cigar, and from $18 to $50 per thousand for making the clear Habana cigars, or the two-for-a-quarter and more expensive kind.

Under the present law, which limits the importation of cigars from the Philippine Islands duty free to 150,000,000 annually, the importation jumped from 22,900,000 in 1911 to 72,800,000 in 1912. From information received from the Insular Bureau of the War Department we find for the first eight months of this fiscal year 65,000,000 cigars were sent here from the Philippine Islands.

Under the economic conditions prevailing here the allowance of 150,000,000 duty free per annum is more than fair to the Filipinos. Given an unrestricted free market in this country and the Cigar and Tobacco Trust will be enabled to increase the amount produced there and sent here and disposed of through its chain of stores to an extent that will be disastrous to American manufacturers and to American working men and women. Owing to climate and the bounties of nature, the Filipino lives very cheaply. Clothing is of the cheapest kind; he has no expensive rent to pay, no fuel to purchase, while he has self-sustaining food growing in abundance. We, on the other hand, must buy food, fuel, pay high rent, buy more expensive clothing, and with the always increasing cost of living we find the effort to sustain home, family, and life always equal to our income.

We earnestly protest against being pitted against oriental labor—the cheapest labor in the world—in our struggle for existence. We protest against the proposed changes in extending the amount of free importation of cigars from the Philippine Islands.

Yours, respectfully,

CIGAR MAKERS' UNION, NO 28, OF WESTFIELD,
S. J. T. WALL, Secretary.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, I am a member of organized labor, and I would be the last to cast a vote which would injure members of organized labor. I do not believe the provision we are discussing will injure members of organized labor. In reply to the letters I have received from members of the cigar makers' union I have so stated, and I have given as my reason the fact that under four years of Republican rule, when 150,000,000 cigars might have been imported into this country, the maximum amount in any year was 63,000,000. I feel that answer is conclusive—that conditions are such that labor need not be apprehensive. I have felt, as I have stated to my fellow associates in these unions, that they were being stirred up not by friends, not by the men who have the cause of organized labor at heart, but by the men who have been on the floor in this House for years protecting the great trusts of this country [applause on the Democratic side] and who are now anxious to hide themselves behind the overalls of the workingman. [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side.]

I want to ask the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] if he indorses the statement contained in the letter which he had read from the desk that Republican legislation, the Payne bill, which permitted 150,000,000 cigars to be imported into this country, resulted in putting 5,000 cigar makers out of employment? I will give the gentleman time if he will answer the question. In the document which the gentleman had read from the desk it is stated that this law had put 5,000 men out of employment. Is the gentleman prepared to support that statement?

Mr. TREADWAY. I would ask to have the clause read, that the adoption of the new bill would put cigar makers out of employment. Let me ask, in return, if importations of cigars from the Philippines have not increased?

Mr. KEATING. I have asked the gentleman a question. The letter that he had read stated that the Republican legislation had put 5,000 men out of employment. I ask him if he indorses that statement; yes or no?

Mr. TREADWAY. I would like to ask the gentleman——

Mr. KEATING. Yes or no.

Mr. TREADWAY. I think I shall answer in my own way.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Colorado can not demand that a man shall answer a question as he dictates.

Mr. KEATING. Yes or no.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman can not say how a man shall answer a question.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that the gentleman from Illinois has not been recognized.

Mr. KEATING. I have asked the gentleman from Massachusetts to answer a question, and I will only yield to him.

Mr. MANN. And the gentleman from Massachusetts answered and asked to have the clause read.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Colorado has expired.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. GARDNER. Can the gentleman from Colorado yield the floor for an answer, and then dictate how that answer shall be given?

Mr. FOSTER. The regular order, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. GARDNER. Is not a parliamentary inquiry the regular order, I ask the gentleman from Illinois?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is with the gentleman from Masaschusetts in his parliamentary inquiry, and he will state it.

Mr. GARDNER. I was trying to when the gentleman from Illinois interrupted. My inquiry is if it is permissible under the rules of the House for a gentleman to yield the floor for an answer to an inquiry, and then dictate any particular way in which that answer shall be given?

The CHAIRMAN. That is too complex a question for the Chair to settle. [Laughter.] The Chair does not mean to treat the inquiry lightly, but, of course, the gentleman from Massachusetts knows the rule that a gentleman can yield the floor.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, the Chair is perfectly aware that the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] was not aware of the rule, and that there was a deliberate attempt——

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry. What is before the House?

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, I call for the regular order.

Mr. GARDNER. I ask what is the regular order but a reply to a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. GARDNER. Is not the regular order a reply to the parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. FOSTER. The Chair has already settled that.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, I raise the question of order that the gentleman from Illinois is not in order when he interrupts the Chair while the Chair is replying to a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Chairman, I raise the point of order that the gentleman has already had his inquiry answered from the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. Let us all get into good humor now and vote on this amendment. [Laughter.] The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MOORE) there were—ayes 91 noes 153.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment which I send to the Clerk's desk, and, if I may be permitted, I ask unanimous consent to omit the reading of the amendment at this time, but that it be printed. I am offering the Philippine provision in the present Payne tariff law.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan offers an amendment and asks unanimous consent that it be printed, but not read. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The amendment is as follows:

That there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon all articles coming into the United States from the Philippine Islands the rates of duty which are required to be levied, collected, and paid upon like articles imported from foreign countries: Provided, That, except as otherwise hereinafter provided, all articles, the growth or product of or manufactured in the Philippine Islands from materials the growth or product of the Philippine Islands or of the United States, or of both, or which do not contain foreign materials to the value of more than 20 per cent of their total value, upon which no drawback of customs duties has been allowed therein, coming into the United States from the Philippine Islands shall hereafter be admitted free of duty, except rice, and except, in any fiscal year, sugar in excess of 300,000 gross tons, wrapper tobacco and filler tobacco when mixed or packed with more than 15 per cent of wrapper tobacco in excess of 300,000 pounds, filler tobacco in excess of 1,000,000 pounds, and cigars in excess of 150,000,000 cigars, which quantities shall be ascertained by the Secretary of the Treasury under such rules and regulations as he shall prescribe: And provided further, That sugar, refined or unrefined, and tobacco, manufactured or unmanufactured, imported into the Philippine Islands from foreign countries, shall be dutiable at rates of import duty therein not less than the rates of import duty imposed upon sugar and tobacco in like forms when imported into the United States: And provided further, That, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, preference in the right of free entry of sugar to be imported into the United States from the Philippine Islands, as provided herein, shall be given, first, to the producers of less than 500 gross tons in any fiscal year, then to producers of the lowest output in excess of 500 gross tons in any fiscal year: Provided, however, That in consideration of the exemptions aforesaid, all articles, the growth, product, or manufacture of the United States, upon which no drawback of customs duties has been allowed therein, shall be admitted to the Philippine Islands from the United States free of duty: And provided further, That the free admission, herein provided, of such articles, the growth, product, or manufacture of the United States, into the Philippine Islands, or of the growth, product, or manufacture, as hereinbefore defined, of the Philippine Islands into the United States, shall be conditioned upon the direct shipment thereof from the country of origin to the country of destination: Provided, That direct shipment shall include shipments in bond through foreign territory contiguous to the United States: Provided, however, That if such articles become unpacked while en route by accident, wreck, or other casualty, or so damaged as to necessitate their repacking, the same shall be admitted free of duty upon satisfactory proof that the unpacking occurred through accident or necessity and that the merchandise involved is the identical merchandise originally shipped from the United States or the Philippine Islands, as the case may be, and that its condition has not been changed except for such damage as may have been sustained: And provided further, That all articles, the growth, product, or manufacture, as hereinbefore defined, of the Philippine Islands, admitted into the ports of the United States free of duty under the provisions of this section and shipped as hereinbefore provided from said islands to the United States for use and consumption therein, shall be hereafter exempt from the payment of any export duties imposed in the Philippine Islands: And provided further, That there shall be levied, collected, and paid, in the United States, upon articles, goods, wares, or merchandise coming into the United States from the Philippine Islands, a tax equal to the internal-revenue tax imposed in the United States upon the like articles, goods, wares, or merchandise of domestic manufacture; such tax to be paid by internal-revenue stamp or stamps, to be provided by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and to be affixed in such manner and under such regulations as he, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall prescribe; and such articles, goods, wares, or merchandise, shipped from said islands to the United States shall be exempt from the payment of any tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws of the Philippine Islands: And provided further, That there shall be levied, collected, and paid in the Philippine Islands, upon articles, goods, wares, or merchandise going into the Philippine Islands from the United States, a tax equal to the internal-revenue tax imposed in the Philippine Islands upon the like articles, goods, wares, or merchandise of Philippine Islands manufacture; such tax to be paid by internal-revenue stamps or otherwise, as provided by the laws in the Philippine Islands, and such articles, goods, wares, or merchandise going into the Philippine Islands from the United States shall be exempt from the payment of any tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws of the United States: And provided further, That in addition to the customs taxes imposed in the Philippine Islands there shall be levied, collected, and paid therein upon articles, goods, wares, or merchandise, imported into the Philippine Islands from countries other than the United States, the internal-revenue tax imposed by the Philippine Government on like articles manufactured and consumed in the Philippine Islands or shipped thereto, for consumption therein, from the United States: And provided further, That from and after the passage of this act all internal revenues collected in or for account of the Philippine Islands shall accrue intact to the General Government thereof and be paid into the insular treasury, and shall only be allotted and paid out therefrom in accordance with future acts of the Philippine Legislature, subject, however, to section 7 of the act of Congress approved July 1, 1902, entitled "An act temporarily to provide for the administration of the affairs of civil government in the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes": And provided further, That until action by the Philippine Legislature, approved by Congress, internal revenues paid into the insular treasury, as hereinbefore provided, shall be allotted and paid out by the Philippine Commission.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I want just a minute to explain what the amendment is. I offer it for this reason: The Underwood bill repeals the limitations on the importations of sugar from the Philippine Islands. It repeals the limitations on the cigar and tobacco importations from the Philippine Islands. It increases the amount of foreign material that may be used in the manufacture of goods in the Philippine Islands for exports to the United States from 20 per cent of foreign material to 50 per cent of foreign material, except on tobacco. Those three provisions in the bill are all of very great importance, in my opinion, and for that reason should not be enacted into law. I have offered section 5 of the Payne tariff law, which solely relates to the Philippine Islands, their imports into the United States, and the exports of the United States goods going into the Philippine Islands.

Mr. DONOVAN. Mr. Chairman, a statement was made by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GILLETT] a few moments ago that a Democratic candidate for Congress in the Connecticut Valley had criticized the attitude of some Republican Member of Congress upon the Philippine question. I live in Connecticut, but not in the valley, and I think he meant myself; and, if he did mean me, I know that he will not rise in his seat and state that when I did criticize the Member of Congress from Connecticut I did not state the truth. I did state that the Member of Congress did vote to admit 150,000,000 cigars from the Philippine Islands free, and my reason for making that statement was this: He had been a high priest of protection, and he had declared under no circumstances would he bring about such a condition as to have American labor come in competition with the coolies and rice eaters of Asia. That was what I had claimed, and I offered to withdraw from the campaign, from the canvass, to retire as a candidate if a single word stated was untrue. Until the present time that has not been questioned. The dual personality of the gentleman, the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde character of the candidate caused me to make those statements. He was in Washington against the workingmen by his vote, and he was at home the greatest supporter and greatest sustainer of the workingman's rights, stating that no coolie could get any vote of his.

Mr. Chairman, I had supposed that this great assembly here was passing laws for our people. I had supposed when we were in convention and we were going to turn the Philippine Islands over to those people that we were not going to continue to keep them in our possession, a subject people, and enact laws for their government and welfare. Just when and where do we come out in the open and be honest in our transactions? The gentleman from Virginia [Mr. JONES] the other day from this floor stated that we had expended $400,000,000 on the Filipinos. In the name of all that is good, just suppose we take part of that $400,000,000 and expend it in bettering the conditions of the poor fellows who are needy on account of the high cost of living in this country. The Filipino can take care of himself and wants the chance.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Connecticut has expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on the paragraph be now closed.

Mr. MONDELL. I trust the gentleman will——

Mr. MANN. I want about a couple of minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Does the gentleman from Wyoming desire to debate the paragraph?

Mr. MONDELL. Yes; this paragraph.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph—how much time does the gentleman from Wyoming desire?

Mr. MONDELL. Five minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph close in nine minutes, the gentleman from Wyoming to have five minutes, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] two minutes, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] two minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto be closed in nine minutes, the gentleman from Wyoming to have five minutes, the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER] to have two minutes, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] to have two minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I regret very much the gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. DONOVAN], who is out of harmony with his own party on the subject of legislation, at this time should have availed himself of his privilege on the floor to make a somewhat bitter assault upon his predecessor. It is not necessary for anyone to defend before any Member of this House who has served in Congress heretofore the gentleman from Connecticut, Ebenezer J. Hill. [Applause on the Republican side.] No one here ever had a higher standing, both for honor and honesty, for intelligence and capability, for hard work and deep digging, than Mr. Hill of Connecticut. [Applause on the Republican side.] And if in the future time shall bring him back to this House, it will be conferring a great service upon the country and the greatest service which his district can possibly confer in any manner whatever. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Chairman, supplementing what the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] has just said I wish to read a few words with reference to the gentleman from Connecticut, Mr. Hill, who has been so severely criticized by his successor.

These words which I shall read are not the words of a Republican; they are the words of your Democratic leader, the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. A. MITCHELL PALMER. He spoke these words on the floor of this House the other day. Let us see what Mr. PALMER, of the Ways and Means Committee, says about this gentleman who has been attacked so severely. On Friday, May 2, 1913, Mr. PALMER said:

> The gentleman from Connecticut, Mr. Hill, who is no longer a Member of this House, but whose ability to construct tariff legislation with accuracy and regard for the facts from his point of view—I mean with regard to the principle upon which Republicans would write a law—no man will gainsay, and whose industry, capacity for work, and desire to do what in good faith he started out to accomplish no man in the House will criticize.

[Loud applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I understand that it is the avowed purpose of the Democratic party to move immediately to a recognition of the independence of the Philippine Islands and to provide at an early date for the complete separation of those islands from our country, and yet the first move which the party makes after that declaration in national convention is to propose to tie the islands to us in bonds of trade that in the very nature of things can not continue after the separation shall come. They propose to establish conditions under which it will be less desirable to those people to leave us, conditions under which an increased number of those people shall desire to remain bound to us, and conditions under which, if separation shall come, the industries of the islands shall be thrown into infinitely greater confusion than they would otherwise be. The gentlemen on the other side talk about special privileges and are tremendously fearful that under the flag and on the continent of America some citizen of the United States shall have the privilege of doing business on the basis of the high wages paid here, but they are perfectly willing to give special privileges over yonder in the Philippines to the Tobacco Trust and to the Sugar Trust, both of which will be vastly benefited in the manufacture, the one of tobacco or cigars, and the other of sugar, by this paragraph of the bill. The gentlemen on the Democratic side talk about hothouse industries, and they say they do not want to hothouse industries. The gentleman from New York [Mr. HARRISON] wants to destroy the beet and cane sugar industry in our country because it is, he says, a hothouse industry, but you propose to extend the hothouse influence of our sugar and tobacco tariff to a country which is hothoused by nature and which does not require this great privilege that you are now proposing to give them. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] says we must be fair to the Philippines. Aye, we are more than fair to the Philippines when we give them this great market for all their products except an unlimited quantity of those products which in the very nature of things, by reason of their climate, the conditions of living—conditions under which men work with small expense for housing or clothing, requiring for comfort little more than a breechclout and a bamboo hut, and enjoying life. We are giving them infinitely more than they are giving us when we give them our mighty market over here for the limited market they are affording us.

Ah, you have gone from schedule to schedule, smashing American industry, depriving highly paid American workmen of their opportunities for employment. And after all this is done, to complete the unholy job you have set yourselves to do, you propose to open our markets for protected products in an unlimited way to people whose standards of living are below ours, people whose rates of wages are far below ours, and give them the benefits of tariff rates on sugar and tobacco that we have established in order that highly paid American labor may thrive. Of all of the blunders and errors of this bill, this is perhaps the worst. Not content with giving the Philippines the unrestricted benefit of our protected market, you give them a chance to secure from India, the Malay States, China, and Japan, and from all over the East, products in unlimited quantities, and ship them here free of duty provided they declare that 50 per cent of the value of such products is of Philippine origin. And this is the first move in your plan of scuttle, of your policy of the surrender of our responsibilities to the Philippines. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. Chairman, is the debate rule closed?

The CHAIRMAN. No; the unanimous-agreement debate on this paragraph is closed. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, a parliamentary inquiry.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MANN. Is there not a pending amendment—the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY]?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair's recollection was at fault about the matter. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. DONOVAN. Now, Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto is exhausted. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

> D. That articles, goods, wares, or merchandise going into Porto Rico from the United States shall be exempted from the payment of any tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws of the United States.

Mr. DONOVAN. Mr. Chairman, my usual motion. It is a pity, and I suppose I ought to say unfortunate, that the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], who has served here for many terms, should think it necessary to take advantage of an amateur, one who has been in his seat only a few weeks, and turn the venom of his tongue upon him, and that the distinguished and golden character from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER]—"Me, too"—should himself add to it. Why did they not do as they ought to have done, and turn on the gentleman from the Springfield district of Massachusetts [Mr. GILLETT]? He was the one who brought this matter up. He was the one who brought this charge against me that in the campaign I used the tobacco schedule against a Member of Congress. And I wish to say that I issued the challenge that if a single word I stated in the campaign was not true I would withdraw as a candidate. I now say that if a single statement I have made against the candidate on the stump is not true I will resign my seat in this body. I have no other stock in trade but the truth. I did state that the gentleman who was my opponent had a dual capacity politically. I now repeat it. [Applause.]

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in five minutes. Is there objection?

Mr. COOPER. Can not the gentleman yield me one minute?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. There will be another paragraph.

Mr. COOPER. I simply wanted to ask the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] one question.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Alabama whether, after the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING] shall have addressed the committee for five minutes, I would not be extended the time to read a letter, a copy of which I have in my hand, addressed to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING], should he not have received the letter. I ask for two minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING] may have five minutes, the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD] two minutes, and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] two minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph shall close in nine minutes, two minutes to be used by the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD], two minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER], and five minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING]. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, a few moments ago I asked the gentleman from Massachusetts a question, and he suggested that he wished the Clerk to read the particular paragraph of his letter to which I have referred. I think the gentleman has the letter now. If not, Mr. Chairman, I can not proceed without the letter.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, as the letter which the gentleman wishes to talk about is not here, I will ask unanimous consent that the gentleman may wait until the other gentlemen have spoken. Let the present arrangement stand as it is, Mr. Chairman, but let the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING] come in after the other gentlemen have spoken.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, that will be done.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING] does not need to yield the floor. He will simply be recognized later.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman has the letter, maybe it is the same as that of which I have a copy here.

Mr. KEATING. Let the gentleman proceed.

Mr. BROUSSARD. I do not want to engage in the debate, Mr. Chairman, further than to make this statement, that on a former occasion the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING] in the House said that all of the stock in the beet-sugar industry in the West was in the control, or a majority of the stock was in the control, of the American Sugar Refining Co., the concern which for years and years has held up the price of sugar in this country, and which appears now before this Congress to secure again in the control of this market.

A gentleman has handed me a copy of a letter addressed to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING], and it is fair that I should read the letter first in order that he may reply to it if he can. The letter is from Colorado. It reads as follows:

MAY 5, 1913.

Hon. EDWARD KEATING,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: In a speech made by you in the House of Representatives on the 18th of April you are represented as saying that "every beet-sugar factory in the United States is controlled by the American Sugar Refining Co. either by stock or selling agreement."

As president of the American Beet Sugar Co. I am compelled to tell you that you have evidently been misinformed, and that the statement is absolutely incorrect in each and every particular. I have been chairman of the board and president of the company since 1907, and at no time during that period has the American Sugar Refining Co. been in a position to exercise any control whatever of the company and its selling. Both of these truths you might easily have learned had you desired to represent fairly an interest of vast importance to your State of Colorado, but which interest you seem intent on destroying.

In the simple interest of truth will you do me the favor to correct the misstatement?

As to my character and personal responsibility I refer you to the Hon. S. M. SPARKMAN and the Hon. FRANK CLARK, both of Florida.

Yours, very truly,

H. R. DUVAL, President.

[Applause on the Republican side.]

I only wanted to get this into the RECORD because the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING] took issue with me when I said that the statement he made was erroneous—that the beet-sugar industry was in the control of the American Sugar Refining Co., which is the head of the Sugar Trust in this country, and when he said that the output of the beet-sugar industry was in the control of the trust. [Applause.]

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Chairman, I did not expect to discuss sugar when I took the floor this afternoon, but I am rather glad that the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD] read the letter.

I have received the letter and I have answered the letter, and I told Mr. Duval that I could not grant his request, because all the evidence that I have been able to secure fully sustains the charge which I made on the floor of this House the other day, and which I now desire to specifically reiterate—that there is no such thing as competition between the beet-sugar interests and the Sugar Trust; and, furthermore, that the Sugar Trust, either through ownership of stock or through selling arrangements, controls the price of sugar in every town in this country. I would refer the gentleman, just as I referred Mr. Duval, to the Hardwick hearings and to other testimony that has been secured. But, fortunately, I have a very convincing bit of evidence in my hand. As the gentleman received the letter from a representative of the sugar interest, I received this clipping from a representative of another interest—the consumers of the United States.

Mr. FORDNEY. Lowry.

Mr. KEATING. No; it is not Mr. Lowry. It seems impossible for our Republican friends to understand that Democrats may secure inspiration from any source except the great interests of this country. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. FORDNEY. You have never presented any.

Mr. KEATING. This clipping is from the Denver Times of Friday evening, February 16, 1912, a litle more than a year ago. And I want to say by way of introduction that the Denver Times is a sugar paper—a paper which is devoted to the interests of the Sugar Trust.

This was written a little over a year ago, at the time when, according to some of these gentlemen, the beet-sugar manufacturers were keeping down the price of sugar. This is what it says:

Another rise of 20 cents per hundredweight in the price of sugar was recorded this morning. Beet sugar, which on Monday was selling at $6 a hundredweight, went to $6.20 Tuesday and this morning leaped to $6.40. Cane sugar has gone since Monday from $6.20 to $6.40 and then to $6.60, where it now stands.

Despite the fact that there is an ample supply of sugar on hand, local wholesalers predict that sugar will go even higher before the present manipulation by eastern speculators comes to an end. They declare that the high price is artificial and that there exists no market conditions to naturally cause it.

A year ago this time sugar was selling at $5, with not nearly as much of the product on the market as there is this year. Local dealers declare that they have nothing to do with the making of the prices, but have to follow the lead set by the New York sugar brokers.

According to this special pleader for the Sugar Trust, the warehouses in Colorado were filled with sugar made in Colorado, and yet the price went up by leaps and bounds. Why? Because our friends of the beet-sugar interests were following the prices set by the sugar brokers on the New York market, and those sugar brokers were controlled and dictated to absolutely by the Sugar Trust.

Mr. Chairman, how much more time have I?

The CHAIRMAN. One minute.

Mr. KEATING. Then, I want to revert to the question which caused me to take the floor. I want to read a paragraph from the letter which was sent to the Clerk's desk by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY]. This letter from the Cigar Makers' Union states:

We have positive proof that such would be the result, as when, under a former administration—

That is, the Taft administration—

150,000,000 cigars a year were to be admitted, and were admitted, it put 5,000 American cigar makers, packers, and strippers out of employment.

There is the testimony of the gentleman's own witness. I ask him, as a Republican, if he is prepared to stand for the truth of that statement made by his own witness?

So far as I am concerned, while I am a Democrat, I want to deny the truth of that statement; but the gentleman has put it into the RECORD with his indorsement, and I ask him to state what he thinks of this statement made by his own witness.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Colorado has expired. Under the agreement the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] is entitled to two minutes.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my request for time.

The CHAIRMAN. By unanimous consent the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY] may proceed for two minutes.

Mr. TREADWAY. The gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING] has asked me whether or not I vouch for the statement of my constituent. I vouch for it in that I believe he is truthful in making it. The gentleman who makes the statement is a truthful citizen of my district and he has given me these particulars, and I take it, as coming from him, the statement is true. [Applause on the Republican side.] If by the importation of 62,000,000 cigars from the Philippine Islands 5,000 American workmen can be thrown out of employment, I ask, Mr. Chairman, how many can be thrown out of employment if we open our gates wide to the unlimited importation of cigars from the Philippine Islands? [Applause on the Republican side.] Let me ask the gentleman if he is aware that importations have increased from 1911 when they were 22,900,000 until for the last eight months of the present fiscal year they amount to 75,000,000, and will not the limit be exhausted within a very short time? Do not our Democratic friends see that it will when they ask to have the provision of 150,000,000 taken off the statute books and the doors thrown wide open? This is the evident reason for admitting an unlimited number, as the importation has grown so rapidly in the past three years. Does not that indicate just how the American workmen, the members of the cigar makers' union of our country, will be treated by this importation from the Philippine Islands when there is absolutely no limitation made as to the number which may come in? Mr. Chairman, I submit I am prepared to stand by the wishes of my constituents very much better than the gentleman from Colorado is to abide by the wishes of his constituents from the evidence submitted in the letter read by the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. BROUSSARD]. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

E. That whenever any country, dependency, colony, province, or other political subdivision of government shall pay or bestow, directly or indirectly, any bounty or grant upon the exportation of any article or merchandise from such country, dependency, colony, province, or other political subdivision of government, and such article or merchandise is dutiable under the provisions of this act, then upon the importation of any such article or merchandise into the United States, whether the same shall be imported directly from the country of production or otherwise, and whether such article or merchandise is imported in the same condition as when exported from the country of production or has been changed in condition by remanufacture or otherwise, there shall be levied and paid, in all such cases, in addition to the duties otherwise imposed by this act, an additional duty equal to the net amount of such bounty or grant, however the same be paid or bestowed. The net amount of all such bounties or grants shall be from time to time ascertained, determined, and declared by the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall make all needful regulations for the identification of such articles and merchandise and for the assessment and collection of such additional duties.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment to this section.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 199, line 13, after the word "government," strike out down to and including the word "act," in line 14; and in line 21, after the word "cases," insert "a"; and strike out, in lines 21 and 22, the following (after the word "cases," in line 21), "in addition to the duties otherwise imposed by this act, an additional."

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman, I wish I had sufficient time to answer the statement just made by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING]. If I understood him correctly, he stated that the beet-sugar factories in this country are controlled by the Sugar Trust, and he gains his information from the testimony furnished to the Hardwick investigating committee and otherwise. I happened to have the honor of having been a member of that investigating committee, and I defy the gentleman from Colorado, or any other man, to produce one single word of evidence that the beet-sugar factories of this country are controlled by the Sugar Refining Co. or any other trust. It is not in the hearings presented to that committee for him or any other man to find.

I have offered an amendment to paragraph E, page 199, for this reason: This paragraph, if put into law, provides for a countervailing duty on dutiable goods only, and if at the end of three years sugar is to be placed on the free list, the sugar of this country or of Cuba will be placed at a very great disadvantage by Russian sugar. The Government of the United States and every country that is a party to the Brussels convention countervail against Russian sugar, for the reason that the Government of Russia pays a bounty to her sugar manufacturers, and the Government of the United States countervails to the extent of 72 cents a hundred pounds against this sugar. England countervails against Russian sugar, and the gentlemen that would vote for the putting of sugar on the free list would certainly aid in the interest of the sugar refining companies in this country. I have here a letter from the Department of Justice, and I want to call your attention to the methods used by the refining interests of this country to obtain lower rates of duty on sugar. The letter is addressed to me by the Department of Justice, February 21, 1913.

It says:

The amount of money paid to the Government by the various companies concerned in the sugar frauds have been as follows:

The American Sugar Refining Co., the chief beneficiary of free sugar, paid to the Government of the United States penalties for underweighing at New York $135,486; duties and penalties for underweighing at New York, $2,000,000; fraudulent drawbacks at New York, $700,000. Fraudulent underweighing and drawbacks at Philadelphia, $124,386.

The Arbuckle Bros. paid for underweighing at New York $695,573. The National Sugar Refining Co.—and I may say that there is a case in court now to declare void certain common stock issued to Mr. Havemeyer during his lifetime, and if that stock is declared void the American Sugar Refining Co. has control of the preferred stock of the National Sugar Refining Co. That company paid for underweighing $604,304. The W. J. McCann Sugar Refining Co., a branch of the American Sugar Refining Co. at Philadelphia, paid $124,386. I did not give the cents, but the total collected by the Government is $4,384,136.46 that have recently been paid by these companies to the Government for fraud.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FORDNEY. Just half a minute. There is another suit pending against the American Sugar Refining Co. at New Orleans involving $100,536.73; another suit against the Federal Sugar Co.—of which Mr. Lowry, about whom so much has been said, is the sales agent—involving $119,080.00. Gentlemen, they are bound to have this duty, by fraud or by Democratic tariff legislation. [Applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on the paragraph and all amendments thereto close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. Chairman, I heard part of the speech of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GREENE], who represents the largest cotton-manufacturing district in the United States. The gentleman refers, if I understood him rightly, to protests coming up from the South against the Underwood bill, particularly the cotton schedule. I want to inform the House and the country how some of these protests are inspired. Here is a telegram sent to the cotton mills of the South by the American Cotton Manufacturers' Association, calling upon the cotton-mill men to wire Members of this House and to wire Senators to raise the tariff on cotton goods. They say that there is hope of doing that in the Senate if the mills will all get busy and wire their protests immediately. I have not had a single letter from my district suggesting opposition of this kind, and there are cotton mills in it, and I represent the largest cotton-producing district in the State. I thank God that the South is planted on the side of tariff reduction in this fight. [Applause on the Democratic side.] Our people have arrived at the time, as they have in your sections, gentlemen, if we judge by the verdict of November, when they demand that this tariff tax shall be reduced. [Applause on the Democratic side.] I hold in my hand a letter from a cotton-mill man at Florence, Ala., Mr. Ashcraft, president of a cotton mill there. He is a Democrat. Here is the telegram sent to Mr. Ashcraft and his letter inclosing the telegram to me:

CHARLOTTE, N. C., April 29, 1913.

To ASHCRAFT COTTON MILLS, Florence, Ala.:

Senators and Congressmen generally are saying there is no opposition to the new tariff bill from their constituents, and will pass it unless prompt protest telegraphed them. Situation encouraging for amendment in Senate if all mills telegraph their Senators and Congressmen urging higher rates. You and friends telegraph them promptly. Urgent.

AMERICAN COTTON MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION.

FLORENCE, ALA., May 1, 1913.

Hon. J. THOMAS HEFLIN, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Inclosed I hand you copy of telegram which I have just received.

I wish to say concerning this telegram that according to my understanding of the Underwood bill there is retained on all cotton goods a small tariff, beginning with 5 per cent on the coarser yarns and advancing with the finer numbers. While it is nature for every man to want all reasonable advantage in business, I must say in perfect frankness that with the advantages possessed by American cotton millers if we can not continue in business at a profit we should get out. Unquestionably we raise the cotton and have every advantage of the foreigner in matter of freight, and some 15 per cent or less in waste, and then all the freight on the finished goods back, together with from 5 to 40 per cent advantage by an import tariff. It does seem to me that American manufacturers should be satisfied with this situation.

Therefore I do not think that I can conscientiously give my indorsement to the sentiments expressed in this telegram. On the other hand, I think it my conscientious duty to urge you to give your most earnest support to the Underwood bill.

Yours, truly, C. W. ASHCRAFT.

[Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. ROBERTS of Nevada. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HEFLIN. Mr. Chairman, I can not yield at this time. I am proud of the fact that there are men in this country engaged in legitimate business who want other men to have a chance in the struggle of life. I have seen on that side, until I am tired, men rise and speak in the interest of some special interest and not in the interest of the people. It is not my desire to injure a single legitimate industry in the United States, but I plead in behalf of the millions of people who have been imposed upon, who have been oppressed by these tariff-protected industries under the reign of the Republican Party. Have we forgotten the pledges made in the campaign that we would reduce the tariff tax? Are gentlemen to be frightened now by this calamitous howl of those who have always stood by the protected interests of this country? I think not; and when I saw this afternoon this side standing in solid phalanx behind the great floor leader of the Democratic Party in this House [applause] I said the American people have occasion to be happy—the Democratic Party is in power and we are going to keep our pledges and reduce the tariff tax. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY].

The amendment was rejected.

Mr. HULINGS. Mr. Chairman——

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. HULINGS. To move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate on this paragraph is exhausted, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

F. Subsection 1. That all articles of foreign manufacture or production, which are capable of being marked, stamped, branded, or labeled, without injury, shall be marked, stamped, branded, or labeled in legible English words, in a conspicuous place that shall not be covered or obscured by any subsequent attachments or arrangements, so as to indicate the country of origin. Said marking, stamping, branding, or labeling shall be as nearly indelible and permanent as the nature of the article will permit.

Mr. HULINGS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

I am disappointed in this bill. I hoped much from your promises. I wanted to vote for it. For many of its paragraphs I could still cheerfully vote, but I get no opportunity. I must swallow it whole, and that I can not do. I give you credit for sincerity, but your bill has been forced through by the old methods of secret-caucus rule, under duress of official patronage.

How can a Pennsylvanian coming from a great manufacturing and agricultural district vote for a bill which puts practically everything that a farmer produces on the free list, while it throws our markets open to competition with foreign goods?

Now, if foreign-made goods do not come in, the bill will be a failure, because it will not produce the necessary revenues to meet the expenses of the Government.

But, on the other hand, if the bill with its low rates does produce the revenues, it will require a flood of foreign goods to be imported, all of which means that these foreign goods will displace American-made goods and throw some Americans out of work.

You could not pass this bill by secret ballot. If each member voted on his own judgment without coercion of the party whip your bill would fail.

The facts have been construed to fit the Procrustean bed of the doctrinaire. Your bill is devised along partisan lines.

The debates here show that ignorance only can explain the discrepancies of the facts alleged, and the need of information from nonpartisan, unbiased sources is apparent.

Some of the schedules in which the demand of the people for a judicious revision downward has been met ought to be passed and the rest of the bill ought to be sent to the committee to stay there until the committee can revise it in the light to be had from a nonpartisan tariff commission, which should be speedily provided.

The Democrats, though polling less than 41 per cent of the votes in the last election, are put in power by a political accident.

They arrogantly claim on this floor that they are commissioned by the people, yet only 4 voters out of every 10 voted the Democratic ticket at the last election, and a lot of them were disgruntled Republicans who voted for Wilson for fear Roosevelt would win.

The people are not with you in your free-trade ideas.

The division in party lines which put you in control is not a commission from the people to destroy the protective tariff and set up free-trade notions that have been repudiated by every civilized nation save England, and she is in the way of repudiating it.

This bill is false to every tariff dogma you ever pretended to believe.

It is a mass of inconsistencies, illogical and incoherent.

Claiming in your platform that a protective tariff is unconstitutional, yet some of your schedules highly protect certain interests.

Your much-vaunted claim that this bill would greatly reduce the high cost of living is now practically and publicly repudiated by its author and the Secretary of the Treasury.

In some schedules raw materials produced in this country are exposed to foreign competition, while manufactured goods made from them are protected by high tariffs.

In other schedules you subject our manufacturers to the free and open competition of foreigners with their cheap labor, while putting a tax on raw materials our manufacturers must use.

You promised to revise the tariff downward judiciously, so as not to injure business by swift changes from a protective to a free-trade basis, but you have made radical cuts that will greatly injure some lines of business and have made sweeping changes in other lines that will destroy them.

You propose to secure competition by throwing our markets open to the foreigner, blind to the fact that international trusts are rapidly establishing world-wide monopolies which are utterly beyond the control of American legislation and which under free trade can plunder us at will, when even the blind might see that the only defense against them is a tariff wall that can shut them out and leave our markets to the free competition of our own producers under such regulations and control as Congress shall choose to establish.

By throwing open the doors and giving up our own markets you propose to find a market "beyond the seas." When you get as far as Germany, France, Italy, and South America, you will run against their tariff walls, and after you pay freight and duty you will find competition that employs labor at half our scale.

High tariff never kept us from going "beyond the seas." But with all our efforts we have only found a market for 3 per cent of our manufactures, and that to a large extent is specialties.

Pull down the tariff walls, throw our markets open to the foreigner, and you must pull down wages or go out of business.

All goods made abroad brought into a market heretofore supplied by our own workmen throws some American out of a job. And whether it be true, as you claim, that your bill will not reduce wages, the fact remains that wages high or wages low there will be less work to be done in this country and somebody will be out of a job.

About so many shoes are used by our population. Make some of them abroad and some American shoemaker will be out of a job.

Under your bill England, France, and Germany will do some of our weaving and spinning that we now do at home. Belgium will make much of our plate glass.

Australia will furnish much of our wool; Canada much of our flour, shingles, and meat.

The International Sugar Trust will wipe out the beet-sugar industry and presently will "soak" us for what prices for sugar they please.

If the Republican leaders, and I speak not of the rank and file of the party, but of the leaders who controlled the organization, if these leaders, when the party was dominant, had enacted the tariff law that they offered since they lost the power to enact one; if they had enacted the nonpartisan tariff commission which they now pretend to favor when they had the power to enact one; if they had been as progressive before their defeat as they pretend to be since, and had abandoned their alliances with the special interests, the Republican Party would be in control yet.

But under a high tariff they allowed combinations to suppress competition and pile up ill-gotten millions, and at the beck and nod of these combinations hindered and obstructed the enactment of effective laws to prevent monopolies, obstructed the administration of such laws as we had to control them, and became the publicly exposed sponsors and defenders of these special interests.

The Republican leaders, knowing that the American people believe in a protective tariff, knowing that they have no faith in Democratic free-trade doctrines, fancied that the people would stand for anything bearing the name of "protection." Swollen with power, deaf to all remonstrance, they conspired with these illicit combinations to control the Government.

In the absence of laws to effectively regulate these combinations the people demanded and all parties agreed to a revision of the tariff downward as a "short cut" to destroy these devilfish and restore competition, although a better and more radical remedy would be through a criminal code.

If Mr. Taft had stood by his party platform; if he had stood by his agreement to carry out the Roosevelt policies, to which he was pledged, he would be President to-day and there would be no serious division in the Republican Party. But the party leaders, who were in partnership with the managers of the trusts, hating Roosevelt and all his policies, were too strong for Mr. Taft, and he made complete surrender to them, which was the signal for revolt.

But the revolt was not against the protective principle.

The revolt was against Republican leaders who had usurped the power of the party machinery; robbed the voters of the right to choose their own candidates; ousted the people from control, and set up a government "by a representative class" of representatives chosen by themselves; built up powerful machines by the influence and the money of the beneficiaries of special privileges; and by political brokerage and trickery, filling high places and small with men who would "go along" and be subservient, were building up an oligarchy of wealth.

And it is these same leaders that have driven nearly two-thirds of the voters out of the party by their usurpations—or to put it most mildly, by their incapacity to see and their neglect to do the will of the majority—who have the impudence to charge the Progressives with disloyalty and with breaking up the Republican Party, and who still seek to hold political power by deceiving the people with hypocritical professions of reform.

A majority of the Republican voters revolted against the domination of these leaders who had proved false to every principle of Republicanism and organized the Progressive Party upon a platform of social reforms that should give back to the people their constitutional powers of government; that should enlist governmental agencies in the protection of the home, the women, the children, and the toiling masses; that should enact a protective tariff based upon a scientific ascertainment of the facts by a nonpartisan commission; that should enact laws to destroy monopolies and special privilege, to the end that free competition and equal opportunities should be maintained in all lines between our own producers; and for immediate relief, and in obedience to the demand of the people to reduce the high tariffs behind which special privilege is intrenched.

Such a program is sneered at in this House by Republican leaders and by Democratic leaders who are tarred with the same stick and who, in the old days of Republican domination, were always ready to "go along" when they were needed by special privilege.

The ridicule and cheap wit aimed at the Progressive Party comes from both sides of this House and the stand-pat press of the country, though the only elements of political respectability in either of the old parties are those elements in the Democratic Party that sincerely believe in Woodrow Wilson's progressivism, and those elements in the Republican Party that at heart favor the Progressive doctrines, yet through constitutional timidity allow the old ties of party loyalty to bind them to the corpse of the boss system.

It is impossible for the old leaders to understand that their day has gone by, that old things are passed away, and that Republican government is facing a new and a better day.

It is impossible for the Progressives to turn their faces away from the visions of a nobler America, and, giving up the fight for reforms that are so greatly needed, go back again under the old leadership and accept their concepts of government.

These reforms are bound to come. If they come through the Democratic Party we welcome them.

But the Democratic Party with its irreconcilable elements is bound together by a rope of sand. Only party spirit, flushed by success and official patronage, enables Mr. Wilson to hold the reactionary elements in his party. Wilson and Tammany have nothing in common but a party name.

If they come through the Republican Party we welcome them. But they never will come from a party whose leaders despise the progressive doctrines, though they make belated professions of conversion and adherence.

Names, however, are nothing.

Results only are worth while.

Men who agree on fundamentals may, nay, must, compromise to accomplish practical results. A vast majority of the voters believe in progressivism. How shall they get together? Democrats, ill assorted as they are, are little likely to leave their party in the flush of success.

The Republican leaders hate progressivism and nothing can be expected from them, and for this same reason Progressives can not go back to the Republican Party.

Two courses are open. One is to retire the old leaders and make the Republican Party what it ought to be. This involves a hard, long fight with the old leaders and having them in the party always enemies to progress.

The other is for all progressives to join the Progressive Party and make it the party of the people, for the people, and by the people.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph close in five minutes.

Mr. MANN. I desire a little time on this.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph close in——

Mr. HULINGS. Mr. Chairman, I ask the privilege of resuming this lecture on the next paragraph. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph close in 10 minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Chairman, were it not for the fact that I was elected from a district in the heart of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts during the pendency of this tariff legislation, at this time in my young membership in this body I would not take up the time of the House; but in view of some of the statements that have been made by some Representatives of the great Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and in view of the statement just made by the distinguished gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN] that the South is pledged to tariff reform, let me say to my colleagues in this Chamber, on both sides of the House, that we in Massachusetts and in New England join with the South in asking for tariff reduction. [Applause on the Democratic side.] Why, Mr. Chairman, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts at the election last fall gave its electoral votes for the President of the United States. [Applause on the Democratic side.] After his election and after the election of the gentleman to the United States Senate [Mr. WEEKS] from our Commonwealth, we had a special election. The tariff issue was raised by the Republican candidate and by the Progressive candidate. There is some difference in this Chamber with reference to the attitude of those two parties upon that question, but in that contest which was waged in Massachusetts, Mr. Chairman, there was no essential difference between them—they both stood for a high tariff.

We met them at the challenge which had been made and we indorsed in every section of my congressional district in Massachusetts the program of the President of the United States to revise the tariff in the interest of the people. [Applause on the Democratic side.] I believe, Mr. Chairman, that by the indorsement given me by the people of that district and by the election given me by a plurality of 4,400 that the people of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts have sent me here as a friendly emissary to this administration in its effort to reduce the tariff. [Applause on the Democratic side.] They raised the argument during the last contest that a Republican should be sent from Massachusetts or a Progressive should be sent from that splendid district to protest against the attitude of the President and to protest against the tariff-revision program.

We asked the people of Massachusetts if they believed that a protest should be made against the action of the President and the Democrats in their efforts to give the people of this great Nation cheaper foodstuffs, if a protest should be made to give the people of this country free lumber and free wool, and I believe the indorsement given to the President, to the Democratic majority, and to myself puts our fair Commonwealth of Massachusetts in line with the progressive Commonwealths of this country. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Our Commonwealth has great manufacturing establishments within its confines. Those great establishments have been built up by the enterprise and by the energy and by the thrift of the citizens of that Commonwealth. And in this tariff legislation all we ask is a fair opportunity and a fair field, and I believe this administration can be relied upon to do as it said, "No injury shall be done to any legitimate industry." I do not believe that any injury under the provisions of this bill will be done to any legitimate enterprise in this country. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, a few moments ago the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN] called the attention of the House to a letter which he had received from some cotton manufacturer, stating, as I believe, that "we have the cotton, we have the coal, we have the water power, and we can compete with the world." It so happens that in almost every other product which we produce we have ceased to send the raw material abroad. In the main, if we export wheat now, we export it in the shape of manufactured flour, or, in the main, if we export cattle now, we export them in the form of dressed or preserved meat; and the same theory or fact runs through as to nearly all of the agricultural products that this country produces so abundantly. But when it comes to cotton we export most of the raw material. Until recent years that which we manufactured in this country we did not manufacture even near the seat of production. We sent the cotton way North to be manufactured by northern industries. But in recent years, with the aid of protective tariff, gentlemen in the South have commenced to develop cotton-manufacturing establishments. We ought to maintain a policy which would make us not only the masters of the world as to cotton raw but also as to cotton manufactures. [Applause on the Republican side.] And if the South will leave aside its following of gentlemen like the gentleman from Alabama and turn and look to the industrial captains of the North, it will have a further reawakening and maintain economic policies which will permit this country to make raw cotton into cotton goods down in Dixie instead of sending cotton up to Massachusetts and across to England. We ought to make these raw materials into finished products here at home. They make wheat into flour near the seat of production. They make cattle into beef near the seat of production, but cotton they send over the world to be manufactured after paying freight rates abroad and then paying freight rates back on the cotton goods. Wake up down South!

Mr. BARTLETT. Is it not a fact that there is manufactured in the South and used by us in the manufacture of cotton goods more bales of cotton than are manufactured in the North or East? Last year we manufactured 2,000 more bales of cotton into cotton manufactures in the South than were manufactured in the North and East.

Mr. MANN. Oh, not more than you shipped to England to be manufactured.

Mr. LANGLEY. And that was under Republican administration, too.

Mr. MANN. I congratulate the South on the development of its cotton manufactures under a Republican protective tariff. I would like to have it go further before you commence to break it down.

Mr. BARTLETT. We did it in spite of Republican maladministration.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be considered withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I understood the debate had been closed on this paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. Of course, an amendment is in order, but the Chair will state to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. ROBERTS] that all debate has been exhausted on this paragraph, on paragraph F. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

F. Subsection 1. That all articles of foreign manufacture or production, which are capable of being marked, stamped, branded, or labeled, without injury, shall be marked, stamped, branded, or labeled in legible English words, in a conspicuous place that shall not be covered or obscured by any subsequent attachments or arrangements, so as to indicate the country of origin. Said marking, stamping, branding, or labeling shall be as nearly indelible and permanent as the nature of the article will permit.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I understand we have completed paragraph F.

The CHAIRMAN. The first section of paragraph F has been read, but nothing beyond that.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Very well.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

All packages containing imported articles shall be marked, stamped, branded, or labeled so as to indicate legibly and plainly, in English words, the country of origin and the quantity of their contents, and until marked in accordance with the directions prescribed in this section no articles or packages shall be delivered to the importer.

Should any article or package of imported merchandise be marked, stamped, branded, or labeled so as not accurately to indicate the quantity, number, or measurement actually contained in such article or package, no delivery of the same shall be made to the importer until the mark, stamp, brand, or label, as the case may be, shall be changed so as to conform to the facts of the case.

The Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe the necessary rules and regulations to carry out the foregoing provision.

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will call the attention of the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. ROBERTS] to the fact that the debate has been closed on the entire paragraph F, which extends down to about the middle of page 201. There can be no further debate until we reach paragraph G.

Mr. MANN rose.

The CHAIRMAN. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. ROBERTS] desires to offer an amendment.

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. Debate is closed, but an amendment can be offered when the reading of the paragraph has been completed.

Mr. MANN. But, Mr. Chairman, the committee can not close debate except by unanimous consent, except upon the paragraph that has been read, and the request of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] was only to close debate on the paragraph which had been read.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I asked unanimous consent that all debate be closed on paragraph F.

Mr. MANN. I think the gentleman said merely "the paragraph."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I distinctly stated paragraph F.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman insists upon that, I shall object hereafter to such requests. To undertake to close debate in that way before paragraphs are read is not fair.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I tried to be as liberal as I could. I asked unanimous consent to close debate on paragraph F for the purpose of making progress, and that was granted by unanimous consent. Now, if the gentleman has a real amendment to paragraph F——

Mr. MANN. He has not——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I shall be glad to ask unanimous consent that he be heard. If not, I ask that he wait until paragraph G is reached and then make his debate. I ask that the Clerk may read.

The Clerk read as follows:

F. Subsection 2. If any person shall fraudulently violate any of the provisions of this act relating to the marking, stamping, branding, or labeling of any imported articles or packages; or shall fraudulently deface, destroy, remove, alter, or obliterate any such marks, stamps, brands, or labels with intent to conceal the information given by or contained in such marks, stamps, brands, or labels, he shall upon conviction be fined in any sum not exceeding $5,000, or be imprisoned for any time not exceeding one year, or both.

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, have we reached the point where an amendment is in order?

The CHAIRMAN. It is in order at the end of the first section of the paragraph. The Clerk will read.

Mr. MANN. That was not the request that was made by the gentleman from Alabama. But I do not insist upon the matter now.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thought the matter had been substantially closed.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not want to cut off the gentleman from speaking to the amendment, but I wanted to make progress.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

G. Subsection 1. That all persons are prohibited from importing into the United States from any foreign country any obscene book, pamphlet, paper, writing, advertisement, circular, print, picture, drawing, or other representation, figure, or image on or of paper or other material, or any cast, instrument, or other article of an immoral nature, or any drug or medicine, or any article whatever for the prevention of conception or for causing unlawful abortion, or any lottery ticket, or any advertisement of any lottery. No such articles, whether imported separately or contained in packages with other goods entitled to entry, shall be admitted to entry; and all such articles shall be proceeded against, seized, and forfeited by due process of law. All such prohibited articles and the package in which they are contained in the course of importation shall be detained by the officer of customs, and proceedings taken against the same as hereinafter prescribed, unless it appears to the satisfaction of the collector of customs that the obscene articles contained in the package were inclosed therein without the knowledge or consent of the importer, owner, agent, or consignee: Provided, That the drugs hereinbefore mentioned, when imported in bulk and not put up for any of the purposes hereinbefore specified, are excepted from the operation of this section.

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. ROBERTS] moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, my newly elected colleague from Massachusetts [Mr. MITCHELL] stated that Massachusetts struck hands with the South for downward revision of the tariff, and in support of his statement, and what apparently to him was "confirmation strong as Holy Writ," he said that he had recently been elected from his congressional district over two candidates, one of the Republican Party the other of the Progressive Party, and that both of those candidates stood for high protection, and that his election under those circumstances conveyed to his mind the idea that he was representing a free-trade district.

Now, what are the facts, based on the statement of the gentleman himself? Both of his opponents were standing for high protection.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Massachusetts yield to his colleague?

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. Wait until I have completed my statement. I have but five minutes. Both of the candidates opposed to him stood for high protection. As a matter of fact, the gentleman received at that election, held about three weeks ago, 12,991 votes. The Republican candidate received 8,843 votes. The Progressive candidate received 5,678 votes.

Now, if we are to get the sentiment of that district, and from that district the sentiment of Massachusetts, we must put together the combined vote of the two men who stood for high protection, as he said, and we find they got a vote of 14,521, as against a vote of 12,991 for the Democratic candidate. [Applause on the Republican side.] In other words, my colleague just elected is a minority candidate from that district.

Mr. LANGLEY. And misrepresents it.

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. He is a minority candidate by 1,530 votes, and when he stands on this floor claiming that his district is a free-trade district, he is misrepresenting the majority of that district, as shown by the votes of the people.

Mr. CURLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. I yield now.

Mr. CURLEY. I want to ask the gentleman what has been the normal Republican majority in that district?

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. I am not familiar with it, because this is a new district. This special election is the second election that has been held in it.

Mr. CURLEY. What was the vote received by Capt. Weeks, the former Republican candidate?

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. I do not recall his vote. The gentleman is basing his election on the sentiment for or against free trade, and the sentiment shown by the figures is that protection is in the majority in that district to-day. I do not know the figures.

Mr. CURLEY. You do know this fact, if you were present in the Chamber, that the gentleman from Massachusetts did not say that he stood for free-trade policies in that district.

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. He said that the people of his district and Massachusetts struck hands with the South, and that they indorsed every feature and item of this tariff bill now under consideration.

Mr. CURLEY. For such revision as would not injure or destroy any legitimate industry.

Mr. LANGLEY. The gentleman did not make any such statement.

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. The gentleman did not make a statement such as my colleague attempts to put in my mouth.

Mr. MITCHELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. I will yield if I have any time, for a question only.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. I yield for a question, not for a speech.

Mr. BARTLETT. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MITCHELL] can get recognition in his own right later.

Mr. MITCHELL. Let the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. ROBERTS] conclude his remarks.

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. The gentleman recently elected, my newest colleague [Mr. MITCHELL], did make the statement on this floor, unless my ears deceived me, that he proclaimed throughout the campaign his belief in all the factors and items of this tariff bill now under consideration, and that his election was an indorsement of that bill by the people in his district; whereas the figures show that the people of that district were 1,530 in the majority in favor of a protective tariff and not in favor of the bill now under consideration. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Chairman, my colleague [Mr. ROBERTS], experienced in legislation and an old Member of this body, seeks in the closing hours of this debate to misrepresent me and to misrepresent what I said on the floor of this House. [Applause on the Democratic side.] Now, Mr. Chairman, although I am a new Member, I do not ask any consideration at the hands of the gentleman from Massachusetts who has sought to misrepresent me on this floor, and I want to say to the gentleman and to his colleagues from Massachusetts and to my colleagues in this House that I believe the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. ROBERTS] is misrepresenting his district and misrepresenting the great Commonwealth of Massachusetts. [Applause on the Democratic side.] The gentleman quotes some figures——

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. Are they inaccurate?

Mr. MITCHELL. The figures are not correct, and the gentleman knows they are not correct. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman give us the figures?

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. The gentleman must not interrupt his colleague who has the floor.

Mr. BARTLETT. The gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MITCHELL] is entitled to the floor.

The CHAIRMAN. The committee will be in order.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman knows that exactly the same kind of a contest took place in the same district last fall. Mr. WEEKS was the candidate upon the Republican ticket. We had a Progressive candidate, but Mr. WEEKS carried the district by 2,300 votes. After the special session had been called, after the tariff bill had been introduced into this House, we had a special election. There was a Republican candidate and a Progressive candidate. The issue was clear. The issue was raised by the Republican and the Progressive candidates, and in the same district where I had been defeated in the fall by 2,300 votes I was elected by 4,427 votes. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. Chairman, I said that the people of my Commonwealth are in favor of tariff revision honestly made, and I believe that the recent election of Senator HOLLIS in New Hampshire also bears testimony to the sentiment in that State. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The elections in Maine, the elections in Connecticut and other New England States, I believe, Mr. Chairman, bear testimony to the fact that we, as well as those in the South and in the West and in every section of the country, are in favor of an honest downward revision of the tariff, and I believe that that is the spirit that flows all through this Underwood bill. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that debate is exhausted on this paragraph.

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw the pro forma amendment, and I move to strike out the last two words.

Mr. PALMER. The gentleman from Massachusetts can not extend the time by repeating one pro forma amendment after another.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair thinks the gentleman from Pennsylvania is correct.

Mr. PALMER. In the absence of the gentleman from Alabama, who has announced that he will not extend the time, I do not think the gentleman from Massachusetts ought to ask for time. The gentleman can come in under the next paragraph.

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. This is the first time I have asked or occupied a moment's time in this debate, and I would like two minutes.

Mr. PALMER. But the gentleman can come in under the next paragraph.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word of the paragraph and insert in its place the word "subsection."

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on the amendment may close at the end of five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that debate on this amendment close in five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 202, line 11, by striking out the word "section," at the end of the line, and inserting in lieu thereof the word "subsection."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, this is section 4 of the bill which is now being read, divided into paragraphs which follow letters of the alphabet, and then again subdivided into subsections. Here is a proposition in regard to drugs used to prevent conception or to cause abortions. Then there is a proviso that the drugs heretofore mentioned when imported in bulk, not put up for the purposes hereinbefore specified, are excepted from the operation of this section. Of course, clearly the intention was to except it from the subsection.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman from Illinois is entirely right about it, and because we want the distinguished gentleman from Illinois to have a real part in the framing of this great law that is going to work so great a benefit to the people of this country we propose to vote for his amendment and put it in the bill. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. MANN. Reason has finally penetrated the brains of gentlemen on the other side. [Laughter.]

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Illinois.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to. [Applause.]

The Clerk read as follows:

G. Subsection 2. That whoever, being an officer, agent, or employee of the Government of the United States, shall knowingly aid or abet any person engaged in any violation of any of the provisions of law prohibiting importing, advertising, dealing in, exhibiting, or sending or receiving by mail obscene or indecent publications or representations, or means for preventing conception or procuring abortion, or other articles of indecent or immoral use or tendency, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall for every offense be punishable by a fine of not more than $5,000, or by imprisonment at hard labor for not more than 10 years, or both.

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. PALMER. Will the gentleman yield for a moment?

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. Yes.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this subsection and amendments thereto may close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent that all debate on this subsection and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. Mr. Chairman, just a moment ago the gentleman from Massachusetts, my newest colleague [Mr. MITCHELL], accused me on the floor of this House of misrepresenting him. He told this committee that I had not given correctly the figures by which he was elected and those received by his opponent. I want to read from the Congressional Directory, Sixty-third Congress, first session, a sketch of JOHN J. MITCHELL, Democrat, Marlboro. I will not read the biographical part, but I will come down to the last lines:

Elected to the Sixty-third Congress April 15, 1913, to succeed the Hon. JOHN W. WEEKS, receiving 12,991 votes—

That is what I stated—

to 8,843 for Alfred H. Cutting, Republican—

That is what I stated—

and 5,678 for Norman H. White, Progressive.

That is what I stated.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman may run bluffs like that in his own district and get by with them, but he can not do it on the floor of this House. When he accuses a Member of making false statements he wants to be absolutely certain that he himself is right. In the gentleman's denial of my statements that he does not represent the majority sentiment of his district on the question of protection or free trade, I leave it to this committee to say whether he met the point which I raised, namely, that both his opponents standing as he himself said for high protection, received 1,530 votes more than he received. He harks back to the election of last November as apparently throwing some light and possibly bolstering up his claim that his district is for a revision downward or free trade.

The Republican in that district last November, now Senator WEEKS, was elected by a plurality of something over 2,000; but bear in mind that last November in that district there was not only the gentleman himself now representing that district, a candidate on the Democratic ticket, but we had a Progressive candidate as well, and the Progressive candidate in that district in November stood for protection. Does the gentleman deny it? The Republican who was elected, late a Member of this House, known to the older Members, stood for protection, and the combined vote of the successful Republican and the Progressive left the gentleman now representing that district far behind, much farther behind than the 2,200 or 2,300, as he says, plurality would seem to indicate.

Mr. CURLEY. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. No; I can not yield. The gentleman can get time to make any statements he wishes. The facts are, and the gentleman well knows them, that if he puts his election on the vote of that district on free trade or protection, he does not represent the sentiment of his district when he stands on his feet on this floor and claims to do so. He is representing the minority sentiment of his district, and I believe, with the possible exception of one or two districts in that State, he represents the minority sentiment of all the districts on the question of protection or free trade. Massachusetts has grown rich and great under the beneficent policy of protection. It is what gives our men employment. It is what keeps them all happy and prosperous and contented; and Massachusetts, as a whole, is not to-day favoring free trade; and in my judgment, when the issue comes square, as it will in the next congressional election, you will find my prophecy substantiated by the vote.

I have here the vote in November in that district, and it appears that the protection vote on the basis that the gentleman from the thirteenth district would have us assume was 28,100, as against a free-trade vote, which he received in November, of 13,500—barely more than half of the voters on his theory last November being for free trade, and at present the free-trade sentiment being 1,500 and more in the minority.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Chairman, my colleague from Massachusetts quotes from the Congressional Directory the figures of the recent contest. The election took place on the 15th of April. The vote was not canvassed by the governor and council of Massachusetts until the 23d of that month. The figures which are published in the Congressional Directory are newspaper figures and are incorrect. I have sent for the corrected figures.

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MITCHELL. Yes.

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. Did the gentleman submit those figures to the printing committee for insertion in this Congressional Directory?

Mr. MITCHELL. I sent the figures——

Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts. Will the gentleman please answer the question. Did the gentleman submit those figures?

Mr. MITCHELL. I will answer the gentleman's question. I sent the correct figures to some person who has charge of the publication of this book. I do not know who that person is, because I have not been here long enough to find out. The corrected figures are absolutely as I stated them. I won by 4,400 plurality. There was only a difference of 1,140 votes. In other words, the Republican and Progressive candidates received only 1,140 more votes than I received.

Mr. LANGLEY. That still makes the gentleman the minority Congressman.

Mr. MITCHELL. Now, let me call the attention of the House to this fact: The gentleman states that I am not representing the sentiment of my district and Commonwealth. In the gentleman's own district last fall the Democratic candidate, Mr. Rowland, received 8,732 votes and the Progressive candidate received 7,634 votes as against 14,020 votes received by the gentleman from Massachusetts. In other words, the Democratic and Progressive candidates received more votes than the gentleman did. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. LANGLEY. But the Progressive vote in that district was a protection vote.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. Mr. Chairman, I rise to a point of order. The gentleman from Kentucky should first address the Chair.

Mr. MITCHELL. I do not yield.

The CHAIRMAN (Mr. SAUNDERS). The gentleman declines to yield. The committee will be in order.

Mr. MITCHELL. Mr. Chairman, in this nonessential part of this debate the gentleman says that I have been trying to misrepresent him and am stating what is false upon the floor of this House. Not only in that nonessential has the gentleman misrepresented me, but the gentleman misrepresents me when he said I am a free trader, and the gentleman knows that that is absolutely untrue, unfounded, and unjust. [Applause on the Democratic side.] Who raised the tariff issue in the recent contest? The junior Senator from Massachusetts, aided by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY], a member of the Ways and Means Committee. They laid aside their important duties in the city of Washington and journeyed back to the thirteenth congressional district, and the junior Senator from Massachusetts remained for 10 days in that congressional district, and he raised the tariff issue. He raised the same issue that had been raised by the senior Senator from Massachusetts for, lo, these many years. They raised the issue when Mr. Foss was a candidate in the fourteenth congressional district. They said, "Elect him to Congress and you will close the doors of the great factories of the Commonwealth, and you will throw upon the streets of Massachusetts our honest workingmen." They have raised that issue in every congressional contest. The Republican leaders have been fooling the people so long that the gentleman himself, when he alluded to the fact that I am endeavoring to bluff the Members of this House, brings to my mind that the gentleman himself is a bluff Representative and does not represent the real sentiment and interest of the people of our great Commonwealth. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired; all time has expired, and the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn.

The Clerk read as follows:

G. Subsection 3. That any judge of any district or circuit court of the United States, within the proper district, before whom complaint in writing of any violation of the two preceding sections is made, to the satisfaction of such judge, and founded on knowledge or belief, and if upon belief, setting forth the grounds of such belief, and supported by oath or affirmation of the complainant, may issue, conformably to the Constitution, a warrant directed to the marshal or any deputy marshal in the proper district, directing him to search for, seize, and take possession of any such article or thing mentioned in the two preceding sections, and to make due and immediate return thereof, to the end that the same may be condemned and destroyed by proceedings, which shall be conducted in the same manner as other proceedings in the case of municipal seizure, and with the same right of appeal or writ of error.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer a committee amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 202, lines 24 and 25, by striking out the words "judge of any district or circuit court," and insert in lieu thereof the words "circuit court or district judge."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word——

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this subsection and all amendments thereto close in 10 minutes, 5 minutes to go to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBSON] and 5 minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. BRYAN].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent that all debate on this subsection and amendments thereto may close at the expiration of 10 minutes.

Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The gentleman from Washington [Mr. BRYAN] is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, the real lesson of this Massachusetts fight has been overlooked. It has not yet been brought out in this debate, and it is for the purpose of impressing upon Members of this House the real thing that happened in Massachusetts that I have insisted on having a few minutes of time.

There were three candidates. One of them, Cutting, the Republican, was for the Payne-Aldrich tariff, a man who was a reactionary, and who stood for reactionary principles. Then there was White, the Progressive, who stood against the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill, and MITCHELL, the gentleman sitting here, who was for the Underwood bill.

There was no combination in that campaign between the Progressives and Republicans. They were as far apart as the east from the west, and not associated together in any sense. Mr. White denounced the Payne tariff and the Republican Party, and especially announced that he was opposed to that kind of protection, and that he stood for a revision downward of the tariff, and for an immediate revision downward. And I heard him quote from that very correct article of that very correct author, Sam Blythe, in the Saturday Evening Post, "Verdict—Suicide," wherein Blythe had said that the Republican Party had committed suicide, and he referred especially to that section of the article where it was stated that the leaders of the Republican Party had deliberately gone into a room in Chicago and turned on the gas and committed suicide, as he termed it. And Norman H. White said he did not stand for the continuance of the protective policies by the Republican Party as that party had been practicing them.

Mr. MITCHELL plainly stated that he was for the Underwood bill. That is true, as he has said here. What was the result? The result was that the Republican Party received 8,843 votes and that there were 18,579 votes against the Republican Party. [Applause on the Democratic side.] They were not for the Republican Party, and I for one at this moment want to protest with all the force there is in me against this talk about a combination between the Progressives and the Republicans. We do not belong to the old Republican Party. We have nothing to do with it.

Mr. PAYNE. We do not feel badly about it.

Mr. BRYAN. You, sir, would feel badly about yourself if the people who have been robbed by the Payne tariff could get at you. Repeatedly Mr. White in that campaign raised the issue of the protective tariff as it had been proposed by the Republican Party, and he denounced it with all the force there was in him, and he said that if he was elected he would stand for a reduction of the tariff and for a tariff board and for all that the Progressive Party's platform stood for.

Let us analyze the vote at this election. Be it remembered that this is the first election since November in the country wherein a national issue was involved, which might be used as a basis on which to determine whether the Progressive Party vote was holding its own. Here are the figures:

	Vote.		Loss.	Percentage of total vote.		Percentage of loss.
	1913	1912		1913	1912
Democratic	12,901	13,583	4,682	47.0	38.5	5.1
Republican	8,843	15,934	7,091	32.2	45.0	44.5
Progressive	5,678	5,853	175	20.7	16.5	2.9
Total	27,422	35,370	7,948	.....	.....	.....

Now, then, I do not claim that there was any candidate in that campaign who was for free trade, and I know enough, and you all know enough, about this bill to know that there is no issue of free trade before this Congress at this time. There is no such thing here. The Underwood bill is not for free trade, and there is nobody here who is going to vote for free trade at this time. [Applause on the Democratic side.] It was that mighty force and that determination on the part of the people of Massachusetts to overturn the Republican Party and put it out that piled up this immense vote; and although the vote of the Republican Party was divided, the Republican Party could not possibly have won. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Now, then, I want to say that the time has come for us, the Progressives of this country, to let the old Republican Party know, here in Congress, and let its Representatives in Congress know, that we have nothing to do with them. [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side.]

Why, you Republicans now claim that your party is in favor of an income tax. When the income-tax-amendment resolution was up for consideration you opposed it, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] especially, who said he was opposed to it except as a war measure. He does not believe in it at this moment. The RECORD shows that he made a speech about it and said he was going to vote for the resolution to submit the question to the States, but that he did not favor the levying of an income tax for ordinary revenue. Mr. FORDNEY voted against submitting the income-tax proposition to the people, and Mr. GARDNER voted against submitting it to the people, and Mr. Calderhead voted against submitting it to the people, and Mr. McCall voted against submitting it to the people, and Mr. WEEKS voted against submitting it to the people, and Mr. Hill voted against submitting it to the people, and Mr. MOORE here was not present. [Laughter on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Washington has expired. All time has expired on this paragraph. The pro forma amendment will be considered withdrawn. The Clerk will read.

Mr. BRYAN. I have a lot more valuable ammunition. [Laughter and applause.]

The Clerk read as follows:

H. Subsection 1. That the importation of neat cattle and the hides of neat cattle from any foreign country into the United States is prohibited: Provided, That the operation of this section shall be suspended as to any foreign country or countries, or any part of such country or countries, whenever the Secretary of the Treasury shall officially determine, and give public notice thereof, that such importation will not tend to the introduction or spread of contagious or infectious diseases among the cattle of the United States; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and empowered, and it shall be his duty, to make all necessary orders and regulations to carry this section into effect, or to suspend the same as herein provided, and to send copies thereof to the proper officers in the United States and to such officers or agents of the United States in foreign countries as he shall judge necessary.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] moves to strike out the last word.

Mr. MANN. I am sorry to have to inject any partisan politics into the debate, but the gentleman from Washington [Mr. BRYAN], holding up his right hand with considerable dramatic effect, just stated that the Progressives had no participation with the Republicans; that they were entirely separated from the Republicans; that there was no connection between the Progressive Party, or the members of the Progressive Party, and the Republicans.

I have been wondering for some time what constituted the Progressive Party in the House. As the Republican floor leader, I shall have a word to say with reference to the committee selections of Republicans. I have not been able yet to ascertain which gentleman it would be necessary for me to take into consideration. [Laughter.]

Mr. BRYAN. You do not need to mention my name, sir. [Laughter.]

Mr. MANN. The gentleman is not the whole party. He is his own party. [Laughter.]

I notice by the official list of Members which is issued, which conforms with the biographies furnished by themselves, that there are not 19 Progressives in the House, as claimed, but 9; and while the gentleman from Washington [Mr. BRYAN] says that the Progressive Party is entirely separated from the Republican Party, I notice that the gentlemen themselves say that there are 7 Progressive Republicans [laughter], and that the other three members of the Progressive Party put themselves—mark you, put themselves, and do it themselves—down in the directory as "Republicans."

Now, perhaps the gentleman from Washington, before he attempts to speak for the Progressive Party—unless he has been selected as the leader of the 9 Progressives—had better ascertain where the other 10 are [laughter], because he does not find that of the 19 a majority even are willing to label themselves "Progressives," and half of them, nearly, insist upon keeping the word "Republican" along with the word "Progressive," while the balance claim to be wholly Republican.

The gentleman from Washington [Mr. BRYAN], who came into the Progressive Party or into the Republican Party recently, I believe, from the Democratic Party [laughter], is not able, perhaps, to tell where the real Republicans who went out with the Progressives will land in the end, but I am quite sure that while the gentleman from Washington will gradually gravitate and suddenly fall into the Democratic ranks, the remainder of the Progressive Party will gradually fall into the Republican Party, there being no possibility in the end of maintaining three great parties in the country striving for real supremacy. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I should like to see if we can agree on debate. I should like to finish the bill to-night. I do not want to cut off the political debate unduly, but I think we have carried it to the extreme limit now. I do not like to raise points of order against gentlemen. I hope they will let the bill run along and debate the actual paragraphs of it, for a while at any rate. I suppose the amendment of the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] is a substantive one.

Mr. MANN. I will say to the gentleman from Alabama that during his absence we have been having a very merry time. [Laughter.] The bill has not been referred to, with one exception.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will have to insist for a while on maintaining the rules of the House. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the debate on this paragraph and all amendments close in 10 minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that the debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close at the expiration of 10 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] offers an amendment, which will be reported by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 204, at the end of line 5, insert the following as a new paragraph:

"That the importation of fresh, chilled, frozen, cured, or salted meats or meat food products from any foreign country into the United States is prohibited: Provided, That the operation of this paragraph shall be suspended as to any foreign country or countries, or any parts of such country or countries, whenever the Secretary of the Treasury shall officially determine, and give public notice thereof, that such country or countries, or any parts thereof, have made suitable provision to guard against the exportation to the United States of meats and meat food products which are diseased or unfit for human consumption, by an inspection, at the places of slaughter and preparation, of all meats for export to the United States in substantial conformity with the provisions of the meat-inspection act embraced in the agricultural appropriation bill, June 30, 1906, and amendments thereto; and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and empowered, and it shall be his duty, to make all necessary orders and regulations to carry this paragraph into effect, with a view of preventing the importation of meats or meat food products not inspected and passed as aforesaid, and not plainly marked so as to indicate the country of their origin and the condition in which they are imported, whether fresh, chilled, frozen, cured, salted, or otherwise preserved."

Mr. MONDELL. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is somewhat in the line of an amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD] to a previous paragraph of the bill. This amendment follows a paragraph providing for an inspection of hides, and provides for an inspection at points of slaughter of live stock intended for export to the United States in substantial conformity with the provisions of our meat-inspection law.

The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], in reply to the argument of the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GOOD] with regard to a similar provision, said that if there was any necessity for a provision of this character, that necessity constituted an indictment against the Republican Party for not having made some such provision heretofore. Well, there has been a limited importation of meat up to this time, but under free meat our Democratic friends expect to have the country swamped with meat from the Argentine and from Australia. It is already beginning.

In anticipation of what is going to happen, cargoes are in preparation now in Australia, and it seems to me that it is not a good argument or a sound argument against the amendment that we have not made such provision heretofore when there were few imports. Why, the gentleman might as well argue that we should not change any of the rates in the Payne bill because the law has been thus and so in the past, and it should remain so. I understand the gentleman is trying to improve the legislation of the country along all lines, and I offer this in the very best of faith, in the hope that it will be accepted.

I think it is important that foreign meats coming to the United States shall be inspected at the point of slaughter as our meats are inspected here. We all realize that the present inspection at the port of entry can not by any possibility determine the question of the healthfulness of the animal at the time it was slaughtered. The meat of a tuberculous animal after it has been killed and frozen gives no evidence of its dangerous or its diseased character. Hence the necessity, for the protection of the lives and health of our people, that we shall have a provision of this character. I hope the gentleman will accept the amendment.

I do not offer this amendment because I approve of free meats, for I do not, but I offer it because if we are to have free meats we should have clean and healthful meats.

The country does now and always will depend largely upon the great West for its meat products, and those in that region who are familiar with and engaged in the business of growing live stock, without regard to party, these men protest against the provisions of this bill relating to live stock and meat products. I present a statement signed by the officers of eight western live-stock associations, representing most of the stock raisers of the West and Pacific coast, protesting against the live-stock and meat provisions of this bill.

SCHEDULE G.

LIVE STOCK AND MEAT PRODUCTS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 5, 1913.

The honorable Finance Committee of the United States Senate:

The undersigned, representing the live-stock industry of the United States, and particularly of the West and Central West, respectfully urge the retention of a fair and reasonable duty on live stock and meat products. We are willing to stand some reduction in the present duties, but we vigorously protest against the placing of our products on the free list.

The United States is to-day producing all the meat needed for home consumption. The much talked of shortage of cattle is only an absence of the surplus that was formerly exported. This falling off in the production of beef animals is the natural result of the depressed prices that generally prevailed from 1885 to 1910. During that period there was no attraction for capital in the cattle business; indeed, the capital already invested seized every opportunity to get out, and many large and small holdings in the range districts were liquidated as soon as prices permitted doing so with some profit, or at least without any loss.

During the past two years, under the stimulus of better prices, there has been and is a widespread return to the business of cattle breeding. Thousands of farmers and ranchmen, both in the corn belt and in the range section of the West, are establishing breeding herds—generally on a small scale.

On the Chicago market Monday, May 5, 1913, the highest price paid for beef cattle was more than $2 per hundred less than the highest price prevailing in September, October, November, and December, 1912.

The result of the free admission of meats from other surplus countries would be, first of all, to discourage those who have just embarked in the live-stock business or who contemplate doing so. Cows and calves would again be thrown on the market from all parts of the country, and if prices were forced to the level of Argentinian beef or Australian mutton the business of stock raising would be so unprofitable that this country would soon cease to produce its own meat. The result of this would be disastrous, not only directly as diminishing the income of the live-stock producer, but indirectly as destructive of the fertility of the soil of thousands of farms.

Many of the breeders and feeders in the corn belt are stocked up with high-priced breeding and feeding stock, and any pronounced depression in prices would cause tremendous financial loss to them.

The American packers, Armour, Swift, and Morris, each have large plants in Argentina. They handle 39 per cent of the export trade of South America. Two of them are building large plants in Uruguay. Swift & Co. is now building a plant in Brisbane, Queensland. There are now three plants in Canada operated by these same American packers. (See consular reports.)

In Special Agent Series No. 43 of the Bureau of Manufactures of the Department of Commerce and Labor, December 15, 1910, it was stated: "Chicago meat companies entered this field (Argentina) only seven years ago, but have already attained such a position that they are a decided, if not a dominating, influence in the progress of the trade and the control of prices."

The American packers are the only concerns who have distributing agencies in this country, and consequently are the only companies in a position to import meat. The proposition that to place meat on the free list would result in curbing the so-called Beef Trust is therefore preposterous. The big packers of this country are slaughtering a less percentage of the total slaughter in this country than 10 years ago. Whatever control they have over prices in this country would be increased instead of lessened by free meats.

The capacity of the United States for the production of live stock has not been reached. The present output could probably be doubled. Remunerative prices will bring this about. Unprofitable prices will result in a decreased production.

On the prosperity of the agricultural and live-stock industries depend the real progress and prosperity of this Nation. To transfer a part of the business of furnishing meat and other food for this Nation to other countries will seriously injure our agricultural industry and disturb not only our domestic conditions here, but our international trade balance as well.

We are in favor of an equal duty on meat and live stock, and that duty should not be less than 15 per cent ad valorem in order to be fair and equitable to the live-stock and farming interests of this country.

We refer to and make a part of our plea the brief of the American National Live Stock Association, by its attorney, S. H. Cowan, before the Ways and Means Committee on January 21, 1913. This protest is filed with your committee by the undersigned live-stock men now in Washington on account of the decision of the Finance Committee not to grant any oral hearing.

American National Live Stock Association (representing 65 State and local live-stock associations); T. W. Tomlinson, secretary; S. H. Cowan, attorney; J. H. Nations (El Paso, Tex.), L. F. Wilson (Kansas City, Mo.), John MacBain (Trinidad, Colo.), H. S. Stephenson (Los Angeles, Cal.), members of executive committee. National Wool Growers' Association (representing 32 sheep and wool growers' associations); S. W. McClure, secretary. Cattle Raisers' Association of Texas; W. W. Turney and I. T. Pryor, vice presidents. Panhandle and Southwestern Stock Men's Association; W. B. Slaughter, president. Corn Belt Meat Producers' Association; A. Sykes (Des Moines, Iowa), president; Charles Goodenow (Wall Lake, Iowa), Joseph Eisele (Malcolm, Iowa), members of executive committee. Western South Dakota Stock Growers' Association; F. M. Stewart, secretary. Arizona Cattle Growers' Association; John P. Orme. California Wool Growers' Association; F. A. Ellenwood, secretary.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Wyoming has expired.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask for a vote, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL].

The question being taken, the Chairman announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. MANN. I ask for a division, Mr. Chairman.

The committee divided; and there were—ayes 33, noes 64.

Mr. MANN. I ask for tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Chairman appointed Mr. MANN and Mr. UNDERWOOD.

The committee again divided, and the tellers reported that there were 51 ayes and 107 noes.

So the amendment was lost.

The Clerk read as follows:

I. That all goods, wares, articles, and merchandise manufactured wholly or in part in any foreign country by convict labor shall not be entitled to entry at any of the ports of the United States, and the importation thereof is hereby prohibited, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to prescribe such regulations as may be necessary for the enforcement of this provision.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 204, line 12, after the word "labor," insert a comma and add "or by labor employed more than eight hours a day."

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, this amendment proposes to prohibit the importation into the United States of all goods, wares, and merchandise manufactured in any foreign country by labor that is employed more than eight hours a day. We have eight-hour laws in the United States which are respected, and manufacturers are compelled to observe the eight-hour rule. The eight-hour day is advocated by labor unions, and under the provisions of this bill without the restriction that I propose it will be possible to admit into this country goods valued at hundreds of millions of dollars that have been made by foreign cheap labor working more than eight hours a day in competition with American labor.

Mr. CURLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORE. Yes.

Mr. CURLEY. I was not aware of any State in the Union where they had an eight-hour law for manufacturers. I assumed that Massachusetts was the leader, and hers is a 54-hour law. I ask the gentleman to name any State where there is an eight-hour law for manufacturers.

Mr. MOORE. First, we have the Federal law, and the gentleman near me refers to the State of Washington. There are a number of industries in which the eight-hour day is enforced, Government contract work in particular.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania yield?

Mr. MOORE. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman from Pennsylvania think that in the course of time the gentleman from Massachusetts will ever learn that Massachusetts is not the whole show? [Laughter.]

Mr. MOORE. There will come a time, I suppose, when he will.

Mr. MANN. Not in our lifetime. [Laughter.]

Mr. CURLEY. He has not yet.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I would like to know if the gentleman denies that the sentiment of labor unions in this country is for an eight-hour day, and if in many States it is not actually in force?

Mr. CURLEY. I would say in reply that everybody is in favor of more humane legislation in the hours of labor. I want to know of a State in which an eight-hour law for manufacturers is in operation.

Mr. MOORE. I will say in the state of humanity, which the gentleman alludes to. The eight-hour day is the rule in this country to-day. It is what organized labor is striving for, and it is the slogan of the American Federation of Labor. When Mr. Gompers was a journeyman cigar maker they put it into prose—

Eight hours for work, eight hours for play, eight hours for what you will.

I want to apply that to the men that manufacture goods on the other side of the water in competition with us.

Mr. CURLEY. You have not even a nine-hour day in Pennsylvania.

Mr. PAYNE. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania yield?

Mr. MOORE. Yes.

Mr. PAYNE. I want to suggest that if by any possibility the gentleman's amendment should be voted down he might offer it in the form of nine hours a day. That would be better than nothing, and perhaps we might catch the unique vote of the gentleman from Massachusetts. [Laughter.]

Mr. MOORE. If I fail to have this eight-hour amendment passed, I think it would be well for gentlemen on the other side who believe in raising the limit a little to propose an amendment that would make it nine hours a day. I do not think the gentlemen on the other side are going to run away from it, because at the last session gentlemen there were applying the eight-hour day and saying how they were going to give it to the workingmen of the country, how they were going to conform to the desire of labor unions, how they were going to give the common people of the country what they wanted—a little time for pleasure and the ordinary entertainments. I am now giving them an opportunity to vote for what they pretended they were for last session and the session before.

Mr. DONOVAN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MOORE. Yes.

Mr. DONOVAN. For an observation merely. I do not believe that 10 out of the 435 Members of this House dare say before election that they are opposed to an eight-hour law.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I think the gentleman is entirely right, and I want to say that the gentleman has been more right through the whole course of this debate than many of his colleagues, because he has seen the light and understands what the working people want.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on this paragraph do now close.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE].

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MOORE) there were—ayes 38, noes 73.

So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 204, after line 16, insert a new paragraph, as follows:
"J. That all goods, wares, articles, and merchandise manufactured wholly or in part in any foreign country by labor receiving less than the union rate of pay for the same kind of labor in the United States shall not be entitled to entry at any of the ports of the United States, and the importation thereof is hereby prohibited, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized and directed to prescribe such regulations as may be necessary for the enforcement of this provision."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this amendment close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, it having developed in the action just taken that the Democratic Party in this House is unitedly against an 8-hour day, and is not in favor of giving the American union workingman protection against cheaper foreign labor that works 9 hours, 10 hours, 11 hours, "or any other old time," I offer this amendment, with a view of giving the Democratic friends of the workingman on the other side, and particularly the Democratic friends of organized labor men, an opportunity to vote for a measure which proposes to establish a foreign union rate of wages that will comport with the wages maintained in the United States. It is manifestly unfair that the Democratic Party in changing the fiscal policy of the Nation and instituting the doctrine of free trade should make the American workingman compete with cheap labor and permit foreign-made material to come into the United States, when the men who have made it work for less than the union wage in every one of the corresponding trades in this country.

We have heard here from both sides of the House that the wages paid in Germany and in England, where the workingmen are as well organized as they are in the United States, are from one-half to one-third less than they are in the United States. In the matter of the cigar makers, whose appeal a little while ago you voted down on that side of the House, we heard that the pay which their competitors receive in the Philippines for making cigars, which you propose to send free into the United States, is one-fourth the pay of the cigar makers in the United States. Now, it would seem that the friends of union labor on the other side of the aisle, who have made this their stock in trade, would in this instance, when they have an opportunity to guarantee protection to American union organized labor against unfair competition with foreign labor, welcome the chance to do so.

Surely the new fiscal system which you are inaugurating is not intended solely to aid the Steel Trust, the Tobacco Trust, the International Harvester Co., and other combinations to transfer their business over to Canada or to Europe to get cheap labor. The workingmen in the United States are entitled to as much consideration as those of any other country. They ought not to be driven into Canada or Germany or England to do American work for us there. And I hope they will not be. Gentlemen, this seems to me to be the opportunity of a lifetime for you to stand by your pledges.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MOORE) there were—ayes 31, noes 80.

So the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

J. Subsection 1. That a discriminating duty of 10 per cent ad valorem, in addition to the duties imposed by law, shall be levied, collected, and paid on all goods, wares, or merchandise which shall be imported in vessels not of the United States, or which being the production or manufacture of any foreign country not contiguous to the United States, shall come into the United States from such contiguous country; but this discriminating duty shall not apply to goods, wares, or merchandise which shall be imported in vessels not of the United States entitled at the time of such importation by treaty or convention or act of Congress to be entered in the ports of the United States on payment of the same duties as shall then be payable on goods, wares, and merchandise imported in vessels of the United States, nor to such foreign products or manufactures as shall be imported from such contiguous countries in the usual course of strictly retail trade.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, the Members of the House will recognize this paragraph as an old friend, for it has been in the tariff law a great many years under the limitation of the provisions of treaties and conventions. It has not any particular force at the present time, but it involves principles so abhorent to the gentleman from Alabama that I wondered he allowed it to go into this bill. He refused to have a maximum and minimum tariff in his bill because he says that that would threaten the nations of the earth with a club, and hence he would not impose a maximum duty of 25 per cent or 10 per cent more than the ordinary duty, but, still, he has put in here a discriminatory duty of 10 per cent on all imported merchandise that comes into this country under a foreign flag with a proviso as to the treaties and conventions that we have with other countries. Now, these treaties and conventions render this paragraph entirely innocuous so long as they exist, but if you turn over a couple of pages of the bill he seems to have disregarded these treaties and conventions. J. Subsection 7 provides:

That a discount of 5 per cent on all duties imposed by this act shall be allowed on such goods, wares, and merchandise as shall be imported in vessels admitted to registration under the laws of the United States.

Now, that is positively new legislation that he has put into this bill, and it is legislation that is in contravention of those treaties that provide against discrimination in the matter of goods brought in foreign vessels in comparison with those brought in vessels of the United States. They violate the treaty by putting that section in the bill.

Mr. MARTIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. PAYNE. Certainly.

Mr. MARTIN. I suppose under this general discriminatory clause we have treaties and conventions with practically all the commercial countries, have we not?

Mr. PAYNE. Yes; all of them.

Mr. MARTIN. Do they extend for a series of years into the future?

Mr. PAYNE. Well, they extend until they are abrogated.

Mr. MARTIN. Now, would not the effect of subdivision 7 be to reduce the tariff 5 per cent ad valorem on all goods imported from those countries from which we have conventions?

Mr. PAYNE. Certainly.

Mr. MARTIN. So it is another way of cutting down the duties under the present bill?

Mr. PAYNE. It is a discriminatory duty in favor of the vessels of the United States as against foreign vessels on all these goods coming from these same countries. How any gentleman can say it is not in violation of the treaty is something I can not imagine. It is in direct contravention of the treaty. Now, I do not know that we repeal a treaty by this law of Congress, but I have the notion we can. I have a further notion that if we pass this law we will have to give up that which is under these treaties, for we did not give away something for nothing when we made these treaties. There are other matters embraced in those treaties that are very advantageous to the United States.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Is the gentleman sure this modifies any treaties?

Mr. PAYNE. I am not trying to modify the treaty or anything of the kind.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I asked if the gentleman believed that this provision modifies any treaty?

Mr. PAYNE. Oh, yes; I think it does, without any question, because it is a discrimination.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Discrimination against what?

Mr. PAYNE. Against foreign goods in favor of the United States.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. PAYNE. All my time has gone answering these questions.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate——

Mr. MANN. I want a little time, and the gentleman from Washington wants some little time, and the gentleman from Minnesota wants some time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I would like to dispose of section J if we can come to an agreement as to time. How much time on section J does the gentleman desire?

Mr. MANN. On all of J, all the subsections?

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. I have an amendment I desire to offer.

Mr. MANN. We are asking for 35 minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I hope the gentleman can get along with less; the gentleman controls the time. Can not he yield less time? We want to get through to-night.

Mr. MANN. Well, section J covers seven subsections. That would be less than five minutes to a subsection.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. How much time does the gentleman say he wants?

Mr. MANN. Thirty-five minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. Chairman, that debate on all of section J close in 45 minutes, 35 minutes to be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and 10 minutes by myself.

Mr. MANN. In order that these amendments may be offered I suggest that gentlemen may be permitted to offer amendments to the entire paragraph of section J, so that they will not be cut out, or to any of the subsections of section J.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. And have them pending and voted on at the end?

Mr. MANN. Yes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I find there is a little more time wanted on this side, and I ask unanimous consent that debate close in 50 minutes, and any gentleman having the floor may offer an amendment and have it pending until the close of the debate.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that debate on section J close in 50 minutes, 35 minutes to be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and 15 minutes by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], and that gentlemen obtaining the floor may have the right to offer such amendments to section J and subsections thereof as they may desire. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHACKLEFORD].

[Mr. SHACKLEFORD addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. SISSON].

[Mr. SISSON addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I will ask the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] to consume some of his time. A gentleman to whom I wish to yield is not here.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. HUMPHREY].

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Mr. Chairman, on page 207, subsection 7, of the present bill, it is proposed to give a discount of 5 per cent on all duties imposed upon goods carried in American vessels. This is the same old proposition that the Democratic Party has brought before this House on several occasions. It will be noticed that it is a proposition to reduce the duty upon dutiable goods carried in American vessels, but it does not give anything for goods carried in American vessels that are upon the free list. The free list now contains a large part of our imports. Under this bill the free list will be still larger. Seventy-eight per cent of the goods that we import from South America is now upon the free list. Forty per cent of the goods we import from the Orient is upon the free list. These statements are sufficient to show the utter absurdity of trying to build up trade between here and South America, and between here and the Orient, by a discriminating duty of 5 per cent. A little further on I will give some detailed figures upon this proposition.

The distinguished gentleman who is now Speaker of this House one time when this very proposition was under discussion paid me the compliment of saying that I was the best-known proponent of ship subsidy in this body. But I am not in favor of a subsidy such as is proposed in the section referred to. No Republican can be for such subsidy. The Republican Party never favored a subsidy of this character. A short time ago we were entertained by several distinguished gentlemen on the Democratic side of this House, whose indignation was greatly aroused because it was proposed to let American vessels in the coastwise trade pass through the Panama Canal without the payment of tolls. They opposed it upon the ground that the remission of such tolls was a subsidy. I see several of those gentlemen before me now; notwithstanding their speeches and declarations, they are ready to vote for this proposition in this bill. And what does this provision propose to do? It proposes to subsidize three classes of vessels. First, those built in foreign yards by foreign cheap labor and manned by cheap Chinese crews. Second, those vessels that are owned by railroads and manned by Chinese crews. Third, those vessels that are already receiving a subsidy under the subsidy act of 1891. And all these vessels are in a combination that fixes rates by agreement. These three classes will receive practically all of the subsidy that would be paid under this provision. I challenge any man to dispute the correctness of that statement. The Republican Party has never offered a bill to subsidize foreign-built ships. It has never offered a bill to subsidize any vessels manned by Chinese crews. It has never offered a bill to subsidize any vessel without requiring that vessel to perform valuable services for the Government. The subsidy offered under this proposition in this bill is a mere gratuity. Nothing whatever is required from the vessel that receives it. I wish for a moment to leave this feature of the proposition and call your attention to those bearing upon our treaties.

We have a treaty with practically every commercial nation of the world except four, whereby we agree to treat their vessels, so far as imports are concerned, in exactly the same way that we treat our own. I will read this section from the most recent treaty upon this subject—the one we entered into with Japan on February 1, 1911:

All articles which are or may be legally imported into the ports of either high contracting party from foreign countries in national vessels may likewise be imported into those ports in vessels of the other contracting party without being liable to any other or higher duties or charges of whatever denomination than if such articles were imported in national vessels. Such reciprocal equality of treatment shall take effect without distinction, whether such articles come directly from the place of origin or from any other foreign place.

We have a similar treaty with every commercial nation except Russia, Brazil, Chile, and Peru. So if this bill goes into effect the result of it will be that we will discriminate against the vessels of the four nations named, while the vessels of all the other nations of the world can bring goods into this country, and will pay but 95 per cent of the duties prescribed in the bill. In other words, we propose to discriminate against three of the nations of South America, where we especially desire to build up our trade, and this discrimination would chiefly affect Brazil. Brazil runs a line of vessels to this country, and this section would be a discrimination against Brazil that would be greatly felt, and yet Brazil is the most friendly nation to us in the world, and has recently passed a law giving us an advantage in many of our products not given to any other nation of the world. In other words, this section of the bill simply proposes to further reduce the tariff 5 per cent upon all goods brought into this country, except those brought in vessels belonging to Russia, Brazil, Peru, and Chile.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Washington yield?

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Washington yield to the gentleman from Missouri?

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Yes; for a question.

Mr. ALEXANDER. I do not care to intervene in this discussion, but I want to say that in my opinion this provision in its present form does not abrogate any treaty with any foreign nation.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. That is just what I say. It does not abrogate a treaty with any nation, and therefore it will not affect those nations with which we have a treaty.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Its effect will be to permit the entry of goods into our ports by the nations with which we have treaties at the same rates as goods brought from abroad in American ships.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. That is my opinion. This bill as it now stands will discriminate only against those four nations that I have enumerated, not against the other nations of the world.

If ever there was a legislative attempt to deceive the people, it is found in this section that pretends to assist American shipping by giving a reduction of 5 per cent in favor of goods carried in American bottoms. But suppose, for the sake of argument, that we admit that this section will give a 5 per cent reduction upon goods carried in American vessels, and that all goods carried in all foreign vessels will pay the full duty. Still it is an absurdity, and will be of no real effect whatever. It will not be sufficient to cause a single American ship to be constructed in any American yard. It will not be sufficient to cause a single American vessel to make an additional trip. It will simply be a gratuity, whatever it amounts to, given to the classes of vessels that I have already enumerated.

BETWEEN HERE AND EUROPE.

Take, for illustration, the effect that this bill would have between here and Europe. An average vessel with an average cargo would receive about $2,000 for the round voyage. This is a sum that is entirely insignificant as far as fast mail vessels are concerned. For this purpose it would amount to nothing whatever. It might increase to some extent the earnings of some of the small tramp vessels between here and Europe that were built in foreign yards and would take American registry and run with Chinese crews. So far as I am concerned, I do not care for an American merchant marine that is built by foreign cheap labor, manned by foreign cheap crews, and I shall never favor giving direct assistance to that class of vessels, and that is mainly what would be accomplished by this bill. I had hoped to have the exact figures as to the effect this section of the bill would have upon vessels running between here and Europe, but, unfortunately, the Treasury Department has not been able to get these figures to me in time for use in this debate.

ON THE PACIFIC.

As to the effect that this section would have upon shipping on the Pacific Ocean, we do not have to guess. Here I have the exact figures. I know it is hardly kind to puncture the glowing prophecies of what the effect of this section would be by citing the facts. In presenting the figures I assume that the vessel would receive the entire 5 per cent differential. Of course, in practice this would not be true.

I will first take the vessels of the Pacific Mail. These vessels run from San Francisco via Hawaii to the Orient and occasionally to the Philippines, making a round-trip voyage of 15,000 miles or more. It is well to remember that a Japanese line runs in direct competition with these vessels, and that each of the Japanese ships receives $100,000 in gold from the Japanese Government for each round trip. To overcome this handicap of $100,000 per trip of their competitors what would the Pacific Mail receive under this bill? Here I insert in the RECORD the actual figures as furnished to me by the Treasury Department, which are as follows:

Pacific Mail vessels.

Date of arrival.	Vessel.	Value of goods.	Five per cent of duty paid.
Jan. 7, 1913	China	$324,218.00	$4,450.34
Jan. 14, 1913	Manchuria	990,414.00	9,127.38
Feb. 4, 1913	Mongolia	1,144,037.00	17,693.51
Mar. 3, 1913	Korea	1,005,837.00	12,402.08
Mar. 17, 1913	Siberia	1,162,343.00	9,094.38
Mar. 24, 1913	China	457,534.00	3,939.72
Mar. 31, 1913	Manchuria	1,045,557.00	9,554.93
Total amount of duty paid			66,262.34

In other words, the total amount that would be paid to these magnificent vessels under this bill, if they received it all, would be $66,262.34 annually, while their Japanese competitors would receive for the same number of voyages $700,000, or considerably more than 10 times as much. It should not be forgotten that the Pacific Mail would receive higher compensation under this bill than any other vessels on the Pacific, as they largely command the silk trade, a trade that pays the highest duties.

As a proposition to build up fast lines the absurdity of the provision is here illustrated. The only thing accomplished would be to give the Pacific Mail vessels this gift of $66,262. In order to receive this amount they would not have to perform any additional service whatever. In other words, it is a gratuity, a subsidy.

What would be the effect of the bill upon the only other American vessel upon the Pacific Ocean, the Minnesota, the greatest freight and passenger vessel afloat and the vessel that has the unique distinction of being the only one beneath our flag that is run exclusively in the overseas trade without Government assistance.

I insert here a table of figures furnished me by the Treasury Department that shows exactly what this bill would do for the Minnesota:

American steamship Minnesota.

Date of arrival.	Vessel.	Value of goods.	Five per cent of duty paid.
Mar. 1, 1912	Minnesota	$425,572.00	$1,011.24
June 1, 1912	do	577,798.00	562.76
Aug. 30, 1912	do	358,011.00	708.35
Dec. 1, 1912	do	452,615.00	1,084.85
Mar. 24, 1913	do	240,425.00	316.15
Total amount of duty paid			3,683.35

The total amount of assistance that the Minnesota would receive under this bill if the entire 5 per cent was paid to it for a year's service would be $3,683, while Japanese vessels comprising an equal tonnage as that of the Minnesota for making the same voyages would receive $300,000, or a hundred times as much. It is easy to see how this Democratic bill would enable those who wish to run American vessels from Puget Sound to the Orient to overcome their Japanese competitors. The figures in regard to the Minnesota demonstrate the absolute absurdity of this proposition. In the face of these figures it is hard to comprehend how any man can favor this proposition.

SOUTH AMERICA.

But if the figures I have given demonstrate the absolute absurdity of the sham and pretense made by the Democratic Party to deceive the American people in trying to make them believe that that party is really in favor of an American merchant marine, it is much more vividly demonstrated when we turn to South America. As I have already stated, 40 per cent of the imports from the Orient are already on the free list, while 78 per cent of our imports from South America are on the free list. The Treasury Department has just furnished me with some recent figures that demonstrate what the practical working of this section of the bill would be, if enacted into law, between here and South America. No words could demonstrate its utter worthlessness as do these figures. Of course, between here and South America foreign vessels must be used, for there are no American vessels running between this country and South America beyond the Equator. It must not be forgotten also that the compensation received under this bill would be less than 5 per cent under the present law, as there has been a great increase in the free list in the Underwood bill. In other words, the amount that would be received by vessels running between here and South America, if this Underwood bill would become a law, is even less than the amount shown by the tables which I here insert. You will notice that these are official figures, taken from actual transactions:

Names of foreign vessels entered at New York, from ports of South America, during January, 1913, the date of arrival, separate values of cargo, duties paid and secured to be paid.

Vessel.	Arrival.	Merchandise entered free of duty.	Merchandise entered for I. T. & Exp.	Merchandise entered for warehousing.	Merchandise entered duty paid.	Five per cent of duty paid.
Steamship Clyde	Jan. 2	$25,255	$9,495
Steamship Trojan	do	291,375
Steamship Zacapa	do	35,076	4,790	$403	$688	$19.80
Steamship Byron	Jan. 3	289,734	13,560		13	.15
Steamship Herm	do	323,656	4,575		4,921	49.20
Steamship Verdi	Jan. 4	676,590	70,855	24,634	128,039	1,644.95
Steamship Mayaro	do	18,991	155,281
Steamship Pancras	Jan. 6	1,037,986
Steamship Korona	do	1,460	78,059
Steamship Westerwald	do	264,252	31,138	4,970		87.00
Steamship Highbury	Jan. 7	656,283	6,250
Steamship Coppename	Jan. 8	46,936			3,518	130.50
Steamship Almirante	Jan. 10	42,855	1,790	8,506		148.85
Bark Glendovey	Jan. 11	11,390
Bark Brynhilda	Jan. 13	24,816
Steamship Albingia	do	97,490	10,020	6,252	40	60.00
Steamship Kelvinhead	Jan. 14	236,538		15,911		243.30
Bark Calburga	do	18,928
Steamship Maracas	Jan. 15	11,258	106,888	544		13.35
Steamship Thames	Jan. 16	36,598	1,007	7,163	9	125.60
Steamship Benedict	do	1,253,447
Steamship Santa Marta	Jan. 17	9,646	3,095
Steamship Canadia [1]	do
Steamship Guiana	Jan. 18	3,489	53,455
Steamship Prins Maurits	Jan. 20	28,134	19,320		213	3.75
Steamship Orange Prince	do	875,711	13,050
Steamship Lord Downshire [1]	do
Steamship Topajoz [1]	do
Steamship Altai	Jan. 21	209,416	32,005	6,888		120.55
Steamship Metapan	Jan. 24	24,792	1,245
Steamship Christopher	do	1,038,880
Steamship Tennyson	Jan. 25	501,879	5,892
Steamship Grenada	do	28,094	52,659
Steamship Suriname	do	29,156
Steamship Lord Roberts	Jan. 27	59,783	11,064		40,922	556.35
Steamship Asiatic Prince	do	989,753
Steamship Allemania	Jan. 28	155,229	7,118	3,268		57.20
Steamship Javary	do	15,648
Steamship Dochra	Jan. 29	264,160	10,002		4,567	45.65
Steamship Trent	do	46,284	24,074	8,906	187	154.00
Steamship Zacapa	Jan. 31	8,723	2,830	1,692		29.69
Steamship Coya	do	201,540	14,813		56	.45
Total		9,891,831	744,330	89,137	183,173	3,490.25

[1] Ballast.

Total value of merchandise entered at New York from ports in South America $10,908,471.00
Total amount of subsidy that would have been paid under the provisions of the Underwood bill 3,490.25

The above is the amount that would be received by all American vessels if we had a sufficient number to carry our entire trade between here and South America. These figures vividly portray the sublime absurdity of the proposed Democratic subsidy.

Let me give you another illustration. In 1908 our imports from Brazil were valued at $74,577,864. If we had carried all our imports that were from Brazil in American vessels, those vessels would have received for carrying this $74,000,000 worth of goods the munificent sum of $2,877.85. Many of the vessels running between here and South America, carrying cargoes of great value, would not receive a single penny under this bill, as shown by the table already quoted. Nothing could be more ridiculous than this provision as applied to South America. A vessel coming on one of the long voyages from the west coast of South America, with a cargo valued at millions, would receive less for carrying the entire cargo under this proposed Democratic proposition than would a small, cheap tramp vessel, constructed in a foreign yard and manned by a Chinese crew, for carrying a single case of champagne from Europe to this country. The greatest effect of this Democratic subsidy proposition would be to cheapen by 5 per cent the tariff upon luxuries.

Between here and South America, where we most desire to build up our trade, the compensation received under this provision of the bill would not be sufficient to run a line of Indian canoes. I consider it useless to dwell further upon this proposition. It is apparent to anyone that it is a cheap, ill-concealed attempt to deceive the American people, an attempt to make them believe that the Democratic Party is really in favor of an American merchant marine. This is the only proposition that the Democratic Party has favored as affecting our merchant marine for half a century; and that party would be opposed to this provision if it were of any advantage whatever to American shipping.

Mr. FERRIS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Certainly.

Mr. FERRIS. A year or two ago I read a very able speech by the gentleman on the subject of ship subsidy. I think it is to be admitted that he is one of the strongest advocates in the House of a ship subsidy. Now, do I understand that the gentleman is opposed to this provision?

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Absolutely.

Mr. FERRIS. Then I can not fathom the gentleman's argument. One moment the gentleman criticizes the Ways and Means Committee for putting a ship-subsidy provision in the bill and in the next moment he criticizes them for not putting in one. What is the trouble?

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. I criticize them for putting this provision in here, because it is absolutely absurd. In the first place it amounts to nothing, and in the second place it proposes to make an absolute gratuity to the vessels that run without requiring them to do anything. Further than that it gives that gratuity to foreign-built ships, built in foreign yards by foreign cheap labor, and manned by Japanese crews. I have never advocated anything except a mail subsidy, to be given to fast vessels that would in time of war serve the Government, ships that carried American citizens as a portion of their crews, and that trained American boys and carried the mails. Now, after all your talk about subsidy, and all your talk about the Panama Canal, you come in here with the only pure and undefiled subsidy proposition that has ever been brought before this House. What little benefit it would be would go to the slow tramp vessels between here and Europe.

Mr. FERRIS. The gentleman will pardon me a moment?

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Yes.

Mr. FERRIS. Is it too much of a subsidy or too little of a subsidy that the gentleman complains of?

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. I object to it for two reasons: First, because it is too small; it does not amount to anything. Second, because it is given to the wrong people; it is given to those who do not earn it; it would not cause them to make a single extra trip or cause a single American vessel to be constructed in an American yard.

Mr. FERRIS. I give more credence to the gentleman's statement that it does not amount to anything than to the statement that it does. I do not think it does.

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. To recapitulate what I have said, this proposition is a pure subsidy, because it demands no service in return. The vessels that receive it are not required to perform any duties for the Government, and this is the true test of a subsidy. The vessels that receive this subsidy are not required to run at any speed. They are not required to carry the mail. They are not required to carry American crews. They are not required to carry American boys and train them in American seamanship. They are not required to be built upon plans approved by the Secretary of the Navy. They are not required to be at the command of the Government in time of war. All these requirements have always been made in every bill that has ever been favored by the Republican Party. But this bill proposes to give a gratuity to foreign-built vessels, manned for foreign, cheap crews—a proposition that is un-American and has never been favored by any party in this country but the Democratic Party.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Does the gentleman from Alabama desire to use any of his time?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. CURLEY] five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. CURLEY. Mr. Chairman, the Democratic Party are to be congratulated upon the patriotic step they have taken in incorporating in the present tariff bill a provision having for its purposes the revival of the American merchant marine, and despite the objection that may be raised by those men who are fearful lest we offend foreign nations I sincerely trust the provision of the tariff bill that will result in the restoration of the American flag on merchant steam vessels will be adopted.

The acts of Congress authorize, and each treaty provides, that the treaties and conventions with 32 countries now in force may be terminated upon one year's notice, and ample time exists for adoption of the changes made necessary in existing treaties between the United States and foreign powers in consequence of this provision of the tariff bill.

In my opinion the development of the merchant marine of the United States is fully as important in its bearing upon the future of this Republic as is the currency or the tariff question, and the adoption of this section of the tariff bill should undoubtedly prove the entering wedge that marks the beginning of a movement for commercial liberty upon the waterways of the world for United States ships.

A study of the figures relative to our commerce covering a half century of the Nation's growth is sufficient to convince even the most bitter opponent of governmental aid in the development of a merchant marine as to the imperative need for action regardless of the protests that may emanate from foreign powers, who during this period have been the chief beneficiaries on sea of our Nation's prosperity and progress.

In 1859 the value of goods carried in American vessels was $465,741,381 and in foreign vessels $229,816,211, or more than 100 per cent greater value carried in American ships than in foreign ships. In 1909, however, the value of goods carried in American ships has decreased 44.46 per cent, or a value of $258,657,217, while on the other hand during this brief period of 50 years the value of goods carried in foreign vessels has increased 971.59 per cent, or from $229,816,211 to the staggering totals of $2,462,693,814.

Can any Member of Congress contend that he is performing his duty as an honorable and patriotic representative of the American people and sit idly by while the right arm that was once the Nation's sign of greatness is being severed at the shoulder? I appreciate that there are Members of Congress who believe that governmental aid in any form is fundamentally wrong and politically unsound. Yet the startling figures here presented should in themselves be a sufficiently weighty argument to warrant any man changing his convictions and becoming enthusiastic in his support of a policy of governmental aid, either direct or indirect.

This section of the tariff bill provides a remedy that is in no sense a palliative for the treatment of the cancer to-day gnawing at the vitals of the Nation. It is the same remedy that was applied by those men who sacrificed their all that liberty might be established and freedom possible for America and Americans, both on land and on sea.

This section of the tariff bill breathes the spirit of that great statesman through whose genius and ability the Declaration of Independence was made possible—Thomas Jefferson.

The immortal document which has served as a guide to this Nation since its establishment has stood every test, and to-day, with all our progress, with all our advancement, with all our greatness as a Nation, we must hearken back to the fathers of the Republic to secure a remedy for the ills from which we now suffer.

The tariff act adopted July 4, 1789, made possible the development of a commercial supremacy for the new Republic that was the envy of the entire world. This act provided:

On all teas imported from China or India in ships built in the United States and belonging to a citizen or citizens thereof, or in ships or vessels built in foreign countries and on the 16th day of May last wholly the property of a citizen or citizens of the United States, and so continuing until the time of importation, as follows: On Bohea tea, per pound, 6 cents. On all Souchong or other black teas, per pound, 10 cents. On all other green teas, per pound, 12 cents.

On all teas imported from Europe in ships or vessels built in the United States and belonging wholly to a citizen or citizens thereof, or in ships or vessels built in foreign countries and on the 16th day of May last wholly the property of a citizen or citizens of the United States, and so continuing until the time of importation, as follows: On all Bohea tea, per pound, 8 cents. On all Souchong and other black teas, per pound, 13 cents. On all Hyson teas, per pound, 26 cents. On all other green teas, per pound, 16 cents.

On all teas imported in any other manner than as above mentioned, as follows: On Bohea tea, per pound, 15 cents. On all Souchong or other black teas, per pound, 22 cents. On all Hyson teas, per pound, 45 cents. On all other green teas, per pound, 27 cents.

On all goods, wares, and merchandises other than teas imported from China or India in ships not built in the United States and not wholly the property of a citizen or citizens thereof, nor in vessels built in foreign countries and on the 16th day of May last wholly the property of a citizen or citizens of the United States, and so continuing until the time of importation, 12½ per cent ad valorem.

SEC. 5. A discount of 10 per cent on all the duties imposed by this act shall be allowed on such goods, wares, and merchandise as shall be imported in vessels built in the United States and which shall be wholly the property of a citizen or citizens thereof, or in vessels built in foreign countries and on the 16th day of May last wholly the property of a citizen or citizens of the United States and so continuing until the time of importation.

This provision was amended in the tariff act of August 10, 1790, by imposing an additional duty of 10 per cent on articles imported in ships or vessels not of the United States instead of allowing a discount of 10 per cent on articles imported in American ships.

These or similar discriminations in favor of ships owned wholly by American citizens were continued for 26 years and resulted in such an increase in American shipping that in the year 1810, just 103 years ago, more than 90 per cent of our foreign commerce was carried in American-owned ships over the world and was much greater than the tonnage of American steamships engaged in foreign commerce is to-day.

I have always been at a loss to understand the opposition of the farmers to a subsidy provision, for if any person interested in agricultural pursuits could have visited the Great Lakes region in December of 1912 and witnessed the 3 miles of vessels bearing grain that lay in the harbor of Buffalo and with more than a half hundred additional vessels in the outer harbor, all awaiting the arrival of the foreign carriers who had conspired to refrain from handling the grain until such time as sufficient excuse had been afforded for the raising of rates, they would have become converts to the doctrine of providing a merchant marine regardless of cost.

The investigation conducted before the Interstate Commerce Commission disclosed the fact that through the control exercised by the foreign shipping interests, wheat for export trade could be sent from the Mississippi River regions to New York for 12 cents a bushel, while wheat sent to New York for manufacture into flour for home consumption paid a rate of 19½ cents per bushel. In other words, it was possible, through the power of the combined foreign shipowners, to furnish European millers American wheat at 4½ cents a bushel less than it could be supplied to the American millers at New York.

The average wheat yield is 20 bushels to the acre, and a fair return from this yield is $15. Allowing that it costs $5 an acre to break, disk, and seed and $2 an acre to harvest, thrash, and market, when the value of farm products is less than $10 an acre a loss rather than a profit results.

The year 1912 will long be remembered by the foreign shipowners as the most profitable one in the history of this piratical combine, who, through manipulation and control, during the past three years have doubled and trebled the ocean rates for the carrying of grain.

The western farmer has been compelled to pay from 37 to 45 cents a hundred to lay his grain down at Liverpool, and at the close of navigation on the Great Lakes he has been compelled to pay in excess of 50 cents a hundred. A rate of 40 cents a hundred is equivalent to 24 cents a bushel, and if a farmer has sold his grain for 87 cents a bushel, and the carrying charge has been 24 cents, the actual amount received by the farmer is but 63 cents a bushel; and if the yield is 20 bushels to the acre, the gross returns, less the carrying charges, is $12.60 per acre; and deducting from this amount the $7 paid for labor per acre, leaves the farmer but $5.60 an acre, or nearly $4.50 less than he should receive in order to secure a fair return upon his investment; and what is true in the case of the farmer is equally true in its application to all our industries.

After the treaty of Ghent, 1814, following the War of 1812, Congress passed the first reciprocity act of commerce and navigation, March 3, 1815, authorizing the President to abolish all discriminating duties and imposts in the direct trade with nations granting similar privileges. This method was followed in a treaty with England ratified on December 22, 1815, applying to the direct trade with Great Britain and India, West Indian and all other British colonial ports remaining closed to American vessels. Similar treaties followed and became effective in 1819 with Sweden and Norway, and in 1822 with France. In 1828 Congress removed discriminating duties and imposts in the direct trade as to vessels whose nations extended similar privileges. Great Britain still refused to open its West Indian ports to United States vessels, until in 1830 there was passed the last or colonial reciprocity act. England, however, did not open her colonial ports to United States vessels until 1849, and soon after our discriminating duties and imposts were finally abolished.

In the report of the United States Commissioner of Navigation for 1904 there are published the treaties and conventions with 32 countries, which have been made to carry out acts of 1815, 1828, and 1830 for free trade in transportation of our oversea commerce. The treaties are similar in terms and import, and are generally confined to this subject; they all include the indirect trade, except those with England and France, with whom our later reciprocity acts became effective by proclamation and not by treaty. These acts of maritime reciprocity seem to have been urged upon Congress by merchants in the foreign trade, but were passed under the apparently firm conviction that protection was no longer necessary for American shipping. The results of an apparently free trade in transportation have been written in no unmistakable manner, for, after each reciprocity treaty with a carrying nation had been enacted, its entries into our ports largely increased and continued to increase more rapidly than our own tonnage, until, as I have previously stated, our commerce as carried in ships flying the American flag has practically reached the vanishing point.

The control exercised by foreign shipowners is such to-day that American merchants have no voice in the matter of regulation of charges which they are compelled to pay for the carrying of their commodities. Foreign shipowners, largely in control of American commerce, meet from time to time in Germany and hold what is known as a "conference," the purpose of which is to prescribe the rates to be applied in the handling of our foreign trade. It is common knowledge that they further provide at these conferences that any ship or ships controlled by the combine shall rebate at the end of each six months' period to the shipper using the ships controlled by them exclusively in the carrying of goods 10 per cent of the total carrying charges, and this policy, through the lure of the rebate system, has led to the destruction of independent shipowners.

The absence of the independent shipowner from this field of endeavor makes it not only possible but probable that 10 per cent rebate is in consequence of an excess charge made possible through the absence of competition and through the exercise of absolute control of the trade to exact charges many times in excess of the amount rebated. They are able also to dictate to our railroads and to establish through rates from central Germany to Denver and Salt Lake which are lower than rates on similar articles from Cincinnati to those points. By a series of rebates, under various names, they are able to direct practically all our South American traffic to New York, to which point manufacturers in the interior must ship in order to take advantage of the low rate offered. They totally prevent the direction of trade from the central valley through New Orleans where the whole Middle West would enter into competition with the export commerce of the Atlantic ports.

Shoes shipped from St. Louis to New Orleans in a modern river barge cost about $4.50 per ton, but it is required that they be shipped for export from New York, and in consequence the shoe dealer in St. Louis pays a charge of $19.20 per ton.

Vast sums of money have been spent on river, lake, and harbor improvements; our great railroad terminals are located on the waterways throughout the land, and there we have ceased our labors, at the very point deserving of our most urgent consideration. Our river, lake, and coastwise commerce is to-day in excess of 7,500,000 tons, while our tonnage in the foreign trade is less than 600,000 tons.

The amount actually expended for the carrying of our foreign commerce is estimated in excess of $300,000,000, and this vast sum is an important factor in the balance of trade and a serious one in view of the fact that our exports of natural products has rapidly decreased, while the presence of our flag upon ships engaged in the foreign trade has become a genuine curiosity.

Our exports of manufactured steel and iron goods during the past fiscal year have averaged $1,000,000 each day, including Sundays and holidays. These goods, the product of the toil and skill of American workmen, have been sold in free-trade and so-called pauper-labor countries in open competition despite the payment by our merchants and manufacturers of an exorbitant carrying charge to foreign shippers. Our export trade, amounting to-day to $2,000,000,000, furnishes permanent employment to the men and women engaged in various lines of industry for at least three months annually, and were Germany or England to engage in war with other nations even so far removed from us as the Asiatic nations, the injury that would result to this country in consequence of such war would be fully equal to that resulting to the actual combatants. Our goods would be permitted to rot on the docks for want of carriers; our industries would become paralyzed through lack of distributors of their output, and despite the fact that we were at peace with the world a panic might ensue from which it would take three or more years for this Nation to recover.

While it is true that the admission of foreign ships to American registry may strengthen the resources of a competing nation, it is nevertheless equally true that the necessities of our present condition demand the taking of heroic measures. And while it may be argued that the adoption of the free-ship policy, so called, by foreign nations has not resulted in an immediate increase of their tonnage, the fact remains that those nations which have adopted the free-ship policy are to-day the leading maritime nations of the world. Great Britain adopted the policy in 1849 and continued it until such time as its shipping, thanks to subsidies in one form or other, found it possible to defy world competition in the matter of shipbuilding. The adoption of the subsidy policy by the French Government resulted in an increase in its merchant shipping from 914,000 tons in 1881 to 1,900,000 tons in 1910. Germany adopted the policy in 1873, its shipping at that time being 1,098,000 tons, and through the aid of mail subventions and the encouragement of native shipbuilding, has increased its tonnage to 4,307,000 tons. Japan, through a free-ship policy and governmental aid, has increased its shipping, perhaps, more rapidly in proportion than any other nation in the world, or from 200,000 tons in 1894 to 1,544,000 in 1910. And a study of these statistics is sufficient to convince the most stanch opponent of governmental aid to our merchant marine of the imperative necessity for action.

The example of the English Government in the matter of aid is exceedingly instructive. The Mauretania and Lusitania, having a speed of 25 knots an hour, were constructed by the British Government to be used as auxiliary cruisers in time of war, the expense of the same being charged to the naval appropriation.

The German Government pays a subsidy of $1,300,000 annually to the North German Lloyd Line and $300,000 annually to an East Indian line.

A more lamentable confession has never been made by the representative of a great country than that of Admiral Sperry, in charge of the American fleet, upon his return after a 25,000-mile journey over the principal waterways of the world, when he stated that never once in the entire journey did he behold the American flag flying from a merchant steam vessel.

England to-day furnishes the ships to carry supplies and fuel to our Navy on the Pacific coast, and on the recent journey around the world of the fleet there was furnished the pathetic spectacle of the supply ships accompanying the fleet flying the flags of every nation but our own; our boasted strength as a nation made a mockery for the world.

It is very well to send our commercial travelers to the various countries of the globe to develop new markets for American trade, but American goods delivered abroad in ships flying the American flag will prove a more powerful element in the development of a national commerce than all else.

There are many men who contend that the provisions of this bill should apply only to ships built in American yards, but when we realize the policy that has been pursued by the beneficiaries of our protected tariff system, and which policy has been largely dictated by the difference in wages and materials, of having ships constructed abroad, the necessity for extending the preferential privilege to ships of American registry, whether built at home or abroad, impresses one.

The Belfast yards during the year 1910, in addition to building the Olympic, a 45,000-ton steamer, constructed one equally as large for a German concern and five first-class passenger and freight steamers for an English company, to ply between New York and Nova Scotia, and five additional ones for the United Fruit Co., of Massachusetts; and these ships when commissioned will fly the German flag and the English flag, be manned by English and German crews, and, while their success will result from the handling of American passengers and cargoes, they will contribute little or nothing to the greatness and glory to this Republic.

Unquestionably it will be the purpose of the English as well as the German Government to protest against this preferential duty favorable to American shipping on the ground that it is a discrimination against their commerce, in the same manner that protests have been lodged against the adoption of a policy of free tolls on American shipping through the Panama Canal. But the protest of Great Britain is lamentably weak when we realize that in the past 60 years the British Government has expended $300,000,000 in mail and admiralty subsidies for the development of its commerce.

German ships to-day trade upon our Pacific coast from Puget Sound to San Francisco, bearing our freight to South America and theirs in turn to Hamburg, while upon the Atlantic coast English ships furnish means of travel and trade between New York, Brazil, and Argentina, while Norwegian and Swedish tramp steamers ply between the United States and the West Indies, carrying our manufactured goods one way and fruit the other.

Our South American neighbors, whose friendship and trade it should be our aim to cultivate, are to-day largely served by ships flying every flag but our own, and at present a native of Argentina desiring to reach New York and take a trip, combining comfort and pleasure, invariably goes by way of Genoa or Liverpool and not infrequently returns by the same route.

We have made no attempt as a Nation to take advantage of our geographical position in the matter of trade with South America, and which will be doubly enhanced through the opening of the Panama Canal. Steamers making 16 knots an hour, leaving New Orleans for the Chilean coast by way of the Panama Canal, would find it possible to deliver letters in Buenos Aires, through a transfer at Panama and via the trans-Andean railroad, eight days quicker than a ship of the same speed could deliver them from New York or Hamburg down the Brazilian coast. It would be possible for a merchant in Peru, Chile, or Argentina, sending an order to St. Louis or Chicago, to receive a reply and his goods by this route from 12 to 18 days sooner than he can now get them from Hamburg or New York. Our share in the import traffic of those countries is now about 15 per cent, whereas through these improved conditions it might easily be increased to 50 per cent.

The agitation in favor of definite action in the matter of the development of a merchant marine has received serious thought for more than a quarter of a century; the ocean mail act provided a moderate compensation for carrying of mail and was adopted in 1891, and in 1903 President McKinley recommended discriminating duties. The Republican Party platform in 1908 affirmed its adherence to the doctrine of encouragement to American shipping and urged such legislation as would revive the merchant marine prestige of the country as being essential to the national defense, the enlargement of foreign trade, and the industrial prosperity of our own people, and the Democratic platform in 1908 affirmed its belief in the necessity for the upbuilding of the American merchant marine.

The imports and exports of the United States in the year ending January 1, 1913, were in excess of $4,000,000,000, and this vast commerce was carried largely in ships flying a flag other than Old Glory, 91.75 per cent of our foreign commerce being to-day carried by foreign ships, while but 8.25 per cent is carried in ships flying the American flag.

The construction of the Panama Canal is rapidly approaching completion, and it will largely fail of its purpose unless the adoption of this provision and a closer attention to the growing needs of the Nation brings forcibly home to us the lesson that friendly intercourse between our country and other nations is more easily secured through the flying of the American flag from messengers of peace in the form of merchant steamships than upon the agencies of destruction—ships of war.

There are many lines of ships flying foreign flags and owned by American citizens that unquestionably in the event of the adoption of this provision would gladly seek an opportunity to change their registry to become recipients of the people's bounty and heralds of our Nation's progress.

The advantages of a merchant marine from a military standpoint are manifold; our recent war with Spain forcibly demonstrated our weakness in this particular. Ships admitted to American registry in time of war would be of value for the transportation of troops, provisions, and fuel, and would prove a valuable auxiliary to our Navy.

The adoption of this bill will, I trust, mark the beginning of a new era in the development of the Nation's prosperity, to the end that the best flag that ever waved over a people in the history of civilization may become a familiar figure once more upon the waterways of the world, rather than a blessed memory of a nation's departed greatness. [Loud applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. JOHNSON].

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I desire to place in the RECORD a report of the Commissioner General of Immigration for the year ending June 30, 1912, concerning aliens employed on vessels which completely overthrows all that my eloquent friend from Massachusetts [Mr. CURLEY] says.

ALIENS EMPLOYED ON VESSELS.

Chinese and other alien seamen have always constituted a serious problem in enforcing the Chinese-exclusion and immigration laws. The bureau has repeatedly called attention to the impossibility of properly safeguarding the country against the entry of Chinese laborers and mentally defective and otherwise undesirable aliens under the statutory provisions now existing. The violations, evasions, and abuses continue to increase in volume and seriousness; in fact, it is believed that the situation concerning this matter is now the most serious defect in the laws which contemplate that Chinese laborers and defective aliens shall be kept out of the country. (See what the commissioner of immigration at New York states concerning this subject.)

Table XX contains figures concerning alien seamen reported by masters of vessels as having deserted during the fiscal year 1912. These statistics are known to be quite incomplete. In addition to the figures given in that table, it should be stated that during the year about 35,000 Chinese seamen have come into the ports of the United States on merchant vessels and many desertions have occurred. The decisions of the courts, rendered under both the immigration and Chinese-exclusion laws, have been such as utterly to discourage the immigration officers in their efforts to control the situation. So far as Chinese are concerned, the masters of vessels often wholly disregard the inspectors, and officials of steamships that carry crews of other races are almost equally indifferent, feeling that they are justified under the decisions of the courts in claiming that the immigration officers have no control over the employees of their vessels and can not compel them to take even reasonable precautions.

There is now pending before Congress a bill (H. R. 21489) which, if enacted into law, will go a long way toward remedying this situation in so far as violations of the immigration act are concerned. With respect to Chinese seamen, it is very important that the present practice, supported by a departmental regulation, of requiring bond for each seaman brought into a United States port conditioned for such seaman's departure from the country with the vessel shall be authorized specifically by an act of Congress, with appropriate penalties for failure to give the bond.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. MARTIN].

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. Chairman, it is certainly enlightening, if nothing more can be said about it, to hear a ship-subsidy speech made by a gentleman from Massachusetts applauded on the Democratic side of the House, although, I thought, rather faintly.

He supports this legislation on the theory that it is a subsidy to American ships. I am against subsidies for American ships. I am in favor of restoring the American merchant marine by a different method, which I have not time now to discuss. I call attention to the fact that this is only another illustration of the piecemeal, illogical manner in which this bill has been framed. This item is not a subsidy to American ships only; it is a reduction of 5 per cent on all goods brought in American ships and also ships of other countries with which we have treaties and agreements that their goods shall come in at the same rate as that given to goods brought in American ships.

We have treaties with all the commercial countries of the world except four, in which we have agreed that goods in their ships shall come in subject to the same duties as those in American ships. Now we are making a further provision in this section that hereafter goods in American ships shall come in 5 per cent below the general rates. What is the effect of it? That will be construed consistently and logically, and the result will be that foreign ships from the countries with which we have treaties of that sort will bring their goods to our shores under this subdivision 7 of paragraph J, 5 per cent below these rates. It is another method by which our Democratic friends in piecemeal legislation are going to make a general reduction of 5 per cent of these duties on all goods brought from foreign countries, except from the four nations with which we have no such agreement.

Now, I want you gentlemen not to be deceived in what you are doing. You will find that this is precisely what you are doing, and yet I expect to see you all vote for it because, forsooth, you have not had any release to do otherwise, except the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. SISSON]. That is exactly what you are doing. You are lowering your rates on goods coming in in American bottoms and bottoms of other nations with whom we have agreed by treaty that their goods should come in at the same rate as goods coming in American bottoms.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from South Dakota has expired.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I yield half a minute to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. HUMPHREY].

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 207, strike out all of subsection 7.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Does the gentleman from Alabama wish to use any time?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Not at present. I intend to use the time before we get through, but not now.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Mr. Chairman, I wish to call the attention of the committee to what I think is an error in the bill and misinformation furnished the House in the report upon J, subsection 5. J, subsection 5, provides as follows:

That all materials of foreign production * * * for the construction of vessels * * * and all such materials necessary for the building of their machinery, and all articles necessary for their outfit and equipment may be imported. And upon proof of such materials having been used for such purposes no duties shall be paid thereon.

You will notice that the exemption from duties pertains only to "materials" and not to any "articles" necessary for outfit and equipment described in the same paragraph. In your report, on page 51, you state the purpose of this paragraph as follows:

The present law limits the free importation of such material to vessels built in the United States for foreign account and ownership and for the purpose of being employed in the foreign trade, including the trade between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. The change made in this section is to strike out the limitation and authorize the importation free of duty of foreign material for the construction of all vessels built in the United States for foreign account and ownership and for the purpose of being employed in the foreign and domestic trade of the United States. The purpose of the change is to liberalize the law and encourage the building of all classes of ships at our domestic shipyards.

On page 440 of your report you set forth the language of this subsection and compare it with section 19 of the Payne-Aldrich bill, thereby giving the House to understand that the change here made is that from section 19 of the Payne law. I add the portion of your report:

SEC. 19.—MATERIALS FOR SHIPBUILDING.

J. Subsection 5. That all materials of foreign production which may be necessary for the construction of vessels built in the United States for foreign account and ownership, or for the purpose of being employed in the foreign or domestic trade, and all such materials necessary for the building of their machinery, and all articles necessary for their outfit and equipment, may be imported in bond under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; and upon proof that such materials have been used for such purposes no duties shall be paid thereon.

SEC. 19. That all materials of foreign production which may be necessary for the construction of vessels built in the United States for foreign account and ownership, or for the purpose of being employed in the foreign trade, including the trade between the Atlantic and Pacific ports of the United States, and all such materials necessary for the building of their machinery, and all articles necessary for their outfit and equipment, may be imported in bond under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; and upon proof that such materials have been used for such purposes no duties shall be paid thereon. But vessels receiving the benefit of this section shall not be allowed to engage in the coastwise trade of the United States more than six months in any one year except upon the payment to the United States of the duties of which a rebate is herein allowed: Provided, That vessels built in the United States for foreign account and ownership shall not be allowed to engage in the coastwise trade of the United States.

The fact is there is no such thing as section 19 of the Payne-law in existence to-day. This was repealed by the portion of the Panama act, as follows:

That all materials of foreign production which may be necessary for the construction or repair of vessels built in the United States, and all such materials necessary for the building or repair of their machinery, and all articles necessary for their outfit and equipment may be imported into the United States free of duty under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

Your committee has not informed the House that the Panama act repealed that section, that it broadened the law as it then existed in section 19 of the Payne-Aldrich law set forth in your report, and that really your provision greatly restricts the provision of the Panama act, which I have shown to you. The free-material provision of the Panama act is restricted by this provision as follows, to be found in the bill at the bottom of page 206, line 24. The Panama act provides that materials for the construction or repair of vessels shall be admitted free. You limit free materials only for construction and not for repair. You notice that J, subsection 6, in your bill provides instead that all articles needed for repair may be imported free, but not materials. The Treasury Department, in a circular issued after the Panama act was passed, made the distinction between "articles" and "materials." "Material" was held to be the raw material for the finishing of the article. The article is the finished product. It is almost useless to attempt to import an article under such a construction for the repair of a ship. The practicable thing to do is to bring in the material for the making of the article for the repair of a ship. That was what the Panama act provides, but you have stricken out the opportunity to bring in material for the repair of a ship and only provide for the finished article. That is almost an impossibility, so that that provision for the article for the repair is practically worthless as you have included it in your bill.

Again, referring to the top of page 217, the Panama act provides for free admission of materials necessary for the building or repair of machinery. You strike out the words "material for the repair of machinery" and leave it only for the building of machinery. This is of some consequence, even though not much noticed. But the most important change is this: In lines 3, 4, and 5, on page 207, you provide:

All articles necessary for their outfit and equipment may be imported in bond under such regulations as the Treasury may prescribe.

In the very next line you say:

And upon proof that such materials have been used for such purposes no duty shall be paid thereon.

Duty shall be paid on what? On materials, not articles. Remember the construction placed upon the words "articles" as the finished product and "materials" as the raw basis for making the "articles." "Articles for outfitting and equipment" by the Panama act, section 5, are placed on the free list. By this provision you take them from the free list and again place them on the dutiable list. You thus change the law entirely and restrict its beneficent operation in most important particulars, while in your report you inform the House to the contrary.

The Panama act provides for the free admission of all of these things, the material for the construction and repair of vessels, material for the construction and repair of machinery, and articles for outfitting.

This was the deliberate intention of Congress, as those of you who were here at the time the conference report upon the Panama bill was under consideration by the House last August know. This very situation was debated at length by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE], the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE], and in favor of the proposition by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. ALEXANDER]. It was the culmination of a 30-year movement for free ships for foreign trade and free materials for the construction, repair, and operation of our ships in all trades. The conference committee took the bill of the gentleman from Missouri, Judge ALEXANDER, which was then on the calendar of the House, with a favorable report not only from the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries but indorsed by the Department of Commerce and Labor, and substituted in place of the Senate provisions on this subject the corresponding clauses of the bill of Judge ALEXANDER. It required the adoption of a rule by the House to keep it in the report as against a point of order by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE]. Now, after that struggle and that experience it is very unfortunate that the effect of it should be completely ignored by the Committee on Ways and Means and the House misinformed in the report and the progressive movement for the assistance to our merchant marine checked by a return to former conditions. The beneficent provisions proposed by Judge ALEXANDER are all wiped out and repealed by this section and you confine the practical effect of this paragraph to materials for the construction of vessels, and that is the sole effect of what you do. That does seriously impair existing law. You restrict the provisions of the Panama act so that such provisions are practically worthless, and instead of giving the shipbuilders of this country an opportunity to import materials with the articles necessary for their construction and repair of ships, machinery and outfitting, you practically provide for only the importations necessary for the construction of vessels and machinery. I do not know whether the committee intended to restrict the privileges of the merchant marine, but they have certainly done so by their bill.

Mr. MANN. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY].

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer the following amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 207, line 1, after the word "or," strike out the word "domestic" and insert after the word "thereon," in line 7, the following: "All acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this subsection are hereby repealed."

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Chairman, before speaking to the amendment which I have offered, I wish to ask the indulgence of the House to make this one further reference to political conditions in Massachusetts, and I will be extremely brief in doing so. I wish to say that it is nearly 10 years now since I first had the honor of serving in the Massachusetts Legislature with the newly elected Member from Massachusetts [Mr. MITCHELL]. Since then I have sat with him in both branches of the Massachusetts Legislature. In the course of his argument this afternoon—an hour or more ago—he omitted, I think, one very salient feature having to do with the election in the thirteenth Massachusetts district a few weeks ago, namely, his own personal popularity in that district. He is an extremely popular man at home; he is a very able legislator, as I can testify from my own personal knowledge, and I wish to say that I think his modesty prevented him from bringing these facts forward as reasons contributing to his election. Further, the gentleman from Washington [Mr. BRYAN] referred to the conditions in Massachusetts, and I want to say this: That he is absolutely wrong when he said the Progressive candidate, Mr. White, was not a protectionist, because it happens that I talked with the gentleman the very day that Congressman Weeks resigned, and he said that he was going to appeal to the Republicans in that district to support him because he was a protectionist, and he wanted to make that the issue in the campaign. Again, the Progressive leader in Massachusetts, Mr. Mathew Hale, announced that if Mr. White secured Republican indorsement he would nominate another Progressive against him. I trust I have fully as much knowledge of political conditions in Massachusetts as has the gentleman living across the continent in the State of Washington.

But, speaking to the amendment which I have submitted, I would say that during the course of this tariff debate the entire compass of the Democratic revision has been completely boxed. At various points on this compass we are told by the gentlemen on the other side that the bill is to secure revenue, that it is to reduce existing rates, that it is to prevent monopoly, that it is a trust buster, that it is to lower prices to the downtrodden consumer, and, as the President said before this very body, "to sharpen the wits of the American manufacturer." In fact, it has a different panacea for every ill that the flesh of Republican prosperity is heir to. But, Mr. Chairman, our Democratic friends have been very particular not to designate one class of beneficiaries—namely, the importers and the manufacturers abroad. That is what is done by the insertion in this paragraph of the word "domestic." I also wish to have the amendment adopted in order that the clause in the Panama act, to which I refer, shall be amended to prevent the importation free of duty of equipment or materials for vessels. This has been done by the owners of the Fall River steamers, of the Hudson River steamers, and of the Norfolk & Washington Steamship Line. I believe that if the tariff bill of this administration, the bill we are now considering, does nothing else it ought at least to bring honor to the Democratic Party as causing the foundation of a league to benefit importers and foreign manufacturers. A marked illustration of this very question has been shown in my district, and it is on account of the fact that part of the equipment of a steamer on the Hudson River was imported free of duty that I ask for the adoption of this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MANN. How much time have I remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. Ten minutes.

Mr. MANN. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. AINEY].

Mr. AINEY. Mr. Chairman, the people of this country are just awakening to the fact that a minority party temporarily in power is about to take advantage of its transitory authority and place upon the statute books of our Nation a tariff law the avowed purpose of which is to strike down the long-established policy of protection to American industry.

Under the specious argument of reducing the high cost of living it first attacks the products of the farm by proposing wholesale reductions of the present protective duty upon articles raised or produced by the American farmer, leaving the agricultural interests of our land to withstand the tide of importation from Canada, South America, and Europe.

On these articles the custom duty under the proposed Underwood bill is on an average but one-half what it is under existing law. Dairy products receive woeful hurt. Foreign butter soon may be imported to compete with the American product by paying 3 cents per pound in place of 6 cents; hay at $2 per ton in place of $4.

Apples will be called upon to compete with the great Canadian and Nova Scotian crops with the protection of only 10 cents per bushel as against an existing duty of 25 cents.

Milk and cream may, under the Underwood bill, be brought across the Canadian line at any point free of any duty, to depress the price, as against the protection afforded the farmer by the duty of 2 cents per gallon on milk and 5 cents per gallon on cream, which the existing tariff law requires to be paid.

Milk, preserved or condensed, will go upon the free list, and thus bring the American dairyman into unequal competition with the foreign products.

What is true of dairy products is equally true of grains and vegetables produced on the American farm, notably potatoes, which, under the present law, are subject to an import duty of 25 cents per bushel, will, under the Underwood bill, be admitted free, and so supplant the products of American soil.

When the Underwood bill becomes a law, those engaged in producing them must face a new rival and greater competition; and this, the Democratic Party frankly admits, is for the purpose of reducing the high cost of living.

The farmers of the country are asked to accept this tariff bill and policy, which lays the ax at the very root of the tree of their prosperity, because, forsooth, the Underwood bill proposes to place agricultural implements on the free list.

The Democratic proposition is to remove the duty on the implement with which the farmer digs his potatoes, and expect the farmer to so rejoice in the saving on the price of a hoe that he would welcome the flood of duty-free potatoes imported to depreciate the price of his own product.

Such logic could find no better illustration than in a proposition to cut one's throat to stop one's appetite.

I trust I have no narrow partisan spirit. I know that the sincere desire of my heart is the advancement of the material, moral, and intellectual welfare of the splendid and patriotic people of the district which has honored me, and of the grand old State of Pennsylvania, whose magnificent history records in glowing words a long list of great achievements in behalf of civil liberty.

The difference between the two great parties is fundamental, and is now more sharply defined than in any of the years past. The Republican Party stands squarely for the principle of protection. Rightly applied it recognizes that all men, with the most humble citizen, stand equal before our law, and that that equality can not be maintained except as by law we differentiate and protect him from the hordes of underpaid laborers of other lands, whose conception of individual rights does not accord with our own.

The toiler in America is an American citizen. This gives the highest honor which can rest upon anyone. The toiler in other lands is not protected and cared for by such an equality of citizenship or privilege.

The living and the wage must necessarily be different, and a protective tariff imposed by the Federal Government measures that difference and is calculated to keep and maintain every American citizen on the high plain and privilege of his American citizenship.

The Democratic Party, adopting and from time to time altering a fleeting terminology, has never successfully disguised its free-trade position, and now that it is in power it proposes to remove "the prop of a tax," by which it means the protective policy, and to open the doors of our ports to the free importation of foreign-produced articles, except as in those instances where, for revenue only, a duty is maintained under the evanescent term "competitive tariff."

A "competitive tariff." An unhappy though convenient term. It covers a multitude of errors of commission and omission. For a bill, actually nondescript in its real nature and purpose, built wholly upon theory, uncertain in principle, its schedules and rates based chiefly upon guesswork, as are the estimates of revenue to be derived from it, and return to the ad valorem system that opens the door to fraud, it may as well be called a "competitive tariff" as anything else. What does it mean? If it has any significance, is it not an invitation to foreign producers to come into our splendid home market with their wares and goods and compete with the products of our own farms and factories? If not this, what else can it mean? This is Democratic altruism; this is Democratic magnanimity. Seriously, was ever a proposition so unbusinesslike or so fallacious in political economy? Natural competition is all right. It has been called the life of trade. But when this principle is extended artificially, as it is proposed now to do, in order, as it is claimed for it, to break down artificial props to business; when it is extended beyond natural domestic zones it becomes a menace to home industry, whether the zone be a village or the entire country.

Now, what does this competitive tariff theory mean from the standpoint of those advocating it?

That it is a theory is admitted by the author of the bill. In his opening speech on this bill he said, "How do we arrive at a basis in writing a revenue tariff bill? We adopt the competitive theory."

Then the gentleman goes on to explain this competitive theory in this manner:

> We say that no revenue can be produced at the customhouse unless there is some competition between the products of foreign countries and domestic products. When we admit that some competition should exist in every line of industry, then it is a simple proposition to compare the amount of imports coming into this country with the amount of goods consumed, and you can ascertain at the customhouse whether there is any competition.

So here is the supposed basis upon which the rates in this bill were fixed—but the "simple proposition," as the gentleman calls it, of comparing imports with domestic consumption. No wonder the gentleman calls this a "theory." It is not only a theory, but an iridescent dream, as unsubstantial as the basis of every Democratic attempt at tariff revision.

This bill is not based upon the "simple proposition" its author lays down. On the contrary, it is based on guesswork, and is essentially devoid of a fixed guiding principle, either as a tariff-for-revenue-only bill or as a "competitive tariff."

The gentleman practically admits this. He says: "Unfortunately we have not had the data in all instances to determine this." But the President, he says, will be authorized to furnish the information annually, and when exact knowledge of the amount of imports and the American consumption in any given article is secured we will be able to tell whether rates are competitive.

In its platform in 1912 the Democratic Party charged that excessive prices result in large measure from the high-tariff laws enacted and maintained by the Republican Party.

The Republican Party denied this and declared "the steadily increased cost of living has become a matter not only of national but of world-wide concern," and further stated "the fact that it is not due to the protective-tariff system is evidenced by the existence of similar conditions in countries which have a tariff policy different from our own, as well as by the fact that the cost of living has increased while rates of duty have remained stationary or been reduced."

Now, with the power in their hands and about to be exercised when the protective system is to be wiped from our statute books, conscious of the fallacy of its position the Democratic Party seeks a way to escape, and the President of the United States and the Democratic leader in this House now intimate that reduction in the cost of living will be gradual.

The Democratic Party now faces, under its platform and its promises, the duty of giving to the people under this bill cheaper food and cheaper clothes and at the same time maintain for the farmer good prices for his products and to the workingman the present or better scale of wages for his labor and to the employer such economic conditions as shall enable him to continue his business on such remunerative basis as that he may maintain it on terms of equality between himself, his employees, and the purchasing public.

I shall not now take the time to present the glaring inconsistencies of this bill nor the failure of the theory upon which it is supposed to be based, nor even the method by which it has been constructed.

The Payne bill was severely criticized, both because of the alleged method of its creation as well as for its rates.

This criticism was expressed in many ways, but perhaps by none better than the writer of the following in the North American Review:

> The methods by which tariff bills are constructed now become all too familiar and throw a significant light on the character of the legislation involved. Debate in the Houses has little or nothing to do with it. The process by which such a bill is made is private, not public, because the reasons which underlie many of the rates imposed are private. The stronger faction of the Ways and Means Committee of the House makes up the preliminary bill, with the assistance of "experts" whom it permits the industries mostly concerned to supply for its guidance. The controlling members of the committee also determine what amendments, if any, shall be accepted, either from the minority faction of the committe or from the House itself. It permits itself to be dictated to, if at all, only by the imperative action of a party caucus.

This was penned by the then president of Princeton University, now the occupant of the White House. What he now thinks of tariff making in the light of practical experience must fully confirm his preconceived notions.

However, Mr. Chairman, after all the Democratic Party will be judged not so much by the methods employed in framing this bill as by the results accomplished by the bill itself. It is an experiment which our Democratic friends insist upon trying. They are responsible, but the people at large must suffer the consequences of their failure.

Mr. Chairman, the great State of Pennsylvania, with its widely diversified interests, has ever stood for the policy of protection. The farmer and wage earner, the merchant and the manufacturer have all been the recipients of beneficence.

My State took the initiative in protective tariff legislation, and the enactment of September 20, 1785, is said to have furnished the model for the first tariff law enacted by the Federal Government in 1789.

The preamble to Pennsylvania's tariff law reads as follows:

> SEC. 1. Whereas divers useful and beneficial arts and manufactures have been gradually introduced into Pennsylvania, and the same have at length risen to a very considerable extent and perfection, in so much that during the late war between the United States of America and Great Britain, when the importation of European goods was much interrupted, and often very difficult and uncertain, the artisans and mechanics of this State were able to supply in the hours of need not only large quantities of weapons and other implements, but also ammunition and clothing, without which the war could not have been carried on, whereby their oppressed country was greatly benefited and relieved.
>
> SEC. 2. And whereas, although the fabrics and manufactures of Europe and other foreign parts imported into this country in times of peace may be afforded at cheaper rates than they can be made here, yet good policy and a regard to the well-being of divers useful and industrious citizens who are employed in the making of like goods in this State demand of us that moderate duties be laid on certain fabrics and manufactures imported which do most interfere with and which (if no relief be given) will undermine and destroy the useful manufactures of the like kind in this country for this purpose.

Mr. Chairman, I confess allegiance to that school of political thought upon the tariff question which has sought to place the interests of a great people above the petty graspings of mere partisanship, a tariff policy which was bequeathed to us by our colonial ancestry, and to the support and construction of which the State of Pennsylvania contributed Thaddeus Stevens, a Whig; William D. Kelly, a Republican; and Samuel J. Randall, a Democrat. These great men, each in his way and time, believed in and advocated protection to American industries.

Here in this House these distinguished men upheld the American system and saw their hopes justified by constructive laws which they helped to pass and this country grow and prosper under the influence of beneficial tariff legislation.

In the days of Randall we were practically united in Pennsylvania on the tariff question. Democrats and Republicans alike agreed that protection was necessary and should be sustained as a national institution. Our people believed in protection as a patriotic duty. It was the "Sam Randall" Democrats who in this House defeated the Morrison horizontal tariff bill that spelled "free trade."

That this policy has been beneficial to the United States one has only to place in evidence the industrial and commercial history of this country during the greater part of the last 50 years, when, with the exception of 4 years, we had protective-tariff laws. During the 4 years' exception—1893–1897—we had a Democratic administration and a Democratic tariff, and those who remember the suffering and misery of those 4 years do not want to return to the conditions then prevailing. What is true of our entire country is also true of Pennsylvania. Nothing can bless or injure other sections of this land without having a like effect upon the people of Pennsylvania. With our 8,000,000 people within a mighty domain of nearly 29,000,000 acres of land, we have improved the magnificent opportunities offered by natural resources and the wisdom of self-preserving laws to place the factory near the farm, to give manifold and diversified employment to both capital and labor, and to furnish a home market for the products of our husbandmen. And beyond the limits of our own State we have found an enlarged home market for our excess products, in exchange for which we have bought the products of our sister States that our people need but do not produce. Thus have we helped to enrich not only ourselves but our fellow Americans in other States as well, buying from foreign countries only those articles which are not produced here. This has been and is possible only under laws embodying the protective principle.

This bill now before us, however, proposes to change our system and to subject our farmers in Pennsylvania and other States, and our artisans, manufacturers, and business men and their employees to the ruinous policy of foreign competition. Its framers tell us that the farmers are not interested in or desirous of a duty on their products; that there is no good reason why farmers should fear from competition with the farmers of Canada or of any other country; and that it would make no difference to the farmer either in the price he receives or the extent of his market; but it would, they claim, cheapen farm products to the people in the cities.

If anybody thinks seriously that the farmers of this country want free trade in farm products and are indifferent as to protection, he has only to refer to the recent revolt among the farmers against the Canadian reciprocity treaty. That treaty had for its purpose mutual commercial relations; its chief purpose, from the standpoint of those representing the United States in its negotiation, was to reduce the cost of farm products to people in our cities and towns in exchange for certain concessions from Canada which would open Canada's market to our manufactured products. Our western farmers saw in this treaty a flooding of our markets with Canadian wheat, oats, barley, and other cereals, and our eastern farmers saw injury to them in Canadian garden truck, poultry, eggs, milk, butter, and the like. They rose up almost as one man against the treaty, and the great agricultural papers and magazines opposed it.

As injurious to them as the farmers thought the Canadian reciprocity treaty would be, it at least did not propose to throw away entirely our home market without exacting some conditions favorable to our own people. But the assault upon agriculture in this bill has not the saving grace of reciprocity, for there is no compensation to any American industry for the losses inflicted upon our farmers by it. This bill represents the logical position of the Democratic Party. They supported as one man the reciprocity treaty, because, as they said, it was a step in the right direction, and they also voted against the repeal of the reciprocity bill. And now they come along with a bill which goes farther than did the treaty and opens wide the door of our splendid home market to an invasion of Canadian farm products. If the farmers of the East and West rebelled at the polls against the treaty, what shall be their attitude toward this bill? I will leave this to our free-trade friends to answer.

Mr. Chairman, for the farmers of Pennsylvania I think I can say with certainty that they believe in protection. They would believe in protection even if they themselves were not affected thereby. For our farmers are unselfish in desiring a policy that they know will protect wage earners in our industries. The farmers know that if those wage earners are thrown out of employment or have their wages reduced as the result of a tariff law that will encourage foreign importations, as was the case under the last Democratic tariff law, then the farmer will lose his principal customer, for when the mills and mines and factories are idle, or running half time, and wages are reduced, the farmers suffer along with the workingmen. Farm values then become depressed; farm products become a drug on the market.

Notwithstanding the fact that the number of farms in Pennsylvania decreased 2.2 per cent from 1900 to 1910, according to the United States census reports, the acreage of improved farm land 4.1 per cent, and the average size of farms 1.6 acres; farm property including land, buildings, implements, and machinery and live stock, the latter including domestic animals, poultry, and bees, increased in value during the same period $201,646,000, or 19.2 per cent. These facts indicate the wonderful prosperity enjoyed by our farmers throughout the decade in which we had for seven years the Dingley tariff law and for three years the present law. And let me say here that the farmers of Pennsylvania enjoyed no more than their fair share of the general prosperity—it was not at the expense of the consumers of farm products, for the farmers received but a just price as the reward of their industry.

In 1910, 69.4 per cent of all the farms in Pennsylvania were operated by their owners and part owners; 3.5 per cent by managers; and 27.1 per cent by tenants; the percentage for owners and for managers being higher and that for tenants lower than in 1900. The owner class is increasing, and the tenant class decreasing. The total number of farms owned in whole or in part by the operators in 1910 was 164,229, of which number 112,156 were reported as free from mortgage indebtedness.

According to the report of the United States Department of Agriculture the value of all live stock in Pennsylvania in 1910 was $163,000,000, divided as follows: Horses, 619,000; mules, 43,000; milch cows, 1,146,000; other cattle 917,000; sheep, 1,112,000; swine, 931,000.

The same authority shows that for the year 1911 Pennsylvania farmers produced, of the principal crops, 63,858,000 bushels of corn, valued at $43,423,000; 17,462,000 bushels of wheat, valued at $15,862,000; 175,000 bushels of barley, valued at $114,000; 4,304,000 bushels of rye, valued at $3,443,000; 6,373,000 bushels of buckwheat, valued at $4,397,000; 15,120,000 bushels of potatoes, valued at $14,062,000; 3,148,000 tons of hay, valued at $62,690,000; and 65,320,000 pounds of tobacco, valued at $6,205,400.

Farmers of Pennsylvania also produced, in addition to the above staple crops, according to United States census figures for the year 1909, vegetables, not including potatoes, to the value of $10,014,000; nursery products valued at $4,725,987; small fruits valued at $1,175,000; orchard fruits, of which apples contributed about five-sixths of the quantity, worth $8,678,000; grapes and nuts valued at about $1,000,000; dairy products, exclusive of milk and cream used on the farm, producing $42,809,000, of which $15,668,000 represents the value of butter. The statistics as to wool production are incomplete, but show a value of $1,306,000. The fowls of Pennsylvania farmers in 1909 numbered 17,485,000, valued at $9,278,000, and they produced 70,903,000 dozens of eggs, valued at $15,658,000.

To produce their crops Pennsylvania farmers, according to the same authority for the same year, paid $25,611,838 for labor on 63 per cent of the farms reporting, which is one of the greatest relative increases in agriculture in that State during the decade 1899 to 1909. About one-fourth of this amount was expended for labor in form of rent and board.

For feed, of 64 per cent of farms reporting, there was spent $19,203,160, and $6,801,605 for fertilizer.

Now, in the pending Underwood bill there is an evident attempt to play the city against the country—to appear to be doing something for the so-called ultimate consumer at the expense of the farmer. It has been pointed out, however, by several gentlemen who have spoken that the farmer receives not more than 50 per cent of the prices paid for the products he sends to market, and yet he has to contend with as many difficulties, relatively, in the production of his crops as do those who produce the things he has to buy. We should not forget that Canadian reciprocity was brought forward in the same spirit. Stress was laid upon the promise that it would cheapen food to the people in the congested centers of population, just as you say this Democratic bill will do. But the farmers, who were not getting a fair share of the prices exacted from the consumer, protested against a policy that would add injury to insult.

The Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Wilson, after an exhaustive investigation of this subject, had this to say:

> From the details that have been presented with regard to the increase of the prices of farm products between farmer and consumer, the conclusion is inevitable that the consumer has no well-grounded complaint against the farmer for the prices that he pays.

After consideration of the elements of the matter, it is plain that the farmer is not getting an exorbitant price for his products, and that the cost of distribution from the time of delivery at destination by the railroad to delivery to the consumer is the feature of the problem of high prices which must present itself to the consumer for treatment.

It requires money and brains to run a successful farm. No other business, I dare say, is subjected to greater uncertainties and risk, and to add to the farmers' handicaps the additional task of competing with the products of foreigners in what is and should be the American farmers' home market—the very best in the world—is to my mind economic short-sightedness amounting to folly. I stand for protection to the farmer.

In preparing this bill its authors have endeavored by an ill-concealed effort to keep some duties on representative raw farm products in order not altogether, as they hope, to incur the displeasure of American farmers, yet at the same time greatly reducing or placing on the free list the finished products. This is illustrated in the case of cattle, which is dutiable at 10 per cent, while meats go on the free list. Wheat furnishes another notable example, on which is a duty of 10 cents a bushel, and flour goes on the free list.

The following table is a comparison of rates under the present protective law upon certain agricultural products and provisions with the rates under the Underwood bill.

Comparison of rates under the present protective law upon certain agricultural products and provisions with the rates under the Underwood bill.

Item.	Present law.		Underwood bill.
	Rate.	Equivalent ad valorem.	Rate.	Equivalent ad valorem.
Cattle, 1 year old or over:
Valued at not more than $14 per head	$3.75 per head	27.58	10 per cent	10.00
Valued at more than $14 per head	27½ per cent	27.50	....do	10.00
Horses:
Valued at $150 each or less	$30 per head	32.93	$15 per head
Valued at over $200 each	25 per cent	25.00	10 per cent	10.00
Sheep:
Less than 1 year old	75 cents per head	18.78	....do	10.00
1 year or over	$1.50 per head	14.13	....do	10.00
Barley	30 cents per bushel	43.05	15 cents per bushel	23.08
Macaroni, vermicelli, etc	1½ cents per pound	34.25	1 cent per pound	23.81
Rice, cleaned	2 cents per pound	54.05	....do	33.33
Wheat	25 cents per bushel	35.65	10 cents per bushel	14.29
Butter	6 cents per pound	25.51	3 cents per pound	12.00
Cheese	....do	31.79	20 per cent	20.00
Eggs	5 cents per dozen	36.38	2 cents per dozen	14.28
Hay	$4 per ton	43.21	$2 per ton	26.67
Peas, dried	25 cents per bushel	14.36	15 cents per bushel	9.55
Apples, peaches, quinces, cherries, plums, and pears, green or ripe	....do	20.23	10 cents per bushel	8.33
Figs	2½ cents per pound	51.53	2 cents per pound	42.11
Walnuts, not shelled	3 cents per pound	40.55	....do	28.66
Poultry, live	....do	43.10	1 cent per pound	6.67
Mustard	10 cents per pound	37.60	6 cents per pound	23.08
Vinegar	7½ cents per gallon	33.03	4 cents per gallon	17.39

The Underwood bill places on the free list meats, potatoes, swine, rye flour, wheat flour, buckwheat and buckwheat flour, milk, cream, corn meal, oatmeal, and rolled oats; and the door to our home market is also swung wide open to the cigars of the Philippine Islands, bringing them into competition with our native products.

All this, Mr. Chairman, without recompense or reciprocity to the farmers of this country for the privilege of this foreign invasion of their markets.

With her tremendous areas of cheap, undeveloped land, Canada is now a great competitor of the United States in nearly all agricultural products. Why flood the East with her garden truck, poultry, eggs, milk, butter, cream, and the like to the detriment of eastern farmers? And why allow Canada to come into our markets, practically unrestricted, with her wheat, oats, barley, and other cereals and depress the prices of these things that our western farmers produce?

Mr. Chairman, in few other States in the Union has the advice of Jefferson in 1816 that "we must place the manufacturer by the side of the agriculturist" been so well heeded as in the great State of Pennsylvania. Our varied and important natural resources have invited the establishment and growth of many industries. We have within our borders raw materials, such as oil, coal, iron ore, timber, limestone, clay, glass sand, natural gas, tobacco, and so forth, in large quantities, which are used in manufacturing.

In 1909, according to the United States census report, Pennsylvania had 27,563 manufacturing establishments, employing an average of 1,002,712 persons during the year, who received $566,524,000 in salaries and wages. Of the persons employed, 877,543 were wage earners. These establishments turned out products to the value of $2,626,742,000, to produce which materials costing $1,582,560,000 were utilized. The value added by manufacture was thus $1,044,182,000, which figures best represent the net wealth created by manufacturing operations during the last census year.

To select the industries in Pennsylvania that will be affected directly or indirectly by this bill would be to select practically all of them. I will therefore append to my remarks a table specifying 94 industries or industry groups which had in 1909 a product in excess of $700,000,000 in value. In addition to the industries presented in the table there are 2,893 other industries employing 56,433 wage earners, the value of whose products was $211,025,000 plus the value added by manufacture of $75,276,000.

Of the total number of establishments in all industries combined only 21.3 per cent were under corporate ownership in 1909, as against 78.7 per cent under all other forms.

One of the most remarkable illustrations of the benefits to be derived from a protective tariff is to be found in the tin-plate and terneplate industry in this country. "Prior to 1889," says the United States Census Reports on Manufactures, "the industry was of minor importance, but by 1899 it had assumed such proportions that in the Twelfth Census Reports it was for the first time classed as a separate industry."

It will be remembered that before the passage of the McKinley tariff law we were practically at the mercy of English manufacturers of tin plate. From 1871 to 1891 we imported into this country 3,622,750 gross tons of tin plates, the foreign value of which was $307,341,404.

The McKinley bill put a duty of 1.85 and 2.2 cents per pound upon tin plates, according to gauge. This duty went into effect July 1, 1891. What was the result? Importations, which in the fiscal year 1891 were 1,036,489,074 pounds, valued at $35,746,920, fell off in the fiscal year 1894 to 454,160,826 pounds, valued at $11,969,518, and although the development of the industry was arrested by the Wilson law of 1894, which cut the rates about one-half, the encouragement again accorded it by the restoration of the McKinley rates by the Dingley Act of 1897, enabled the industry to grow in this country and keep pace with the consumption, until now we produce practically all of the tin plate consumed here. This has been done with no material increase in price, so that the consumer has not suffered in the least. The industry has been transferred to this country. It has given direct employment to many thousands, with American wages, and to thousands in allied and kindred industries. How did this tariff on tin plate affect Pennsylvania? Let me answer by quoting again from an official authority, the United States Census Report of 1910: "Prior to 1889 the industry was of minor importance, but by 1889 it was classed as a separate industry. In the manufacture of these products Pennsylvania ranks first among the States, reporting more than 50 per cent of the total product of the United States in 1909."

Mr. Chairman, here is an industry in my State just 20 years old, employing upward of 50,000 people, turning out products worth $25,000,000 a year, paying $1,400,000 in wages, which never would have been established but for a protective tariff. And yet Democratic statesmen, including Mr. Cleveland, characterized the duty on tin plate as "robbery" and "idiotic statesmanship."

This bill reduces the duty on tin and terne plates from 26.74 per cent, the equivalent ad valorem under the present law, to 20 per cent ad valorem, on which our Democratic friends hope to increase the revenue from these articles, and this can only mean increased importations to a market now supplied by our own establishments where there is already competition.

Pennsylvania holds the first place among the mining States. In 1909 its mining industries gave employment to 405,685 persons, more than one-third of all persons employed in all mining enterprises in the United States. The net value of the mine products of Pennsylvania in that year was $345,960,603. The expenses of operating and development were $300,977,955, of which $210,531,202 was expended for salaries and wages.

The principal industry of the State—coal mining—gave employment to 173,263 wage earners in the anthracite fields, and 184,408 in the bituminous regions. The net value of the combined product of coal was $296,396,507, almost equally divided. The net value of petroleum and natural gas-well products was $36,126,096, which together with the value of coal constituted 96.1 per cent of the total net value of mining products in the State.

Mr. Chairman, even if it were desirable, it is impossible to refer in greater detail to the manifold industries of the State of Pennsylvania, which will be more or less affected by this bill. That I have referred to them at all is merely for the purpose of calling attention to their great magnitude and to show at a glance the stupendous growth of farming, manufacturing, and mining in the State of Pennsylvania, a State whose people have always stood for protection, because they have had material evidences of the wisdom of that policy. But I share in the apprehension that exists in that State to-day, that this bill which departs from the protective policy will affect disastrously the welfare of the industries of Pennsylvania upon whom our people are wholly dependent, and from which they are receiving benefits that enable them to live according to our American standards.

Our people would rather "bear those ills" such as they have and hold fast to the substance of good times, steady employment, and good wages than "to fly to other ills they know not of" in the mere shadow of good things promised in this bill.

Every schedule in this bill and the free list contains reductions of duty or no duty at all which affect our Pennsylvania farmers, manufacturers, and workingmen. Inequalities, injustices, incongruities, and disaster are written in almost every line. The duty on finished products in many instances are lowered, while the materials from which such things are made must pay a higher duty. Cattle must pay a duty, while meats are let in free. Wheat must pay a duty, while flour will come in free. This bill will, it is admitted, destroy certain industries, some outright. The wool-growing industry must go to the Democratic slaughterhouse. The sugar industry must suffer a lingering death of three years.

Why this wanton onslaught upon American industries? Why this outrage upon American thrift and enterprise to test the theories of a political party which has never yet written a tariff law that brought prosperity to our land? Instead of encouraging and fostering the enterprises of our own people, this bill will throw a wet blanket of depression upon the aims and aspirations of our fellow countrymen and correspondingly bring joy and hope to people in other lands the world over. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Census statistics of Pennsylvania.

Industry.	Number of establishments.	Wage earners.		Value of products.		Value added by manufacture.		Per cent of increase.[1]
		Average number.	Per cent distribution.	Amount.	Per cent distribution.	Amount.	Per cent distribution.	Value of products.		Value added by manufacture.
								1904–1909	1899–1904	1904–1909	1899–1904
All industries	27,563	877,543	100.0	$2,626,742,000	100.0	$1,044,182,000	100.0	34.3	18.5	28.5	17.5
Iron and steel, steel works and rolling mills	189	126,911	14.5	500,344,000	19.0	171,331,000	16.4	37.5	9.3	36.1	10.6
Foundry and machine-shop products	1,695	86,821	9.9	210,746,000	8.0	109,735,000	10.5	37.4	.....	30.1	.....
Iron and steel, blast furnaces	66	14,521	1.7	168,578,000	6.4	26,504,000	2.5	56.9	5.8	25.4	−43.6
Leather, tanned, curried, and finished	163	14,008	1.6	77,926,000	3.0	18,813,000	1.8	12.2	24.8	34.2	6.1
Woolen, worsted, and felt goods, and wool hats	217	27,409	3.1	77,447,000	2.9	22,813,000	2.2	38.5	14.7	22.1	7.4
Cars and general shop construction and repairs by steam-railroad companies	132	46,645	5.3	76,035,000	2.9	34,634,000	3.3	24.6	41.7	20.8	43.9
Printing and publishing	2,461	24,696	2.8	70,584,000	2.7	47,831,000	4.6	28.2	36.4	22.7	33.7
Silk and silk goods, including throwsters	226	36,469	4.2	62,061,000	2.4	26,895,000	2.6	57.8	26.6	78.5	34.7
Lumber and timber products	2,667	26,873	3.1	57,454,000	2.2	30,140,000	2.9	1.3	5.2	−7.1	12.1
Petroleum, refining	41	2,900	0.3	53,088,000	2.0	5,648,000	0.5	11.9	3.7	33.8	14.4
Slaughtering and meat packing	180	3,050	0.3	51,851,000	2.0	7,006,000	0.7	56.6	29.6	47.2	27.6
Coke	146	15,331	1.7	51,816,000	2.0	18,054,000	1.7	79.1	29.8	29.5	31.5
Tobacco manufactures	2,432	33,188	3.8	50,161,000	1.9	29,448,000	2.8	22.7	24.9	18.0	20.4
Hosiery and knit goods	464	38,206	4.4	49,658,000	1.9	22,440,000	2.1	61.2	40.5	51.9	34.4
Liquors, malt	237	7,234	0.8	47,713,000	1.8	35,103,000	3.4	36.9	19.5	37.2	13.5
Bread and other bakery products	3,185	12,221	1.4	45,850,000	1.7	18,520,000	1.8	37.4	60.6	31.6	44.6
Flour-mill and gristmill products	1,450	2,432	0.3	44,783,000	1.7	6,613,000	0.6	16.3	30.3	24.4	12.9
Clothing, men's, including shirts	696	23,623	2.7	39,682,000	1.5	19,819,000	1.9	25.1	5.5	31.3	3.1
Cotton goods, including cotton small wares	175	16,293	1.9	33,917,000	1.3	15,160,000	1.4	29.0	3.3	26.6	2.4
Clothing women's	401	15,701	1.8	32,837,000	1.3	14,681,000	1.4	117.7	29.0	104.4	32.4
Glass	112	23,710	2.7	32,818,000	1.2	20,184,000	1.9	18.6	25.7	10.0	17.8
Electrical machinery, apparatus, and supplies	84	11,025	1.3	31,351,000	1.2	17,816,000	1.7	19.4	37.4	19.6	92.4
Cars, steam-railroad, not including operations of railroad companies	13	7,766	0.9	27,510,000	1.0	8,508,000	0.8	41.6	0.9	51.7	−20.7
Tin plate and terneplate	17	2,346	0.3	25,234,000	1.0	2,336,000	0.2	30.5	54.4	33.3	−19.2
Carpets and rugs, other than rag	93	11,510	1.3	24,879,000	0.9	10,231,000	1.0	−8.3	17.3	−1.8	11.5
Boots and shoes, including cut stock and findings	140	10,822	1.2	20,219,000	0.8	8,155,000	0.8	35.8	7.6	36.4	16.1
Paper and wood pulp	62	6,656	0.8	19,873,000	0.8	8,475,000	0.8	29.0	25.6	22.8	17.1
Furniture and refrigerators	304	9,924	1.1	18,952,000	0.7	9,913,000	0.9	48.3	26.9	35.1	32.3
Cement	27	8,080	0.9	18,855,000	0.7	8,747,000	0.8	84.2	.....	48.9	.....
Iron and steel pipe, wrought	11	3,873	0.4	18,291,000	0.7	4,209,000	0.4	90.1	−37.5	74.3	−35.5
Copper, tin, and sheet-iron products	339	6,815	0.8	17,197,000	0.7	8,346,000	0.8	77.5	35.6	76.2	35.3
Chemicals	37	3,185	0.4	15,978,000	0.6	5,778,000	0.6	35.7	.....	28.1	.....
Gas, illuminating and heating	99	3,119	0.4	15,840,000	0.6	11,741,000	1.1	46.5	37.3	53.2	62.4
Liquors, distilled	88	724	0.1	14,367,000	0.5	11,255,000	1.1	193.1	−8.5	330.6	−31.0
Paint and varnish	114	1,992	0.2	14,020,000	0.5	4,819,000	0.5	20.5	3.0	34.9	−24.1
Butter, cheese, and condensed milk	536	1,177	0.1	13,544,000	0.5	1,870,000	0.2	17.0	12.5	−2.9	22.0
Confectionery	251	5,408	0.6	13,542,000	0.5	5,339,000	0.5	34.4	34.6	27.4	31.5
Pottery, terra-cotta, and fire-clay products	139	9,003	1.0	13,072,000	0.5	8,963,000	0.9	21.5	32.4	14.2	38.3
Hats, fur-felt	38	7,220	0.8	13,023,000	0.5	8,010,000	0.8	77.2	73.2	73.3	94.5
Carriages and wagons and materials	655	7,498	0.9	12,748,000	0.5	7,041,000	0.7	10.9	9.9	6.8	6.2
Patent medicines and compounds and druggists' preparations	367	2,761	0.3	12,656,000	0.5	7,346,000	0.7	33.8	5.8	36.7	3.9
Dyeing and finishing textiles	135	6,086	0.7	12,059,000	0.5	6,728,000	0.6	77.7	−3.6	64.7	5.7
Marble and stone work	596	9,264	1.1	11,570,000	0.4	7,850,000	0.7	72.4	24.9	67.8	45.3
Canning and preserving	83	2,753	0.3	9,484,000	0.4	4,819,000	0.5	17.6	33.5	19.5	29.6
Brick and tile	326	8,058	0.9	9,225,000	0.4	6,772,000	0.6	26.7	22.3	19.2	18.0
Soap	59	1,197	0.1	9,124,000	0.3	3,177,000	0.3	31.1	92.6	9.4	91.1
Brass and bronze products	104	2,080	0.2	8,455,000	0.3	2,850,000	0.3	.....	.....	.....	.....

[1] Percentages are based on figures in Table I; a minus sign (−) denotes decrease. Where the percentages are omitted, comparable figures can not be given.

Census statistics of Pennsylvania—Continued.

Industry.	Number of establishments.	Wage earners.		Value of products.		Value added by manufacture.		Per cent of increase.
		Average number.	Per cent distribution.	Amount.	Per cent distribution.	Amount.	Per cent distribution.	Value of products.		Value added by manufacture.
								1904–1909	1899–1904	1904–1909	1899–1904
Cutlery and tools, not elsewhere specified	129	4,250	0.5	$3,022,000	0.3	$4,591,000	0.4	37.9	55.5	23.2	67.9
Stoves and furnaces, including gas and oil stoves	74	4,198	0.5	7,409,000	0.3	4,937,000	0.5	−3.7	.....	−8.5	.....
Millinery and lace goods	105	4,235	0.5	6,770,000	0.3	3,016,000	0.3	145.4	76.4	136.4	65.3
Fertilizers	48	1,224	0.1	6,543,000	0.3	1,930,000	0.2	59.8	12.4	60.3	13.6
Automobiles, including bodies and parts	44	3,199	0.4	6,532,000	0.3	2,481,000	0.2	432.8	1,138.4	297.0	819.1
Explosives	27	1,033	0.1	6,388,000	0.2	2,300,000	0.2	59.2	54.6	53.6	36.7
Shipbuilding, including boat building	31	3,558	0.4	6,178,000	0.2	3,468,000	0.3	−40.2	−28.7	−32.6	−29.7
Leather goods	156	2,524	0.3	5,824,000	0.2	2,671,000	0.3	13.0	28.9	6.4	18.4
Boxes, fancy and paper	118	4,604	0.5	5,184,000	0.2	2,894,000	0.3	32.7	30.8	29.8	29.2
Umbrellas and canes	45	2,315	0.3	5,060,000	0.2	1,912,000	0.2	−1.4	−12.6	5.4	−25.2
Steam packing	31	1,677	0.2	4,987,000	0.2	2,006,000	0.2	22.9	119.0	−15.7	132.6
Ice, manufactured	170	1,606	0.2	4,823,000	0.2	3,598,000	0.3	64.3	44.0	61.7	35.1
Chocolate and cocoa products	6	863	0.1	4,811,000	0.2	1,856,000	0.2	125.4	105.4	149.5	340.2
Cordage and twine and jute and linen goods	18	2,119	0.2	4,805,000	0.2	1,804,000	0.2	−6.5	−29.2	21.1	−17.6
Agricultural implements	36	2,401	0.3	4,805,000	0.2	2,723,000	0.3	−4.2	56.9	−7.4	49.6
Cooperage and wooden goods, not elsewhere specified	133	1,630	0.2	4,630,000	0.2	1,641,000	0.2	16.5	23.7	5.6	31.4
Saws	15	1,876	0.2	3,794,000	0.1	2,388,000	0.2	14.2	32.9	22.1	30.1
Paper goods, not elsewhere specified	34	1,357	0.2	3,719,000	0.1	1,494,000	0.1	.....	.....	.....	.....
Wall paper	11	1,056	0.1	3,695,000	0.1	1,386,000	0.1	22.2	4.5	11.2	19.1
Smelting and refining, not from the ore	24	206	(1)	3,577,000	0.1	599,000	0.1	29.8	9.3	26.1	4.2
Lime	348	3,258	0.4	3,342,000	0.1	2,304,000	0.2	32.9	.....	31.6	.....
Cork, cutting	10	1,727	0.2	2,965,000	0.1	1,296,000	0.1	−6.6	45.2	−5.7	28.7
Gas and electric fixtures and lamps and reflectors	75	1,482	0.2	2,962,000	0.1	1,723,000	0.2	16.5	1.2	0.9	17.2
Wood distillation, not including turpentine and rosin	50	933	0.1	2,960,000	0.1	1,276,000	0.1	−4.3	.....	−7.8	.....
Clocks and watches, including cases and materials	8	1,395	0.2	2,873,000	0.1	1,701,000	0.2	.....	.....	.....	.....
Coffins, burial cases, and undertakers' goods	36	1,103	0.1	2,757,000	0.1	1,182,000	0.1	38.6	63.8	20.1	56.4
Cars and general shop construction and repairs by street-railroad companies	65	2,442	0.3	2,747,000	0.1	1,653,000	0.2	118.2	1.1	113.0	19.6
Dentists' materials	23	1,072	0.1	2,745,000	0.1	1,420,000	0.1	17.5	27.8	53.2	9.3
Musical instruments, pianos and organs and materials	30	1,182	0.1	2,382,000	0.1	1,134,000	0.1	35.6	18.1	2.1	27.0
Boxes, cigar	77	1,801	0.2	2,328,000	0.1	1,076,000	0.1	23.9	21.0	25.7	33.1
Brooms and brushes	139	860	0.1	2,304,000	0.1	1,049,000	0.1	34.9	−3.4	17.2	8.1
Mattresses and spring beds	83	745	0.1	2,223,000	0.1	890,000	0.1	11.0	6.7	−0.2	21.9
Shoddy	20	450	(1)	2,051,000	0.1	588,000	0.1	−6.9	52.1	19.8	29.6
Buttons	24	1,123	0.1	1,565,000	0.1	819,000	0.1	73.9	−9.9	51.7	−9.4
Files	7	1,217	0.1	1,540,000	0.1	1,113,000	0.1	36.6	−8.8	52.0	−5.9
Fancy articles, not elsewhere specified	52	828	0.1	1,385,000	0.1	793,000	0.1	54.9	0.9	50.2	11.9
Belting and hose, leather	17	156	(1)	1,379,000	0.1	368,000	(1)	59.4	29.9	13.6	65.3
Safes and vaults	7	695	0.1	1,338,000	0.1	695,000	0.1	0.4	86.4	13.3	63.3
Artificial flowers and feathers and plumes	30	805	0.1	1,319,000	0.1	644,000	0.1	.....	.....	.....	.....
Jewelry	75	456	(1)	1,275,000	0.1	678,000	0.1	22.6	50.1	21.7	26.6
Fur goods	58	227	(1)	1,217,000	(1)	673,000	0.1	69.5	−8.5	95.1	−17.3
Photo-engraving	31	489	0.1	1,132,000	(1)	901,000	0.1	41.1	111.6	33.7	110.6
Hats and caps, other than felt, straw, and wool	53	744	0.1	1,097,000	(1)	554,000	0.1	3.2	.....	3.2	.....
Optical goods	24	579	0.1	1,053,000	(1)	602,000	0.1	125.7	− 8.0	90.5	− 0.3
Ink, printing	8	165	(1)	1,050,000	(1)	427,000	(1)	53.5	67.6	52.0	37.7
Typewriters and supplies	8	555	0.1	1,017,000	(1)	828,000	0.1	403.5	−54.4	483.1	−61.4
Crucibles	5	106	(1)	728,000	(1)	298,000	(1)	−7.1	−31.6	19.2	2.0
All other industries	2,893	56,433	6.4	211,025,000	8.0	75,276,000	7.2	.....	.....	.....	.....

[1] Less than one-tenth of 1 per cent.

[Mr. KINKAID of Nebraska addressed the committee. See Appendix.]

Mr. MANN. Is the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] going to close in one speech?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. No; I will close with two speeches. I yield four minutes to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBSON].

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Chairman, the result of this section is to insure that the American importer will choose the American bottom rather than other bottoms in which to import his goods from abroad. The general economic result will be a lowering of the tariff, not 5 per cent ad valorem, as some gentlemen have stated, but 5 per cent of the existing rate, which will be less than 2 per cent ad valorem. Now, the tendency of this result will be this: At present American agencies of transportation do not get a square deal. They do not have an equality of opportunity for the transport business of the high seas. It is in line with Democratic priuciple to help establish this equality of opportunity. And, furthermore, on the high seas to-day, on account of combines, there is a tendency to use the bludgeon and destroy the young company that tries to build up a transportation business by combinations that apportion all the business among themselves without lowering the rate. It will be in keeping with the spirit of the revision of this tariff bill, tending to curb the power of the combine, tending to prevent slaughter and the imposition of the strong upon the weak.

But, Mr. Chairman, it will have a broader significance. The time has come when America, that produces the great world staples, is going to secure the markets of the world in the great staples of clothing, in the great staples of construction, the great fundamental world staples, and ere long America will be able to produce, indeed, is now able to produce, these world staples cheaper than any other country. It means that we have come to a period when we must move out and gain the markets of the world. Now, to do this we must not be dependent upon our rivals and competitors for the transportation of our goods to the same competitive market. The time has come for America to give some serious attention to the question of her merchant marine. If I had time I would point out the great importance of the merchant marine for an efficient naval reserve, an important factor in national defense. Water transportation does not require the climbing of hills against gravity, or entail the heavy friction of solids on solids. Its inherited advantages for the transportation of a nation's power and commerce on the high seas will settle the future growth, prosperity, and the very survival of the great industrial nations now competing for supremacy. This paragraph is one of the most important paragraphs of the bill. It is a constructive measure inaugurated by the Democratic Party to build up our decayed merchant marine. The time has come to give serious consideration by our people to the question of foreign commerce, and the transportation of that commerce in American bottoms. It will really work the beginning of a new era in the maritime history of America.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] is recognized.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, in the closing of the general debate I called the attention of the committee to what seemed to me to be the inevitable fact, that the provisions in this section either amounted to nothing at all or else amounted to a discriminating duty of 15 per cent against goods imported in foreign bottoms. So learned a gentleman as the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBSON], who has just spoken, has evidently been deceived by what I think is a sort of a confidence game in proposing subsection 7 of paragraph J, which reads:

A discount of 5 per cent on all duties imposed by this act shall be allowed on such goods, wares, and merchandise as shall be imported in vessels admitted to registration under the laws of the United States.

There is no question but that that provision in the bill provides that goods coming in American bottoms shall not pay 100 per cent of the tariff rate fixed to this bill, but shall pay only 95 per cent. But we have trade conventions with every maritime country of the world which provide that the goods imported in their bottoms shall pay the same rate and only the same rate as goods imported in American bottoms. If that be applicable to these countries, then, instead of collecting 100 per cent of the tariff rates on goods imported in foreign bottoms, we shall collect only 95 per cent, which is the rate fixed for goods imported in American bottoms.

But suppose that this provision in the bill takes the place of the conventions which we have in effect. Then I call the attention of the committee to subsection 1, which provides that in addition to the 100 per cent there shall be collected a discriminating duty of 10 per cent on all goods imported in vessels of countries where they do not pay the same rate of duty as is imposed on goods imported in vessels of the United States. The language is—

That a discriminating duty of 10 per cent ad valorem, in addition to the duties imposed by law, shall be levied, collected, and laid on all goods, wares, or merchandise which shall be imported in vessels not of the United States—

With this exception:

But this discriminating duty shall not apply to goods, wares, or merchandise which shall be imported in vessels not of the United States entitled at the time of such importation by treaty or convention or act of Congress to be entered in the ports of the United States on payment of the same duties as shall then be payable on goods, wares, and merchandise imported in vessels of the United States.

In other words, if we do not admit goods imported in foreign bottoms at the same rate of duty as we impose on goods imported in American bottoms, then we are to add a 10 per cent discriminating duty against them.

The gentleman from Washington [Mr. HUMPHREY] has called attention to a few of the conventions—we have many of these conventions—which have been entered into because of this discriminating duty of 10 per cent, which has been carried in the law for many, many years. In the first place, we put on a discriminating duty of 10 per cent against goods imported in foreign bottoms in order to force foreign countries to admit our goods taken to those countries in American bottoms at the same rate as goods taken in their bottoms. It was the custom in the old days for a country to provide that goods imported in their own bottoms should pay a less rate of duty than goods brought in foreign bottoms. That was a discrimination against us, and hence we put into the law, years ago, a discriminating rate of duty of 10 per cent against all Nations which did not admit goods in our vessels at the same rates as goods transported in their own vessels.

Now comes a proposition designed to fool the American people—designed to fool even so learned a gentleman as the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBSON], who is noted for his belligerency and his advocacy of the sea. Even he has been misled.

This bill as it stands now, of course, will never be enacted into law. Since I called the attention of the House to this subject in general debate the gentlemen in charge of the bill have been looking into it. While the gentleman from Alabama is too proud to admit amendments from this side of the House or to accept suggestions from this side of the House, he and I both know that this provision in the bill will be changed in the distinguished body at the other end of the Capitol and that all the pretense that you are attempting here to give a discrimination in favor of the American merchant marine will go out of the bill.

It is just a pure, calm game which has been exploded and goes up in the air. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, has all time expired on the other side?

Mr. MANN. Well, I relinquish the remainder of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. All time has expired on the side of the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, in five minutes I can not discuss all the issues that have been raised, but, as I pointed out to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] a few days ago, subsection 1 of this paragraph relates to discriminations by foreign nations against our ships. Subsection 7 relates to a discrimination in favor of our shipping by our own country. The two propositions are entirely separate and distinct.

Now, there are gentlemen who contend that if subsection J were enacted law it would mean, instead of discriminating in favor of American shipping, that we will reduce the duties on all imported goods coming into this country by foreign vessels by reason of treaty rights. I never have believed in that contention. I do not think it is a fair construction of the law; but I have in my office here letters transmitted to me by the State Department, from three of the leading maritime nations of the world, protesting against this section, because they say it is a discrimination against their vessels. Now, if the contention that is being made by gentlemen on that side of the House is correct, that goods coming from Germany, or France, or England would be admitted 5 per cent cheaper than they would if this section was removed, I can not see why the ambassadors from three great maritime nations should protest against this paragraph. It may be that the chancellors, supposed to be learned in the law of nations, supposed to be here to guard their own countries, are mistaken as to the effect of this paragraph, and that the gentlemen on that side of the House are better lawyers as to the effect on their commerce and their ships than are the chancellors, but I am inclined to think that with the weight of their protests leaning in favor of the construction that I placed on this paragraph in the opening of this debate, it is safe to say that in the end this construction will be maintained.

Now, I do not contend that the proposition presented to this House is all that might be done or all that can be done in the future, but I do say that the time has come when the American people must turn their thoughts, their energies, and their patriotism to the upbuilding of a great merchant marine. [Applause on the Democratic side.] I have never believed in a subsidy, the taxing of one man for the benefit of another. It has never been sound doctrine on this side of the House, although that side of the House proposed it at one time, but could not enact it into law. But there never has been anything in remitting taxes for the benefit of the people that was in violation of the principles held by the men of our faith. There is a vast difference between levying a tax to build up a man's interest or his industry and remitting a tax or a portion of a tax in order that he may develop and grow. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman has expired. All time has expired. The first amendment to be voted upon is the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY].

Mr. MANN. May we have the amendment reported?

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY].

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 207, line 1, after the word "or," strike out the word "domestic" and insert after the word "thereon," in line 7, the following: "All acts or parts of acts inconsistent with this subsection are hereby repealed."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. TREADWAY].

The amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will report the amendment offered by the gentleman from Washington [Mr. HUMPHREY].

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 207, strike out all of subsection 7.

The amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

J. Subsection 7. That a discount of 5 per cent on all duties imposed by this act shall be allowed on such goods, wares, and merchandise as shall be imported in vessels admitted to registration under the laws of the United States.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I suggest to the gentleman that all debate on this section has been closed by order of the committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

K. The privilege of purchasing supplies from public warehouses, free of duty, and from bonded manufacturing warehouses, free of duty or of internal-revenue tax, as the case may be, shall be extended, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe, to the vessels of war of any nation in ports of the United States which may reciprocate such privileges toward the vessels of war of the United States in its ports.

Mr. MOORE. I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the debate on this paragraph close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, I make this motion merely for the purpose of having read from the Clerk's desk an article from the Marine Journal.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

A GOOD MEASURE RUINED—THE PREFERENTIAL DUTY GRANTED TO FOREIGN-BUILT AND PROBABLY FOREIGN-OWNED SHIPS.

That historic Democratic capacity for blundering is in painful evidence again, in the amendment hastily adopted by the House Democratic caucus to the preferential-duty paragraph of the Underwood tariff bill. As originally drawn and introduced by Chairman Underwood, this clause was sound and just, following the policy of the fathers of the Government and granting a remission of 5 per cent of the customs duties on goods, wares, or merchandise imported "in vessels built in the United States" and "wholly the property of a citizen or citizens thereof." This would have given employment to American shipyards and all the industries dependent on them, and would have created a real American merchant marine.

But the House Democratic caucus, at the instance of Representatives of the ship-hating Middle West, changed the paragraph so that the advantage of the preferential duty is bestowed upon "all vessels entitled to be registered under the American laws." The Panama Canal act of last August admits to American registry for the foreign trade any foreign-built vessel properly seaworthy and not more than 5 years old. Such a vessel would be held to be American owned by a corporation organized in the United States, though the bulk of the stock might be held and the real control exercised by foreigners.

Under these provisions it will be possible for the Hamburg-American or any other wholly foreign concern to set up a dummy corporation in this country, transfer a certain number of its foreign ships to American register, order a few ship officers to become naturalized, and under our easy-going laws claim the 5 per cent remission of customs duties, every cent of which in such a case would go out of our country to Europe. In time of war these foreign-built ships would be promptly taken out of American register and perhaps placed at the disposal of our enemies, as was done by the Hamburg-American Co. with some of its fast New York liners in the War with Spain.

The Democratic Party has fought long and successfully the subsidizing of real American-owned and American-built ships, but in this amended paragraph of the Underwood tariff bill the Democratic leaders are frankly giving, if not a subsidy, a very great advantage of 5 per cent of the customs duty of the foreign-built ships, nominally under the American plan but actually owned and controlled by the great shipping combinations of Europe. This unconscionable amendment will array against the Underwood bill the ship owners and builders of this country, in addition to the manufacturers and merchants, who are already so earnestly opposing it. The Marine Journal states its deliberate opinion that the preferential-duty paragraph as now bungled is worse than worthless for the development of a genuine American ocean fleet.

The CHAIRMAN. If there be no objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

L. That whenever any vessel laden with merchandise, in whole or in part subject to duty, has been sunk in any river, harbor, bay, or waters subject to the jurisdiction of the United States, and within its limits, for the period of two years, and is abandoned by the owner thereof, any person who may raise such vessel shall be permitted to bring any merchandise recovered therefrom into the port nearest to the place where such vessel was so raised free from the payment of any duty thereupon, but under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto close in five minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Chairman, I desire to consume these five minutes in referring to the economic conditions of the South, particularly as they exist in Alabama, as raised in connection with the remarks of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]. I will not stop to refer to the handicap with which the South started out following the war, the impoverishment by the war, and the tremendous handicap of the reconstruction period, but I would like to call attention to this fact: The tariff policies of the Nation for the last 40 years have been a direct handicap upon the South along with other agricultural sections. This indirect system of taxation provides practically for the collection of about $309,000,000 annually in our customhouses. Now, it is estimated that there is collected from the people of the United States by the protected interests about $1,600,000,000, or six to one in excess of the tax that goes to the Government. Now, there are exceptions, but I make the broad statement that the activities of these great protected interests lie in the great cities, and that the net result has been that the taxing system of the United States for 45 years has given a stupendous advantage to the cities as against the rural sections, and the South is entirely rural.

Again, let me point to the question of the evolution of our financial policy, if you can say we have anything worthy of the name of a financial policy. We have developed a system under which the strong men control the financial facilities of the Nation. They can finance themselves—the powerful banker, the great manufacturer, the great merchant, those who live in the cities. But there is no such provision for the small men; no such provision for the farmers. The Federal banking law we have on the statute books actually forbids a national bank to loan money on a farm, the best security in the world.

Now, again, take the vital question of transportation. It has been the practice—and still is, in spite of the work done by the Interstate Commerce Commission—for the railroads to give reduced rates on carload lots when the goods are destined for the great cities. They are hauled through the little towns to the big cities, hundreds of miles farther on, at a cheaper rate than they are allowed to stop at the little towns.

The net result of this whole combination in the last 40 or 50 years has been a tremendous advantage for the great cities as against the rural sections. Therefore, in spite of our fair land and rich soil, the great trend of our population, unnaturally, for 40 years has been from the country toward the city. Now, the South is altogether rural, so that all the public policies of the Nation have kept the South down. In spite of these tremendous handicaps, the South in the last few years has made greater proportional progress than any other section of America; greater progress, indeed, than any other section of the world. But I wish to emphasize, Mr. Chairman, that the South is the promised land of the future, and I hope the gentlemen here will take this message to investment capital and to the young men of their districts. There is, indeed, a combination of conditions in the South that promises for the future—in the near future—a greater development than the world has ever seen.

Take the question of cotton, which the gentleman has very aptly referred to. The Gulf Stream flows not far from the coast, and with its warm current raises vast volumes of moisture into the air. Our continent is like a great funnel leading up from the Gulf Stream, the Appalachians on the one hand and the Rockies on the other, with the Great Lakes at the north, which are cold the year around. In the spring and early summer these conditions cause the great volumes of moisture from the Gulf Stream to pass over the South and on up the Mississippi Valley. This moisture is precipitated in its course and makes the cotton region in the South and the corn belt of the Middle West. Now, in the fall the reverse current sets in and we get the dry weather for maturing the cotton and gathering it. There are rich lands in other parts of the world, Mr. Chairman, but there is no place on earth where you will find a repetition of this meteorological condition. Consequently you can say it is decreed that the South for all time is the home of production of the primary staple of clothing for all the world. Governments have tried in every other land to produce it on a large scale and have failed. Fig leaves are out of fashion; hides, furs, silks, and wool are limited to a small fraction of the world's demand, while there can be some choice in foods, and for food man is adaptable, there is only one substance upon which all nations must depend for their clothes; and just as the world develops, the population increases, and civilization extends, just so the demand for cotton will grow.

I wish to complete the brief remarks I was making on the question of the economic conditions in the South and the great future of that section. I will insert here those remarks, and will, at the end of my remarks to follow, add an article of mine appearing in the current issue of the magazine, National Waterways.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] referred to the question of raising cotton. I finished my time at the point where I was pointing out that nature has decreed that the South has, and is to have, as long as the natural laws continue, the practical monopoly of the production of cotton, the great world staple of clothing.

Now, then, when the South comes to manufacture the finished product she then will control the greatest necessity of all human life. This will give to the South the economic supremacy of the world. This illustrates the general condition in that famed section. Take other raw materials; take those of construction; take the iron ores. We have in the South deposits in larger quantities, more easily mined than anywhere on this continent, in places mined by steam shovel. Take timber; we have the largest share of the remaining timber east of the Sierras. In cement we have deposits equal to the demand of the solar system for a thousand years. In salt and sulphur we have no rival. In stone, granites, and marbles, in clays, in aluminum, in phosphates, the same general condition exists. And so it goes.

Now, take the next element necessary in the development of an industry—power. On the Tennessee River there is 500,000 undeveloped horsepower and on the Coosa 200,000. The bulk of the remaining undeveloped water powers of the Nation are in the South.

Take the other source of power—coal; we have coal of high grade, including coking coal, in larger quantity and more easily mined than in any other part of this country or of the world.

The raw materials and the power are together. I wish gentlemen would mark that. When they produce the finished products in the Middle West and Pennsylvania, they have to transport the coal and the coke and other raw materials from three to five hundred miles to get them together. In the South they are right together, the raw materials and the power, side by side. The coal field and the water power are right in the cotton field. You can build your industry on top of the power, with the raw material all around you.

Now take transportation. Twenty-one thousand out of the total 27,000 miles of navigable waterways in the United States are in the South. These waterways lead directly from the centers of production down to tidewater, only short distances away; and the tidewater is the Gulf and the lower Atlantic, which lead directly toward the Caribbean and the Panama Canal, the future center of world distribution of the world's great staples. Thus, Mr. Chairman, our advantages of location and advantages for cheap transportation are on a level with our advantages for cheap production. These are the great factors that determine industrial, commercial, and financial supremacy. Possessing them all as no other section in the world or in the history of the world, we must look upon the South as the veritable land of promise, and we invite the enterprising citizens of all sections to join us in our matchless task of empire building.

Mr. Chairman, our advantages in the South are not simply material. The wave of commercialism which for 20 years has swept the other sections has missed the South as it lay in its poverty, its sackcloth and ashes, leaving ideals more in control. Our people are of American origin, over 95 per cent of old Anglo-Saxon stock, with ancestors going back to the Revolution, who live in the country and in small towns, and have escaped the degeneracy that is growing up in our great cities. [Laughter.] The distribution of the specific for degeneracy is proportional to the density of population, and it is true historically that the growth of great cities and centers of population entail degeneracy that threatens the liberties and in the end tends to undermine the vitality of a nation. The South is endeavoring to maintain her character, her lofty ideals, as well as to develop her material resources, and in the great problems and constructive tasks before the Nation and before the race the South is our greatest asset. [Applause.]

I will add here, under leave to print, an article of mine appearing in the current number of the National Waterways Magazine, of Washington, setting forth in more detail the opportunities of my native State of Alabama.

Up to the present time American industrial development has been chiefly confined to meeting requirements of the home market. This is largely due to the relatively undeveloped condition of the country and its natural resources and the very rapid growth of the home market itself. It is partly due to the high protective tariff policy, which, while it shuts out the industries of the world from the home market, also tends to exclude home industries from the world's markets. These conditions are now undergoing fundamental changes. American industries have assumed large proportions and are fast outgrowing the American market. To continue a steady natural growth they must now seek the markets of the world.

The impending revision of the high protective tariff rates will encourage this expansion. It may be said that America's industry is now entering upon a second period of its history, when it must go out and win and hold the markets of the world in the face of the competition of the industries of all other nations standing within their intrenched position of present possession.

The first determined effort on the part of American industries will be inaugurated with the completion of the Panama Canal, and will have for its objective the markets of South America and of the Pacific. The outcome of the struggle for supremacy will depend upon two prime factors: First, cheapness of production of the world staples and, second, cheapness of transportation from the country of production to foreign markets. It is no depreciation of the other great industrial centers of America to say that both of these prime factors are destined to be realized along the banks of Alabama's waterways, which, as sources of both cheap power and cheap transportation, will insure American supremacy in the markets of the world.

Two factors enter into the question of cheapness of production, assuming always that the question of labor is adjustable. The first is the assembling of raw materials, and the second is the availability of power for their manufacture. The first and foremost world staple is clothing, for which the masses are dependent upon cotton.

It scarcely needs to be pointed out that Alabama is located almost in the center of the cotton area of the South, which produces over two-thirds of all the commercial cotton of the world. The chief competitors of southern mills are to-day the mills of New England and the mills of Europe, both of which are compelled to bring their raw cotton from the South by long stages of transportation by rail or by rail and water combined. Therefore, other conditions being equal, the South must necessarily become the world's center for the production of cotton goods.

Construction materials, chiefly iron and cement, compose the second class of great world staples. Of these iron will be the center of competition; for its production two principal raw materials are necessary—ore deposits and coal. These two elements of raw material, together with the limestone for fluxing, are found side by side in the Alabama region, and are separated by hundreds of miles in all other competitive sections.

It is not necessary to describe the vast iron deposits of Alabama and the cheapness with which they can be mined. There is no parallel in the world, except in distant inland sections, like that of Lake Superior, whence the ore has to be transported long distances to the centers of industry.

Thus from the standpoint of assembling raw materials for the world's greatest universal staples of clothing and construction Alabama must be conceded the very first place in the United States and in the world at large.

The second factor in cheapness of production is the availability of power. Power may be divided into two classes—that derived from oil, coal, or gas, and that derived from water power. The coal deposits of Alabama are among the largest and most accessible of all the coal deposits of the world, covering an area of over 4,000 square miles. The thickness of the coal ranges from 50 feet down; over 300 square miles have an available thickness of 30 feet or more; 350 square miles a thickness of 20 to 30 feet; 600 square miles a thickness of 10 to 20 feet; and large areas from 2 to 10 feet.

It is difficult to estimate the total available tonnage, but it can be stated to exceed 75,000,000,000 tons, of which less than one-half of 1 per cent has been mined. Nearly all of this coal is of good coking quality. Specimens from the mines of Belle Ellen, Blocton, and Pratt City, which have been analyzed by the Government, show an unusually large percentage of fixed carbon, with an unusually small percentage of ash, moisture, sulphur, and other impurities, giving an extraordinarily high calorific rating, exceeding 14,000 British thermal units. Natural gas of an unusually high grade is found in great volume in this region, and every indication points to oil deposits also. Therefore in these sources of power Alabama can not be put in the second place to any other section.

In the resource of water power this region stands almost unparalleled in the whole world. Mussel Shoals alone will supply not less than 100,000 horsepower, and the tributaries of the Tennessee above Mussel Shoals will probably furnish as much more. (These figures, which are much smaller than published estimates, are those given by the United States Engineers for a dependable power throughout the year. The available power can be greatly increased by the use of reservoirs.) Rivaling the Tennessee is the Coosa River, with 200,000 horsepower available. Next to these two come the water powers of the Warrior River, notably that planned for Lock 17, a short distance from Birmingham. With high-potential transmission, the water powers of the Tennessee, Coosa, and Warrior are available for this whole region.

Taking account of both sources of power, which react advantageously on each other, this region stands without rival anywhere in the world, while the great raw materials are on the spot. Coal and water power are located in the cotton field and alongside the iron mine, a combination which has never been even approximated, and apparently never can be approximated, anywhere else. Cheap water transportation for ore on the Great Lakes can never overcome Alabama's inherent advantage. Both in assembling the raw materials and in supplying the power for their manufacture—the two factors in cheapness of production—the waterway region of Alabama stands supreme. I do not think that anyone who looks into the question will seriously challenge my statement that the conditions for ultimate cheapness of production for the great world staples place Alabama in a class by itself and unparalleled anywhere in the world.

The other great factor in winning the markets of the whole world will be cheapness of transportation from the centers of production to tidewater and from tidewater to the markets of the world. In the fierce competition that will result the inherent advantages of water transportation over land transportation will be a determining factor; water transportation uses a level, almost frictionless fluid of great weight, and does not involve the comparatively heavy friction of solids on solids. For heavy transportation, therefore, water must always offer an inherent advantage.

The question of transportation from tidewater to the markets of the world gives a great advantage to the Alabama section. With the completion of the Panama Canal the center of distribution of world staples will soon shift from the English Channel to the Caribbean Sea. Alabama will thus have tidewater outlets closer to the center of distribution than any other competitive center of production. Her advantage, however, will come in the cheapness of transportation from her centers of production to tidewater. There is no comparison with those distant inland centers which at present supply the home market. The Alabama centers are located close to tidewater to begin with, and will have the benefit of water transportation for even the short distance that intervenes. The Alabama, Tombigbee, Warrior, and Coosa Rivers will insure slack-water navigation straight from the centers of production to tidewater. Next to these will be the Tennessee River, which should have an outlet to the Gulf by way of one of the three rivers mentioned—the Tombigbee, Warrior, or Coosa—as well as by the Mississippi.

The development of navigation on the Warrior River is now largely an accomplished fact. The Federal Government has appropriated almost $9,000,000 toward this work, and 16 locks have been completed. With the completion of Lock 17, work on which is already begun, slack-water navigation will be extended to within a few miles of Birmingham, and I hope that before long it will reach the city itself. The Birmingham region may now start upon the realization of its destiny, which is to make supreme its reign over the foreign commerce of the world.

The development of the Coosa River is still backward, but it is now receiving the attention of the Government. The development of the Tennessee River has long been under consideration. This year's rivers and harbors bill carries an appropriation of $1,105,000 for the Tennessee River and $1,338,500 for the Black Warrior, Warrior, and Tombigbee Rivers.

Since these waterways are so intimately associated with the future of American supremacy in the world's markets, they should receive full and immediate consideration by Congress. The Panama Canal is so near completion that the world's struggle for the markets of South America and the Pacific is almost upon us. Our present largest centers of industry—the Pittsburgh-Cleveland-Chicago region—are advantageously located for the home market, but it is of the utmost national importance that the Alabama centers should be speedily developed as we enter the struggle for the markets of the world.

It is an interesting fact that the development of navigation on all three of these great streams goes hand in hand with the development of vast water powers. Their development, therefore, should be undertaken along the lines of a wise, permanent, national policy, comprising both navigation and water power, and the Alabama waterways should bring about the standardization of our national policy for navigable streams.

The recent appropriation for Lock 17 on the Warrior River provides for the acquisition of a site for future development of power, and secures to the Government the full title and riparian rights in that locality. Henceforward it would be a wise policy for the Government to secure such title and riparian rights, and provide sites for power plants in all cases where the development of large power is involved in improvements for navigation.

In view of the fact that the whole question is rapidly becoming acute in all sections of the country, the time is ripe for establishing the principles under which the States should act in the case of waterways not navigable, and under which the Federal Government should act in the case of navigable streams; also, under which the Federal Government and States should jointly act in the latter case, and under which private individuals should act in conjunction with one or the other or both of these governments. It is time to establish by law a Federal commission on public works and conservation, or, at least, a bureau on these questions in the Department of the Interior.

Any permanent policy should take account of the following principles:

First. It is not wise for the Government to go into the system of production or the system of distribution, but it should confine itself chiefly to the system of regulation, such differentiation being in line with the evolution of all living organisms of a high type. It is when the Government is free from the burdens of production and distribution proper that it can best fulfill the important and vital function of regulation.

Second. It should be borne in mind that water, like natural light and air, belongs to the people at large and should not be monopolized for individual benefit. Every policy of common law or statute law should insure the ultimate public good, and at the same time protect the people in their property rights.

Third. The Federal Government, without violating the principle first laid down, can and should encourage the development of natural resources, particularly the water powers which are so intimately associated with the development of navigation. We should establish a uniform policy of cooperation between the Federal Government, the State government, and corporations and individuals in this development, the general principle being Government aid with reasonable regulation, and with the refunding, from the earnings of the improvements, of the original expenditure. I am inclined to think that to enable the people to proceed without having to wait upon large corporations we could very properly provide a large Federal fund for cooperating in power development on navigable streams along the general lines of the irrigation fund, which would never be exhausted and would be available for projects in the order of their importance as recommended by proper Government officers or by the bureau or commission referred to after its establishment.

I can not help adding a word of recommendation to young men seeking an outlet for their energies to go to Alabama and locate along these three great streams within a reasonable distance of their water power and navigation, because the attention of the whole country and the whole world will soon be directed to this region, following the completion of the Panama Canal. When once the world's attention is so directed, the unparalleled advantages for cheap production through the proximity of raw materials in vast abundance and of coal and water power in unlimited store, lying close to tidewater and with water transportation all the way to the markets of the world, will cause a development of industry and an enhancement of values so rapid that even the records of growth in the Pittsburgh, Cleveland, and Chicago sections will be far surpassed. In the matter of land values for farming purposes there will be a similar advance. Lands capable of the highest forms of production are now obtainable for a " song "—lands suitable not only for the raising of cotton, but also for corn, forage, live stock, including hogs and cattle, poultry, dairy products, garden truck, and fruits.

I would not undertake to name all of the promising points for location and investment, for almost all parts of Alabama would be good for investment at present values, but along the three waterways I might mention, as now ready for young men's energy, the following: Near the Tennessee River, Guntersville, Huntsville, Decatur, Athens, Florence, Sheffield, and Tuscumbia; along the Coosa and Alabama, Gadsden, Anniston, Attalla, Talladega, Childersburg, Wetumpka, Tallassee, Montgomery, and Selma; and along the Warrior and Tombigbee Rivers, Birmingham, Bessemer, Jasper, Cordova, Tuscaloosa, Eutaw, Demopolis, and Mobile.

Some day I expect to see the banks of the Tennessee River one solid city for 75 miles up and down on both sides, in the vicinity of Mussel Shoals. Likewise I expect to see Gadsden the center of industry for many miles around. I expect to see the region from Birmingham to Jasper and from Birmingham to Tuscaloosa built up like the region about Pittsburgh, while prosperous cities will spring up at short intervals all the way down the Warrior River. I expect some day to see Mobile the greatest shipping port in America, since it is the natural outlet to tidewater of the Alabama region, which is destined to give America the commercial supremacy of the world.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

M. That all articles manufactured in whole or in part of imported materials, or of materials subject to internal-revenue tax, and intended for exportation without being charged with duty and without having an internal-revenue stamp affixed thereto, shall, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, in order to be so manufactured and exported, be made and manufactured in bonded warehouses similar to those known and designated in Treasury Regulations as bonded warehouses, class 6: Provided, That the manufacturer of such articles shall first give satisfactory bonds for the faithful observance of all the provisions of law and of such regulations as shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided further, That the manufacture of distilled spirits from grain, starch, molasses, or sugar, including all dilutions or mixtures of them or either of them, shall not be permitted in such manufacturing warehouses.

Whenever goods manufactured in any bonded warehouse established under the provisions of the preceding paragraph shall be exported directly therefrom or shall be duly laden for transportation and immediate exportation under the supervision of the proper officer who shall be duly designated for that purpose, such goods shall be exempt from duty and from the requirements relating to revenue stamps.

Any materials used in the manufacture of such goods and any packages, coverings, vessels, brands, and labels used in putting up the same may, under the regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury, be conveyed without the payment of revenue tax or duty into any bonded manufacturing warehouse, and imported goods may, under the aforesaid regulations, be transferred without the exaction of duty from any bonded warehouse into any bonded manufacturing warehouse; but this privilege shall not be held to apply to implements, machinery, or apparatus to be used in the construction or repair of any bonded manufacturing warehouse or for the prosecution of the business carried on therein.

No articles or materials received into such bonded manufacturing warehouse shall be withdrawn or removed therefrom except for direct shipment and exportation or for transportation and immediate exportation in bond to foreign countries or to the Philippine Islands under the supervision of the officer duly designated therefor by the collector of the port, who shall certify to such shipment and exportation, or ladening for transportation, as the case may be, describing the articles by their mark or otherwise, the quantity, the date of exportation, and the name of the vessel: Provided, That the waste material or by-products incident to the processes of manufacture in said bonded warehouses may be withdrawn for domestic consumption on the payment of duty equal to the duty which would be assessed and collected by law if such waste or by-products were imported from a foreign country. All labor performed and services rendered under these provisions shall be under the supervision of a duly designated officer of the customs and at the expense of the manufacturer.

A careful account shall be kept by the collector of all merchandise delivered by him to any bonded manufacturing warehouse, and a sworn monthly return, verified by the customs officers in charge, shall be made by the manufacturer containing a detailed statement of all imported merchandise used by him in the manufacture of exported articles.

Before commencing business the proprietor of any manufacturing warehouse shall file with the Secretary of the Treasury a list of all the articles intended to be manufactured in such warehouse, and state the formula of manufacture and the names and quantities of the ingredients to be used therein.

Articles manufactured under these provisions may be withdrawn under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe for transportation and delivery into any bonded warehouse at an exterior port for the sole purpose of immediate export therefrom.

The provisions of Revised Statutes 3433 shall, so far as may be practicable, apply to any bonded manufacturing warehouse established under this act and to the merchandise conveyed therein.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, before the gentleman begins I would like to know how many gentlemen desire to speak on this paragraph.

Mr. VARE. Mr. Chairman, I would like to be heard for a short time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. How much time does the gentleman desire?

Mr. VARE. Less than five minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then, Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto be limited to eight minutes, five minutes to be controlled by the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN] and three minutes by the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. VARE].

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Chairman, I have listened with a great deal of interest to what the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBSON] said about the splendid and unlimited resources of the South. I fully agree with him about the bright and encouraging future ahead of that favored section of our great country, but I want to take this occasion to call attention to the wonderful and marvelous growth of the South in the past 30 years and place in the enduring records of this Nation a summary of that great march of material, commercial, and manufacturing development, taken from the Baltimore Manufacturers' Record, an agency for good in advertising, promoting, and encouraging the industrial growth of the South. In the last 30 years under a Republican protective tariff system or policy the South increased the annual value of its mineral products from $18,226,000 to $385,000,000, or at the rate of 2,016 per cent, as compared with the rate of 381 per cent for the balance of the country. In 30 years the South has increased annually its output of pig iron from 448,978 tons to 3,054,980, or at the rate of 580.4 per cent. It multiplied its capital invested in manufactures more than ten times, from $333,000,000 to $3,500,000,000, and the value of its manufactured products more than six times, from $662,840,000 to $3,900,000,000, or at the rate of 526 per cent, as against an increase in the balance of the country of 323 per cent.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. AUSTIN. Yes.

Mr. BARTHOLDT. Was not all that progress and development achieved under Republican tariff legislation?

Mr. AUSTIN. Under the Republican protective-tariff system; and when I listened to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBSON] speak of the inexhaustible supply of coal and iron ore in the South I wondered why his party thought it necessary to go, under this bill, to foreign lands for our coal, iron ore, zinc, and other southern minerals. I wondered if he did not in his own mind believe that the best interest of the South was to continue a Republican protective-tariff system that would compel the American furnaces to use American iron ore as against Cuban iron ore, Spanish iron ore, Swedish iron ore, Mexican zinc, French bauxite, and coal from Nova Scotia and other portions of the world. [Applause on the Republican side.] When the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HEFLIN] read a single letter from a cotton manufacturer in the South, when there are 850 cotton mills, the press of the city of Washington was publishing the fact that Senator OVERMAN, from North Carolina, had gone to the White House to protest against the low duties on cotton manufactured goods carried in this bill.

Mr. Chairman, I believe that the South will suffer a great wrong by the enactment of this bill. Had the delegates in the Baltimore convention listened to and heeded a majority of those delegates and the wishes of a majority of the Democrats in this land, they would have nominated and elected CHAMP CLARK President of the United States—the noblest Roman of them all. [Applause.] Had he been in the White House today, or since the 4th of March, in my opinion, we would never have been called upon to vote for such a tariff bill as this, which is against the material interest and development of our beloved Southland. [Applause.]

I offer in conclusion the statement from a recent issue of the Manufacturers' Record, of Baltimore:

SUMMONS OF THE SOUTH TO THE WORLD.

BALTIMORE, MD., March 29, 1913.

In summary of its special articles in this week's issue, designed to show the importance of the South in the Nation's development, the Manufacturers' Record says:

"The South summons the world to share in the making of the wealth that is to come to it within the next generation. The call is emphatic, because no other equal area on the globe offers as great opportunities of many kinds for the productive and remunerative application to natural resources of the energies of mind, muscle, and money; no other equal area has such a record as the South of a generation of achievement as a guaranty of greater attainments in the future.

"Handicapped by conditions beyond its control for 15 or 20 years, in which the rest of the country made extraordinary progress under the high-pressure influences of the opening of the era of organization of industry on a great scale, the South, once permitted to resume its farming, mining, and manufacturing activities interrupted by war, has in the past 30 years advanced to a point beyond that reached by the whole country in 1880. With one-third of the total area of the United States and with a population less than two-thirds that of the country in that year, the South is actually far ahead of the United States of 30 years ago on many leading lines, and, in proportion to population, on practically every line.

"Its invitation to the enterprise and financial and industrial instincts of the world is, therefore, grounded in tasks still to be accomplished gauged by what has already been done.

"Since 1880 the South, the section of 16 States, including Missouri and Oklahoma, has—

"Mined 1,657,173,560 tons of coal, increasing its annual output from 7,002,254 tons, less than one-tenth of the country's production, to 131,970,000 tons, or nearly one-quarter of the total, representing a rate of advance of 1,784.7 per cent.

"Mined 126,529,584 tons of iron ore, increasing its annual output from 702,515 tons to 5,736,000 tons, or at the rate of 715.9 per cent.

"Mined 41,400,000 tons of phosphate rock, increasing its annual output from 211,377 tons to 3,400,000 tons.

"Produced 802,200,000 barrels of petroleum, increasing the flow from 179,000 barrels to 84,800,000 barrels."

Increased its annual production of natural gas from a few million cubic feet to 290,000,000,000 cubic feet, nearly 57 per cent of the total output of the country.

Changed radically the status of the sulphur market of the world by exploiting beds of nearly pure sulphur and increasing the country's output from a few hundred tons to nearly 790,000 tons a year.

Brought within its limits the center of world production of lead and zinc.

Become the main source in this country of bauxite for the manufacture of aluminum.

Increased the annual value of its mineral production from $18,226,000 to $385,700,000, or at the rate of 2,016.2 per cent, compared with a rate of 381.5 per cent in the rest of the country.

Harvested 31,875,816,000 bushels of corn, wheat, and oats, and advanced to an annual production of 1,404,200,000 bushels of grain.

Marketed 305,000,000 bales of cotton, more than doubling the annual crop of the staple, involving the production since 1880 of 120,000,000 tons of cotton seed.

Expanded its annual production of rice from 2,254,000 bushels to 24,000,000 bushels.

Increased up to 1910 its agricultural capital (its investments in lands, buildings, implements, and live stock) from $2,762,077,000 to $10,961,866,000, or by $8,199,789,000, equal to 296.5 per cent, while the rest of the country had an increase at the rate of 221.4 per cent, there being a like divergence in favor of the South between the rates of increase in the value of agricultural products.

Cut 371,184,000,000 feet of lumber, increasing the annual output from 3,800,000,000 feet to 20,000,000,000 feet, or at the rate of 426.3 per cent, and marking an advance in the annual value of forest products from $75,215,000 to $652,153,000, or at the rate of 767 per cent, against an increase in the rest of the country at the rate of only 74.4 per cent.

Made 66,222,888 tons of pig iron, increasing the annual output from 448,978 tons to 3,054,980 tons, or at the rate of 580.4 per cent.

Made 145,940,905 tons of coke, increasing from 374,000 tons to 7,974,000 tons, or at the rate of 2,032 per cent.

Added 11,172,000 spindles and 237,500 looms to the equipment of its cotton mills, the annual consumption of the staple by them increasing from 111,770,000 pounds, or less than 15 per cent of the country's consumption, to 1,319,708,000 pounds, or more than half the country's consumption.

Practically created the cottonseed crushing industry, now having an annual output valued at about $150,000,000.

Developed its Portland cement output into an industry of 11,000,000 barrels annually.

Multiplied its capital invested in manufacturing more than ten times, from $330,000,000 to $3,500,000,000, and the value of its manufactured products more than six times, from $662,840,000 to $3,900,000,000, or at the rate of 526 per cent, against an increase in such value in the rest of the country of 323.4 per cent.

These notable developments called for the building of 66,064 miles of railroad, an increase at the rate of 265.6 per cent, compared with 92,668 new mileage in the rest of the country and a rate of 135.5 per cent increase.

They were reflected in exports to foreign lands to the value of $13,629,518,000 sent through southern ports, and a sum equal to 77 per cent of the value of foreign exports originating directly or indirectly in the South, the exports through southern ports increasing at the rate of 190.5 per cent, while those through ports in the rest of the country increased at the rate of 151.3 per cent.

Results of the developments appear in a trebling of the estimated true value of all property in the South, indicated in the addition of $1,918,633,000 to the aggregate resources of national banks, or an increase at the rate of 988.5 per cent; of $985,943,000 to the amount of individual deposits in such banks, or at the rate of 1,348.3 per cent; of $1,146,396,000 to the amount of individual deposits in other financial institutions, or at the rate of 976.1 per cent; and of $2,132,339,000 to the amount of individual deposits in all financial institutions, or at the rate of 1,118.9 per cent.

These are striking facts of progress; but they are merely to be regarded as sample exhibits spurring to far greater achievements. They demonstrate what may be done with the assets of the South in making the most of that greatest asset of the Nation, the task to which the South summons the world.

It will not be long before the forests of the South will be the main reliance of the country for much of its lumber supply. These forests are to be handled wisely with that fact in view.

Population of the United States, ever swelling in number at the rate of two million a year, is making greater and greater demands upon agriculture. The South has less than half of its 384,117,000 acres of farm land under cultivation, and has at least 100,000,000 acres more that can be made highly productive with the water drawn from wet areas and the utilization of cut-over timberlands.

Its 500,000,000,000 tons of coal, its billions of tons of iron ore, its great sulphur deposits, its phosphate rock, its rock salt, its lead and zinc and copper, its marbles and other building stones, its clays and other minerals, are still to be turned into economic values.

Nearly 240 separate kinds of manufacturing industries are the skirmishers in the battle for industrial supremacy of the world.

Who is able to let the summons be unheeded?

Mr. VARE. Mr. Chairman, in view of what the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN] has just said, I send the following letter to the Clerk's desk and ask that it be read in my time.

The Clerk read as follows:

PHILADELPHIA, May 6, 1913.

Hon. W. S. VARE,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

SIR: We have been advised that an impression prevails in Washington that the present Underwood bill is satisfactory to cotton manufacturers in this country, for the reason that few protests have been received.

We are not financially interested ourselves in New England or southern mills, but as cotton merchants we would most emphatically state that the provisions of the Underwood bill, instead of being satisfactory, are most unsatisfactory to cotton manufacturers both North and South, and particularly to the manufacturers of finer goods and finer yarns, who are already on a competitive basis under the present tariff.

Every manufacturer with whom we have discussed the situation is very blue, and very apprehensive for the future, and very much alarmed, and business is halted, as no one wishes to make any commitments in the face of the proposed tariff. We know from our own investigations that the widespread feeling of apprehension and distress is genuine, and we think it proper that the above facts be reported.

As far as our position is concerned, our business is international in its character, and if we can not sell cotton here we can easily expect to sell it abroad, so although our business interests are not seriously affected, we are not at all disinterested when we see the entire industry of cotton manufacturers so deeply stirred as they are over the proposed reduction.

I am sending the same letter to the other Representatives of Pennsylvania in the Senate and the House, with the hope that they may be able to do something to help the manufacturers in their efforts to obtain a smaller reduction than the proposed new duty on cotton yarns and cotton goods.

Yours, very truly, I. FRANKLIN MCFADDEN.

Mr. VARE. Mr. Chairman, I also send to the Clerk's desk the following article from the Philadelphia Inquirer on the falling off of the customs in that city, and ask that it be read.

The Clerk read as follows:

CUSTOMS RECEIPTS HIT BY TARIFF.

Customs receipts for the month of April show a decrease of almost $450,000 as compared with the amount collected during the corresponding month last year, according to the monthly report issued yesterday by Collector of the Port Chester W. Hill. The amount received during the month just ended was $1,206,843, while in April of 1912 $1,651,051 was the amount collected. This makes a decrease of $445,208.

While Collector Hill did not explain the great deficiency in receipts, it is believed by those in touch with the situation that the importers, instead of bringing in their goods at the present time, are storing millions of dollars' worth of foreign stuffs in the bonded warehouses, holding them there until the question of the tariff is definitely decided. Wool and sugar lead the imports among the goods now being placed in the Government's warehouses. The imports for the month, according to ship manifests, were almost as great as during April, 1912, but the goods have not yet been taken from the warehouses.

Mr. VARE. I will print also the following editorial from the Washington Times of May 2:

THE STEAM ROLLER ONCE MORE.

As an example of steam-roller methods in the most exaggerated form that has ever been demonstrated—yes, an example beyond which the fancy of man has never reached—the handling of the tariff in this current session is entitled to especial consideration.

Cannon and Aldrich, in their time, attempted nothing by way of suppressing individual opinion and imposing organization dictates that was more extreme. And their excesses were indulged in a time when there was a certain excuse for them, inasmuch as the caucus-bound organization was then the accepted and conventional thing. Nowadays that kind of thing is not regarded as necessary, as desirable, or as even excusable. The people who were most ardent critics of such methods four years ago are using them now.

The country does not feel so willing to forgive these methods as it once was. The tariff measure that is being jammed through Congress to-day represents no possible method of logical determination of proper duties. It is not free trade, it is not a consistent protective plan, it is not the old-fashioned tariff-for-revenue procedure that Democrats used to think they believed in. It is such an illogical anomaly that a new name has had to be coined for it, and so it is called a "competitive tariff." We will know more about what that means after we have seen it in operation awhile.

From the Ways and Means Committee's sittings with utterly inadequate hearings, down through the iron-clad, organization-ruled caucus, to the consideration on the House floor under rules of the most drastic sort, the tariff measure has been a demonstration of the excesses possible under the alleged reformed rules of the House, and under domination of a party that claims to be restoring the people to their right of ruling. That sort of thing "went" once when nothing better was known or demanded. But this year presents a different situation. The Progressive Party and the Republican Party have done away with the secret caucus in the House. Only the Democrats have stuck to the old method that the country has repudiated.

The same methods are being framed for putting the measure through the Senate in so far as Senate rules and traditions will permit. Party solidarity, the gagging of individual opinion, the suppression of independent action—these are the methods which have come back to us in their worst forms.

It should not be forgotten that the new tariff measure will be judged as well by the methods that forced it into the statute books as by the details of its construction and the results it shall produce.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn, and the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

N. That the works of manufacturers engaged in smelting or refining, or both, of ores and crude metals may upon the giving of satisfactory bonds be designated as bonded smelting warehouses. Ores or crude metals may be removed from the vessel or other vehicle in which imported, or from a bonded warehouse, into a bonded smelting warehouse without the payment of duties thereon and there smelted or refined, or both, together with other ores or crude metals of home or foreign production: Provided, That the several charges against such bonds may be canceled upon the exportation or delivery to a bonded manufacturing warehouse established under section M of this section of the actual amount of metal produced from the smelting or refining, or both, of such ores or crude metals: And provided further, That said metal may be withdrawn for domestic consumption or transferred to a bonded customs warehouse and withdrawn therefrom upon the payment of the duties chargeable against it in that condition: Provided further, That all labor performed and services rendered pursuant to this section shall be under the supervision of an officer of the customs, to be appointed by the Secretary of the Treasury and at the expense of the manufacturer: Provided further, That all regulations for the carrying out of this section shall be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike out the last word.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this section, N, be limited to five minutes.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Chairman, more than anything else I want to offer my sympathy to my colleagues here on the minority side from the city of Philadelphia, who are taking the passage of this bill so much to heart. I do not see why they should worry, but they indeed are worried and a great many of the Members on this side are worried. I represent a city district, one that has also some large manufacturing industries in it, some of the greatest in the country; but since the November election, Mr. Chairman, I have been satisfied that this law or a law similar to the one about to be enacted would pass the Congress of the United States. The people of this country by their action, or rather I should say in some respects by their nonaction, made it possible for this kind of a law to be passed, and knowing the program of the Democratic Party and knowing the position that they took at Baltimore and the position that they took in the preceding Congress under the leadership of the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means of this House, I knew and my constituents knew, and they know now and have known ever since the November election, that a bill of this kind is going to pass, and I am glad for the time to come, as it has to come, when we can vote upon it and see it spread upon the statute books of this country, so that the people can see that this free-trade law will not bring happiness, joy, and prosperity, but, instead, want, misery, and suffering. I yield the balance of my time to the distinguished gentleman from Philadelphia [Mr. MOORE].

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] is recognized for one and a half minutes.

Mr. MOORE. How much time?

The CHAIRMAN. One and a half minutes.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Chairman, in response to this unprovoked assault from my friend from Missouri [Mr. DYER], I desire to say that I am in hearty sympathy with everything that he has said. I have been as firmly convinced as he confesses himself to be that this bill would go through. There has never been any doubt in my mind about that, and if there had been any doubt at the beginning of this session of Congress, that doubt has now been completely removed. I am delighted to have this opportunity to say that the Democratic leadership of this House has exercised a degree of patience that is highly commendable. Some of us have been a little persistent on this side in pointing out the errors in this bill. We have undertaken to prove to the people that they were foolish in putting a Democratic majority in control of the House; but I am quite content to leave this whole question to the people, and to say that in the passage of the bill we have been treated with the utmost kindness, courtesy, and liberality by the distinguished gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], the leader of the majority. [Loud applause.]

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be considered as withdrawn.

There was no objection.

The Clerk read as follows:

R. That whenever articles are exported to the United States of a class or kind made or produced in the United States, if the export or actual selling price to an importer in the United States, or the price at which such goods are consigned is less that the fair market value of the same article when sold for home consumption in the usual and ordinary course in the country whence exported to the United States at the time of its exportation to the United States, there shall, in addition to the duties otherwise established, be levied, collected, and paid on such article on its importation into the United States a special duty (or dumping duty) equal to the difference between the said export or actual selling price of the article for export or the price at which such goods are consigned and the said fair market value thereof for home consumption, provided that the said special duty shall not exceed 15 per cent ad valorem in any case and that goods whereon the duties otherwise established are equal to 50 per cent ad valorem shall be exempt from such special duty.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, there will be some debate on this proposition and some amendments. Perhaps we had better read section R through and then, without waiving any rights, return.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will ask the gentleman from Illinois if he objects to the Clerk finishing the section?

Mr. MANN. I am perfectly willing to finish the reading of section R with the right to amend any part of it.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the Clerk will finish reading section R and then return to any paragraph thereof. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Clerk read as follows:

"Export price" or "selling price" or "price at which such goods are consigned" in this section shall be held to mean and include the exporter's price for the goods, exclusive of all charges thereon after their shipment from the place whence exported directly to the United States.

The Secretary of the Treasury shall make such rules and regulations as are necessary for the carrying out of the provisions of this section and for the enforcement thereof.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Does the gentleman desire to make an arrangement about time?

Mr. MANN. I am perfectly willing to do so.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will first report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 216, line 15, after the word "thereof," insert the following: "Provided, That in ascertaining the fair market value of foreign goods, as specified in this paragraph, the Secretary of the Treasury shall be assisted by a nonpartisan tariff commission to be appointed by the President."

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I make the point of order that this is——

Mr. MANN. What is the point of order?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That it is not germane to this section.

Mr. MANN. Well, I would like to be heard upon the point of order. Mr. Chairman, the paragraph in the bill, which is one feature of the bill that is purely a protective-tariff provision——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman I believe it will take more time probably to hear him, and I withdraw the point of order——

Mr. MANN. That is not good, of course. [Laughter.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. And will agree with him in regard to the time for debate.

Mr. MANN. How much time is wanted over here on this dumping clause? We desire 20 minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that debate on this section be limited to 30 minutes, 20 minutes to be given to the gentleman from Illinois, 5 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER], and 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. PETERS].

Mr. MANN. With the right of gentlemen to offer amendments and have them pending.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent that debate upon this paragraph and all amendments thereto shall be limited to 30 minutes, 20 minutes to be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and 10 minutes to be controlled by himself. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FORDNEY. I wish to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all of paragraph R and insert in lieu thereof the following:

R. That whenever articles are exported to the United States of a class or kind made or produced in the United States, whether dutiable or duty free, if the export or actual selling price to an importer in the United States or the price at which such goods are consigned is less than the fair market value of the same article when sold for home consumption in the usual and ordinary course in the country whence exported to the United States at the time of its exportation to the United States, there shall be levied, collected, and paid on such article on its importation into the United States a special duty (or dumping duty) equal to the difference between the said export or actual selling price of the article for export or the price at which such goods are consigned, and the said fair market value thereof for home consumption, and this special duty (or dumping duty) in the case of dutiable articles shall be in addition to the duties otherwise established: Provided, That the said special duty shall not exceed 15 per cent ad valorem in any case and that goods whereon the duties otherwise established are equal to 50 per cent ad valorem shall be exempt from such special duty.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY].

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, the amendment which I have offered is practically the same paragraph as it is written in the Underwood bill, except that it covers articles on the free list as well as on the dutiable list. Now, as an illustration of the effect this amendment would have, an article upon the free list can be dumped upon our market at a price below its cost just the same as an article that is on the dutiable list, and therefore injure an industry in this country. That is the purpose of the paragraph itself. And the only difference between the language in the bill and the language of the amendment is that it includes the things on the free list.

I was much amused a little while ago by the remarks of the gentleman from the State of Washington [Mr. BRYAN]. This afternoon is the first I have learned that ex-Representative Warburton, of Tacoma, Wash., has a twin brother called "Bryan." Mr. Warburton used to make the same kind of speeches that Mr. BRYAN made here this afternoon; he talked himself into and out of Congress all in one Congress. Mr. Warburton, when the Democrats presented to this House a free-trade measure of their making and of their liking, would immediately spring to his feet and say, "I introduced that bill, and you have stolen it from me. You have changed the title of the bill only. I stand for that bill." That was generally Mr. Warburton's speech in the House. I notice that the gentleman from Washington [Mr. BRYAN] indorses everything in the Democratic tariff bill presented here to-day, if I understood him correctly.

Mr. BRYAN. I am going to vote for it. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. FORDNEY. I so understood you this evening; but if you are to vote for it, you should first declare your allegiance to the Democratic side of the House. I never ride one horse and claim I am riding another.

Mr. BRYAN. Will the gentleman yield for a moment?

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes; I will.

Mr. BRYAN. Do you not think it would be better to skin me direct than to skin some man who is not here to take care of himself? [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. FORDNEY. Sir, the people of your State will skin you quickly enough and relieve me of that trouble. [Applause and laughter on the Republican side.]

Mr. SWITZER. Mr. Chairman, I desire to offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SWITZER] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 215, lines 23 and 24, after the word "shall," strike out the words "in addition to the duties otherwise established."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield one minute to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. SWITZER. Mr. Chairman, this portion is in line with the previous amendments that I have offered to the free-list schedule of this tariff act. The difference between this amendment and the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] is this: His amendment would have the dumping clause apply to all the articles both upon the dutiable and upon the free list. The amendment that I propose will have this dumping clause apply to all the articles upon the dutiable list and the free list that are produced in this country, and it will not apply to articles that we do not produce in this country, like tea, coffee, rubber, and such things, so that it would not matter how cheaply they are made up or how cheap they may become, because we do not produce them.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FARR].

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FARR] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. FARR. Mr. Chairman, I would like to know to what extent, if any, the dumping clause will protect us against the so-called sewing-machine trust, which sells 60 per cent of the family sewing machines bought in this country and which has large factories in foreign countries—one in Glasgow, another in Russia, another in Berlin, or one in course of erection in Berlin?

In the establishment in Glasgow the Singer Sewing Machine Co. employs 12,000 hands. The rate of wages received by their employees in that establishment is less than one-half the rate which is paid by the company to their workmen in this country. I am informed that the Singer Sewing Machine Co. is already making arrangements, in anticipation of the enactment of this bill into law, to supply all the machines that they may hereafter offer for sale in this country from their foreign concerns. They have a capitalization of $60,000,000 and a surplus of $40,000,000.

There are seven independent and competing sewing machine companies in this country, with a capitalization in all of $9,000,000. Will this dumping clause prevent the Singer Sewing Machine Co. from manufacturing its machines in foreign countries and selling them here?

There is another question that I would like to ask the chairman of the committee, and it is this: In case trouble should arise in one or more of the mills and plants of the alleged Iron and Steel Trust in this country, with the mutual sympathy and aid, which are the foundation stones of the international alliance which exists among the steel concerns—in case, I say, trouble should arise in their mills on this side, either through labor difficulties or some other cause, is there anything in this dumping clause that will prevent the Steel Trust from having steel rails made in Belgium or Germany or England? I understand the Steel Trust is now erecting a large plant in Canada.

A manufacturer of my city—and he is the only gentleman among the manufacturers in the district I have the honor to represent who does not express dread of immediate trouble from operation of this bill—a gentleman who calls himself "a small manufacturer," writes to me saying he has no fear at the present time on account of the industrial prosperity that prevails in European countries, but he fears that when a lull comes in the market danger and trouble will threaten the American manufacturers in consequence of the provisions of this bill.

In different sections of this bill I notice provisions helpful to large combinations, and this gentleman to whom I have referred writes that the Ways and Means Committee undoubtedly understand their business, but are losing sight of the delicate position occupied by the small manufacturers, particularly those who are 100 or 200 miles inland; and he observes that favoritism, whether intended or not, is shown in the bill toward the great interests. The Singer Sewing Machine Co. and the great Steel Trust have no fear of the tariff off sewing machines or steel rails. The increased tariff on ferromanganese—apparently so small, but really more important to an independent steel manufacturer in Pennsylvania than all the saving they could effect from the importation of free iron ore—will be an advantage to the United States Steel Co. and hurtful to the independents, because the Steel Co. can make it here and independents will have to import it and pay the duty. And in the case of iron ore itself the benefit is going to go to the trust and not to the independent manufacturers.

According to the testimony taken before the Ways and Means Committee no protest was brought by the Singer Sewing Machine Co. against the putting of sewing machines on the free list, while the independent sewing machine manufacturers very earnestly opposed it. And I notice that the Steel Trust had no representative before the Ways and Means Committee protesting against the rates on steel rails, but the independents were there in opposition to those rates.

Now, I want to ask the question again, Is there anything in this dumping clause that will prevent the transfer of the sewing-machine business to foreign countries, which would bring about the displacement of thousands of our workmen? And under this dumping clause is there anything that will prevent the United States Steel Corporation, for example, in case it should have labor troubles in its mills, or in case it should desire for other reasons to produce its rails in England, or Germany, or Belgium, from going ahead and doing that? Will the dumping clause prevent that and protect this country? I do not believe it will and there is serious danger of these large interests strengthening their control and injuring American industries without any benefit to the American consumer.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired.

Mr. MANN. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT].

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, I wish briefly to discuss this paragraph as it is written in the bill. It is known as the dumping clause, and proposes to put certain duties, up to 15 per cent ad valorem, upon imports to this country which are consigned at prices less than the product is commonly sold for home consumption in the country of origin.

To find such a provision in a Republican bill would be very proper indeed, but to find it in a Democratic bill, that it has been stated over and over again has no element of protection in it and is designed only for purposes of revenue, amazed me exceedingly. When I read the clause I turned to the report of the committee to find what explanation the committee would make for this paragraph, and this is what the committee says:

> Paragraph R is new legislation and provides for a dumping duty to guard the producers of the United States against the demoralization of American markets caused by the exportation from foreign countries of articles into the United States at prices less than the fair market value of the same articles when sold for home consumption in the usual and ordinary course in the country from whence they are exported to the United States. * * * And we are of the opinion that this paragraph will have a tendency to maintain steady and continuous importations all along the line and prevent the demoralization of American markets.

They say it is designed to guard the producers of the United States from the demoralization of American markets. Mr. Chairman, what is the definition of the word "guard"? I looked it up in Webster's Dictionary, and I find that Webster says that "guard" means "protect." And what is the definition of "protect"? Webster says it means "guard." So that in this paragraph for the first time in this bill of 217 pages they have a provision that is designed and has no other design than to protect American manufacturers from the demoralization of markets by importations from abroad. Can you justify that from your standpoint of a tariff for revenue only? Where in your bill, from Schedule A to Schedule N, have you shown the slightest consideration for the American producer? What have you cared, in the rates that you have written in this bill, as to whether American markets were demoralized or not? Where an item has been considered and debated here upon this floor and it has been shown to you that your rates would demoralize the American market, would injure the American producer, your reply has always been, "We can not consider that, for this is a tariff for revenue only, and we can only consider and guard the mass of the consumers of the United States." How is that consistent with this clause? Why have you added this provision here? Why would not the American consumer get these products cheaper if the manufacturers abroad chose to sell them here cheaper than in the country of origin? Would not the American consumer benefit by that? And when you are adding rates to the extent of 15 per cent ad valorem, what are you doing but protecting the American manufacturer?

I hope that some gentlemen upon the other side will either acknowledge that in one case here at least they have applied the doctrine of protection to American industries, or else explain what this is put in for and what it means.

Why, your own platform, also quoted in this report, says:

> We declare it to be a fundamental principle of the Democratic Party that the Federal Government under the Constitution has no power to impose or collect tariff duties except for the purpose of revenue.

And yet, so far as this paragraph is concerned, you are trying to change that. You say, "We do not want the revenue, and we propose to add duties not for revenue, but clearly and simply for protection."

I congratulate the Democratic side on coming this close to protection, and if they will only follow a little longer along the same line, there may not be so much difference between the Democratic side of this House and the Republican side of it. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, the paragraph covering this provision is called the "antidumping" clause, and stipulates that whenever articles are exported to the United States of a class or kind produced here, if the actual selling price to the American importer is less than the fair market value of the same article when sold for home consumption in the exporting country, there shall be levied, in addition to the usual duties, a special, or "dumping," duty of 15 per cent on the difference between the normal market value and the price at which it was sold for exportation. This dumping duty is to apply, whenever there is occasion, to all goods on which there is less than a 50 per cent rate.

Inasmuch as the regular duties are levied on the selling or invoice price, it has been difficult to detect fraud by undervaluation, although the local market price of the exporting country was well known to our Consular Service and customs collectors. The dumping duty will serve as an automatic check against fraud, in that importers will find it to their disadvantage to place a value on merchandise which is below its fair market value, for this practice would at once place them under suspicion, in case of deliberate undervaluation, or subject them to a surtax of 15 per cent in case goods were being dumped on our market.

Another feature of this new provision is that there will be increased stability in prices. The dumping duty will discourage foreign countries from unloading a large temporary surplus on our markets, which tends for a period to disturb prices and to unsettle business. This provision obviously will be a great benefit to the American producer.

An indirect benefit, and a very important one, which arises from increased uniformity in prices and the absence of unnatural fluctuation in market values is that the revenue of the Government will be more dependable and more accurately estimated. This tariff bill has been drawn on a revenue basis. We wish to make sure that there will be sufficient funds available to run the Government. On the other hand, we do not wish an unwarranted surplus, which means excessive taxation. In order to determine with any exactness the amount of revenue to be expected from the different tariff schedules, we must have a definite basis for our calculations. The market values of articles in the country from whence exported are easy to ascertain, and will afford the assistance which is so essential to a satisfactory administration of our customs laws.

The dumping provision has been in effect in Canada since 1907 in practically the same form as proposed in the committee's bill. We have every assurance that it has been successfully used there; and inasmuch as Canada is one of our nearest competitors, it behooves us to take a like action to insure us against discrimination.

Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. LENROOT. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. PETERS. No; I can not yield.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, this provision of the bill provides for 15 per cent ad valorem duty in addition to the rates of duty otherwise fixed in the bill. In other words, if the rates in the bill are 15 per cent ad valorem, under this provision of the bill it may be raised to 30 per cent ad valorem. This provision in the bill is expressly and avowedly a protection measure—to protect the American manufacturer from the dumping of surplus products from foreign lands. It is not, according to the argument made by the gentlemen on the other side, in the interest of the consumer, because it proposes to place an extra 15 per cent duty on goods which the consumer may use.

But, even at that, I am quite willing to welcome Democrats out of Congress and Democrats in Congress into the ranks of protectionists in the country. [Applause on the Republican side.] After all, we are not so far apart in theory. The Republicans do not believe in a prohibitive tariff. The Democrats no longer are willing to say that they believe in a free-trade tariff. In this bill they admit by this provision that they wish to protect the American manufacturer from the dumping of surplus products from other lands.

I do not believe that anybody desires to ruin an American industry. But what is the reason there is a dividing line between the Democratic side of the House and the Republican side of the House as to the actual rates to go into a tariff bill? It is a lack of information. What we need is a body which will ascertain the facts.

Then we may know the facts upon which we will not levy a prohibitive tariff and the facts upon which we will protect manufacturers from the dumping of foreign goods upon our markets, whether it be the surplus products or other products. I have therefore put up to the other side of the House, which thus far has succeeded in anxiously avoiding any vote upon the tariff commission, an amendment prepared and suggested by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GARDNER], which provides for a tariff commission, and you gentlemen on the other side of the House will have to vote for it or vote against it, not only by a viva voce vote but by tellers. It is not the tariff commission that we would like to have. We would like to have a tariff commission with power to obtain all information, but this tariff commission proposed here can at least obtain information in regard to the fair market value of products produced abroad. You can take it or you can leave it; but, mark my words, if you do not take it now of your own volition, in the next Congress we will ram it down your throats. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Chairman, I can understand how a gentleman like the distinguished minority leader, whose mind has been warped by a life-long devotion to a false economic principle, might not see the real purpose and intent of this provision in the law. He says it is protective, pure and simple. If so, he ought to be for it.

Mr. MANN. I am.

Mr. PALMER. I am for it because there is absolutely no protection in it, and if the gentleman from Illinois could forget his political prejudice long enough to study the underlying and fundamental principle upon which this bill is written he would be honest enough to agree with me in that. If a clause like this were written into a Republican high protective bill, it would be protective, but written into a Democratic revenue bill, providing for a competitive tariff, it is nothing but a governor to assure the real purpose of the bill, and I propose to tell you why in a very few words.

The ideal Republican protective bill has written into it rates which are prohibitive, rates which will operate to keep foreign competition away from this market. A Democratic bill has written into it rates which invite competition between the foreign manufacturer and the American manufacturer. The only chance that the consumer has under a Republican prohibitive tariff bill is by the dumping of the surplus of the foreign producer into this market, but in a bill which writes its rates upon a competitive basis, in order to maintain competition between the foreign producer and the American producer, it is proper to maintain the normal conditions which obtain when these competitive rates are written into law. We over here are opposed to that monopoly of the American market which rises out of prohibitive rates in a Republican bill, allowing the American producer to have a monopoly here by keeping the foreign article out. We are just as much opposed to a foreign monopoly of this market which might result from dumping goods into this market over competitive rates to such an extent as to secure that monopoly. We propose to take the American manufacturers and place their American courage against the world upon an even basis, give them honest competition with all the world, and keep it honest competition. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Every great American manufacturer that appeared before the Committee on Ways and Means, men like Mr. Topping, president of the Republic Steel & Iron Co.; Mr. Crawford, of the Tin Plate Co.; and many others, declared that they could live under these Democratic rates, low as they were, by reducing the price of their product to the American consumer, if conditions would remain normal and not become abnormal. If foreign surplus were not sent here below cost, they could live.

Mr. Chairman, in the Baltimore platform we promised two things: First, that we would revise this tariff to a revenue basis; and, second, that we would do it without injuring any legitimate American industry. We have reduced these rates to a revenue basis, writing competitive rates throughout the bill, and under this clause we prevent foreign manufacturers from dumping surplus goods into this country to the detriment of the American manufacturer; by this provision we close the mouth of the American manufacturer, who can not now criticize this bill without in the same breath admitting his pusillanimous unwillingness to compete with the world on an even basis. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. Chairman, I am for this bill. I have supported it in committee and in this House with my whole heart and my whole strength, and I shall do the same when it goes before the great jury of our countrymen. I am for it because I see in it the dawn of a new era of industrial freedom for America. [Applause on the Democratic side.] I am for it also because this provision, along with the others we have written here, constitute an absolutely faithful redemption of every promise we have made to the American people on the tariff question. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Pennsylvania has expired. All time has expired. The question will first be taken on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SWITZER].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question now is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I ask to have the amendment again reported.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment will be again reported.

There was no objection, and the Clerk again reported the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MANN) there were—ayes 113, noes 195.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and Mr. MANN and Mr. UNDERWOOD were named to act as tellers.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 131, noes 224.

So the amendment was rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment proposed by the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY].

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

The Clerk read as follows:

S. That the President shall cause to be ascertained each year the amount of imports and exports of the articles enumerated in the various paragraphs in section 1 of this act and cause an estimate to be made of the amount of the domestic production and consumption of said articles, and where it is ascertained that the imports under any paragraph amount to less than 5 per cent of the domestic consumption of the articles enumerated he shall advise the Congress as to the facts and his conclusions by special message.

Mr. CONNOLLY of Iowa. Mr. Chairman, I suppose that the older Members of this House get very tired when a new Member refers to the natural timidity that he feels in expressing himself for the first time before this body, but I feel somewhat timid, inasmuch as I have never had any experience in legislative assemblies, am quite new in politics, and being just an ordinary business man I have had scant opportunity to indulge in public speaking of this character. However, I have heard so much from the other side of the House about the disaster, the tragedy, the devastation that was to follow in the wake of what the Republicans call the great Underwood tornado that I am reminded of the minister who was asked to make some remarks about a gentleman by the name of Bill Payne. The minister did not know Bill Payne, and he began his remarks by stating, "Here lies the body of old Bill Payne. I did not know Bill Payne. Some say that he was a good Bill, others say that he was a bad Bill, I do not know which. I do not know whether you know which, but in the midst of this great sorrow, in the midst of this dejection and visitation of sadness, there remains before us this great supreme consolation, we all know Bill Payne is dead." [Applause.] Now, Mr. Chairman, the only point I can bring out as a justification for this story is that the voters of this country signified by their ballots on last November that they were willing to assist at the obsequies of the present protective Payne tariff bill. We have heard a great deal from the other side of the aisle about plurality Congressmen among the Democrats. But the issue was clearly drawn, and if the electors had such an awful fear of tariff revision they would have combined on some one man as against the Democrats.

To-night the newly elected Congressman from Massachusetts, to succeed Mr. WEEKS, coming fresh from the people and from a highly protected district, declared that he based his election largely upon the program of the Democratic Party for genuine revision downward, and almost immediately he was confronted by one of his colleagues with the statement that the combined vote of the Roosevelt Party and the Republican Party throughout that district meant that the majority of the voters adhered to the protective doctrine.

Now, we may as well be honest with ourselves, and you gentlemen on the other side had better cast off your cloak of hazy fog and admit that the main reason for your present minority was your failure in 1910 to revise substantially downward in accordance with your preelection pledges, and notwithstanding that there are several Members upon this side who are Congressmen by virtue of a plurality and not a majority, yet if the voters had the same horror of downward revision that you appear to have they would have united upon a protective candidate to defeat the Democrat, and though all of us on this side are not in complete accord with all the provisions of this bill and have so expressed our views before the members of the Ways and Means Committee, yet we have usually found that the framers of this bill were pretty well fortified with data and facts to support the various schedules. In a bill of 4,000 or more items there are bound to be some imperfections, but the man who is waiting for a bill that is perfect in its entire structure is a man that really does not want genuine revision downward. There must be some concessions made on all sides and from all localities, and rather than wait indefinitely for a relief from the present oppressive tariff I believe that we are justified in supporting this measure.

The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MANAHAN] declared the other evening that whatever wisdom this bill contained was inspired from a common almanac. In the same breath he referred to the sign of the Zodiac and said, "behold Taurus, the goat." It may be that he was unleashing an Irish bull on the House, but if he was in earnest his mistake on the Zodiac shows that he could also be in error on the inspiration of the Underwood bill. If this tariff revision downward has its inspiration in an almanac, it is the almanac of poor Richard; yes, the almanac that believes in the interests of poor Tom, Dick, and Harry, the almanac of the masses. The almanac that has inspired high protectionists is such as the Almanac de Gotha, where are found the pedigrees of princes, dukes, and possibly tariff barons—the handbook of privileged protection.

Now, I happen to come from a district—and I say this in no spirit of braggadocio, because that is not the spirit in which I analyze my own election—a district that never before sent a Democrat to represent it. I came from a district upon which the spirit of a highly protective Republican gerrymander rested and when I realized that the only way I could win my fight was by being the recipient of a great many Republican votes I feel a keen sense of obligation to them as well as to members of my own party.

I can not feel as do the Members on the other side of the aisle about the chaos that will ensue and that all of the Democratic Members will by virtue of their vote on this bill be filled so full of holes that in two years we will not make even good sieves. For I feel that those Republicans who changed their party affiliation and gave me their support did so upon the theory that I belong to a party that would make a bona fide effort to relieve the great masses of the country from the heavy burdens of high protection. My opponent was a distinguished Member of this House; he was a protectionist. He had vastly more experience in legislation and in the field of politics than I. He stood for the Tariff Board, but I fear that the kind of a tariff board the protectionists want is a sort of a black hole of Calcutta out of which no genuine tariff revision bill downward could ever emerge alive. If the electorate of my district wished a continuance of the Payne bill, they would have elected my Republican opponent. If they felt that no tariff revision should be initiated except upon the report of a tariff board, they would also have given him their united support, and so I can not help but believe that the voters of my district felt that in close to 40 years or more of sending Republicans to represent them—Republicans who voted for a highly protective tariff—that they would at this time upset the gerrymander of the monkey wrench district and at the same time remove the shackles of a high-protective tariff. They decided to support the nominee of the Democratic Party as a means of relief from the old order of things, and in my district, as in many other districts throughout the country, the recent election forms a protest by the people against the old order, and the unequal conditions of the old order sounded the death knell of the doctrine of high protection. The people have placed us here because they desired a change and though this new fiscal medium may not be perfect in all its details, yet in a very great measure it expresses the spirit of the new life, the change that the people sent us here to consummate.

The prayer of all patriotic citizens who place their country above party is that this change—this readjustment suggested by the trend of the times and the voice of the great masses of the people—may have a fair trial; that as relief is the motive for the change, may normal conditions attend it. There is nobility and humanity back of the purpose of this bill to place the necessaries of life within the purchasing zone of the dollar of the toiler; to place the dinner basket closer to the pocketbook of the wage earner.

There is justice in laying the burden on the luxuries of life. Less luxury for the rich and more comforts for the poor will bring our citizenship closer together, will tend to develop saner standards of living, will level some of the inequalities of modern life, will vitalize our nationalism, and discourage the spirit of socialism.

Those who cry out in alarm against any change, who rally round the banner of "let well enough alone" are apt to forget that the condition of "well enough" is not in universal circulation, and these gentlemen, many of whom are sincere in their motives, are unconsciously abetting the socialistic movement in this country.

In the past 16 years of Republican rule we have undoubtedly seen expansion of industry and commerce, but under this system there has not been a commensurate distribution of the profits of production. On the contrary, it has been an era of concentration of capital and the fruits of production, such as the world has never before seen. Good Americans, regardless of party, rejoice in the growth of our industry and commerce, but become apprehensive at a system that has permitted the control of our financial sinews, our transportation and industrial resources, by a relatively small group of men. The prosperity and expansion has not had a comprehensive or consistent circulation.

In the income-tax feature of the bill our party has endeavored to place the burden upon those who can most easily bear it. It is a fair and just system of taxation.

The framers of this bill, the majority Members of this House, and the President of this administration are actuated in their support of this bill by lofty impulses, by a sincere desire and interest to accomplish the greatest good for the greatest number, to express in this piece of legislation the spirit of "equal rights to all, special privileges to none." [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Iowa has expired. Without objection, the pro forma amendment will be considered as withdrawn.

There was no objection.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. How much time does the gentleman on that side desire to use?

Mr. PAYNE. I think 15 minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph may be limited to 20 minutes, 15 minutes to go to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and 5 minutes to myself.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that all debate on this paragraph and all amendments thereto shall close in 20 minutes, 15 minutes to be controlled by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and 5 minutes by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD]. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE].

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Chairman, I rise to speak on this paragraph. The last paragraph proposed a protective duty against goods dumped here from other countries below the market price, and I accept the apologies of the gentlemen who appeared before the Committee of the Whole, both my friend from Massachusetts [Mr. PETERS] and my friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER].

I know that this paragraph is very dear to their hearts. They finally prevailed on the good nature of my colleague from New York [Mr. HARRISON], on the same committee, to allow this thing to go through without registering his protest, because he does not believe in any protection anywhere along the line. But the gentlemen on the committee had hardly gotten through writing this paragraph before they wrote paragraph S to follow it, seemingly desirous of taking the bad taste out of their mouths that the paragraph preceding had given them. And what does this paragraph say:

> That the President shall cause to be ascertained each year the amount of imports and exports of the articles enumerated in the various paragraphs.
>
> And so forth,
>
> And where it is ascertained that the imports under any paragraph amount to less than 5 per cent of the domestic consumption of the articles enumerated he shall advise the Congress as to the facts and his conclusions by special message.

Of course, for the purpose of having Congress lower the duty on those articles. Why did they not think a little further and go on with their intentions expressed in the preceding paragraph, and provide that where he ascertained and reported that the imported articles exceeded by 50 per cent or more of the consumption, or was equal to it, that he should report that fact to Congress, and so allow my friend from Massachusetts [Mr. PETERS] and my friend from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] to see to it that there was something done to make up the difference, something to allow competition on the part of the people of the United States, something to stop the flood of imports that was coming in, and crushing out industry here? Why, if you are honest in your promises not to injure any business, why could you not at least give that poor concession to the people of the United States who are seeking to earn their livelihood in the factories of the United States? Why could you not have said two things at the same time when you were drawing this paragraph, and provide protection in the lines of the last preceding paragraph, where more than 50 per cent of the consumption was imported from abroad?

Mr. Chairman, how much time have I remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has two minutes remaining.

Mr. PAYNE. That will be time enough in which to say that I am gratified, gentlemen, with the course of this debate. I have heard mighty little criticism of the present law. I have heard some denunciation, but not very much of it. It has been confined to new Members, a few of them who got in here for the first time, and will not appear here again after the Sixty-third Congress. [Laughter.] And some of these gentlemen, Mr. Chairman, say in conclusion that they will vote for the Underwood bill, but that there are a good many things in it they do not like. [Laughter.]

Why, if you gentlemen while you are voting for this bill, while you are holding your nose because you do not like the odor of it, would be honest to your convictions and vote against it, it would fail in its passage on the final vote at midnight to-night. [Loud applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT].

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Chairman, the remarks of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] a few moments ago were universally applauded upon the Democratic side of the House, and with reference to those remarks I want to say to the gentleman from Pennsylvania that if he had practiced in the writing of this bill what he preached in those remarks he would be entitled to a seat upon the Republican side of the House.

Now, what was the theory which the gentleman from Pennsylvania set forth in those remarks? Why, the Democratic Party starts out with the declaration that protection is a robbery. A little later they stand for a tariff for revenue only, and then a little later they stand for a tariff for revenue, and a little later they stand for a tariff for revenue with incidental protection, and now we have them standing—in their declarations, but not in their practices—for a competitive tariff. And the gentleman from Pennsylvania said that the reason for this dumping clause is that in this bill, shortly to pass, the rates they had written in the schedules are competitive rates, permitting American manufacturers to compete with the whole world, and having given such rates the American manufacturers were entitled to the imposition of import duties that would not demoralize the American market; and that means, if it means anything, at 10 o'clock of this day, if he speaks for the Democratic Party, that their next platform must declare that the Democratic Party stands for a competitive tariff, but promises the people of the United States that they will, by imposition of import duties, protect American manufacturers against unreasonable competition from abroad. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Does it mean anything else? Mr. Chairman, as I examine this bill, from the first schedule to the last, I am inclined to think that the gentlemen are sincere in that statement; that they are beginning to hedge; and I shall not be at all surprised if in the next campaign they will find themselves compelled to stand, if they ever want to come back into power, exactly where the rank and file of the Republican Party stand to-day—for the imposition of import duties covering the difference in the cost of production at home and abroad, protecting American producers from unreasonable competition from abroad. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, how much time have I remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Illinois has seven minutes remaining.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the pending paragraph provides that each year the President shall, as to all articles named in this bill, where the imports amount to less than 5 per cent of the domestic consumption, send a special message to Congress, announcing that fact and giving his conclusions in regard to it.

We used to think sometimes that we received a great many messages from a former President. But under the operation of this bill, with the many things which are produced wholly in the United States and of which we necessarily import none, the President will be kept busy writing messages to Congress and the Clerk will be kept busy reading them here.

But so far as the provision amounts to anything, what does it do? The tender consideration of the gentlemen on the Democratic side for the foreign manufacturer is shown in this provision. We may import 95 per cent of an article and produce only 5 per cent, but no gentleman over on that side of the aisle seeks to encourage the home industry. There is no provision that the President shall call attention to that condition. There is no provision that the President shall send a message to Congress which will show Congress how, perchance, it may increase home industry and upbuild home manufactures and raise up factories and give work to home labor. But the moment the importations fall below 5 per cent, then the President shall send to Congress some recommendation showing how we may import more goods, made by foreign labor, aided by foreign capital in foreign countries.

There is no anxiety for the American producer, no desire to protect the American manufacturer. The whole interest is to take care of those who dwell on the other side of the water.

Mr. Chairman, we are now about the close of the debate upon this bill. It has been before the country for a month. It has met with severe condemnation in nearly every quarter of the country. Already business is becoming more or less stagnated through fear of the operations of this bill. I hope that when the bill has become a law that fear may disappear. And yet we all know that the highest type of statesmanship that the world has ever produced has been necessary to protect prosperity in any land. [Applause on the Republican side.] And with the utmost that people have been able anywhere to produce in legislation it is difficult to keep up prosperous conditions. You are endeavoring not to protect prosperity, but to threaten prosperity.

We leave it to the country. If you succeed, you will have accomplished the impossible. If you are able to give to the producer as high prices as before and to the consumer lower prices than before, you will have accomplished the impossible. But when you look at what is coming, and know that you are proposing an era of falling prices and that no party in the history of this or any other country was long successful during an era of falling prices, you may know that you are having your last chance at tariff legislation for another decade.

Twenty years ago you had the chance. Sixteen years ago the Republicans again took the reins of power, and for 16 years they kept them. We leave you now, meeting the country in the most prosperous condition it ever has been in. The country turns over to you the reins of power, with people happy everywhere, with people well to do everywhere; with people well clothed, well fed, well housed, with work to perform. Proceed and see if you can do as well, because the country will judge you, not by what is said here but by what happens in the future. [Prolonged applause on the Republican side.]

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLARK]. [Prolonged applause.]

Mr. CLARK of Missouri. Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, in the language of the old hymn—

This is the way I long have sought.

[Applause on the Democratic side.]

A few of us have been fighting in this House for 20 years to accomplish what we are now going to accomplish in a few minutes. [Applause.] We have faced as many as 114 majority on that side, and now you face a majority of 191 on our side.

In the first place, I wish from the bottom of my heart to congratulate Mr. Chairman UNDERWOOD and the Democrats on the Ways and Means Committee for the excellent bill which they brought into the House. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Four years ago, in the beginning of a five-hour-and-a-half speech in this House, I congratulated the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] on having become a historical person, because he had fastened his name onto a great tariff measure. I congratulate the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] in the same language, for the same reason. [Applause.]

I congratulate this House on both sides for the good temper, the courtesy, and the kindliness with which this discussion has been conducted from end to end. It seems that our manners as well as our politics are improving in this country. [Applause and laughter.]

No tariff bill in the history of this Government was ever as thoroughly considered as this one has been. We considered it for two weeks in a Democratic caucus, section by section, paragraph by paragraph; and they can say what they please about it, but it was the two weeks' discussion in the caucus that brought unanimity in the House. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

My friend from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] is very fond of quoting the speeches that I made on the floor of the House, especially when I was minority leader. They are good speeches. [Laughter and applause.] Some time before long I want him to get up here and read a five-minute speech that I made when they forced the rule through this House to consider the Payne tariff bill. I said then that I was in favor of discussing a tariff bill section by section, and of permitting any Member of the House to offer any amendment he pleased. [Applause.] And it has come to pass; it is being done. There has been no rule brought in. You gentlemen can not kick and squirm hereafter. [Laughter.] There has been unanimity, but it was not the unanimity brought by the lash of the taskmaster. [Applause.]

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] says that 20 years ago we passed a tariff bill and split up. That is the truth. This time we pass a tariff bill and stick together. [Applause on the Democratic side.] And the thing that has brought the discipline to the Democratic side of this House is the force of brotherly love, instead of the black-snake whip of a taskmaster. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Now the doctors disagree on the Republican side of the House. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] says this is a protection measure. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] and the gentleman from Wyoming [Mr. MONDELL] have made 200 speeches apiece in the discussion of this bill [laughter] to demonstrate that it is a free-trade measure. When doctors disagree, what are we to do? We stand for a tariff for revenue only. That is the Democratic doctrine, always has been the Democratic doctrine, and always will be the Democratic doctrine until it is fully realized and accomplished. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Why, the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] says that some people do not like some things in this bill. Of course they do not. I would like to get him on the witness stand and swear him, and cross-examine him as to whether he liked his own bill or not in every particular. [Applause and laughter.] I will tell you what a tariff bill is: It is the consensus of the opinions of at least 218 men in this House, 49 men in the Senate, and 1 man in the White House. That is what makes a tariff bill. And there never were two men on the face of the green earth, with brains in their heads, who would agree on all the 4,100 items in a tariff bill. But I say that by the patience and the intelligence of this Ways and Means Committee, by the patience and intelligence of the Democratic membership of this House, we have got a bill that we can go to the country on, and stand on, and the country will call us blessed. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

How did these gentlemen over here on the Republican side spend their time? My brother MANN is one of the most ingenious men that ever poked his head inside of this Hall. [Laughter and applause.] I think a great deal of him. I have stated that time and again. But 95 per cent of the amendments that these gentlemen over here offered were to restore the Payne rates, and the Payne bill was the very thing that brought the Republican Party to death's door in this country. [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side.] From the amendments these gentlemen offered it appeared that they do not want any political resurrection for themselves in this world. [Laughter.]

I am not going to weary you. [Cries of "Go on!"] No, no. We want to pass this bill. That is the chief thing, and we want to pass it to-night. [Applause.] I believe that it will bring prosperity to the country greater than it has now. The greatest thing that this country needs is a wider market for our surplus products, and that is what this bill will bring. [Prolonged applause on the Democratic side.]

The CHAIRMAN. All debate on the paragraph has expired, and, without objection, the pro forma amendment will be withdrawn.

Mr. BROUSSARD. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that I may have five minutes on this amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, debate on the paragraph is closed, and I am compelled to object.

The Clerk, proceeding with the reading of the bill, read as follows:

T. That, except as hereinafter provided, sections 1 to 42, both inclusive, of an act entitled "An act to provide revenue, equalize duties, and encourage the industries of the United States, and for other purposes," approved August 5, 1909, and all acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act, are hereby repealed: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be construed to repeal or in any manner affect the following numbered sections of the aforesaid act approved August 5, 1909, viz: Subsection 29 of section 28 and subsequent provisions relating to the establishment and continuance of a Customs Court, subsection 30 of section 28, providing for additional attorneys general, subsection 12 of section 28 and subsequent provisions establishing a Board of General Appraisers of Merchandise, sections 30, 31, 32, 33, and 35, imposing an internal-revenue tax upon tobacco, section 36, providing for a tonnage duty, section 39, authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to borrow on the credit of the United States to defray expenditures on account of the Panama Canal, section 40, authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to borrow to meet public expenditures: Provided further, That all excise taxes upon corporations imposed by section 38 that have accrued or have been imposed for the year ending December 31, 1912, shall be returned, assessed, and collected in the same manner, and under the same provisions, liens, and penalties as if section 38 continued in full force and effect; but the repeal of existing laws or modifications thereof embraced in this act shall not affect any act done, or any right accruing or accrued, or any suit or proceeding had or commenced in any civil case before the said repeal or modification; but all rights and liabilities under said laws shall continue and may be enforced in the same manner as if said repeal or modifications had not been made. Any offenses committed and all penalties or forfeitures or liabilities incurred prior to the passage of this act under any statute embraced in or changed, modified, or repealed by this act may be prosecuted or punished in the same manner and with the same effect as if this act had not been passed. All acts of limitation, whether applicable to civil causes and proceedings or to the prosecution of offenses or for the recovery of penalties or forfeitures embraced in or modified, changed, or repealed by this act shall not be affected thereby; and all suits, proceedings, or prosecutions, whether civil or criminal, for causes arising or acts done or committed prior to the passage of this act, may be commenced and prosecuted within the same time and with the same effect as if this act had not been passed.

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 217, line 12, by striking out the word "general."

Mr. PETERS. Mr. Chairman, this amendment is to strike out the word "general." Subsection 30, section 28, provides for an Assistant Attorney General, and the other customs attorneys, and by striking out the word "general" here the words "attorneys" are left in the proper language to carry out the references to what the section does. I now move to close all debate on this paragraph.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts moves to close all debate on the paragraph.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. ANDERSON. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment to the last paragraph.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 217, line 21, after the word "expenditures," insert: "Provided further, That the act entitled 'An act to promote reciprocal trade relations with the Dominion of Canada, and for other purposes,' approved July 26, 1911, be and is hereby repealed."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Minnesota.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. ANDERSON) there were 107 ayes and 213 noes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, I demand tellers.

Tellers were ordered; and the Chair appointed as tellers Mr. ANDERSON and Mr. UNDERWOOD.

The committee again divided; and the tellers reported that there were 121 ayes and 222 noes.

So the amendment was lost.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to return to page 133, paragraph A, for the purpose of offering an amendment.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman has the right to return under the unanimous-consent agreement entered into the other day. I offered an amendment on that paragraph at the request of the gentleman from the Philippines [Mr. QUEZON], and it was laid over to enable the committee to inquire into the matter. I understand that the committee are of the opinion that there should be some change, and they have suggested an amendment, and I am quite willing to agree to their proposed change. I ask leave to withdraw my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the order heretofore made, the committee will return to the consideration of the paragraph mentioned, and, without objection, the amendment of the gentleman from Illinois will be withdrawn.

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. HULL] offers an amendment, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, page 133, lines 6, 7, and 8, by striking out the following words: "and by every citizen of Porto Rico, and by every citizen of the Philippine Islands."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. HULL. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment in the same connection.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amend, paragraph N, page 162, by adding at the end of the paragraph the words: "And provided further, That nothing in this section shall be held to exclude from the computation of the net income the compensation to any official by the government of Porto Rico or the Philippine Islands or the political subdivisions thereof."

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The Clerk, continuing the reading of the bill, read as follows:

U. That unless otherwise herein specially provided, this act shall take effect on the day following its passage.

Mr. MOSS of West Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out paragraph U and insert the following:

"U. That the provisions of section 2 of this act shall take effect on the day following the passage of this act, and that the taking effect of all other provisions of this act shall be indefinitely postponed."

[Laughter.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I think it is very evident that the amendment offered by the gentleman from West Virginia is in accordance with the views of his side. I would like to know if he desires to occupy any time.

Mr. MOSS of West Virginia. No.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then, Mr. Chairman, I move that all debate on the pending paragraph and all amendments thereto be now closed.

The motion was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from West Virginia.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Chairman, I offer the following amendment, which I send to the desk.

The Clerk read as follows:

To amend paragraph U, section 4, as follows:

By striking out lines 24 and 25 on page 218 and substituting in lieu thereof the following:

"The provisions of this act shall take effect on the 1st day of January following the passage of this act, unless otherwise herein expressly provided, except that as to all reductions on existing rates of import duties made on articles specified herein, the provisions of this act shall take effect and be operative on such imports from any country, dependency, province, or colony upon proclamation of the President, and the President shall not issue such proclamation unless and until like and compensating reductions, concessions, and privileges have been secured from such importing country, dependency, province, or colony."

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Iowa.

The question was taken, and the amendment was rejected.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I move that the committee do now rise and report the bill to the House with the amendments, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly, the committee rose, and the Speaker having resumed the chair, Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, reported that that committee had had under consideration the bill H. R. 3321—the tariff bill—and had directed him to report the same back to the House with sundry amendments thereto, with the recommendation that the amendments be agreed to and that the bill as amended do pass.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the bill and amendments to final passage.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment? If not, the Chair will put them in gross. The question is on agreeing to the amendments.

The amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the reading of the engrossed bill, unless we can have some understanding about how long we are going to stay here to-night.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois demands the reading of the engrossed bill.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to make that demand until I can find out what is the intention of the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, it is my desire, and I think it is the desire of the House, to pass the bill to-night, if it is possible. Of course, I recognize the gentleman's right to demand the reading of the engrossed bill. The bill can not be engrossed until to-morrow, and if the gentleman insists upon it we will have to adjourn.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I desire to be heard at some length upon the point of order which I understand the gentleman from Alabama proposes to make on our motion to recommit, which will provide for a tariff commission. If the gentleman will not make his point of order, I will be very glad to withdraw my demand for the reading of the engrossed bill, but if the point of order is to be made I wish to be heard before the Speaker rules upon it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will be heard, because that matter is entirely within the hands of the Speaker.

Mr. MANN. I understand, but it is rather late at night to endeavor to detain gentlemen for the purpose of hearing debate upon the point of order. I think it would lead to some discussion.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I will say to the gentleman that I must insist upon my point of order, if the motion to recommit is made in the manner suggested by the gentleman from Illinois. Of course I have not yet seen the motion to recommit.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the motion to recommit, as first presented by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE], will contain the provision in reference to a tariff commission which was offered in the Committee of the Whole and ruled out of order by the Chairman.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then, Mr. Speaker, I will be compelled under those circumstances to make the point of order against the motion when it is made.

Mr. MANN. Under the circumstances I shall be compelled to ask the reading of the engrossed bill.

DAILY HOUR OF MEETING.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, the enrolling clerk informs me that he can not have the bill ready before to-morrow afternoon. I desire to ask unanimous consent that the daily hour of meeting of the House hereafter shall be changed from 11 o'clock a. m. to 12 o'clock noon.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that the daily hour of meeting shall be 12 o'clock noon instead of 11 o'clock a. m. until further order. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Then, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-night it adjourn to meet at 2 o'clock p. m. to-morrow.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-night it adjourn to meet at 2 p. m. to-morrow. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 11 o'clock and 7 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned to meet at 2 p. m. to-morrow, Thursday, May 8, 1913.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. LONERGAN: A bill (H. R. 4826) for the enlargement of the Federal building at Hartford, Conn.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

By Mr. BROWN of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 4827) to amend section 113 of the act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. KALANIANAOLE: A bill (H. R. 4828) to further regulate the leasing of land in the Territory of Hawaii; to the Committee on the Territories.

By Mr. EVANS: A bill (H. R. 4829) to provide for the purchase of ground and the erection of a Weather Bureau observatory building at Billings, Mont.; to the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4830) to provide for the purchase of ground and the erection of a Weather Bureau observatory building at or near the Montana State University, at Missoula, Mont.; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. J. M. C. SMITH: A bill (H. R. 4831) amending section 2 of an act entitled "An act to increase the pension of widows, minor children, etc., of deceased soldiers and sailors of the late Civil War, the War with Mexico, the various Indian wars, etc., and to grant a pension to certain widows of the deceased soldiers and sailors of the late Civil War," approved April 19, 1908; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. MOSS of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 4832) to create in the War Department and the Navy Department, respectively, a roll designated as "the Civil War volunteer officers' retired list," to authorize placing thereon with retired pay certain surviving officers who served in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States in the Civil War, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. FALCONER: A bill (H. R. 4833) to provide for the construction, maintenance, and improvement of a system of national interstate roads, and to provide funds for the same; to the Committee on Agriculture.

By Mr. GARDNER: A bill (H. R. 4834) to repeal the apportionment clause of the civil-service act; to the Committee on Reform in the Civil Service.

By Mr. SMITH of New York: A bill (H. R. 4835) to suppress lobbying and to provide for registration of persons employed to advocate or oppose legislative measures and to regulate the method of such advocacy or opposition; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. LEWIS of Maryland: A bill (H. R. 4836) to reclassify clerks at first and second class post offices and carriers in the City Delivery Service; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. AINEY: A bill (H. R. 4837) granting pensions to certain widows of soldiers and sailors of the Civil War; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado: A bill (H. R. 4866) giving a new right of homestead entry to former homesteaders; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4867) defining procedure in case of protested or objected final proof on public lands; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4868) extending the number of annual payments to entrymen upon reclamation projects; to the Committee on Irrigation of Arid Lands.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4869) providing for the destruction of predatory wild animals upon the national forests and the lands adjacent thereto; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4870) making an appropriation to prevent blight and to exterminate pests destructive of the potato and alfalfa; to the Committee on Agriculture.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4871) authorizing the Secretary of War to donate condemned cannon and balls; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4872) authorizing the Secretary of War to donate to the city of Grand Junction, Colo., two cannon or field pieces; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4873) providing for the erection of a monument on the site of the Meeker massacre, in Rio Blanco County, Colo.; to the Committee on the Library.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4874) to prevent the employment of children in factories and mines; to the Committee on Labor.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4875) to prevent the employment of females in mills, factories, or manufacturing establishments for a longer period than eight hours; to the Committee on Labor.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4876) authorizing national banks to loan money on real-estate security; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4877) to restore section 1 of the act of Congress of July 2, 1890, chapter 647, Twenty-sixth Statutes at Large, to its original form as enacted, by striking out the words "unreasonable or undue," inserted therein by a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4878) divesting goods, wares, and merchandise manufactured by convicts or by convict labor of their interstate character in certain cases; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. MOTT: Resolution (H. Res. 95) creating a committee of the House of Representatives on rights and welfare of women and children; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. FITZGERALD: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 80) making appropriations to supply urgent deficiencies in certain appropriations for the postal service for the fiscal year 1913; to the Committee on Appropriations.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado: Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 81) directing the Committee on Printing to provide a suitable index for the daily issue of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD; to the Committee on Printing.

By Mr. KALANIANAOLE: Memorial of the Legislature of Hawaii, relative to an appropriation for the purchase of sea fisheries for the citizens of the United States; to the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of Hawaii, favoring an appropriation for completion of improvement of the harbor of Nawiliwili, island of Kauai; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, memorial of the Legislature of Hawaii, relative to amending the law governing the leasing of agricultural lands in Hawaii; to the Committee on the Territories.

PRIVATE BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. AINEY: A bill (H. R. 4838) granting a pension to Franc S. Hungerford; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4839) granting a pension to Fannie Comfort; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4840) granting an increase of pension to Michael Weber; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. BARNHART: A bill (H. R. 4841) granting a pension to Isabel Clark; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. CANTRILL: A bill (H. R. 4842) granting a pension to Clay Brandenburg; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4843) for the relief of A. H. Sympson; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. COVINGTON: A bill (H. R. 4844) for the relief of Jacob T. Bradshaw; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. EDWARDS: A bill (H. R. 4845) granting an increase of pension to Jane Augusta Beasley; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. EVANS: A bill (H. R. 4846) for the relief of Benjamin E. Jones; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. GRIEST: A bill (H. R. 4847) granting an increase of pension to Edward Frankford; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Washington: A bill (H. R. 4848) granting a pension to Thomas Baxter; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. KEY of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 4849) granting a pension to Daniel Burkey; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4850) granting a pension to Henrietta Bartlett; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4851) granting a pension to Emaline Powell; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4852) granting an increase of pension to James Cass; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4853) granting an increase of pension to Conrad Stephan; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4854) granting an increase of pension to Albert A. Root; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4855) granting an increase of pension to Henry Bilsing; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4856) granting an increase of pension to Henry Smith; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LEWIS of Maryland: A bill (H. R. 4857) for the relief of the trustees of the Quinn African Methodist Episcopal Church, of Frederick, Md.; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. MOSS of West Virginia: A bill (H. R. 4858) granting a pension to Charles W. Cunningham; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. STEPHENS of California: A bill (H. R. 4859) granting an increase of pension to Philip Gavin; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. WHITE: A bill (H. R. 4860) granting a pension to Grant Van Horn; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4861) granting an increase of pension to William Allender; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. DIES: A bill (H. R. 4862) for the relief of Mollie Richardson, heir of Stanford Mims, deceased; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. HAYES: A bill (H. R. 4863) granting an increase of pension to Francis O. Nash; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LANGLEY: A bill (H. R. 4864) granting an increase of pension to Lemuel Jones; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TUTTLE: A bill (H. R. 4865) for the relief of Paymaster Frederick G. Pyne, United States Navy; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. CLAYPOOL: A bill (H. R. 4879) granting a pension to Floyd Thurman; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4880) granting a pension to Sarah Catharine Williams; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4881) granting an increase of pension to Martin Enderlin; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4882) granting an increase of pension to William T. Mills; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4883) granting a pension to John C. McIntire; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4884) granting an increase of pension to Aries Butcher; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4885) granting an increase of pension to Henry Wolf; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4886) granting an increase of pension to Barnett A. Hook; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4887) granting an increase of pension to William H. Wise; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4888) granting an increase of pension to James Campbell; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. FARR: A bill (H. R. 4889) granting a pension to Milton W. Snyder; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. REED: A bill (H. R. 4890) granting an increase of pension to John H. Doeg; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4891) granting an increase of pension to Wright T. Ellison; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4892) granting an increase of pension to Sarah A. Gould; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado: A bill (H. R. 4893) granting an increase of pension to Matilda Fellows; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4894) granting an increase of pension to Lizzie Snyder; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4895) granting an increase of pension to Homer C. Brown; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER (by request): Petition of the International Brotherhood Welfare Association, favoring donating to the unemployed all machinery used in construction of the Panama Canal as will no longer be needed; to the Committee on Labor.

Also (by request), petition of C. Z. Lynch, of Robertsville, Mo., against mutual life insurance in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ANSBERRY: Petition of Foster M. Culler, of Hicksville, and Elmer R. Rader, of Convoy, Ohio, against mutual life insurance in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ASHBROOK: Petitions of E. J. Conley, Newark; I. B. Bates and 9 other citizens of Wellersville; S. P. Wise, of Wooster; and C. S. Starner, of Big Prairie, all in the State of Ohio, protesting against the insurance clause in the pending income-tax clause in H. R. 3321; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. BALTZ: Petitions of Gustave E. Weihe, Nashville; J. H. Hohl, East St. Louis; and William Hoch, Waterloo, all in the State of Illinois, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. CARY: Petition of the George H. Smith Steel Casting Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., against increase of the duty on ferromanganese; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Yarn & Lance Drug Co., of Milwaukee, Wis., favoring immediate legislation on banking and currency reform; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, petitions of William Kander and Charles G. Wernir, against mutual life insurance in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Saratoga Victory Manufacturing Co., of Victory Mills, N. Y., against reduction of the duty on cotton goods; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DALE: Petition of the Citizens' Relief Committee of Hamilton, Ohio, relative to protection against the recurrence of floods in the Great Miami Valley; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

By Mr. ESCH: Petition of L. J. Kelison and 18 other citizens of La Crosse, Wis., protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FARR: Petition of J. M. Alexander, William Kelley, and other citizens of Pennsylvania, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GOULDEN: Petitions of sundry citizens of Philadelphia, Pa., and The Bronx, N. Y., against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois: Petition of sundry citizens of the twenty-first Illinois district against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HAMMOND: Petition of the city council of Minneapolis, Minn., favoring the passage of legislation for the Government to acquire control and ownership of all telephone and telegraph systems; to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce.

By Mr. HOWELL: Petitions of F. E. Clark, R. J. James, E. S. Alexander, and others, of Utah, against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HAYES: Petition of J. B. Upright, of Victory Mills, N. Y., protesting against the proposed reduction of the tariff on cotton goods; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of J. F. Parsons and 135 other voters of Santa Ana, E. A. Preston and 20 other voters of Garden Grove, G. A. White and 20 other voters of Downey, A. P. Machado, jr., and 45 other voters of Alvarado, W. C. Sproul and 22 other voters of Norwalk, and G. L. Faulkner and 45 other voters, all in the State of California, protesting against the proposed reduction of the tariff on sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Shermene Thacher, Woodhoff; H. B. Heacock, Pacific Grove; W. B. Mosher, San Jose; and L. W. Schmick, San Francisco, all in the State of California, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KAHN: Petition of W. C. Morris and 155 other residents of San Francisco, Niles, Norwalk, Los Angeles, Concord, Van Nuys, Hynes, Salinas, Monterey, Downey, Laws, Artesia, Pleasanton, Oxnard, Huntington Beach, Garden Grove, Anaheim, Santa Ana, Ontario, Gilroy, Meridian, Moss, El Monte, Woodland, Westminster, Pacific Grove, Colusa, Long Beach, and Marysville, all in the State of California, protesting against the proposed reduction in the duty on sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island: Petition of the city council of Providence, R. I., protesting against the use of billboards by the United States War and Navy Departments to advertise their recruiting service; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. KEY of Ohio: Petition of Frank P. Donnonworth, Bucyrus; Prof. C. A. Krout, Tiffin; W. O. Thompson, president of the Midland Mutual Life Insurance Co.; Frederick Haberman, Marion, all in the State of Ohio, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KIESS of Pennsylvania: Petition of sundry citizens of the fifteenth congressional district of Pennsylvania, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LAFFERTY: Petition of sundry business concerns and citizens of Portland, Oreg., protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LEVY: Petition of sundry milling companies in the United States, against placing flour on the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of sundry manufacturers of buttons of the States of New York and New Jersey against reduction of the duty on vegetable ivory; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of C. S. Mathews, of Louisiana, and D. Saunders's Sons (Inc.), of Yonkers, N. Y., against reduction of the duty on sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Eppinger & Russell Co., of New York, N. Y., against the duty on creosote oil; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the C. H. Parsons Co., of New York, N. Y., against the duty on jute yarns; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the American Spice Trade Association, of New York, N. Y., against the duty on ground spice; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Lancaster Leaf Tobacco Board of Trade, of Lancaster, Pa., against free cigars from the Philippine Islands; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Chamber of Commerce of Plattsburgh, N. Y., against the proposed reorganization of the Customs Service; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Joseph Dixon Crucible Co., of Buffalo, N. Y., against reduction of the duty on lead pencils; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of William Yickert, of New York City, against the clause prohibiting the importation of wild-bird plumage; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Anthony E. Roth, of New York City, against reduction of the duty on lithographs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of 4 citizens of New York City, favoring the feather proviso prohibiting the importation of skins and plumage of wild birds; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of sundry citizens of New York City, against mutual life insurance in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Bronston Bros. & Co., of New York City, against increase of the duty on blocked straw hats; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Peter F. Bell, of New York City, against reduction of the duty on stained glass; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Confectioners and Ice Cream Manufacturers' Protective Association, of New York City, favoring reduction of the duty on rock salt; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Chamber of Commerce of New York, asking the Committee on Banking and Currency to establish the method by which the income tax shall be collected; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

Also, petition of Meyer & Lange, of New York City, protesting against assessment of a fee on protests against the assessment of duty by the collector of customs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of E. A. G. Intemann, jr., asking that the duty be reduced on rock salt; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of E. A. G. Intemann, jr., protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. SCULLY: Petitions of sundry citizens of New Jersey, against mutual life insurance in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. STEENERSON: Petitions of sundry citizens of Minnesota, against mutual life insurance in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. STEPHENS of California: Petition of A. I. Hall & Sons, San Francisco, Cal., protesting against the proposed reduction of the tariff on sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Globe Grain & Milling Co. and the Great Western Milling Co., of Los Angeles, Cal., protesting against placing a duty on wheat while admitting flour free of duty; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of sundry business concerns and citizens of Los Angeles and other towns of California, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the San Francisco Labor Council, San Francisco, Cal., relative to the appointment of a chief inspector and two assistant chiefs for the inspection of locomotive boilers; to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. WALLIN: Petition of Local No. 231, Cigar Makers' Union, of Amsterdam, N. Y., against the admission of Philippine-made cigars free of duty; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of sundry residents of the thirtieth district of New York, against the inclusion of mutual life insurance in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, May 8, 1913.

The House met at 2 o'clock p. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Father in heaven, "We can not always trace the way where Thou Almighty One dost move," but we most fervently pray that, with perfect faith and confidence, we may follow where Thou dost lead, assured that though the way be often obscure, rough, and difficult at the end we shall be rewarded by a full rounded out character and hear the blessed words "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Tulley, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Senate has heard with deep sensibility the announcement of the death of the Hon. LEWIS J. MARTIN, late a Representative from the State of New Jersey.

Resolved, That a committee of seven Senators be appointed by the Vice President to join the committee appointed on the part of the House of Representatives to take order for superintending the funeral of the Hon LEWIS J. MARTIN, at Newton, N. J.

Resolved, That the Secretary communicate a copy of these resolutions to the House of Representatives and to the family of the deceased.

And that in compliance with the foregoing resolutions the Vice President had appointed Mr. HUGHES, Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey, Mr. CUMMINS, Mr. TOWNSEND, Mr. HITCHCOCK, Mr. REED, and Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas as the committee on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

H. R. 2441. An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 2441) making appropriations for the sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] asks unanimous consent to take the sundry civil appropriation bill from the Speaker's table, disagree to the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference. Is there objection?

There was no objection, and the Speaker announced as conferees on the part of the House Mr. FITZGERALD, Mr. SHERLEY, and Mr. GILLETT.

THE TARIFF.

The SPEAKER. Just before the adjournment last night the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] demanded the reading of the engrossed bill H. R. 3321.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my demand for the reading of the engrossed bill.

Mr. PAYNE. I suppose the bill will be read by title, Mr. Speaker. I move to recommit the bill with the instructions which I send to the Clerk's desk.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] rise?

Mr. MURDOCK. I have also a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. There can not be two of them at once.

Mr. MURDOCK. A parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MURDOCK. What is the practice of the House as to recognition for a motion to recommit?

The SPEAKER. The Chair laid down this rule, from which he never intends to depart unless overruled by the House, that on a motion to recommit he will give preference to the gentleman at the head of the minority list, provided he qualifies, and then go down the list of the minority of the committee until it is gotten through with. And then if no one of them offer a motion to recommit the Chair will recognize the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] to make it, but if he does not do so, will recognize the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] as the leader of the third party in the House. [Applause.]

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, the Speaker leaves out one of the essential elements as to that recognition, and that is that a man who offers a motion to recommit and who is recognized must be against the bill.

The SPEAKER. Of course. The Chair said that he would have to qualify. That is what the Chair meant by that.

Mr. MURDOCK. Then, by the Speaker's ruling the first recognition goes to the gentleman from New York?

The SPEAKER. Undoubtedly.

Mr. MURDOCK. And thereafter to whom?

The SPEAKER. The next man on the minority of the Ways and Means Committee, whoever he is, and then clear down the line, seriatim.

Mr. MURDOCK. A parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MURDOCK. The Speaker mentioned the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

The SPEAKER. The Chair will state it over again. The present occupant of the chair laid down a rule here about a year ago or more that in making this preferential motion for recommitment the Speaker would recognize the top man on the minority of the committee if he qualified—that is, if he says he is opposed to the bill—and so on down to the end of the minority list of the committee. Then, if no gentleman on the committee wants to make the motion, the Speaker will recognize the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], because he is the leader of the majority of the minority. Then, in the next place, the Speaker would recognize the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK].

Mr. MURDOCK. Now, Mr. Speaker, another parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. But in this case the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] is on the Ways and Means Committee, which would bring him in ahead, under that rule, of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

Mr. MURDOCK. Another parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MURDOCK. If the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] is recognized to move to recommit, do I have the opportunity to amend the motion to recommit?

The SPEAKER. You do if the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] is not too quick. [Laughter.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I will ask the Clerk to report the motion to recommit, embodying the amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the motion to recommit.

The Clerk read as follows:

By Mr. PAYNE:

I move to recommit the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce the tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, to the Committee on Ways and Means, with directions to that committee to report back to the House, as speedily as possible, the said bill (H. R. 3321) so amended that it will provide:

First. For a tariff commission in the following language:

"A. That a commission is hereby created, to be known as the tariff commission, which shall be composed of five members, who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The members first appointed under this act shall continue in office from the date of qualification for the terms of two, three, four, five, and six years, respectively, from and after the 1st day of July, A. D. 1913, the term of each to be designated by the President; but their successors shall be appointed for terms of six years, except that any person chosen to fill a vacancy shall be appointed only for the unexpired term of the member whom he shall succeed. The President shall designate a member of the commission to be the chairman thereof during the term for which he is appointed. Any member may, after due hearing, be removed by the President for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office. Not more than three members of said commission shall be members of the same political party. Three members of said commission shall constitute a quorum. The chairman of said commission shall receive a salary of $7,500 per annum and the other members each a salary of $7,000 per annum. The commission shall have authority to appoint a secretary and fix his compensation, and to appoint and fix the compensation of such other employees as it may find necessary to the performance of its duties.

"B. That the principal office of said commission shall be in the city of Washington. The commission, however, shall have full authority, as a body, by one or more of its members, or through its employees, to conduct investigations at any other place or places, either in the United States or foreign countries, as the commission may determine. All the expenses of the commission, including all necessary expenses for transportation incurred by the members or by their employees under their orders, in making any investigations, or upon official business in any other places than in Washington shall be allowed and paid on the presentation of itemized vouchers therefor, approved by the chairman of the commission. Should said commission require the attendance of any witness, either in Washington or any place not the home of said witness, said witness shall be paid the same fees and mileage that are paid witnesses in the courts of the United States.

"C. That is shall be the duty of said commission to investigate the cost of production of all articles which by any act of Congress now in force or hereafter enacted are made the subject of tariff legislation, with special reference to the prices paid domestic and foreign labor and the prices paid for raw materials, whether domestic or imported, entering into manufactured articles, producers' prices and retail prices of commodities, whether domestic or imported, the condition of domestic and foreign markets affecting the American products, including detailed information with respect thereto, together with all other facts which may be necessary or convenient in fixing import duties or in aiding the President and other officers of the Government in the administration of the customs laws, and said commission shall also make investigation of any such subject whenever directed by either House of Congress.

"D. That to enable the President to secure information as to the effect of tariff rates, restrictions, exactions, or any regulations imposed at any time by any foreign country upon the importation into or sale in any such foreign country of any products of the United States, and as to any export bounty paid or export duty imposed or prohibition made by any country upon the exportation of any article to the United States which discriminates against the United States or the products thereof, and to assist the President in negotiating trade agreements with foreign nations and other administrative provisions of the customs laws, the commission shall, from time to time, make report, as the President shall direct.

"E. That for the purposes of this act said commission shall have power to subpœna witnesses, to take testimony, administer oaths, and to require any person, firm, copartnership, corporation, or association engaged in the production, importation, or distribution of any article under investigation to produce books and papers relating to any matter pertaining to such investigation. In case of failure to comply with the requirements of this section, the commission may report to Congress such failure, specifying the names of such persons, the individual names of such firm or copartnership, and the names of the officers and directors of each such corporation or association so failing, which report shall also specify the article or articles produced, imported, or distributed by such person, firm, copartnership, corporation, or association, and the tariff schedule which applies to such article.

"F. That in any investigation authorized by this act the commission may obtain such evidence or information as it may deem advisable, for its confidential use, and in case the evidence or information is so obtained, said commission shall not be required to divulge the names of persons furnishing such evidence or information: Provided, That no evidence or information so secured under the provisions of this section from any person, firm, copartnership, corporation, or association shall be made public in such manner as to be available for the use of any business competitor or rival.

"G. That said commission shall make reports to Congress of its investigations, including an annual report and such special reports as the President or either House of Congress may direct. Said reports shall be printed as public documents. Ten thousand copies of the annual report shall be published and ready for distribution on the first Monday of December of each year.

"H. That upon the taking effect of this act there shall be transferred to the tariff commission hereby created all such property and equipment, books, and papers, as were possessed or used by the body heretofore known as the 'Tariff Board,' in connection with the subjects for which the tariff commission is hereby created."

Second. For a revision of Schedule K, relating to wool and manufactures of wool, as follows, to wit:

"1. All wools, hair of the camel, goat, alpaca, and other like animals shall be divided, for the purpose of fixing the duties to be charged thereon, into the two following classes:

"2. Class 1, that is to say, merino, mestiza, metz, or metis wools, or other wools of merino blood, immediate or remote, Down clothing wools, and wools of like character with any of the preceding, including Bagdad wool, China lamb's wool, Castel Branco, Adrianople skin wool or butcher's wool, and such as have been heretofore usually imported into the United States from Buenos Aires, New Zealand, Australia, Cape of Good Hope, Russia, Great Britain, Canada, Egypt, Morocco, and elsewhere, and Leicester, Cotswold, Lincolnshire, Down combing wools, Canada long wools, or other like combing wools of English blood, and usually known by the terms herein used, and all wools not hereinafter included in class 2, and also the hair of the camel, Angora goat, alpaca, and other like animals.

"3. Class 2, that is to say, Donskoi, native South American, Cordova, Valparaiso, native Smyrna, Russian camel's hair, and all such wools of like character as have been heretofore usually imported into the United States from Turkey, Greece, Syria, and elsewhere, excepting improved wools hereinafter provided for.

"4. The standard samples of all wools which are now or may be hereafter deposited in the principal customhouses of the United States, under the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be the standards for the classification of wools under this act, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to renew these standards and to make such additions to them from time to time as may be required, and he shall cause to be deposited like standards in other customhouses of the United States when they may be needed.

"5. Whenever wools of class 2 shall have been improved by the admixture of merino or English blood from their present character, as represented by the standard samples now or hereafter to be deposited in the principal customhouses of the United States, such improved wools shall be classified for duty as class 1.

"6. If any bale or package of wool or hair specified in this act, invoiced or entered as of class 2, or claimed by the importer to be dutiable as of class 2, shall contain any wool or hair subject to the rate of duty of class 1, the whole bale or package shall be subject to the rate of duty chargeable on wool of class 1; and if any bale or package be claimed by the importer to be shoddy, mungo, flocks, wool, hair, or other material of any class specified in this act, and such bale contain any admixture of any one or more of said materials, or of any other material, the whole bale or package shall be subject to duty at the highest rate imposed upon any article in said bale or package.

"7. The duty on all wools and hair of class 1, if imported in the grease, shall be laid upon the basis of its clean content. The clean content shall be determined by scouring tests which shall be made according to regulations which the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe. The duty on all wools and hair of class 1 imported in the grease shall be 18 cents per pound on the clean content, as defined above. If imported scoured, the duty shall be 19 cents per pound.

"8. The duty on all wools of class 2, including camel's hair of class 2, imported in their natural condition, shall be 7 cents per pound. If scoured, 19 cents per pound: Provided, That on consumption of wools of class 2, including camel's hair, in the manufacture of carpets, druggets and bockings, printed, colored, or otherwise, mats, rugs for floors, screens, covers, hassocks, bedsides, art squares, and portions of carpets or carpeting hereafter manufactured or produced in the United States in whole or in part from wools of class 2, including camel's hair, upon which duties have been paid, there shall be allowed to the manufacturer or producer of such articles a drawback equal in amount to the duties paid less 1 per cent of such duties on the amount of the wools of class 2, including camel's hair of class 2, contained therein; such drawback shall be paid under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

"9. The duty on wools on the skin shall be 2 cents less per pound than is imposed upon the clean content as provided for wools of class 1, and 1 cent less per pound that is imposed upon wools of class 2 imported in their natural condition, the quantity to be ascertained under such rules as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

"10. Top waste and slubbing waste, 18 cents per pound.

"11. Roving waste and ring waste, 14 cents per pound.

"12. Noils, carbonized, 14 cents per pound.

"13. Noils, not carbonized, 11 cents per pound.

"14. Garnetted waste, 11 cents per pound.

"15. Thread waste, yarn waste, and wool wastes not specified, 9½ cents per pound.

"16. Shoddy, mungo, and wool extract, 8 cents per pound.

"17. Woolen rags and flocks, 2 cents per pound.

"18. Combed wool or tops, made wholly or in part of wool, or camel's hair, 20 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 10 per cent ad valorem.

"19. Wool and hair which have been advanced in any manner or by any process of manufacture beyond the washed or scoured condition, but less advanced than yarn, not specially provided for in this section, 20 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 10 per cent ad valorem.

"20. On yarns, made wholly or in part of wool, valued at not more than 30 cents per pound, the duty shall be 21½ cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 10 per cent ad valorem.

"Valued at more than 30 cents and not more than 50 cents per pound, 21½ cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 15 per cent ad valorem.

"Valued at more than 50 cents and not more than 80 cents per pound, 21½ cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 20 per cent ad valorem.

"Valued at more than 80 cents per pound, 21½ cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 25 per cent ad valorem.

"21. On cloths, knit fabrics, flannels, felts, and all fabrics of every description made wholly or in part of wool, not specially provided for in this section, valued at not more than 40 cents per pound, the duty shall be 25 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 30 per cent ad valorem.

"Valued at more than 40 cents and not more than 60 cents per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 35 per cent ad valorem.

"Valued at more than 60 cents and not more than 80 cents per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 40 per cent ad valorem.

"Valued at more than 80 cents and not more than $1 per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 45 per cent ad valorem.

"Valued at more than $1 and not more than $1.50 per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 50 per cent ad valorem.

"Valued at more than $1.50 per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 55 per cent ad valorem.

"22. On blankets and flannels for underwear composed wholly or in part of wool, valued at not more than 40 cents per pound, the duty shall be 23½ cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 20 per cent ad valorem.

"Valued at more than 40 cents and not more than 50 cents per pound, 23½ cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 25 per cent ad valorem.

"Valued at more than 50 cents per pound, 23½ cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 30 per cent ad valorem.

"Provided, That on blankets over 3 yards in length the same duties shall be paid as on cloths.

"23. On ready-made clothing and articles of wearing apparel, knitted or woven, of every description, made up or manufactured wholly or in part and composed wholly or in part of wool, the rate of duty shall be as follows:

"If valued at not more than 40 cents per pound, the duty shall be 25 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 35 per cent ad valorem.

"If valued at more than 40 cents and not more than 60 cents per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 40 per cent ad valorem.

"If valued at more than 60 cents and not more than 80 cents per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 45 per cent ad valorem.

"If valued at more than 80 cents and not more than $1 per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 50 per cent ad valorem.

"If valued at more than $1 and not more than $1.50 per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 55 per cent ad valorem.

"If valued at more than $1.50 per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 60 per cent ad valorem.

"24. On all manufactures of every description made wholly or in part of wool, not specially provided for in this section, the duty shall be 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 50 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That if the component material of chief value in such manufactures is wood, paper, rubber, or any of the baser metals, the duty shall be 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 35 per cent ad valorem, and if the component material of chief value in such manufactures is silk, fur, precious or semiprecious stones, or gold, silver, or platinum, the duty shall be 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 55 per cent ad valorem.

"25. On handmade Aubusson, Axminster, oriental, and similar carpets and rugs, made wholly or in part of wool, the rate of duty shall be 50 per cent ad valorem; on all other carpets of every description, druggets and bockings, printed, colored, or otherwise, mats, rugs for floors, screens, covers, hassocks, bedsides, art squares, and portions of carpets or carpeting, made wholly or in part of wool, the duty shall be 30 per cent ad valorem.

"26. Whenever, in any schedule of this act, the word 'wool' is used in connection with a manufactured article of which it is a component material, it shall be held to include wool or hair of the sheep, camel, goat, alpaca, or other animal, whether manufactured by the woolen, worsted, felt, or any other process."

Third. For a revision of Schedule I, relating to cotton manufactures, which shall provide such classifications of, and such tariff rates upon, the articles enumerated therein as shall be equal, as to the articles produced in the United States, to the difference in cost of production in the United States and in foreign countries of the articles enumerated in accordance with the facts found by the Tariff Board in its report transmitted to Congress on the 26th day of March, 1912.

Fourth. For a revision of the remaining tariff schedules so as to provide tariff rates which shall be equal, as to the articles produced in the United States, to the estimated difference in cost of production in the United States and in foreign countries of the articles enumerated to the extent of reasonable protection of home industries.

Fifth. In revising said schedules, the tariff rates shall be adjusted by specific duties on the units of quantity of each article so far as the same be practicable.

During the reading of the foregoing, the following occurred:

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, in the motion to recommit there is contained the language of the Payne tariff-commission bill, which has already been before the House, and there is also the language of the Payne woolen-schedule revision bill, which has also been before the House; and I ask unanimous consent that the reading of those bills may not be had, but that they may be inserted in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] asks unanimous consent that the two propositions, one about the tariff commission and the other about the woolen schedule, be omitted from the reading.

Mr. MANN. That they be printed in the RECORD, but not read.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order against the motion to recommit.

Mr. MANN. I would like to have the rest of the motion put.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will recognize the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] to make his point of order when the time comes.

The Clerk concluded the reading of the motion to recommit.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the motion to recommit contains substantive matters that are not germane to the bill under consideration.

I shall not take up the time of the House in engaging in a lengthy discussion of the motion at this time, because I think the Speaker is following the precedents. In the last Congress he himself ruled that where a matter that is not germane is contained in a motion to recommit it carries out with it all the other questions contained in the motion to recommit.

The point that I make and the feature to which I direct my attention chiefly is the part of the motion that seeks to establish a tariff board or commission. My contention is, Mr. Speaker, that that is not germane because it does not relate to the object and the purpose of this bill.

The question was very thoroughly discussed in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, and inasmuch as the Speaker was present at the time that I addressed myself to the Chairman of the committee, and heard it, I shall not inflict it on the Speaker again.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the motion to recommit contains a direction to the Committee on Ways and Means to report the bill back to the House with a provision creating a tariff commission. It might be well to state that it is not the theory of the motion, or the notion of this side of the House, that that revision of the tariff should be postponed until the tariff commission to be created had reported. We do not ask or suggest that. But the proposition for the creation of a tariff commission is submitted in order to obtain the information upon which Congress may hereafter act in making further revisions of the tariff from time to time.

The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] makes the point of order that the tariff-commission proposition is not germane to the provisions in this bill. What is the bill? It is a bill providing for a general and complete revision of the tariff; providing also for the collection of internal revenue in the way of an income tax, and making many other provisions, some of which are designed to give information to Congress for future revisions of the tariff. The whole scope of tariff legislation is entered into in this bill, revising every item in the tariff list, both the dutiable list and the free list. Then it provides other contemplated action in the future upon the tariff.

We contend that a provision creating a tariff commission to give further information to Congress in contemplation of future revision of the tariff is a part and parcel of the proposition to now revise the tariff and obtain information such as is sought in this bill for other revisions of the tariff.

It is true that this proposition was presented in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union and ruled out of order by the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GARRETT], then occupying the chair. In an observation made by the occupant of the chair, I believe, he stated that there was fundamental objection to considering a tariff commission germane to a tariff revision. We consider it fundamental and part of a complete tariff revision to provide for obtaining full information for future tariff revision. Do the gentlemen on the other side think that this tariff law, when it is written, is like the laws of the Medes and Persians—unchangeable?

Do gentlemen on the Democratic side assume that the final word has been written when this tariff law has been approved? Do they consider that there never will be any change in the tariff law in the future? If it be fundamental that a tariff commission to obtain information is not related to a revision of the tariff, it can only be upon the supposition that this tariff law, when written, is the end of tariff legislation.

So that if there were no provisions in this bill at all except the dutiable list and the free list I would contend that the provision for a tariff commission was germane to the proposition to revise the tariff as to those propositions, the dutiable and the free list, because men of sense everywhere must know that there will be further revision and changes in the tariff in the future; and to assume that the obtaining of information will be of no aid in future revisions of the tariff is to assume that all knowledge now resides in a small membership in this House of Representatives.

But there are other provisions in the bill to which the tariff-commission proposition is also germane. I call the attention of the Speaker to paragraph R of Section III on page 183:

That whenever imported merchandise is subject to an ad valorem rate of duty, or to a duty based upon or regulated in any manner by the value thereof, the duty shall be assessed upon the actual market value or wholesale price thereof, at the time of exportation to the United States, in the principal markets of the country from whence exported; that such actual market value shall be held to be the price at which such merchandise is freely offered for sale to all purchasers in said markets, in the usual wholesale quantities, and the price which the seller, shipper, or owner would have received, and was willing to receive, for such merchandise when sold in the ordinary course of trade in the usual wholesale quantities.

And further, in line 22 of page 184—

That the words "value," or "actual market value," or "wholesale price," whenever used in this act, or in any law relating to the appraisement of imported merchandise, shall be construed to be the actual market value or wholesale price of such, or similar merchandise comparable in value therewith, as defined in this act.

Here is one proposition in the bill which clearly contemplates the learning by the officials of this country of the market value and the wholesale price of all or any of the commodities carried by the tariff bill. And, further, paragraph U of the same section provides:

U. That if any person, persons, corporations, or other bodies, selling, shipping, consigning, or manufacturing merchandise exported to the United States shall fail or refuse to submit to the inspection of a duly accredited investigating officer of the United States, when so requested to do, any or all of his books, records, or accounts pertaining to the value or classification of such merchandise then the Secretary of the Treasury, in his discretion, is authorized while such failure or refusal continues to exclude from entry any and all merchandise sold, shipped, consigned, or manufactured by such person, persons, corporations, or other bodies and imported into the United States.

Here is a paragraph of the bill which clearly authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury, or the other proper officials of the Government of the United States, to investigate books, records, and accounts of every person offering to sell, ship, consign, or manufacture merchandise to be exported to the United States through a duly accredited investigating officer of the United States. Is not that as broad in its purpose, to the extent that it goes, as the creation of a tariff commission to ascertain prices and cost abroad?

This proposition authorizes the investigation of foreign factories, of foreign manufacturing establishments, of foreign wholesalers, and foreign jobbers, and any person engaged in the selling of produce or products to be shipped to the United States.

Again, paragraph V of Section III provides:

V. That if any person, persons, corporations, or other bodies engaged in the importation of merchandise into the United States or engaged in dealing with such imported merchandise shall fail or refuse to submit to the inspection of a duly accredited investigating officer of the United States, upon request so to do from the chief officer of customs at the port where such merchandise is entered, any or all of his books, records, or accounts pertaining to the value or classification of any such imported merchandise, then the Secretary of the Treasury, in his discretion, is authorized while such failure or refusal continues, to exclude from entry any and all merchandise consigned or shipped, or intended for delivery, to such person, persons, corporations, or other bodies so failing or refusing.

What do we find in these two paragraphs? First, that the investigating officer of the United States may make investigations of any foreign producer, any foreign shipper, any foreign manufacturer, any foreign factory; and next, that he may make investigation of any importer, any person who has bought foreign goods and brought them to the United States, any merchant who brings goods into the United States, any manufacturer who brings raw materials into the United States. Anyone who imports foreign goods must throw his books open for investigation by the investigating officer, or he can not import goods. On the one hand, no exporter can ship goods to the United States unless he permits an investigation of his books, showing the prices and costs of production, and no person, on the other hand, can import goods into the United States unless he produces his books showing the cost so far as it applies to the goods.

Now, the only difference between the two propositions, the one in the bill and the one we submit, is this: The two provisions in the bill authorize the Treasury Department to make these wide and sweeping investigations, but the Treasury Department is a partisan department under the control of one party in the Government. We propose a nonpartisan commission to make the investigation which will help the confidence of all political parties, of all the people in the country, so far as it is possible to have confidence in the report of any board. Will people say, when you offer a proposition to have a political partisan investigation, that it is not germane to change the persons who make the investigation into a nonpartisan or bipartisan board? Certainly it is only a change of the persons who are to make the investigation. Investigation is provided for in the bill, but unfortunately, as political parties go, seldom does one party have complete confidence in the report of the political agents of the other party.

Not only that, Mr. Speaker, but in Section IV of this bill, page 195, paragraph A, it is provided—

That for the purpose of readjusting the present duties on importations into the United States and at the same time to encourage the export trade of this country, the President of the United States is authorized and empowered to negotiate trade agreements with foreign nations wherein mutual concessions are made looking toward freer trade relations and further reciprocal expansion of trade and commerce: Provided, however, That said trade agreements before becoming operative shall be submitted to the Congress of the United States for ratification or rejection.

Here is a proposition authorizing the President to make investigation. For what purpose? For the purpose of having legislation by Congress. Because the only way that Congress can ratify or reject the convention would be by legislation. Here is a proposition authorizing the President to make investigation which must be made before he enters into trade conventions or trade agreements and submit these trade agreements to Congress for its disposition. How can it be claimed that a provision directing the President to appoint a nonpartisan tariff board to make these investigations is not germane to the proposition requiring or authorizing the President to make trade agreements and submit them to Congress for legislation?

The purpose of a tariff commission is to obtain information for the purpose of aiding Congress in future legislation upon the tariff. The purpose of paragraph A, Section IV, is to have the President obtain information and submit that information to Congress for future legislation by Congress in regard to the tariff.

Not only that, but on page 215, paragraph R, of Section IV, it is provided—

That whenever articles are exported to the United States of a class or kind made or produced in the United States, if the export or actual selling price to an importer in the United States, or the price at which such goods are consigned is less than the fair market value of the same article when sold for home consumption in the usual and ordinary course in the country whence exported to the United States at the time of its exportation to the United States, there shall, in addition to the duties otherwise established, be levied, collected, and paid on such article on its importation into the United States a special duty (or dumping duty) equal to the difference between the said export or actual selling price of the article for export or the price at which such goods are consigned, and the said fair market value thereof for home consumption, provided that the said special duty shall not exceed 15 per cent ad valorem in any case and that goods whereon the duties otherwise established are equal to 50 per cent ad valorem shall be exempt from such special duty.

Here is another proposition requiring an investigation of the prices at which all articles imported into the United States sell in the country from which they come if they are on the dutiable list.

Then I call the attention of the Speaker to paragraph S of Section IV, page 216, which reads:

S. That the President shall cause to be ascertained each year, the amount of imports and exports of the articles enumerated in the various paragraphs in section 1 of this act and cause an estimate to be made of the amount of the domestic production and consumption of said articles, and where it is ascertained that the imports under any paragraph amount to less than 5 per cent of the domestic consumption of the articles enumerated he shall advise the Congress as to the facts and his conclusions by special message.

What does this section contemplate? It contemplates obtaining by the President of the United States information to be transmitted to the Congress in contemplation of future tariff legislation. It means nothing except that when the President ascertains certain facts he shall advise Congress what, in his judgment, ought to be made in the way of changes in the tariff law. Now, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] says that while the bill provides that the President shall obtain this information, it is not germane for us to say how the President shall obtain the information. He says that it is in order to provide that the President shall obtain the information only through Democratic officials, but not in order to provide that the President may appoint a bipartisan or nonpartisan board to obtain the information. In either case the information is to be transmitted to Congress for future action or legislation by Congress.

Now, Mr. Speaker, what are the rules in reference to this matter? The old rule of the House, which has been in the rules of the House for many years, paragraph 7 or Rule XVI, provides:

And no motion or proposition on the subject different from that under consideration shall be admitted under color of amendment.

There have been some rulings on this provision in the rules. I will call the attention of the Speaker to a rather notable ruling made not by a regular Speaker of the House, but by one of the great parliamentarians of the House, who has often been denounced as an arbitrary parliamentarian and accused of all the faults which could come from arbitrary power, the Hon. John Dalzell, formerly of this House.

When the bill providing for the Department of Commerce and Labor was before the House——

The SPEAKER. From what is the gentleman reading?

Mr. MANN. I am reading from a private book.

The SPEAKER. The Chair supposed the gentleman was reading from a public document. The gentleman will proceed.

Mr. MANN. The Chair will find the proposition in the RECORD of January 17, 1903, at page 927. I had charge of that bill in the House. The bill provided for a Department of Commerce and Labor. The gentleman from Alabama, Mr. RICHARDSON, offered a motion to recommit with instructions. The beginning of that motion was in this form:

Resolved, That the pending bill be recommitted to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce with instructions to report a bill or bills to the House to create and establish two separate departments—a Department of Labor and a Department of Commerce—each of the same dignity as existing departments, and each with a Secretary in the Cabinet of the President, and to assign to each of the departments proper and relative bureaus; and with instructions also to strike out section 7 of the bill and insert the following as a section.

Then follows a couple of columns in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of instructions which were not covered in the original bill. To this motion I made the point of order. Here was a proposition in the form of a bill to create one department of the Government and a motion to recommit with instructions to bring in one or more bills to create two departments of the Government, with different authority from that carried in the bill before the House. If this proposition of ours now under consideration is subject to a point of order, then the proposition to recommit made at that time would be subject to a point of order tenfold. After discussion in the House the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. Dalzell, who was acting as Speaker pro tempore, overruled the point of order and held the motion to recommit in order, because the House, having jurisdiction of the general subject in the bill before the House, could send it back to a committee with such instructions as it pleased.

The SPEAKER. Was that on a motion to recommit or a motion to refer?

Mr. MANN. That was a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will ask the gentleman himself if he believes that decision was correct?

Mr. MANN. I do.

The SPEAKER. Does it not run counter to sundry decisions rendered by various Speakers?

Mr. MANN. The distinguished gentleman now in the chair did not think so at that time. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. But a man is supposed to learn something in the course of time, and it seems the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] also changed his mind. [Renewed laughter.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, when I am in charge of a bill, like the gentleman from Alabama, I take advantage of technical propositions where the other side is seeking to gain advantage; but we had in the chair a parliamentarian who, acting as Speaker, was unwilling to endeavor to give the Republican side of the House a partisan advantage, and he held the motion to recommit was in order and we were compelled to go on record on a roll call to defeat it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will ask the gentleman another question, and that is if he thinks that decision is in point?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, if I did not, I would not have quoted it. Of course, it is in point, directly, squarely in point.

What is the other provision of the rule? There is the further provision in the rules, put there for the first time by a Democratic Congress, being paragraph 3 of Rule XXI, that—

No amendment shall be in order to any bill affecting revenue which is not germane to the subject matter in the bill; nor shall any amendment to any item of such bill be in order which does not directly relate to the item to which the amendment is proposed.

The only portion of that rule which can be in point is the provision that no amendment shall be in order to any bill affecting revenue which is not germane to the subject matter in the bill. What was the reason for adopting that provision? There was considerable agitation in the country toward having tariff legislation by schedules, or piecemeal, instead of in a complete bill. It was the intention of the Democratic side of the House during the Sixty-second Congress to bring in tariff-schedule bills to revise the tariff schedule by schedule. There were a good many propositions submitted both here and at the other end of the Capitol designed to prevent amendments on the floor of either the House or the Senate which would add one schedule of the tariff law to another schedule of the tariff law. If a bill were brought in revising the chemical schedule, these propositions were designed to rule out of order amendments revising, say, the metal schedule or the woolen schedule; and the Democratic majority wrote this provision into the rules for the sole purpose, as I believe, of responding to that sentiment then prevailing, that tariff revision should be schedule by schedule. But even if it should be applied strictly to a tariff revision in a complete bill, I contend that the provision which we have offered is germane to the subject matter in the bill. What is the provision which we have offered? Outside of the provision for the appointment of the commission and regulating the powers of the commission, what is the commission to do as we propose?

That it shall be the duty of said commission to investigate the cost of production of all articles which by any act of Congress now in force or hereafter enacted are made the subject of tariff legislation.

Do we not have provisions in the bill which makes that in order?

It shall be the duty of the commission to investigate the cost of the production of all articles which by any act of Congress now in force or hereafter enacted are made the subject of tariff legislation.

There are many items in this bill authorizing the President or the Secretary of the Treasury to investigate the cost of production through the examination of books of all the articles which are the subject of tariff legislation. Then comes the additional provision or limitation or direction in our motion:

With special reference to the prices paid domestic and foreign labor and the prices paid for raw materials, whether domestic or imported, entering into manufactured articles, producers' prices and retail prices of commodities, whether domestic or imported, the condition of domestic and foreign markets affecting the American products, including detailed information with respect thereto, together with all other facts which may be necessary or convenient in fixing import duties or in aiding the President and other officers of the Government in the administration of the customs laws, and said commission shall also make investigation of any such subject whenever directed by either House of Congress.

Simply providing for a nonpartisan or bipartisan tariff board to obtain the same information which, under the bill, the President or the Secretary of the Treasury would be enabled to obtain through political partisan sources. And the further provision in our motion is:

That to enable the President to secure information as to the effect of tariff rates, restrictions, exactions, or any regulations imposed at any time by any foreign country upon the importation into or sale in any such foreign country of any products of the United States, and as to any export bounty paid or export duty imposed or prohibition made by any country upon the exportation of any article to the United States which discriminates against the United States or the products thereof, and to assist the President in negotiating trade agreements with foreign nations and other administrative provisions of the customs laws, the commission shall, from time to time, make report, as the President shall direct.

These are the essential powers conferred upon the commission, except those powers which are accessory for the purpose of carrying into effect the directions to the commission to obtain facts. Now, Mr. Speaker, I am going to do myself the honor to call the Speaker's attention to the motion to recommit, which the Speaker, then minority leader, made four years ago. True, it is rather mean to do so——

The SPEAKER. Go ahead; that is all right.

Mr. MANN. But I guess the Speaker, like myself, is very callous to all these things and takes them either coming or going. It is true that four years ago, on the motion made by the distinguished gentleman from Missouri [Mr. CLARK] to recommit the bill, this side of the House, not being afraid, not being cowards, always willing to go on record, did not raise the point of order. We were willing to face the issue and willing to vote upon it. [Applause on the Republican side.] Over there you are afraid to face the issue; you are afraid to vote upon it; you invoke the technical rules, which we did not invoke four years ago. I do not know what the ruling would have been if there had been a point of order made on the motion to recommit four years ago, but my own judgment is that, with the broadness of mind of the gentleman then occupying the Speaker's chair, the Hon. Joseph G. Cannon, he would have overruled the point of order and held that any proposition relating to the tariff was in order and that the House could vote it up or down. Four years ago the present Speaker made a motion to recommit.

Among other things, he provided for a maximum and a minimum tariff. [Applause on the Republican side.] He voted for it, as did the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], seeking to obtain power. In a motion to recommit, half a column long, nearly half of the provision was for the purpose of providing a maximum and minimum tariff—nearly half their motion, nearly half the proposition they submitted four years ago was to provide a maximum and minimum tariff. Now, when they have the power to provide a maximum and minimum tariff they hold up their hands in holy horror at the idea, and refuse to accept an amendment from this side of the House to put a maximum and minimum in the tariff bill. When they were outside seeking power they wanted maximum and minimum; inside, having power, no, no; stay back. And the motion made by the gentleman from Missouri, now Speaker, four years ago also provided:

Whenever the President of the United States shall be satisfied that the price of any commodity or article of merchandise has been enhanced in consequence of any monopoly or trust in the United States, he shall issue his proclamation suspending the collection of all customs duties or import taxes on like articles of merchandise or commodities brought from foreign countries. Such suspension shall continue as long as such enhancement in price of such commodity or article of merchandise exists, and until revoked by the President.

The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] would say that that proposition was not germane to a tariff bill. In the last Congress, when a similar proposition was offered on some of the tariff schedule bills, it was ruled out of order as not germane to a tariff bill, under a technical ruling, I suppose, not germane to a tariff schedule bill, although the Speaker apparently thought four years ago it was germane to a tariff revision bill. And next:

Amend by reducing and adjusting rates in all schedules so that the duties shall not exceed the difference in the cost of labor in America and abroad, and shall be upon a basis to produce increased revenue for the Government and competitive prices for the American consumer.

I notice, by the way, that neither of these important provisions are covered in the existing bill. Nearly every item of importance in the motion to recommit four years ago is left out of the tariff bill now. If the Democratic side of the House thought four years ago they ought to be in the bill, do they now contend that it is improper for us to offer the proposition? Having omitted them themselves, do they go so far as to say that what they advocated should be in a tariff bill four years ago is now improper to suggest from this side of the House? Is the Speaker prepared to rule that his motion to recommit four years ago was buncombe, that he did not mean it, that he knew it was not germane, that he knew it had nothing to do with the tariff, or will he hold that what he offered four years ago was germane to the bill then, and that similar propositions are germane to the bill now?

Mr. Speaker, I do not believe that the political necessities of the Democrats are so severe that they must call upon you to render at this time a partisan decision to preserve them from the wrath of the country. And I hope that the Speaker will make the ruling, in accordance with the rules and the precedents of what is clearly germane to any tariff legislation, that a provision for a tariff commission is in order. [Applause on the Republican side.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I am sure that the Chair has been entertained by the interesting political discussion which the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] has just delivered. But as to the criticism of the point of order, Mr. Speaker, I fail to see that the gentleman has thrown any light on the situation. The gentleman criticizes the fact that the Speaker four years ago offered a motion to recommit that contained instructions in reference to a minimum and maximum provision. The gentleman from Illinois remembers as well as I do that that very subject matter was in the Payne tariff bill, and the only change that was suggested was to reverse the situation in the bill and make the conventional tariff the maximum and a reduction of 25 per cent the minimum, instead of the situation as it stands in the bill to-day. Now, could any man doubt that to reverse the proposition in the bill was germane to the subject matter of the bill? And yet the gentleman would have the Speaker overrule this motion because he was guilty of offering an amendment to a proposition, distinctly stated in the bill under consideration. Mr. Speaker, a rule of this House provides that an amendment—and this is an amendment, so far as the consideration of it is concerned—must be germane to the bill, to the subject matter in the bill, and the subject matter in the paragraph to which it is offered.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Illinois contends that a tariff board to be used for the purpose of making a tariff bill is germane to a general tariff bill because the two are related to each other. If that is true, if there were a provision before the Speaker now to consider a paragraph levying a tax on wheat, would the Speaker hold that to amend the provision by levying a tax on a threshing machine would be germane?

The SPEAKER. He would not.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The threshing machine takes the wheat from the straw and drops it into the sack. The gentleman wants to create a threshing machine to make a tariff bill, and asks you to hold that a threshing machine in a tariff bill is germane to the subject. [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, does the gentleman yield for a question?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman yield to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. MANN. In this bill, if threshing machines were not mentioned, would an amendment to put them on the free list or put them on the dutiable list be in order?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It would not be germane to the paragraph that taxed wheat.

Mr. MANN. But we are not offering this amendment to a paragraph.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I referred it to a paragraph.

Mr. MANN. Yes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The same proposition applies to the whole bill. Mr. Speaker, you might just as well say that the water that comes out of a pump is germane to the pump, because they are related to each other. [Laughter on the Democratic side.]

In reference to the decision that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] referred to, decided by the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. Dalzell, relating to a bill establishing a Department of Commerce and Labor, why, Mr. Speaker, no man could question, when you brought in a bill here providing for a great department, one to administer affairs relating to commerce and one relating to affairs in reference to labor, and join them together and call it a "Department of Commerce and Labor," that it would not be germane to say "instead of one department we shall have two, and in one set of these bureaus a department of labor and in another set a department of commerce." They were related; the subject matter was the same.

But the question in a case of this kind is that the subject matter of the amendment must be directly related to the subject matter of the bill, and not indirectly related. And, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Illinois in his argument has most forcefully presented to the Speaker the necessity of maintaining that rule. The purpose of the rules of this House is that legislation that comes before the House may be carefully considered and well thought out by the committees before it is presented to the House for its consideration.

Now, look at the scope of legislation that the gentleman from Illinois by his argument would invite any Member of the House, without thought or consideration, to force the House to vote upon. Why, he points out the fact that this bill contains a provision for the inspection of the books of foreign merchants under some circumstances and asks, "How we are going to obtain that information unless we establish a tariff board?" Why, Mr. Speaker, to-day we have agents in our foreign service, both in the Treasury Department and in the State Department, that are charged with that duty as far as they can exercise it; and if it is necessary to amend this bill, or if any proposition is germane to this bill that relates indirectly to the inspection of the books, then, Mr. Speaker, by your decision, if you hold that way, you would open a revenue bill to an entire reorganization of both the Treasury Department and the Consular Service of the United States. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] says that because we have charged the President of the United States with the duty of laying before the Congress of the United States certain facts relating to the importation of foreign goods, we must of necessity have a tariff board to perform that service. Why, Mr. Speaker, no man knows better than does the gentleman from Illinois that the Democratic Party has already established the machinery of government qualified not only to ascertain that fact but also to ascertain every fact that he seeks to have ascertained by the establishment of a tariff board. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

More than that, Mr. Speaker, we have established a Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce that goes far beyond anything that these gentlemen desire to obtain in their tariff board, and it is well for the country to know it. It not only has the power to investigate the question of cost either here or abroad, the amount of imports and exports and American consumption, but when a great manufacturing institution is ready to threaten its laborers with a reduction of wages because they say there has been adverse action and legislation in Congress, or to reflect on the action of the Government of the United States, that bureau has the power to walk into their offices and ascertain whether there is real reason for their cutting the rates of wages of their labor or whether it is merely a selfish attempt to put money into their own pockets. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The statement has been made that this tariff bill will act on labor and affect the wages of laboring men. I give you notice now that when the men from whom you bring that message endeavor to grind labor in the interest of Republican politics there is a bureau of this Government that is going to ascertain the reason why. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Now, Mr. Speaker, if you were by your decision to open this bill to amendments that might indirectly relate to the subject matter of the bill and not directly relate to it, you would give the most severe blow to the opportunity of this Congress to legislate on revenue matters that was ever given to it. If this Congress can not bring in a bill that is confined to the subject matter of taxation, without being forced to go into the byways and the alleys of indiscriminate legislation, but must submit to have tied to it or be assaulted by any class of partisan legislation, discriminating legislation, or legislation that is intended to deflect public sentiment from the real issue before the people, if you are going to open the gates for that kind of consideration instead of the real subject matter of the bill, then any revenue bill that comes before this House will be in danger of being sandbagged before it can reach the date of its mature consideration. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MURDOCK rose.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] is recognized for five minutes on the point of order.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, the most miraculous thing that could happen at this moment would be for you to overrule the point of order of the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD]. [Laughter.]

It is my observation in this House that rulings from the Chair on great political questions are made up of three ingredients: First, the moss-grown precedents and practices of the House; second, the political necessities of the hour; and, third, some mysterious and ill-defined quality which is supposed to reside in the bosom of the Speaker which permits him to do just about as he pleases. [Laughter.]

I wish it were otherwise. I wish it were possible to offer a tariff commission to this bill. I wish it not because I am for the miserable makeshift of a commission offered by the gentleman from New York [applause and laughter]—for I am not—but in order that I might have an opportunity to offer my proposition for an efficient tariff board.

For days the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] has here reiterated his fidelity to the proposition of a tariff commission. Why? Because he remembers that when his party was in power, when it had the Speaker and the House, when it had the Senate and the President, when it could have given this country a tariff commission, it failed to give it. [Applause on the Democratic side.] The gentleman from Illinois is now grasping at straws, and technical straws at that. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] accuse you Democrats of cowardice. The gentleman from Illinois says, "Ah, four years ago we"—speaking for the Republican leadership—"were not afraid." They were not. Look at them now! [Laughter.]

The Speaker of the House said last night upon this floor that this tariff bill had been given more consideration than any tariff bill brought in for years by the Republican Party. That is true. [Applause on the Democratic side.] But he did not have to go very far to say that. [Laughter.] Four years ago almost to this hour the Republican leaders brought before this body a long omnibus tariff bill, and with it a rule, and the rule permitted this great body to reach only five items in the bill. Listen! Lumber, hides, barley, barley malt, and a single amendment on oil, which after a fight was finally put upon the free list, with the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] voting against the motion. [Laughter on the Democratic side.]

But with this bill what have you Democrats done? This bill is the creation of the Ways and Means Committee. It is not your work. This House has had nothing to do with this bill. It was brought out of the Ways and Means Committee into a Democratic caucus, where it was given perfunctory consideration, and only perfunctory consideration. Thence it was brought to this House with the brand of the Ways and Means Committee burned in its hide, and it has not been taken out since. You have in the course of two weeks gone through a sham battle here, with the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] rising every few minutes and reiterating his reestablished fidelity to a tariff commission. [Laughter.] The chairman of the Ways and Means Committee [Mr. UNDERWOOD] has allowed debate to run for a while, and then has cut it off, finally passing on serenely to the next item in the bill. You have not considered this bill. You could not consider this bill. No American Congress can consider an omnibus tariff bill. It is an outrage upon the American people to bring an omnibus tariff bill into Congress. The Democratic Party did it in the right way last year, by separate bills. There is only one way to revise the tariff, in justice to business.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MURDOCK. Let me have two minutes more.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is recognized for two minutes more.

Mr. DYER. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Missouri rise?

Mr. DYER. Did the gentleman ask unanimous consent?

The SPEAKER. He does not have to ask it. The Chair yields him the time.

Mr. DYER. I do not want to interrupt the gentleman speaking, but I want to know what is before the House.

Mr. MURDOCK. A point of order.

The SPEAKER. A point of order against this motion to recommit.

Mr. DYER. I desire to state that I shall insist hereafter upon speeches being upon the point of order.

The SPEAKER. That is entirely within the discretion of the Chair.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MOORE. I would like to know if the Chair would like to be further informed by the gentleman from Kansas on the point of order. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. That is exactly what the Chair gave him the few minutes for. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, there is only one way to revise the tariff justly to business and to industry and to labor, and that is schedule by schedule, with deliberation, with a chance for consideration, and with separate votes on these schedules. [Applause.] That has never been the Republican way. Last year it was the Democratic way, but you have rejected it. To-day the only party in the country that proposes that sort of revision of the tariff is the Progressive Party, and that party will eventually win for this proposition. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BURKE] is recognized.

Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] has just adverted to the fact that his experience here has led him to the conclusion that rulings by the Speaker have on many occasions been guided by expediency. One of the real genuine pleasant memories that I shall cherish when I retire from this body is that arising from the fact that two great Speakers under whom I have had the honor to serve have invariably, so far as my experience goes, been guided by a suggestion made by a great Speaker to me on an occasion when I was called upon to serve as Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. He said, "My friend, when you recognize Members for debate you may strain a point, possibly, for your party; but when you rule on a parliamentary or constitutional question you never rule for party, but you always rule for posterity."

That has been the rule that has invariably marked the record of the present Speaker [applause], and that was the rule that marked his predecessor. [Applause.]

Now, as to the point of order pending before this House, the Speaker of the House in the conclusion of debate yesterday said that it took three elements to make a tariff bill—219 men in the House, 39 men in the Senate, and 1 man in the White House. Recognizing the three elements that are essential to the construction of a great revenue measure, to what particular provision in the bill does the motion submitted by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] and so ably sustained by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] refer?

Paragraph S, page 216, does what? It directs that the President shall cause to be ascertained—not that the President shall ascertain, but he shall cause to be ascertained, evidently by other individuals and other agents—the volume of articles imported and exported into and from the United States. What articles? Articles enumerated in Section I of this bill. Section I covers 132 pages and runs from acid to zaffer. The whole range of articles used by man in the United States, for which we are legislating, is affected by the paragraph S, and the paragraph imposes upon the President the authority and duty of ascertaining the volume and character of these articles imported and exported every year.

Now, manifestly, the President must invoke some agency in the exercise of this authority; and in doing so, has not the Congress of the United States the right, when it imposes upon him that duty, power, or right, to designate the character of the agency which he must designate under the circumstances to ascertain the facts in question?

There are three things done in this bill. You revise the rates governing the imports into this country; you revise the manner of administering the revenue law; and, third and finally, you go further and provide the method by which the tariff laws of the present shall be revised in the future, because you state in this paragraph the purpose of directing the President to ascertain these facts so that he may advise the Congress of these facts and his conclusions at a later date.

Manifestly you are not imposing upon the Chief Executive the duty of engaging in idle words or sending meaningless messages to this or another body. You are imposing upon him the discharge of the duty for the purpose of bringing about a correction of the abuses that may arise from the passage of this bill or other legislation now in existence. [Applause.]

Therefore the motion to recommit, when it designates the instrumentality through which that work shall be done, does no violence to the rule requiring amendments to be germane, but is in perfect accord with one of the main purposes of this bill, and therefore should be held in order. [Applause.]

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I regret that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] found it necessary to use harsh language toward this side of the House in discussing a technical question of order under the rules. If my recollection be correct, the most scared political party the United States ever knew was on the other side of the aisle in March, 1909, and there was little difference between the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] as to which of them was most frightened. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] will find before he has been acting in his present position long that the moss-grown precedents to which he refers are the most valuable assets in his category as a leader; and had it not been for them he could not have submitted to the House on the opening day of the Congress a motion which his side, or his aggregation, offered to recommit the rules with instructions to report them back with certain amendments. So that when he is more familiar with the philosophy and the history of the rules of the House he will be less likely to indulge in criticisms of the rules or of the motives actuating honorable men in enforcing and imposing the rules upon Members of the House.

Mr. Speaker, the pending question was elaborately argued the other day and decided by a distinguished parliamentarian in the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union. It speaks well for the temerity, if not for the discretion, of the gentlemen on that side that they expect the Speaker, after having read the previous arguments of the gentlemen and the decision of the Chair, to reverse the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GARRETT] who presided on that occasion. It would be as surprising as the statement of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] that that side of the House believes a complete revision of the tariff includes a provision for a tariff board. During the past 16 or 17 years the Republican Party has made two or three revisions of the tariff, and not until the dying days of their power did it occur to them that a tariff board might be of any service to them or to the country. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] occupied similar positions in that matter. Even the distinguished leader of the gentleman from Kansas during his seven years in the White House never suggested that the Congress or himself needed the help of a tariff board in revising the tariff, and his successor, whom he himself nominated and elected, did not awaken to the necessity until he realized the enormity of the Payne-Aldrich bill that had been foisted upon him.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] called attention to one decision which was not referred to in the previous discussion of this point of order in Committee of the Whole. In 1903 Mr. MANN made a point of order against the motion made by Mr. RICHARDSON of Alabama to recommit a bill providing for the creation of a Department of Commerce and Labor to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, with instructions to divide the bill and report two separate bills creating two departments. The gentleman from Illinois made the point of order against the motion to recommit—

That it directs the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce to report a bill creating a Department of Labor, which, under the rules of the House, can not be done by this committee [the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce].

Then his present collaborator and able assistant, Mr. PAYNE, chimed in:

And besides it is not germane.

Mr. MANN, interrupting Mr. RICHARDSON of Tennessee, who was about to discuss the point of order, said:

I make the further point that a bill to create a Department of Labor is not germane as an amendment to the bill pending before the House.

The distinguished Speaker pro tempore at that time, Mr. Dalzell, held, first, that the House had the power, which has never been questioned, by motion to refer any bill to any committee, regardless of whether the rules conferred jurisdiction upon a particular committee over a particular subject, and the Speaker pro tempore added:

This is a bill creating a Department of Commerce and Labor. The proposition contained in the motion is to return this bill to that committee with instructions to separate the two branches of the subject, and to report instead of a measure for one department a measure for two departments, covering the same subjects as are now covered in the bill pending before the House. The Chair holds that the motion is germane.

Mr. Speaker, it is quite apparent that no such situation exists here. If there were a provision in this bill creating a tariff commission, and the gentleman moved to recommit, with instructions to segregate that from the other provisions of the bill, it would be in order. There are numerous decisions, to which it is not necessary to call attention, that motions to recommit with instructions can not prevail against a point of order if the instructions are such that if the motion were offered in the form of an amendment it could not prevail. The question to be determined is, Is this provision for the establishment of a tariff commission germane? The rulings distinctly lay down the proposition that if the proposed amendment or motion is upon a subject matter different from the subject matter in the bill it is not germane, and is not in order. The bill under consideration provides for the reduction of tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes.

There are many decisions where the words "other purposes" occur in the title of the bill. In such cases the Chair has examined the provisions of the bill to determine whether there was anything in the bill upon which the proposed motion or amendment could be hinged. And, without reviewing at length the provisions to which reference has been made, I think it is quite clear that nothing in this bill is of such a character that it can be said that the provision for a tariff board is not a separate, independent, and distinct matter from the provisions there. The other day attention was called to the fact that a number of decisions had been made in which the mere fact that subjects were related did not necessarily make them germane. Under the suggestion of the gentleman that the provision creating a tariff board is germane, it might be possible, in order to enable the President to carry out the duties imposed upon him by this bill, a new bureau might be created either in the Treasury Department or the Department of Commerce or the Department of State. No one would urge seriously that such an amendment would be in order if proposed to this bill. By the same reasoning the proposal to create an independent body apart from any one department, simply to assist the President, is not so intimately related with the provisions of the bill as to make that in order. If the purpose of the gentlemen upon that side of the House, Mr. Speaker, be to relieve the present occupant of the White House from onerous duties, or burdens, or labors, or to prevent him from being overcome with the duties imposed, they may rest content in the knowledge that he is fully competent and able to discharge the duties that are and may be imposed upon him not only to the satisfaction of the Democratic Party but to the immediate and permanent welfare of the American people. [Loud applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. SAUNDERS. Mr. Speaker, the very statement by the gentleman from Illinois of the purpose of the Payne amendment clearly shows that the same is not in order. This statement of purpose brings the proposed amendment within the operation of the principle announced by the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, Mr. GARRETT. That principle briefly stated, is to the effect that in determining whether an amendment is germane, the Chair should look to the context of the same to determine its fundamental purpose and real intent, and if that intent so manifested, is not in furtherance of the fundamental purpose of the bill, but relates to a subject different from that under consideration, then the amendment is not germane, and is therefore out of order. It is an effort under color of amendment to bring before the House a new and different proposition, and is therefore obnoxious to section 7 of Rule XVI, and in addition to section 3 of Rule XXI that no amendment is in order to a bill affecting revenue which is not germane to the subject matter in the bill. Now the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] frankly avowed that this amendment would furnish the machinery to collect or collate an immense body of facts for use in future tariff legislation. It may well be that in the preparation of schedules in future tariff bills, the information collected by such a commission might be valuable, but this consideration does not suffice to make the proposed amendment in order.

This bill reduces tariff duties, and provides revenue for the Government. It is complete and final within itself. It is not concerned with affording information for another revision, nor does it admit by implication that such a revision is either likely, or necessary. When we look to section 3 of the amendment offered by the gentleman from New York, and scrutinize the inquiries empowered under that section, it will be perfectly apparent that not one of the facts collected, or results ascertained pursuant to its authority, will be of the slightest value as an aid to the President in the enforcement of the new tariff act. For instance, how will information relating to the operation of tariff laws in other countries, or to the effect of certain duties in those countries upon the cost of living, be of service to the President in the enforcement of the pending bill which is positive in its character, and fixes the duties, and rates to be paid on the subjects to which it relates? Yet in arguing this matter the gentlemen on the other side seem to be unable to avoid the discussion of questions of general power, or of a partisan character. The question for the determination of the Chair is purely one of proper parliamentary practice.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BURKE] contends that it is within the power of Congress to establish a commission to collect information for the preparation of future tariff bills, or for that matter for any purpose connected with legislation. Granted. But that is not the question presented for decision. The Chair is concerned to determine, not the general power of Congress to create such a commission, but whether an amendment providing this commission is in order on this bill. We are all agreed as to the general authority of Congress to provide machinery of this character by appropriate legislation, and the point of order does not challenge this authority. Congress has the right to provide and maintain a Navy, but a bill to that effect could not be engrafted on the pending legislation. Another gentleman seems to argue that an amendment creating a nonpartisan board to collect information that might be of aid to the President in the enforcement of this law would be in order, on the ground that the present machinery for collecting information for governmental purposes is of a partisan character. Concede that the latter charge is true.

How and in what way would this fact, even if it was to the discredit of the administration, serve to vitalize this amendment, and make it in order? The fact that information is collected by a partisan, or a nonpartisan, or a bipartisan board, has no sort of relation to the parliamentary status of the Payne amendment, and can not serve to render it germane, if it is not germane on other grounds. What sort of chop logic is this, that asks the occupant of the chair, to overrule the decision of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, on the ground in effect that this amendment will replace the inquiry of a partisan department, with the inquiry of a nonpartisan board? I wish to call the attention of the Chair to one or two fundamental principles in connection with this point of order. The mere fact that the matter to which an amendment relates is in a way akin to, or of the same general character as the matter to which the bill relates, does not thereby render the amendment germane and in order. The fact that the amendment is the same kind of proposition, or is of the same class of legislation as the bill under consideration, does not, in a technical sense, render that amendment in order when offered to the bill.

It is true in a general sense that when the House has control of a general subject matter, amendments relating to that subject matter are in order. But it is a matter of technical inquiry and technical ascertainment, to determine what is the subject matter to which the bill is confined. For instance, a bill providing that a claim shall be referred to the Committee on Claims is not subject to an amendment providing that the claim shall be paid by the United States, although it is perfectly clear that both the bill and the amendment relate to the claim. (H., vol. 5, sec. 5850.) It is true that the amendment relates to the claim, but the bill provides for the disposition of that claim in a particular way. The claim and that disposition are the subject matter before the House. The amendment introduces new matter, in that it proposes to dispose of the claim in an entirly different fashion. Hence it is not germane. Other precedents may be cited. To a bill giving a committee power to investigate tariff subjects, an amendment commending tariff revision is not germane. (H., vol. 5, sec. 5853.) To a section dealing with duties on woolen cloth, an amendment putting wool on the free list is not in order. (Id., sec. 5854.) To a bill dealing with the tariff between this country and the Philippines, an amendment relating to the tariff between this and other countries of the world is not germane. (Id., sec. 5860.) To a proposition relating to the terms of Senators, an amendment changing their manner of election is not in order, though both the bill and the amendment relate to Senators. (Id., p. 338.)

To a bill transferring the care of the forest reserves to the Agriculture Department, an amendment relating to civil-service officials on the reserves was held to be out of order. (H., vol. 5, sec. 8868.) To a bill amending an existing law, as to one specific particular, an amendment relating to the terms of the law, rather than to those of the bill, held not to be germane. (H., vol. 5, sec. 5806.)

I might offer many additional precedents along this line, but will content myself with citing one made by the present occupant of the chair, to the effect that a bill prohibiting transportation in interstate commerce of messages relating to transactions in cotton futures, could not be amended by making the bill apply to messages relating to gambling transactions in other agricultural products, corn, or wheat for instance. The subject matter was messages of a gambling character, but the bill was limited to these messages as they related to one form of agricultural product, and the Speaker ruled that an amendment adding another agricultural product was not germane.

Mr. BURKE of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SAUNDERS. I have not the time. I do not wish to be discourteous to the gentleman, but time presses, and I am anxious to conclude my remarks. The rule as to germaneness is a wholesome one. Under its operation one main subject can be considered decently and in order. It is intended to keep distinct the several matters of legislation.

I desire to call the attention of the Chair to an interesting decision made by a former occupant of the chair, showing the extent to which the fundamental intent is considered in the application of this rule. A bill was pending in the House providing for the construction of an interoceanic canal along the Nicaraguan route. To this bill an amendment was offered providing that the canal might be constructed across the Isthmus of Panama. According to the precedents which I have cited this amendment was apparently out of order, inasmuch as the subject matter of the bill seemed to be the construction of the canal along a designated route. Yet the amendment was allowed by the Chair, on the ground that the main and fundamental purpose of the bill was the construction of a canal between the two great oceans, and not the construction of an interoceanic canal along a particular route. Therefore, the amendment was held to be in order by reason of this fundamental intent.

Looking to the pending amendment, and to the bill before the House, they differ materially in the fundamental purpose. The one is designed to raise revenue, the other to collect information. This information is not primarily designed to be of aid in the administration of the bill, and if so designed would in the main be ineffective. The text of the amendment and the frank declarations of the gentleman from Illinois in the statement of its purpose show that it is designed to be of service in future constructive legislation relating to tariff schedules. But it is no part of the purpose of this act to provide for future acts, and thus by implication concede that this act is insufficient, and likely to be soon replaced. We are concerned with the operation of this bill in its relation to the revenues which it is intended to provide, and not with devising machinery to collect information for a future legislative body. That may be done in a different way, and at another time. We are chiefly concerned with the effective operation of a law which relates to a vast variety of subjects, and is our final word to the country. It is not in aid of that bill to collect information by which a succeeding Congress will write another bill.

There is another body of precedents to which I wish to call the attention of the Chair, and which will be helpful in the determination of this point of order. When the House is considering bills from the Committee on Appropriations, many amendments known as limitations are offered to these measures. Frequently it is a difficult matter of nice technical discrimination, to determine whether an amendment is affirmative legislation or merely a limitation.

What is the ruling principle which the Chair follows in the determination of the character of these amendments? Looking to the amendment, he scrutinizes it to determine whether on the whole there is more of limitation, or of affirmation, in its content. If the element of limitation predominates, it is in order; but if on the whole it is considered to be legislation, rather than limitation, the decision is adverse, and it is excluded.

This principle and these precedents may be utilized in the determination of the question before the House. Looking to the main purpose of the bill, it is to raise revenue and provide the necessary administrative machinery to this end. Looking to the main intent of the amendment, it is designed to collect information for future legislation. The amendment of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] seeks to introduce a new subject matter into the body of this bill, and one at variance with its manifest intent.

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Virginia yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER]?

Mr. SAUNDERS. I do not like to refuse to yield to my colleague, but I will say to the gentleman from Wisconsin that I have practically concluded my remarks.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. COOPER. I just want to ask the gentleman a question.

Mr. SAUNDERS. So much, Mr. Speaker, for the purely parliamentary and technical side of this question. Just a word more to the gentlemen who charge that this bill has not been fully and fairly considered. I assert that no tariff bill was ever considered more fully and dispassionately, or under fairer conditions. Beginning with this year the Committee on Ways and Means have conducted the most elaborate hearings. After the hearings were concluded the committee considered the subject in detail, and formulated a bill which was submitted to the Democratic caucus. In that caucus it was considered for almost two weeks, with full opportunity for amendment, and free discussion. During its course through the caucus, the bill was amended in various particulars. On its next and final stage, it has been considered in Committee of the Whole, with every opportunity to the gentlemen on the Republican side to offer whatever amendments seemed good to them, and to speak on those amendments at vast length, and with much repetition of argument. It ill becomes these gentlemen, after this opportunity for full and free discussion and amendment, to say that this crowning work of a Democratic Congress is not the product of ample consideration and genuine deliberation. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

The SPEAKER. The Chair is ready to rule. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

I have given to this question thorough consideration. By the courtesy of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] and of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], I was, at my own request, furnished last Monday with a copy of this motion to recommit. I have put in the larger part of the time since then in investigating all the rules, parliamentary practices, statements, precedents, arguments, and decisions on the subject. In addition to that there has been somewhere in the neighborhood of four hours' debate yesterday and to-day upon this same point. I heard every word of it. I made it a point to do so. Nearly every parliamentarian in the House—at least everyone who wanted to participate in these discussions—did participate. Two luminous opinions were rendered on the same point by the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GAR-

RETT], so that if I err in rendering this opinion I will err only after the fullest consideration.

Before I go to the point of order I want to make one or two remarks. As the minority leader four years ago, the present occupant of the chair did offer the motion to recommit the Payne tariff bill, which has been read in part by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]. I do not know how Mr. Speaker Cannon would have ruled if a point of order had been made, but my judgment is that if any gentleman had raised a point of order, the then Speaker would have ruled part of that motion out; and, of course, if part was not in order that would have rendered the entire motion out of order under the rules and precedents. The observation of the present occupant of the chair has been that gentlemen on the floor of the House—unless it be the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]—are not averse to playing a little politics once in a long while. [Laughter.]

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] has presented every word that can be said in favor of the germaneness of this proposition. The Chair does not believe anybody can add to what has been said by the gentleman from Illinois. There is not a man in the House who knows better how to draw an amendment or motion to recommit that is in order than does the gentleman from Illinois. Yesterday he drew an amendment that was in order, providing "that in ascertaining the fair value of foreign goods, as specified in this paragraph, the Secretary of the Treasury shall be assisted by a nonpartisan tariff commission to be appointed by the President." That was the paragraph R, fourth section. It was voted down, because the House did not want it.

The statement of the case at bar, against the germaneness of which the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] makes his point of order, is this: The tariff bill as reported from the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union is pending. The gentleman from New York offers a motion to recommit with instructions. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] makes the point of order that the motion contains matter not germane, and therefore is not in order. This motion to recommit contains five propositions—one for a tariff commission; No. 2, for the reformation or revision of Schedule K, the wool schedule; No. 3, for the revision of Schedule I, the cotton schedule; No. 4, for the revision of all the remaining schedules; No. 5, providing that specific duties shall be substituted for ad valorem duties wherever possible.

There seems to be no dispute about the germaneness of the last four propositions, and the entire controversy turns on the first one—that is, for the tariff commission.

The rules involved in this matter are, first, paragraph 7 of Rule XVI:

> And no motion or proposition on a subject different from that under consideration shall be admitted under color of amendment.

That rule has been in existence ever since 1822. The truth is, the substance of it antedates the Constitution.

The other rule involved is clause 3 of Rule XXI:

> No amendment shall be in order to any bill affecting revenue which is not germane to the subject matter in the bill.

The other half of that paragraph is—

> Nor shall any amendment to any item of such bill be in order which does not directly relate to the item to which the amendment is proposed.

That part of the rule is new, having been first adopted at the beginning of the Sixty-second Congress.

It is true, as stated by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], that that last proposition was put in at least partly with reference to the scheme of revising the tariff schedule by schedule, but it is there nevertheless.

The subject matter of this tariff bill is the raising of revenue. The subject matter of the part of the motion to recommit which relates to the tariff commission is to gather information; or, to state it in other words, the purpose of the tariff bill is to get money, while the purpose of the tariff commission is to get information; and it seems to me that if the English language has any significance whatever the two propositions are different—that one is not germane to the other—and the truth is that the only kinship between these two propositions is that both contain the word "tariff."

I might rest this case right here, but I am not content to do so. I am going to cite the authorities on which this opinion rests, and will begin with one by Speaker Carlisle, found in section 5825, volume 5, Hinds' Precedents. I will not read it all, because it is too long, and part of it has nothing to do with this matter anyway. Mr. Speaker Carlisle said, and it is true—

> It is not always easy to determine whether or not a proposed amendment relates to a subject different from that under consideration, within the meaning of the rule; and it is especially difficult to do so when, as in the present instance, the amendment may, by reason of the terms it employs, appear to have a remote relation to the original subject.

The case he was passing on was this: To a bill making deficiency appropriations for the Government Printing Office, among which was none relating to the salary of the Public Printer, an amendment legislating in relation to the selection of that officer was held to be not germane.

The deficiency bill contained a proposition to pay the Public Printer's subordinates, and an amendment was offered to change the way of selecting the Public Printer. That is what he had reference to. He says:

> The subject to which the bill now under consideration relates is very clearly set forth in its title. It is "a bill making appropriations to supply certain deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1880, and for other purposes."

This tariff board or commission can not be let in under the phraseology "for other purposes" in the title of this bill, because the words "other purposes" in this bill mean the rest of the bill after you get through fixing the rates. Mr. Speaker Carlisle continued:

> The appropriations "for other purposes" contained in the bill do not relate at all to any of the subjects embraced in the amendment, and therefore need not be noticed. The words "for other purposes" are used here, as they usually are, to embrace subjects outside the main subjects to which the bill relates, and which are reported by the committee itself.
>
> The bill relates to no other subjects than appropriations of money for the purpose stated—

Just as this bill relates to nothing except raising money, and regulations pertaining to that—

> "to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the service of the Government." One of the deficiencies which the bill provides for is the Government Printing Office. But the bill carefully enumerates the items for which the appropriation is to be made, and the salary of the Public Printer is not among them.

And on that statement he ruled that the amendment was not germane. It may be well to state for the edification of the House that this elaborate opinion of Mr. Speaker Carlisle, one of the most elaborate in Hinds' Precedents, was not rendered offhand; but he had plenty of time to consider it—two or three days at least—and he evidently wrote it out and read it to the House.

Here is another decision in point. It is impossible to tell whether it was rendered by Mr. Speaker Carlisle or by Gov. James B. McCreary, of Kentucky. The Journal says one and the RECORD the other. It matters little, as both are eminent men, long members of the House. I will read the syllabus:

> Section 5841, volume 5, Hinds' Precedents:
> "To a bill relating to commerce between the States an amendment relating to commerce within the several States was offered and held not to be germane."

At first blush it might seem that, both the bill and the amendment being on the subject of commerce, the amendment was germane to the bill, but it was decided that it was not, and it was decided correctly.

Another precedent is found in section 5842, volume 5, of Hinds' Precedents:

> To a bill relating to corporations engaged in interstate commerce an amendment relating to all corporations was held not to be germane. On February 7, 1903, the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union was considering the bill (H. R. 17) requiring all corporations engaged in interstate commerce to file returns with the Secretary of the Treasury, disclosing their true financial condition, and of their capital stock, and imposing a tax upon such as have outstanding capital stock unpaid in whole or in part.
> Mr. HENRY D. CLAYTON, of Alabama, offered an amendment:
> "SEC. —. There is thereby levied and shall be assessed and collected annually the following taxes on all corporations, whether domestic or foreign, doing business in the United States for profit or gain and having a capital stock of $200,000 or more, at the rate of 10 per cent on its capital stock. The amount of the capital stock of any taxable corporation for the purposes of taxation shall be estimated according to its value fixed by the charter, or by resolution of its board of stockholders or directors, and shall include all assets owned by such corporation which are reserved or funded or set aside for the benefit of its stockholders."
> Mr. Marlin E. Olmsted, of Pennsylvania, made a point of order that the amendment was not germane, saying:
> "The original bill proposes a tax upon corporations engaged in interstate commerce having unpaid capital stock outstanding. This bill relates entirely to corporations engaged in interstate commerce and prohibits them from making unlawful discriminations or entering into unlawful or injurious combinations to control prices, etc. That is all right. It is also proper to control such corporations or trusts by way of taxation. But the gentleman from Alabama introduces an entirely new subject. This proposed amendment imposes a tax of 10 per cent on the entire capital stock of every corporation, big and little, in the United States, whether engaged in interstate commerce or not."

The Chairman, Mr. Henry Sherman Boutell, of Illinois, sustained Mr. Olmsted's point of order.

Another precedent is found in section 5853, volume 5, Hinds' Precedents:

> To a proposition giving a committee power to investigate tariff subjects an amendment commending tariff revision was held not to be germane.

That is almost this case turned around. That was held out of order by Mr. Speaker Stevenson, of Virginia.

Section 5852, volume 5, of Hinds' Precedents states:

A revenue amendment is not germane to an appropriation bill.

Opinion rendered by Mr. Chairman Meade, of Virginia.

Then section 5854, volume 5, Hinds' Precedents, gives this precedent:

To a bill relating to the classification for customs purposes of worsted goods as woolens, an amendment relating to duties on wools and woolens and worsted cloths was held not to be germane.

An amendment was offered by Mr. W. C. P. Breckinridge, of Kentucky; the point of order was made against it by Gov. Dingley; and the decision was rendered by the Hon. Julius Caesar Burrows, subsequently Senator of the United States. An appeal was taken from the decision of the Chair holding it not germane, and the Chair was sustained by 74 to 36; and, incidentally, the Chair will say that the Committee of the Whole on yesterday was a very full committee and sustained two of the rulings of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole [Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee] on this very point by large majorities.

I am now going to read an opinion by a gentleman who has served 29 years in the House of Representatives, and during all the 29 years has been a most eminent Member of this House, having been chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, the Hon. SERENO E. PAYNE, of New York, now "father of the House," the same distinguished gentleman who offers this motion to recommit.

Section 5850, in volume 5 of Hinds' Precedents, reads as follows:

To a bill authorizing the Court of Claims to adjudicate a claim, an amendment providing for paying the claim outright was held not to be germane.

On January 14, 1898, the House, in Committee of the Whole House, considering the bill (S. 629) to confer jurisdiction on the Court of Claims in the case of the Book Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church South against the United States.

That was one of the most famous cases in the annals of Congress.

This bill directed that the claim, with the accompanying petitions and papers, should be referred to the Court of Claims; that the court should render judgment against the United States in favor of said corporation for whatever sum might be found due; that in the trial the affidavits on file before Congress should be admitted as competent evidence, etc.

To this bill Mr. S. B. Cooper, of Texas—

Now a member of the Board of General Appraisers of the New York customhouse—proposed as an amendment, in the nature of a substitute, a bill authorizing and requiring the Secretary of the Treasury to pay the sum of $288,000 in full satisfaction of the claim.

That is, Mr. Cooper was taking a short cut to get the money which that was introduced to get.

Mr. John Dalzell, of Pennsylvania, made the point of order that the Cooper amendment was not germane.

On January 21, after debate, the Chairman [the Hon. SERENO E. PAYNE, of New York] decided:

"Prior to the adoption of any rules upon the subject it was in order to offer any amendment to the bill, whether it was germane or not, by way of substituting another bill or by way of an amendment. In March, 1789, the House made a rule which changed general parliamentary law upon the subject, and that rule was in these words:

"'No new motion or proposition shall be admitted under color of amendment as a substitute for the question or proposition under debate until it has been postponed or disagreed to.'

"That simply went to the substitute and not to the amendment of the proposition; and I suppose that under that, until the adoption of a new rule by the House of Representatives, an amendment which was not in the nature of a substitute would have been in order. In 1822 the House adopted this rule:

"'No motion or proposition on a subject different from that under consideration shall be admitted under color of amendment.'

"And that rule has been the rule of the House of Representatives from that day to this, and is now clause 7 of Rule XVI, under which this point of order is raised.

"The bill before the House is an act to confer jurisdiction on the Court of Claims in the case of the Book Agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church South against the United States, and the act provides not only to confer jurisdiction but gives the court authority to render judgment for any amount, and further provides that either party may appeal from the judgment that is so rendered. That is the whole scope of the bill which is now before the committee.

And to raise money or to get money is the whole scope of this bill now pending here to-day. I adopt the language of the gentleman from New York. He continued:

The substitute offered is, briefly, an appropriation of some $288,000—the Chair does not recollect the precise amount—to be paid to the book agents of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. That is the whole scope of the substitute that is offered as an amendment.

And the whole scope of this tariff-commission proposition is to get information.

The question is whether, under the language of the rule, this is a proposition on a subject different from that under consideration. If it is, it can not be admitted as an amendment. If it is not, of course it would be in order as an amendment. * * * There is one precedent that seems to bear almost exactly upon the case before the committee, and that was the precedent cited the other day by the gentleman from Maine, Mr. Dingley, in the Forty-eighth Congress. A bill was before the House restoring Gen. Pleasonton to the Army and putting him on the retired list, in order that he might draw the pay of a retired officer. It might have been a bill entitled "for the relief of Gen. Pleasonton," but it was entitled a bill to restore him to the Army and place his name on the retired list.

When that bill was before the Committee of the Whole House the gentleman from New York, the late Mr. Cox—

And that is the Hon. Samuel Sullivan Cox, the first man who ever made a speech in this Hall, who was for eight years a Representative in the House from Ohio, and later for many years a Representative from New York City, and subsequently ambassador to Turkey—an able parliamentarian, was in the chair. During the progress of the bill the gentleman from Indiana, the late Mr. Browne, offered an amendment striking out all after the enacting clause and authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to place his name on the pension list and pay him a pension at the rate of $100 a month. That question was debated somewhat in Committee of the Whole, and the Chairman of the committee (Mr. Cox), the point of order having been raised by the late Mr. Bayne, of Pennsylvania—and the House will observe the controversy was between two Republicans, Mr. Browne and Mr. Bayne, while the Chairman was of opposite politics, so that it would seem that no politics could enter into that question at that time—the Chair stated that he felt compelled to sustain the point of order, as it changed the whole character of the bill.

That, of course, defeated the amendment in Committee of the Whole. The bill was finally reported to the House.

The decision then goes on to recite the rest of the history of the bill. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] then sustained the point of order against the Cooper amendment.

The case that was cited by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], as rendered by Mr. Dalzell, has nothing to do with this question, the Chair thinks. There was a controversy in the House from the very inception of the plan to establish the Department of Commerce and Labor as to whether there ought to be one department or two. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] reported a bill putting the two things together in one department, and the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. Richardson] moved to cut that department in two and make two out of it. Surely that is not a parallel case. If this proposition about a tariff commission were germane, then a proposition to abolish the customs courts would be germane.

A proposition to consolidate customs districts would be germane; a proposition to abolish the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce would be germane; or anything else that touched the tariff question in the remotest degree would be germane. A proposition to investigate the tariff rates established by Augustus Cæsar at Rome would be germane—one of the most perfect systems of getting money out of people by levying a tariff ever put into print.

Mr. MANN. If it was so perfect we ought to get the information.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will find it in Gibbons's History of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. You do not have to appoint a commission to get it, and the Chair will furnish the gentleman with a copy of it. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MANN. I suggest the distinguished Speaker is the only Democrat in the House who has one.

The SPEAKER. That may be, but the Chair has it. In view of these decisions, which are only a few out of scores that could be cited on the same line, I decide that the tariff-commission proposition is not germane to the tariff bill, and consequently the point of order made by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] is sustained. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I respectfully appeal from the decision of the Chair.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] appeals from the decision of the Chair.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move to lay the appeal on the table.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] moves to lay the appeal on the table.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. On that the gentleman from Illinois demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 275, nays 143, not voting 14, as follows:

YEAS—275.

Abercrombie	Bartlett	Brodbeck	Byrns, Tenn.
Adair	Bathrick	Brown, N. Y.	Callaway
Adamson	Beakes	Brown, W. Va.	Candler, Miss.
Aiken	Beall, Tex.	Bruckner	Cantrill
Alexander	Bell, Ga.	Brumbaugh	Caraway
Allen	Blackmon	Buchanan, Ill.	Carew
Ashbrook	Booher	Buchanan, Tex.	Carlin
Aswell	Borchers	Bulkley	Carr
Bailey	Borland	Burgess	Carter
Baker	Bowdle	Burke, Wis.	Casey
Barkley	Bremner	Burnett	Church
Barnhart	Brockson	Byrnes, S. C.	Clancy

Clark, Fla.	Gittins	Lever	Russell
Claypool	Glass	Levy	Sabath
Clayton	Godwin, N. C.	Lewis, Md.	Saunders
Cline	Goeke	Lieb	Scully
Collier	Goldfogle	Linthicum	Seldomridge
Connelly, Kans.	Goodwin, Ark.	Lloyd	Shackleford
Connolly, Iowa	Gordon	Lobeck	Sharp
Conry	Gorman	Logue	Sherley
Covington	Goulden	Lonergan	Sherwood
Cox	Graham, Ill.	McAndrews	Sims
Crisp	Gray	McClellan	Sisson
Crosser	Gregg	McCoy	Slayden
Cullop	Griffin	McGillicuddy	Small
Curley	Gudger	McKellar	Smith, Md.
Dale	Hamill	Maguire, Nebr.	Smith, N. Y.
Davenport	Hamlin	Mahan	Smith, Tex.
Davis, W. Va.	Hammond	Maher	Sparkman
Decker	Hardwick	Metz	Stanley
Deitrick	Hardy	Mitchell	Stephens, Miss.
Dent	Harrison, Miss.	Montague	Stephens, Nebr.
Dershem	Harrison, N. Y.	Moon	Stephens, Tex.
Dickinson	Hay	Morgan, La.	Stevens, N. H.
Dies	Hayden	Morrison	Stone
Difenderfer	Heflin	Murray, Mass.	Stout
Dixon	Helm	Murray, Okla.	Stringer
Donovan	Helvering	Neeley	Sumners
Dooling	Henry	O'Brien	Taggart
Doolittle	Hensley	Oglesby	Talbott, Md.
Doremus	Hill	O'Hair	Talcott, N. Y.
Doughton	Hobson	Oldfield	Tavenner
Driscoll	Holland	O'Leary	Taylor, Ala.
Dupré	Houston	O'Shaunessy	Taylor, Ark.
Eagan	Howard	Padgett	Taylor, Colo.
Eagle	Hughes, Ga.	Page	Taylor, N. Y.
Edwards	Hull	Palmer	Ten Eyck
Elder	Humphreys, Miss.	Patten, N. Y.	Thomas
Estopinal	Igoe	Pepper	Thompson, Okla.
Evans	Jacoway	Peters	Townsend
Faison	Johnson, Ky.	Peterson	Tribble
Fergusson	Johnson, S. C.	Phelan	Tuttle
Ferris	Jones	Post	Underhill
Fields	Keating	Pou	Underwood
Finley	Kennedy, Conn.	Quin	Vaughan
Fitzgerald	Kettner	Ragsdale	Walker
Fitzhenry	Key, Ohio	Rainey	Walsh
Flood, Va.	Kindel	Raker	Watkins
Floyd, Ark.	Kinkead, N. J.	Rauch	Watson
Foster	Kirkpatrick	Rayburn	Weaver
Fowler	Kitchin	Reed	Whitacre
Francis	Konig	Reilly, Conn.	White
Gallagher	Konop	Reilly, Wis.	Williams
Gard	Korbly	Richardson	Wilson, Fla.
Garner	Lazaro	Riordan	Wilson, N. Y.
Garrett, Tenn.	Lee, Ga.	Roddenbery	Wingo
Garrett, Tex.	Lee, Pa.	Rothermel	Witherspoon
Gerry	L'Engle	Rouse	Young, Tex.
Gilmore	Lesher	Rubey

NAYS—143.

Ainey	Frear	Lafferty	Roberts, Mass.
Anderson	French	La Follette	Roberts, Nev.
Austin	Gardner	Langham	Rogers
Avis	Gillett	Langley	Rupley
Barchfeld	Good	Lenroot	Scott
Bartholdt	Goodwin, Me.	Lewis, Pa.	Sells
Barton	Graham, Pa.	Lindbergh	Shreve
Bell, Cal.	Green, Iowa	Lindquist	Sinnott
Britten	Greene, Mass.	McGuire, Okla.	Slemp
Broussard	Greene, Vt.	McKenzie	Sloan
Browne, Wis.	Griest	McLaughlin	Smith, Idaho
Browning	Guernsey	Madden	Smith, J. M. C.
Bryan	Hamilton, Mich.	Manahan	Smith, Minn.
Burke, Pa.	Hamilton, N. Y.	Mann	Smith, Saml. W.
Burke, S. Dak.	Haugen	Mapes	Stafford
Butler	Hawley	Martin	Steenerson
Calder	Hayes	Merritt	Stephens, Cal.
Campbell	Helgesen	Miller	Stevens, Minn.
Cary	Hinds	Mondell	Sutherland
Chandler, N. Y.	Hinebaugh	Moore	Switzer
Cooper	Howell	Morgan, Okla.	Temple
Copley	Hulings	Morin	Thomson, Ill.
Cramton	Humphrey, Wash.	Moss, W. Va.	Towner
Curry	Johnson, Utah	Mott	Treadway
Danforth	Johnson, Wash.	Murdock	Vare
Davis, Minn.	Kahn	Nelson	Volstead
Dillon	Keister	Nolan, J. I.	Wallin
Dunn	Kelley, Mich.	Norton	Walters
Dyer	Kelly, Pa.	Parker	Wilder
Edmonds	Kennedy, Iowa	Patton, Pa.	Willis
Esch	Kennedy, R. I.	Payne	Winslow
Fairchild	Kent	Platt	Woodruff
Falconer	Kiess, Pa.	Plumley	Woods
Farr	Kinkaid, Nebr.	Porter	Young, Mich.
Fess	Knowland, J. R.	Powers	Young, N. Dak.
Fordney	Kreider	Prouty

NOT VOTING—14.

Ansberry	George	Moss, Ind.	Thacher
Anthony	Hoxworth	Rucker	Webb
Baltz	Hughes, W. Va.	Stedman
Donohoe	McDermott	Sullivan

So the motion to lay the appeal from the decision of the Chair on the table was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. RUCKER (to table) with Mr. DONOHOE (against).

Mr. STEDMAN (to table) with Mr. ANTHONY (against).

Until further notice:

Mr. WEBB with Mr. HUGHES of West Virginia.

Mr. McDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, I wish to vote.

The SPEAKER. Was the gentleman from Illinois in the Hall and listening?

Mr. McDERMOTT. I was out in the lobby when my name was called, and did not hear the bell ring. Had I been allowed to vote under the rules I would have voted "aye."

The SPEAKER. The gentleman does not bring himself within the rules if he was outside of the Chamber.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I move to recommit the bill with the following instructions.

Mr. MURDOCK. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print this in the RECORD. It is precisely the same as the other, with the tariff-board proposition eliminated.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. All right; I have no objection.

Mr. MURDOCK. My parliamentary inquiry is this: At the beginning of the session to-day the Speaker said that motions would be taken from members of the Committee on Ways and Means who were opposed to the bill seriatim.

The SPEAKER. Yes.

Mr. MURDOCK. Now the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] offered a motion to recommit. It was declared out of order.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is aware of that; and therefore it was no motion at all.

Mr. MURDOCK. I wondered when the "seriatim business" was to begin. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. The "seriatim business" will begin when this motion is voted on if any other gentleman wants it. The Chair likes to be fair about these motions to recommit, because it is a very important privilege, and a Member can not tell always how the Chair is going to rule on his motion, or whether part of it is in order or part of it out of order. The gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] is the leader of the Republicans on the subject of the tariff.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understand the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] asks unanimous consent, as the motion has already been printed before, that it be not read again. I want to hold the floor.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to waiving the reading? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Following is the motion to recommit submitted by Mr. PAYNE:

I move to recommit the bill (H. R. 3621) to reduce the tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, to the Committee on Ways and Means, with directions to that committee to report back to the House as speedily as possible the said bill (H. R. 3321) so amended that it will provide—

First. For a revision of Schedule K, relating to wool and manufactures of wool, as follows, to wit:

1. All wools, hair of the camel, goat, alpaca, and other like animals shall be divided, for the purpose of fixing the duties to be charged thereon, into the two following classes:

2. Class 1, that is to say, merino, mestiza, metz, or metis wools, or other wools of merino blood, immediate or remote, Down clothing wools, and wools of like character with any of the preceding, including Bagdad wool, China lamb's wool, Castel Branco, Adrianople skin wool or butcher's wool, and such as have been heretofore usually imported into the United States from Buenos Aires, New Zealand, Australia, Cape of Good Hope, Russia, Great Britain, Canada, Egypt, Morocco, and elsewhere, and Leicester, Cotswold, Lincolnshire, Down combing wools, Canada long wools, or other like combing wools of English blood, and usually known by the terms herein used, and all wools not hereinafter included in class 2, and also the hair of the camel, Angora goat, alpaca, and other like animals.

3. Class 2, that is to say, Donskoi, native South American, Cordova, Valparaiso, native Smyrna, Russian camel's hair, and all such wools of like character as have been heretofore usually imported into the United States from Turkey, Greece, Syria, and elsewhere, excepting improved wools hereinafter provided for.

4. The standard samples of all wools, which are now or may be hereafter deposited in the principal customhouses of the United States, under the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall be the standards for the classification of wools under this act, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to renew these standards and to make such additions to them from time to time as may be required, and he shall cause to be deposited like standards in other customhouses of the United States when they may be needed.

5. Whenever wools of class 2 shall have been improved by the admixture of merino or English blood, from their present character, as represented by the standard samples now or hereafter to be deposited in the principal customhouses of the United States, such improved wools shall be classified for duty as class 1.

6. If any bale or package of wool or hair specified in this act, invoiced or entered as of class 2, or claimed by the importer to be dutiable as of class 2, shall contain any wool or hair subject to the rate of duty of class 1, the whole bale or package shall be subject to the rate of duty chargeable on wool of class 1; and if any bale or package be claimed by the importer to be shoddy, mungo, flocks, wool, hair, or other material of any class specified in this act, and such bale contain any admixture of any one or more of said materials, or of any other material, the whole bale or package shall be subject to duty at the highest rate imposed upon any article in said bale or package.

7. The duty on all wools and hair of class 1, if imported in the grease, shall be laid upon the basis of its clean content. The clean content shall be determined by scouring tests which shall be made according to regulations which the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

The duty on all wools and hair of class 1 imported in the grease shall be 18 cents per pound on the clean content, as defined above. If imported scoured, the duty shall be 19 cents per pound.

8. The duty on all wools of class 2, including camel's hair of class 2, imported in their natural condition, shall be 7 cents per pound. If scoured, 19 cents per pound: Provided, That on consumption of wools of class 2, including camel's hair, in the manufacture of carpets, druggets and bockings, printed, colored, or otherwise, mats, rugs for floors, screens, covers, hassocks, bedsides, art squares, and portions of carpets or carpeting hereafter manufactured or produced in the United States in whole or in part from wools of class 2, including camel's hair, upon which duties have been paid there shall be allowed to the manufacturer or producer of such articles a drawback equal in amount to the duties paid less 1 per cent of such duties on the amount of the wools of class 2, including camel's hair of class 2, contained therein; such drawback shall be paid under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

9. The duty on wools on the skin shall be 2 cents less per pound than is imposed upon the clean content as provided for wools of class 1, and 1 cent less per pound than is imposed upon wools of class 2 imported in their natural condition, the quantity to be ascertained under such rules as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

10. Top waste and slubbing waste, 18 cents per pound.

11. Roving waste and ring waste, 14 cents per pound.

12. Noils, carbonized, 14 cents per pound.

13. Noils, not carbonized, 11 cents per pound.

14. Garnetted waste, 11 cents per pound.

15. Thread waste, yarn waste, and wool wastes not specified, 9½ cents per pound.

16. Shoddy, mungo, and wool extract, 8 cents per pound.

17. Woolen rags and flocks, 2 cents per pound.

18. Combed wool or tops, made wholly or in part of wool, or camel's hair, 20 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 10 per cent ad valorem.

19. Wool and hair which have been advanced in any manner or by any process of manufacture beyond the washed or scoured condition, but less advanced than yarn, not specially provided for in this section, 20 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 10 per cent ad valorem.

20. On yarns, made wholly or in part of wool, valued at not more than 30 cents per pound, the duty shall be 21½ cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 10 per cent ad valorem.

Valued at more than 30 cents and not more than 50 cents per pound, 21½ cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 15 per cent ad valorem.

Valued at more than 50 cents and not more than 80 cents per pound, 21½ cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 20 per cent ad valorem.

Valued at more than 80 cents per pound, 21½ cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 25 per cent ad valorem.

21. On cloths, knit fabrics, flannels, felts, and all fabrics of every description made wholly or in part of wool, not specially provided for in this section, valued at not more than 40 cents per pound, the duty shall be 25 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 30 per cent ad valorem.

Valued at more than 40 cents and not more than 60 cents per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 35 per cent ad valorem.

Valued at more than 60 cents and not more than 80 cents per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 40 per cent ad valorem.

Valued at more than 80 cents and not more than $1 per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 45 per cent ad valorem.

Valued at more than $1 and not more than $1.50 per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 50 per cent ad valorem.

Valued at more than $1.50 per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 55 per cent ad valorem.

22. On blankets and flannels for underwear composed wholly or in part of wool, valued at not more than 40 cents per pound, the duty shall be 23½ cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 20 per cent ad valorem.

Valued at more than 40 cents and not more than 50 cents per pound, 23½ cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 25 per cent ad valorem.

Valued at more than 50 cents per pound, 23½ cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 30 per cent ad valorem.

Provided, That on blankets over 3 yards in length the same duties shall be paid as on cloths.

23. On ready-made clothing and articles of wearing apparel, knitted or woven, of every description, made up or manufactured wholly or in part and composed wholly or in part of wool, the rate of duty shall be as follows:

If valued at not more than 40 cents per pound, the duty shall be 25 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 35 per cent ad valorem.

If valued at more than 40 cents and not more than 60 cents per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 40 per cent ad valorem.

If valued at more than 60 cents and not more than 80 cents per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 45 per cent ad valorem.

If valued at more than 80 cents and not more than $1 per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 50 per cent ad valorem.

If valued at more than $1 and not more than $1.50 per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 55 per cent ad valorem.

If valued at more than $1.50 per pound, 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 60 per cent ad valorem.

24. On all manufactures of every description made wholly or in part of wool, not specially provided for in this section, the duty shall be 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 50 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That if the component material of chief value in such manufactures is wood, paper, rubber, or any of the baser metals, the duty shall be 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 35 per cent ad valorem, and if the component material of chief value in such manufactures is silk, fur, precious or semiprecious stones, or gold, silver, or platinum, the duty shall be 26 cents per pound on the wool contained therein, and in addition thereto 55 per cent ad valorem.

25. On hand-made Aubusson, Axminster, Oriental, and similar carpets and rugs, made wholly or in part of wool, the rate of duty shall be 50 per cent ad valorem; on all other carpets of every description, druggets and bockings, printed, colored, or otherwise, mats, rugs for floors, screens, covers, hassocks, bedsides, art squares, and portions of carpets or carpeting, made wholly or in part of wool, the duty shall be 30 per cent ad valorem.

26. Whenever, in any schedule of this act, the word "wool" is used in connection with a manufactured article of which it is a component material, it shall be held to include wool or hair of the sheep, camel, goat, alpaca, or other animal, whether manufactured by the woolen, worsted, felt, or any other process.

Second. For a revision of Schedule I, relating to cotton manufactures, which shall provide such classifications of, and such tariff rates upon, the articles enumerated therein as shall be equal, as to the articles produced in the United States, to the difference in cost of production in the United States and in foreign countries of the articles enumerated in accordance with the facts found by the Tariff Board in its report transmitted to Congress on the 26th day of March, 1912.

Third. For a revision of the remaining tariff schedules so as to provide tariff rates which shall be equal, as to the articles produced in the United States, to the estimated difference in cost of production in the United States and in foreign countries of the articles enumerated to the extent of reasonable protection of home industries.

Fourth. In revising said schedules the tariff rates shall be adjusted by specific duties on the units of quantity of each article so far as the same be practicable.

Mr. HARDWICK. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker. If the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] does not now insist on the previous question on a motion to recommit, the only effect will be simply that he will have the right to offer an amendment, but the debate will not be opened up?

Mr. MURDOCK. I offer this motion now.

The SPEAKER. The Chair did not understand the inquiry of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. HARDWICK].

Mr. HARDWICK. I wanted to inquire of the Chair whether, unless the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] now moves the previous question on the motion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] to recommit with instructions, it would not be in order for the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] to offer an amendment to that motion, although debate would not be in order under the previous question?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The gentleman is right, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Of course he is right.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I withhold the motion, but I wish to make it and cut off any other motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] offers a motion to recommit, as a substitute to the motion offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE].

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The SPEAKER. And the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] moves the previous question.

Mr. MANN. But, Mr. Speaker——

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I think it ought to be read. There may be a point of order against it. I think the present motion should be read first.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the substitute offered by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK].

The Clerk read as follows:

By Mr. MURDOCK:

I move to recommit the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce the tariff rates and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, to the Committee on Ways and Means with instructions to that committee to report back to the House at as early a date as practicable, for separate consideration, with record votes on each schedule and provision, the bill so amended that it will provide:

First. For a revision of the tax on incomes that will increase the rates on incomes above $100,000.

Second. For a revision of Schedules I and K for separate consideration, with a record vote on each, which shall provide rates based, as far as may be, on the findings of the Tariff Board on wools and manufactures of wool in 1911 and on cotton manufactures in 1912, and adjusted, not on the prohibitive principle but on the protective principle, that conditions of competition between the United States and foreign countries be equalized, both for the manufacturer and the farmer, and that an adequate standard of living for the men and women in the industries affected by these schedules be provided and maintained; the measure so reported, if enacted, to remain the law only until Congress shall be able to enact measures based on the facts adduced by a nonpartisan, scientific tariff commission, with full power to develop all factors affecting the competitive strength of these industries.

Third. For a revision of the other schedules, for separate consideration, with a record vote on each, which shall provide rates based on data and estimates and as far as may be adjusted, not on the prohibitive principle, but on the protective principle of equalizing conditions of competition between the United States and foreign countries, both for the farmer and manufacturer, and of maintaining for labor an adequate standard of living; such schedules, if enacted, to remain the law only until Congress shall be able to enact measures based on the facts adduced by a nonpartisan tariff commission and with rates accurately and scientifically adjusted on the principle of protection defined herewith.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion and the substitute.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] moves the previous question on the motion to recommit offered by the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] and the substitute offered by the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK].

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the Murdock substitute.

The question was taken; and pending the announcement of the result, Mr. MURDOCK demanded a division.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] demands a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 19, noes 225.

So the Murdock substitute was rejected.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays; and, pending that, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MURDOCK. A gentleman informed me that the Speaker miscounted on the first vote. Is there any way to correct that?

Mr. HUMPHREY of Washington. By a roll call.

The SPEAKER. As a matter of fact, the Speaker counted one man in the affirmative whom he does not believe was on the affirmative side. [Laughter.] That gentleman was standing up in spite of all that the Speaker could do.

Mr. MURDOCK. I think the Speaker missed two gentlemen at the extreme right who were voting in favor of the proposition. Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] demands the yeas and nays. Those in favor of taking the vote by yeas and nays will rise and stand until they are counted. The Chair will count every gentleman standing up. If gentlemen do not want to be counted, they will take their seats. [After counting.] Forty-eight gentleman have arisen in the affirmative—not a sufficient number.

Mr. MURDOCK. The other side, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The other side is demanded. Those who oppose the taking of the vote by yeas and nays will rise and stand until they are counted. [After counting.] Two hundred and sixty-four gentleman have voted in the negative. Forty-eight is not a sufficient number, and the yeas and nays are refused. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from New York [Mr. PAYNE] to recommit.

Mr. MANN. And on that, Mr. Speaker, I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. And on that the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] demands the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER. Those in favor of the motion to recommit will, when their names are called, answer "yea"; those opposed will answer "nay." The Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 122, nays 295, answered "present" 1, not voting 14, as follows:

YEAS—122.

Ainey	Frear	Kreider	Prouty
Anderson	French	La Follette	Roberts, Mass.
Austin	Gardner	Langham	Rogers
Avis	Gillett	Langley	Scott
Barchfeld	Good	Lenroot	Sells
Bartholdt	Goodwin, Me.	Lindquist	Shreve
Barton	Graham, Pa.	McGuire, Okla.	Sinnott
Britten	Green, Iowa	McKenzie	Slemp
Broussard	Greene, Mass.	McLaughlin	Sloan
Browne, Wis.	Greene, Vt.	Madden	Smith, Idaho
Browning	Griest	Manahan	Smith, J. M. C.
Burke, Pa.	Guernsey	Mann	Smith, Minn.
Burke, S. Dak.	Hamilton, Mich.	Mapes	Smith, Saml. W.
Butler	Hamilton, N. Y.	Martin	Stafford
Calder	Haugen	Merritt	Steenerson
Campbell	Hawley	Miller	Stevens, Minn.
Cary	Hayes	Mondell	Sutherland
Cooper	Helgesen	Moore	Switzer
Cramton	Hinds	Morgan, Okla.	Towner
Curry	Howell	Morin	Treadway
Danforth	Humphrey, Wash.	Moss, W. Va.	Vare
Davis, Minn.	Johnson, Utah	Mott	Volstead
Dillon	Johnson, Wash.	Nelson	Wallin
Dunn	Kahn	Norton	Wilder
Dyer	Keister	Parker	Willis
Edmonds	Kelley, Mich.	Patton, Pa.	Winslow
Esch	Kennedy, Iowa	Payne	Woods
Fairchild	Kennedy, R. I.	Platt	Young, Mich.
Farr	Kiess, Pa.	Plumley	Young, N. Dak.
Fess	Kinkaid, Nebr.	Porter
Fordney	Knowland, J. R.	Powers

NAYS—295.

Abercrombie	Bathrick	Brown, N. Y.	Callaway
Adair	Beakes	Brown, W. Va.	Candler, Miss.
Adamson	Beall, Tex.	Bruckner	Cantrill
Aiken	Bell, Cal.	Brumbaugh	Caraway
Alexander	Bell, Ga.	Bryan	Carew
Allen	Blackmon	Buchanan, Ill.	Carlin
Ashbrook	Boober	Buchanan, Tex.	Carr
Aswell	Borchers	Bulkley	Carter
Bailey	Borland	Burgess	Casey
Baker	Bowdle	Burke, Wis.	Chandler, N. Y.
Barkley	Bremner	Burnett	Church
Barnhart	Brockson	Byrnes, S. C.	Clancy
Bartlett	Brodbeck	Byrns, Tenn.	Clark, Fla.
Claypool	Goldfogle	Lieb	Saunders
Clayton	Goodwin, Ark.	Lindbergh	Scully
Cline	Gordon	Linthicum	Seldomridge
Collier	Gorman	Lloyd	Shackleford
Connelly, Kans.	Goulden	Lobeck	Sharp
Connolly, Iowa	Graham, Ill.	Logue	Sherley
Conry	Gray	Lonergan	Sherwood
Covington	Gregg	McAndrews	Sims
Cox	Griffin	McClellan	Sisson
Crisp	Gudger	McCoy	Slayden
Crosser	Hamill	McDermott	Small
Cullop	Hamlin	McGillicuddy	Smith, Md.
Curley	Hammond	McKellar	Smith, N. Y.
Dale	Hardwick	Maguire, Nebr.	Smith, Tex.
Davenport	Hardy	Mahan	Sparkman
Davis, W. Va.	Harrison, Miss.	Maher	Stanley
Decker	Harrison, N. Y.	Metz	Stephens, Cal.
Deitrick	Hay	Mitchell	Stephens, Miss.
Dent	Hayden	Montague	Stephens, Nebr.
Dershem	Heflin	Moon	Stephens, Tex.
Dickinson	Helm	Morgan, La.	Stevens, N. H.
Dies	Helvering	Morrison	Stone
Difenderfer	Henry	Murdock	Stout
Dixon	Hensley	Murray, Mass.	Stringer
Donovan	Hill	Murray, Okla.	Sumners
Dooling	Hinebaugh	Neeley	Taggart
Doolittle	Hobson	Nolan, J. I.	Talbott, Md.
Doremus	Holland	O'Brien	Talcott, N. Y.
Doughton	Houston	Oglesby	Tavenner
Driscoll	Howard	O'Hair	Taylor, Ala.
Dupré	Hughes, Ga.	Oldfield	Taylor, Ark.
Eagan	Hulings	O'Leary	Taylor, Colo.
Eagle	Hull	O'Shaunessy	Taylor, N. Y.
Edwards	Humphreys, Miss.	Padgett	Temple
Elder	Igoe	Page	Ten Eyck
Estopinal	Jacoway	Palmer	Thacher
Evans	Johnson, Ky.	Patten, N. Y.	Thomas
Faison	Johnson, S. C.	Pepper	Thompson, Okla.
Falconer	Jones	Peters	Thomson, Ill.
Fergusson	Keating	Peterson	Townsend
Ferris	Kelly, Pa.	Phelan	Tribble
Fields	Kennedy, Conn.	Post	Tuttle
Finley	Kent	Pou	Underhill
Fitzgerald	Kettner	Quin	Underwood
FitzHenry	Key, Ohio	Ragsdale	Vaughan
Flood, Va.	Kindel	Rainey	Walker
Floyd, Ark.	Kinkead, N. J.	Raker	Walsh
Foster	Kirkpatrick	Rauch	Walters
Fowler	Kitchin	Rayburn	Watkins
Francis	Konig	Reed	Watson
Gallagher	Konop	Reilly, Conn.	Weaver
Gard	Korbly	Reilly, Wis.	Whitacre
Garner	Lafferty	Richardson	White
Garrett, Tenn.	Lazaro	Riordan	Williams
Garrett, Tex.	Lee, Ga.	Roddenbery	Wilson, Fla.
Gerry	Lee, Pa.	Rothermel	Wilson, N. Y.
Gilmore	L'Engle	Rouse	Wingo
Gittins	Lesher	Rubey	Witherspoon
Glass	Lever	Rupley	Woodruff
Godwin, N. C.	Levy	Russell	Young, Tex.
Goeke	Lewis, Pa.	Sabath

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1.

Copley

NOT VOTING—14.

Ansberry	George	Moss, Ind.	Sullivan
Anthony	Hoxworth	Roberts, Nev.	Webb
Baltz	Hughes, W. Va.	Rucker
Donohoe	Lewis, Md.	Stedman

So the motion to recommit was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

On this vote:

Mr. ANTHONY (to recommit) with Mr. STEDMAN (against).

Mr. DONOHOE (to recommit) with Mr. RUCKER (against).

Mr. ANSBERRY with Mr. ROBERTS of Nevada.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER. The motion to recommit is lost, and the question is, Shall the bill pass?

Mr. MANN. On that I demand the yeas and nays.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. Both the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 281, nays 139, answered "present" 1, not voting 12, as follows:

YEAS—281.

Abercrombie	Borchers	Callaway	Conry
Adair	Borland	Candler, Miss.	Covington
Adamson	Bowdle	Cantrill	Cox
Aiken	Bremner	Caraway	Crisp
Alexander	Brockson	Carew	Crosser
Allen	Brodbeck	Carlin	Cullop
Ashbrook	Brown, N. Y.	Carr	Curley
Aswell	Brown, W. Va.	Carter	Dale
Bailey	Bruckner	Cary	Davenport
Baker	Brumbaugh	Casey	Davis, W. Va.
Barkley	Bryan	Church	Decker
Barnhart	Buchanan, Ill.	Clancy	Deitrick
Bartlett	Buchanan, Tex.	Clark, Fla.	Dent
Bathrick	Bulkley	Claypool	Dershem
Beakes	Burgess	Clayton	Dickinson
Beall, Tex.	Burke, Wis.	Cline	Dies
Bell, Ga.	Burnett	Collier	Difenderfer
Blackmon	Byrnes, S. C.	Connelly, Kans.	Dixon
Boober	Byrns, Tenn.	Connolly, Iowa	Donovan

Dooling	Hayden	Maher	Sisson
Doolittle	Heflin	Metz	Slayden
Doremus	Helm	Mitchell	Small
Doughton	Helvering	Montague	Smith, Md.
Driscoll	Henry	Moon	Smith, Tex.
Eagan	Hensley	Morrison	Sparkman
Eagle	Hill	Murray, Mass.	Stafford
Edwards	Hobson	Murray, Okla.	Stanley
Elder	Holland	Neeley	Stephens, Miss.
Estopinal	Houston	Nolan, J. I.	Stephens, Nebr.
Evans	Howard	O'Brien	Stephens, Tex.
Faison	Hughes, Ga.	Oglesby	Stevens, N. H.
Fergusson	Hull	O'Hair	Stone
Ferris	Humphreys, Miss.	Oldfield	Stout
Fields	Igoe	O'Leary	Stringer
Finley	Jacoway	O'Shaunessy	Sumners
Fitzgerald	Johnson, Ky.	Padgett	Taggart
FitzHenry	Johnson, S. C.	Page	Talbott, Md.
Flood, Va.	Jones	Palmer	Talcott, N. Y.
Floyd, Ark.	Keating	Patten, N. Y.	Tavenner
Foster	Kelly, Pa.	Pepper	Taylor, Ala.
Fowler	Kennedy, Conn.	Peters	Taylor, Ark.
Francis	Kent	Peterson	Taylor, Colo.
Gallagher	Kettner	Phelan	Taylor, N. Y.
Gard	Key, Ohio	Post	Ten Eyck
Garner	Kindel	Pou	Thacher
Garrett, Tenn.	Kinkead, N. J.	Quin	Thomas
Garrett, Tex.	Kirkpatrick	Ragsdale	Thompson, Okla.
Gerry	Kitchin	Rainey	Townsend
Gilmore	Konig	Raker	Tribble
Gittins	Konop	Rauch	Tuttle
Glass	Korbly	Rayburn	Underhill
Godwin, N. C.	Lee, Ga.	Reed	Underwood
Goeke	Lee, Pa.	Reilly, Conn.	Vaughan
Goldfogle	L'Engle	Reilly, Wis.	Walker
Goodwin, Ark.	Lesher	Richardson	Walsh
Gordon	Lever	Riordan	Watkins
Gorman	Levy	Roddenbery	Watson
Goulden	Lewis, Md.	Rothermel	Weaver
Graham, Ill.	Lieb	Rouse	Webb
Gray	Linthicum	Rubey	Whitacre
Gregg	Lloyd	Rupley	White
Griffin	Lobeck	Russell	Williams
Gudger	Logue	Sabath	Wilson, Fla.
Hamill	Lonergan	Saunders	Wilson, N. Y.
Hamlin	McAndrews	Scully	Wingo
Hammond	McClellan	Seldomridge	Witherspoon
Hardwick	McCoy	Shackleford	Young, Tex.
Hardy	McDermott	Sharp	The Speaker
Harrison, Miss.	McGillicuddy	Sherley
Harrison, N. Y.	Maguire, Nebr.	Sherwood
Hay	Mahan	Sims

NAYS—139.

Ainey	French	Langham	Roberts, Mass.
Anderson	Gardner	Langley	Roberts, Nev.
Austin	Gillett	Lazaro	Rogers
Avis	Good	Lenroot	Scott
Barchfeld	Goodwin, Me.	Lewis, Pa.	Sells
Bartholdt	Graham, Pa.	Lindbergh	Shreve
Barton	Green, Iowa	Lindquist	Sinnott
Bell, Cal.	Greene, Mass.	McGuire, Okla.	Slemp
Britten	Greene, Vt.	McKenzie	Sloan
Broussard	Griest	McLaughlin	Smith, Idaho
Browne, Wis.	Guernsey	Madden	Smith, J. M. C.
Browning	Hamilton, Mich.	Manahan	Smith, Minn.
Burke, Pa.	Hamilton, N. Y.	Mann	Smith, N. Y.
Burke, S. Dak.	Haugen	Mapes	Smith, Saml. W.
Butler	Hawley	Martin	Steenerson
Calder	Hayes	Merritt	Stephens, Cal.
Campbell	Helgesen	Miller	Stevens, Minn.
Chandler, N. Y.	Hinds	Mondell	Sutherland
Cooper	Hinebaugh	Moore	Switzer
Cramton	Howell	Morgan, La.	Temple
Curry	Hulings	Morgan, Okla.	Thomson, Ill.
Danforth	Humphrey, Wash.	Morin	Towner
Davis, Minn.	Johnson, Utah	Moss, W. Va.	Treadway
Dillon	Johnson, Wash.	Mott	Vare
Dunn	Kahn	Murdock	Volstead
Dupré	Keister	Nelson	Wallin
Dyer	Kelley, Mich.	Norton	Walters
Edmonds	Kennedy, Iowa	Parker	Wilder
Esch	Kennedy, R. I.	Patton, Pa.	Willis
Fairchild	Kiess, Pa.	Payne	Winslow
Falconer	Kinkaid, Nebr.	Platt	Woodruff
Farr	Knowland, J. R.	Plumley	Woods
Fess	Kreider	Porter	Young, Mich.
Fordney	Lafferty	Powers	Young, N. Dak.
Frear	La Follette	Prouty

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1.

Copley.

NOT VOTING—12.

Ansberry	Donohoe	Hughes, W. Va.	Rucker
Anthony	George	McKellar	Stedman
Baltz	Hoxworth	Moss, Ind.	Sullivan

So the bill was passed.

The following additional pairs were announced:

On this vote:

Mr. RUCKER (for the bill) with Mr. DONOHOE (against).

Mr. STEDMAN (for the bill) with Mr. ANTHONY (against).

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call my name.

The Clerk called the name of Mr. CLARK of Missouri, and he voted "aye," as above recorded.

Mr. PADGETT. Mr. Speaker, I am informed that my colleague, Mr. MCKELLAR, has been called away on account of sickness, and I ask that he be excused on that account. He has been in the House until a short time ago, when he was taken away very sick.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee asks that his colleague, Mr. MCKELLAR, be excused. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The vote was then announced as above recorded. [Applause.]

On motion of Mr. UNDERWOOD, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. The Chair desires to make a short statement. On the division on the Murdock substitute the Chair did his best to count fairly, as he always does. He counted 17 Members and announced it that way. It turns out that there are 19 men constituting the entire Progressive Party in the House, and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] furnishes me with a paper, signed by the 19, that they all voted. It is not as easy to count as people may think. For instance, if a Member walks away from the Speaker while a count is in progress the Speaker takes it for granted that, although he is standing up, he does not wish to be counted. If one is leaning over conversing with another man, it is difficult to say whether he is standing up to be counted or not. So if there is no objection the Chair will direct that the RECORD show 19 votes in favor of the proposition instead of 17.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I shall not object, although I took the trouble to make the count while the Speaker was counting, and there were only 17 standing up.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, I did not catch the remark of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN]. I understand that he said he counted those who stood and that there were only 17. As usual, he casts reflections on the word of men in this body. There were 19 men who said they were here and who said they voted.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] said he would not object, and that is the end of it. The reporter will change the 17 to 19, if there is no objection. [After a pause.] The Chair hears no objection.

ASSAULT ON REPRESENTATIVE SIMS.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I am advised by the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. DAVIS] that he will call up the Glover case to-morrow, and in order that it may be finished to-morrow I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet to-morrow at 11 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet to-morrow at 11 o'clock. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, may I ask the gentleman from Alabama this question: After the Glover case is disposed of to-morrow, what is likely to be the program of the majority of the House for the next few weeks?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I will say to the gentleman from Illinois that it is the purpose of the Committee on Ways and Means on the Democratic side to make up the committees for this side of the House. That will probably take until the 1st of June. In view of that fact I would like, if it is agreeable to the membership of the House, and as no further business can be transacted without committees, to enter into a unanimous-consent agreement, if we can, on both sides of the House, that after either to-morrow or Saturday—one or two little matters may come up to-morrow—the House may adjourn for three days at a time until the 1st of June, and that no business shall be transacted during that time, so that Members may go home.

Mr. MANN. Of course, there may be some little "chicken-feed" business.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes; except unanimous-consent matters.

Mr. MANN. And of course nothing could be transacted in the absence of a quorum, and with such an understanding anyone who was here could stop the transaction of any business, because there would be no quorum present. That is perfectly satisfactory so far as I am personally concerned, and I think that meets the feelings of the Republican Members of the House.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the minority leader, as well as the majority leader, whether that would interfere with the sending of the Indian appropriation bill to conference, in case there was no objection to it.

Mr. MANN. I should say not.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I should say not. Then, Mr. Speaker, as there is probably a larger attendance here now than there will be to-morrow or the next day, I ask unanimous consent that after Saturday next there shall be no business transacted until the 1st day of June, except some little matters that may possibly come up by unanimous consent, such as sending the Indian bill to conference, so that it will not be necessary to keep a quorum present, and that Members may go home.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman from Alabama as to his purpose in the MacDonald-Young contested-election case.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I would say that I expect by the 1st of June to have the Democratic members of the committee selected, prepared to submit to the Democratic caucus, and if the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] are prepared to furnish the names of their members of that committee at that time, the committee will be elected immediately afterwards, so that it may consider the case.

Mr. MURDOCK. I will say to the gentleman from Alabama that that is the case we want to get up as soon as possible.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think there is no dispositon on this side of the House to delay a speedy hearing.

The SPEAKER. There are two requests pending. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet at 11 o'clock to-morrow. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered. The second request is that, after Saturday next and until the 1st of June, there shall be no business transacted except small matters of unanimous consent——

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I take it that that is only a gentleman's agreement. There can be no order entered in the House in reference to it.

The SPEAKER. The intention, of course, is to adjourn three days at a time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I think that is the understanding. Nobody has objected.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to submit an inquiry to the gentleman from Alabama which he will understand. Suppose the Committee on Rules should report a proposition to be submitted to the House on Saturday next—a matter of legislation—would this agreement interfere with that matter being considered?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Not on Saturday, but on the following Monday. My idea is that the Membership of the House could stay here Saturday if necessary. Mr. Speaker, as I understand the agreement, it would not interfere with any emergency appropriation bill that might come in.

Mr. MANN. Well, the Speaker put that request.

The SPEAKER. The request has never been agreed to.

Mr. MANN. I did not understand the request is to be put to the House. I understand it is an understanding that will undoubtedly, having now been stated, prevent the House from having a quorum at any time, so that if any gentleman desires to prevent business it is a very easy matter for him to do. All he has got to do is to say "Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present."

Mr. COOPER. Do I understand from the remark of the gentleman from Illinois that it will be possible, unless somebody got up and said they objected, to transact business between now and the 1st of June?

Mr. MANN. It would be theoretically possible, of course, but——

Mr. COOPER. I do not think it ought to be theoretically possible; it ought to be absolutely impossible, and I think there ought to be a distinct understanding that no business should be transacted.

The SPEAKER. That is all that can be done.

Mr. MANN. I will say to the gentleman from Wisconsin no unanimous-consent agreement entered into by the House could prevent the House or Members of the House the next day from rescinding it by unanimous consent.

Mr. COOPER. Then I think it would be a great deal safer to recess until the 1st of June.

The SPEAKER. The trouble is we can not recess until the 1st of June——

Mr. COOPER. We could do so with the consent of the Senate, I think.

The SPEAKER. The Chair knows with the consent of the Senate you can.

Mr. MANN. We have never had any difficulty about this before.

Mr. COOPER. The reason I spoke of this is because last summer during the national convention at Baltimore and the other one at Chicago there was quite a long time when supposedly no business of importance would be transacted, and there was some quite important business transacted, and there were a very small number of people here.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not recall any agreement having been made in the House at that time.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Wisconsin will recall at that time there was an agreement in the House that no business should be transacted during the Democratic convention in Baltimore, and there was no business transacted. The House was over there, or rather a large share of it, and the rest were somewhere else, but during the time of the convention in Chicago the sundry civil appropriation bill was under consideration, but there was no agreement not to transact business because, as a matter of fact, everybody was pushing the sundry civil appropriation bill.

Mr. COOPER. It is my recollection there was some business of importance transacted.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama for unanimous consent that after Saturday until the 1st day of June there shall be no business transacted in the House except such things as referring bills to a committee or such little matters to which everybody would be agreeable?

Mr. COOPER. Will that include the adoption of a conference report?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the request, and if the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] understand the proposition and will cooperate with me we will try to carry it out. [Applause.]

CLERK TO JOINT SELECT COMMITTEE ON DISPOSITION OF USELESS EXECUTIVE PAPERS.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Chairman, I present the following privileged resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 86 (H. Rept. 13).

Resolved, That the chairman of the Joint Select Committee on Disposition of Useless Executive Papers be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint a clerk to said committee, who shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House at the rate of $6 per day for this session.

The committee amendment was read, as follows:

In line 5, after the word "day," insert "from the 2d day of May, 1913, and during the remainder of," so that it will read: "who shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House at the rate of $6 per day from the 2d day of May, 1913, and during the remainder of this session."

Mr. MANN. This is the employee for the Talbott committee.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

MESSENGER TO JOINT SELECT COMMITTEE ON DISPOSITION OF USELESS EXECUTIVE PAPERS.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to offer the following resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 85 (H. Rept. 15).

Resolved, That the chairman of the Joint Select Committee on Disposition of Useless Executive Papers be, and he is hereby, authorized to appoint a messenger to said committee, who shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House at the rate of $60 per month for this session.

Also the following committee amendments were read:

Line 5, after the word "month," insert "from the 2d day of May, 1913, and during the remainder of."

Line 5, after the word "month," strike out the word "for."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendments.

The question was taken, and the amendments were agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

MARY C. ADAMS.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I also offer the following resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 87 (H. Rept. 12).

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay to Mary C. Adams, out of the contingent fund of the House, the sum of $60, said amount being compensation for 24 days' salary, from April 7 to April 30, 1913, both days inclusive, as attendant in the ladies' reception room of the House.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

MARIE SMITH, HALLIE VIERBUCHEN, AND LOUISE MORGAN.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I also offer the following resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri offers a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 81 (H. Rept. 11).

Resolved, That there be paid, out of the contingent fund of the House, to Marie Smith, Hallie Vierbuchen, and Louise Morgan $7.50 each for services as telephone operators for first three days of April, 1911; and that Hallie Vierbuchen, Louise Morgan, and Jennie White be paid $15 each for services as telephone operators for the first six days of April, 1913.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

COMMITTEE ON THE MERCHANT MARINE AND FISHERIES.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I also offer the following resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri also offers the following resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 84 (H. Rept. 14).

Resolved, That after March 4, 1913, those members of the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries who are Members elect of the House of Representatives, Sixty-third Congress, or a majority of them, until the appointment of the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries, are authorized to expend for the purposes stated, and under the conditions stipulated in House resolution 587, adopted June 18, 1912, out of the contingent fund of the House of Representatives, a sum not exceeding the balance unexpended after March 4, 1913, of the whole amount authorized to be expended on said resolution.

Also the following committee amendment was read:

Line 3, after the word "Fisheries," insert the words "of the Sixty-second Congress."

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendment.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I would ask the gentleman to make an explanation of what this is.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, this resolution authorizes the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries, which was authorized during the last session of Congress to make certain investigations by House resolution, to discharge this work of investigation and continue it and pay the employees that may have been employed under that resolution since the 4th day of March.

Mr. MANN. How could there be any employees employed since? Did they have authority to go ahead after the 4th of March?

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. ALEXANDER]?

Mr. MANN. Certainly.

Mr. ALEXANDER. The Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries completed the public hearings on or about the 1st day of March. They had in their employ Dr. S. S. Huebner as expert, and a stenographer, who is assisting him. I asked Dr. Huebner to go ahead and revise the hearings and index them ready for publication, and also revise the diplomatic and consular reports and index them also for publication, and continue the work under my direction until the committee should be appointed. The public hearings ended, as stated, about March 1, and it would have very much interfered with our work to have dropped it at that stage. Under the resolution (H. Res. 587) of the House the committee were investigating the so-called Shipping Trust. We have expended, I will say, about $12,000 in the investigation altogether.

Mr. MANN. How much does this further authorize the committee to expend?

Mr. ALEXANDER. The appropriation was $25,000.

Mr. MANN. Now, as I understand, the amendment proposed is to make it apply to the members of the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries in the last Congress and who were reelected to this Congress. Is that right?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes, sir.

Mr. MANN. Yet, in the course of a few days we will have a new Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries, who will have no money in their control, and these old members, who still remain, will have $13,000?

Mr. LLOYD. The Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries will then take up the work and will have control over the fund.

Mr. MANN. When do they get the authority? When you have turned the money over to somebody else?

Mr. LLOYD. The members of the committee elect to this Congress are only authorized to spend the money up to the time the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries is selected.

Mr. MANN. I did not so understand it.

Mr. ALEXANDER. That is simply for the purpose of continuing the work.

Mr. MANN. Is that what this resolution provides?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes; this just provides for the time between the 4th day of March and the time when the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries may be appointed. The gentleman will remember, perhaps, that in the general deficiency appropriation bill two or three committees were authorized to make expenditures just as this committee has done, but they failed to include the Committee on the Merchant Marine and Fisheries.

Mr. BARTLETT. Permit me to say, Mr. Speaker, that we were not asked to do it.

Mr. MANN. I know that a good many of the committees were authorized to spend money for investigations in the last Congress, but I have seen nothing come out of them that amounts to anything.

Mr. MARTIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. LLOYD] yield to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. MARTIN]?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes.

Mr. MARTIN. Does the pending resolution in its terms limit the authorization to the time of the appointment of the new committee?

Mr. ALEXANDER. Yes.

Mr. LLOYD. That is it.

Mr. MARTIN. I did not quite catch it when it was read.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on agreeing to the resolution as amended.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to Mr. HOXWORTH, on account of sickness.

LEAVE TO WITHDRAW PAPERS—ALLEN M. HILLER.

By unanimous consent, at the request of Mr. MOORE, leave was granted to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of Allen M. Hiller (H. R. 26804), Sixty-second Congress, no adverse report having been made thereon.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 6 o'clock and 32 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned, pursuant to the order previously made, until to-morrow, Friday, May 9, 1913, at 11 o'clock a. m.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXII, the Committee on Pensions was discharged from the consideration of the bill (H. R. 3695) granting an increase of pension to Amelia Walker, and the same was referred to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. MADDEN: A bill (H. R. 4896) to create in the War Department and the Navy Department, respectively, a roll designated as "the Civil War volunteer officers' retired list," to authorize placing thereon with retired pay certain surviving officers who served in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States in the Civil War, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BARCHFELD: A bill (H. R. 4897) to provide that petty officers, noncommissioned officers, and enlisted men of the United States Army on the retired list who had creditable Civil War service shall receive the rank or rating and the pay of the next higher enlisted grade; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4898) to provide for voluntary admissions to the Government Hospital for the Insane, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

By Mr. TUTTLE: A bill (H. R. 4899) to fix the standard barrel for fruits, vegetables, and other dry commodities; to the Committee on Coinage, Weights, and Measures.

By Mr. FESS: A bill (H. R. 4900) for the erection of a monument to Gen. Ulysses S. Grant at Georgetown, Ohio; to the Committee on the Library.

By Mr. VARE: A bill (H. R. 4901) establishing a minimum wage and a minimum age for all Government employees; to the Committee on Labor.

By Mr. CARTER: Resolution (H. Res. 96) authorizing the House Committee on Labor to make an investigation of conditions in the Paint Creek district, West Virginia; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. CLAYTON: Resolution (H. Res. 97) providing for the consideration of H. R. 32 and S. 577, etc.; to the Committee on Rules.

By Mr. THACHER: Memorial of the Legislature of Massachusetts, against releasing Federal control of national forests; to the Committee on Agriculture.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, private bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. BUTLER: A bill (H. R. 4902) for the relief of Allen M. Hiller; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. BYRNS of Tennessee: A bill (H. R. 4903) for the relief of the deacons of the Gethsemane Baptist Church of Davidson County, Tenn.; to the Committee on War Claims.

By Mr. CALDER: A bill (H. R. 4904) for the relief of Mary McCullough; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. KEY of Ohio: A bill (H. R. 4905) granting a pension to Charles Woesner; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4906) granting an increase of pension to Frank E. Schoener; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4907) granting an increase of pension to Jacob Teal; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4908) granting an increase of pension to John Herndon; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4909) granting an increase of pension to Joseph W. Watt; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4910) granting an increase of pension to Emma E. Kanzleiter; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4911) granting an increase of pension to George Kross; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4912) granting an increase of pension to Robert W. Irvine; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4913) granting an increase of pension to George W. Ovens; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. KIESS of Pennsylvania: A bill (H. R. 4914) granting a pension to Paulina L. Klepper; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4915) granting a pension to Hannah L. Carson; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4916) granting a pension to Sarah E. Hendricks; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4917) granting a pension to Frances R. Gray; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4918) granting an increase of pension to Daniel Robb; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. LANGLEY: A bill (H. R. 4919) granting a pension to Freelin Taylor; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4920) granting a pension to Frank P. Collins; to the Committee on Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4921) granting a pension to Orville Fox; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. RAUCH: A bill (H. R. 4922) granting a pension to Anna L. Yachmann; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

Also, a bill (H. R. 4923) granting an increase of pension to John H. Weaver; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. REILLY of Connecticut: A bill (H. R. 4924) to remove the charge of desertion against William V. Molloy; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. THACHER: A bill (H. R. 4925) for the relief of E. W. Rohmeling; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. TREADWAY: A bill (H. R. 4926) granting an increase of pension to Sarah J. Winters; to the Committee on Invalid Pensions.

By Mr. TUTTLE: A bill (H. R. 4927) for the relief of Isador Miller; to the Committee on Claims.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By the SPEAKER (by request): Petition of D. H. Kelly, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also (by request), petition of the New York and New Jersey Live Stock Exchange, Jersey City, N. J., favoring admitting live stock free of duty; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DALE: Petition of Abe Weinstein, Brooklyn, N. Y., protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, Chicago, Ill., relative to the reductions in the dutiable list and the additions to the free list in House bill 3321; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DICKINSON: Petition of C. A. Croome and others, of Clinton, Mo., protesting against mutual life insurance funds in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. DYER: Petition of A. L. Dyke, St. Louis, Mo., protesting against the assessment of a fee for all protests against assessment of the collector of customs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Lumbermen's Club of St. Louis, Mo., protesting against the passage of legislation abolishing the Commerce Court; to the Committee on Appropriations.

Also, petition of Whitelaw Bros., St. Louis, Mo., protesting against the reduction of the duty on sugar; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Hess & Culberson Jewelry Co., St. Louis, Mo., protesting against any change in the duty on diamonds; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of J. A. Gillespie, St. Louis, Mo., protesting against any reduction of the tariff on collars; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Ravarino & Freschi Grocery Co. and the Rosen-Reichardt Brokerage Co., of St. Louis, Mo., protesting against the assessment of a fee for all protests against assessments of duty by the collector of customs; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Charles A. Unger, St. Louis, Mo., protesting against any change in the duty on books bound in the United States; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the American Home Building and Loan Association, St. Louis, Mo., asking that building and loan associations be exempted from the payment of the income tax; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Tenth Ward Improvement Association, St. Louis, Mo., favoring the passage of legislation for immediate consideration of adequate provisions for flood control, etc.; to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors.

Also, petition of William D. Tulley and 3 other citizens of St. Louis, Mo., protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ESCH: Petition of the New York and New Jersey Live Stock Exchange, of Jersey City, N. J., against placing meats on the free list and taxing live stock; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. FITZGERALD: Petition of the Navy League of the United States, favoring legislation providing for a council of national defense; to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

By Mr. GOLDFOGLE: Petition of the Felt Hat Manufacturers' Tariff Committee, relative to paragraph No. 446, Schedule N, of the tariff bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Max Glasberg, of New York, protesting against mutual life insurance funds in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates, of Boston, Mass., against reduction of the duty on jute goods; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of sundry citizens of New York, N. Y., against free cigars from the Philippine Islands; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the International Brick, Tile, and Terra Cotta Workers' Alliance, of Chicago, Ill., against reduction of the duty on floor and wall tile; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Rocky Mountain Ore Producers, Salt Lake City, Utah, protesting against any change in the duty on lead in ores; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of Aron Wein and Dave Tux, of New York, N. Y., protesting against the removal of the duty on Philippine tobacco and cigars; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. HOWELL: Petition of N. G. Stringham, H. E. Hatch, and others, of Utah, against mutual life insurance funds in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. LEVY: Petition of Roger H. Williams, New York, protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of E. A. G. Intemann, New York, N. Y., protesting against the reduction of the duty on rock salt; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the New York and New Jersey Live Stock Exchange, Jersey City, favoring placing live stock on the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Richmond Chamber of Commerce, Richmond, Va., favoring the passage of legislation for an immediate reform in the banking system of the United States; to the Committee on Banking and Currency.

By Mr. J. I. NOLAN: Petition of the Jewelers' Board of Trade of the Pacific Coast, San Francisco, Cal., against any reduction in the tariff on diamonds, etc.; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. ROBERTS of Nevada: Petition of sundry citizens of Nevada, against mutual life insurance funds in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. STEPHENS of California: Petitions of I. B. Walton and 26 other citizens of Los Angeles, Norwalk, Downey, Astasia, Cudahy, and Garden City, Cal., against placing sugar on the free list; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petitions of sundry citizens of California, against mutual life insurance funds in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

Also, petition of the Retail Dry Goods Merchants' Association, of Los Angeles, Cal., against Schedule N of the tariff bill, relative to importation of wild-bird plumage; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. WALLIN: Petition of Delos Abel, Schenectady, N. Y., protesting against including mutual life insurance companies in the income-tax bill; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, May 9, 1913.

The Senate met at 2 o'clock p. m.

Prayer by the Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D.

The Journal of the proceedings of Wednesday last was read and approved.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. NELSON presented a petition of sundry citizens of Minneapolis, Minn., praying that mutual life insurance companies be exempted from the operation of the income-tax clause of the pending tariff bill, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a resolution adopted by the City Council of Minneapolis, Minn., favoring the establishment of a Federal telegraph and telephone system, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce.

Mr. NORRIS presented a petition of sundry citizens of Scribner, Nebr., praying for a reduction in the tariff on sugar, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. LODGE presented the memorial of Haman Von Hall and 44 other citizens of Boston, Mass., remonstrating against the admission free of duty of cigars from the Philippine Islands, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. GALLINGER presented petitions of Frank B. Sawyer, of Keene, N. H.; James M. George, of Grasmere, N. H.; Massillon W. Angier, of Concord, N. H.; G. Wardwell, of Keene, N. H.; Herman C Weymouth, of Laconia, N. H.; Lloyd E. Maxfield, of Pittsfield, N. H.; James E. Kress, of Johnstown, Pa.; Alfred D. Warren and Frank D. Lackey, of Wilmington, Del.; W. B. McCarthy and C. H. Miller, of Huntingdon, Pa.; Charles F. Van Horn, Alexander W. Dannenbaum, W. C. Pope, J. Howard Wilson, F. L. Degener, jr., J. Blair Kennerly, and Emmett O'Neil, of Philadelphia, Pa.; B. F. Lockwood, F. B. Ray, W. C. Lusk, and B. M. Banton, of Yankton, S. Dak.; Leonard L. Barrett, of Fort Warren, Mass.; Robert Snyder, of Narberth, Pa.; Harry Brown, H. C. Chisolm, and Samuel I. Spyker, of Huntingdon, Pa.; S. Pemberton Hutchinson, of Philadelphia, Pa.; and George C. Jewell and Percy Elmer Jewell, policyholders in the Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, praying for the exemption of mutual life insurance companies from the operation of the income-tax clause in the pending tariff bill, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of the Linnæan Society of New York, praying for the adoption of the clause in the pending tariff bill relating to the importation of aigrettes and feathers, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. JOHNSON of Maine presented memorials of Local Union No. 27, International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite, and Paper Mill Workers, of Woodland; of Local Union No. 12, International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite, and Paper Mill Workers, of Millinocket; of Androscoggin Local Union No. 15, International Brotherhood of Paper Makers, of Lisbon Falls; Local Union No. 146, International Brotherhood of Paper Makers, of Woodland; and of sundry citizens of Sherman, Limestone, and Madison, all in the State of Maine, remonstrating against a reduction in the duty on print paper and pulp, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Portland, Togus, Waterville, Bangor, Van Buren, Westbrook, Old Town, Bridgton, and Caribou, all in the State of Maine, praying for the exemption of mutual life insurance companies from the operation of the income-tax clause in the pending tariff bill, which were referred to the Committee on Finance.

TARIFF DUTY ON SHIRTS AND COLLARS.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there are no further petitions and memorials, reports of committees are in order.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, before the first order is passed I desire to present a matter to the consideration of the Senate which I think properly belongs to that head of business.

On Wednesday last I had occasion, in speaking upon the amendment of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] to the sundry civil appropriation bill, to place in the RECORD a circular issued by the United Shirt & Collar Co. to its employees and posted at various conspicuous places in the several establishments of the workshops belonging to the constituents of the United Shirt & Collar Co. It is unnecessary to do more than to refer at this time to that circular, which appears on page 1262 of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

This morning I received a clipping from the same paper, the Troy Standard Press, relating to the same subject. That clipping consists of a reproduction of an anonymous communication, evidently from one of the working girls in one of these establishments, and doubtless prompted by the circular, which, as you will recall, Mr. President, was accompanied by a cut in wages which the employees were threatening to resist. This clipping is from the issue of May 7, and reads as follows:

We got cut a quarter of a cent Wednesday on every doz. of work makes our pay 50 cts. a day less. There is thirty two of us folding. They want us to send a letter to Washington.

The comment of the paper is:

It is not the custom of the Standard Press to give space in its columns to anonymous communications. Under the existing conditions, however, we believe no apology for deviation from that rule is necessary in presenting this fragment from an anonymous letter as an exhibit of how Republican high "protection" does not protect our working people. To sign such a communication for publication would be equivalent to immediate discharge. It is not the kind of letter being sent to Washington, but a free-will offering of facts. It is doubtful if the most of those other letters, censored "at the office" before mailing are free-will or contain facts.

Commenting further this article assumes to give interviews held upon the subject matter of the circular of May 5 and its effect upon the working people.

"We were ordered to sign a petition—

I am reading from the paper—

asking for amendments to the proposed tariff reduction," said a young woman employed by Tim & Co. this afternoon. "The order was sent out this morning and we were told to stop in the office some time to-day and sign. Accompanying the order was a decided intimation that unless we did so we would receive no more work. Up to noon no girls had obeyed the order, and it was generally conceded that we would remain firm and refuse to do so, although we expected to receive individual and specific instructions on this matter this afternoon and believe that the bosses may attempt to force us to sign before we leave for our homes to-night.

"This attempt to make the employees of the collar shops in Troy pose as martyrs in the case of the enforcement of the tariff reduction is a subterfuge, pure and simple, because we will not be benefited one way or the other. We are not getting the work we should, anyway, and have not for a long while. The top stitchers for the last six weeks have been taking down $2.50 or so Saturday nights as a week's wages. The other employees of the shop did not average more than $6 a week for 1911 and 1912, and the prospects for 1913 are no more satisfactory. They can not blame these conditions on the proposed reduction of the tariff, for they existed long before the tariff talk started. Tim & Co. have factories in Rutland, Vt., and Greenbush, and they send their work to those places, so why should we Troy employees worry whether the tariff goes up or down? Yet they are trying to give the public and the Government the impression that we will be seriously affected by any change in the tariff on cotton collars.

"The Cluett factories are also shipping large quantities of work to their other factories and yet they are making an appeal for tariff protection in behalf of their Troy employees. The employees firmly believe that the manufacturers are simply making a play out of the tariff question in order to bring about a reduction in wages. Some of the shops have experienced this cut already, and it was reported to-day that a general cut would take place to-morrow. All the big factories are reported to be preparing for this cut, but the name of Tim & Co. was not mentioned. Possibly this is because we made a successful stand against a proposed cut of a quarter cent some months ago and Messrs. Ellis feel that we will go out again if another attempt is made to cut us, as we certainly would."

SITUATION GRAVE ENOUGH.

The situation is much more grave than the manufacturers are willing to admit. An effort was made generally throughout the shops of Troy to get the letters and petitions of the employees away to Washington to-day if possible. This brought the situation nearer to a focus and, with the expected cuts hanging over them like a menacing cloud, the workers are not in a very happy state of mind and are ready to resort to any recourse that might seem to offer an opportunity for impressing upon the employers the fact that the tariff reduction can not be made a subterfuge for reduction of wages. One employee of Earl & Wilsons said to-day:

"We have been reduced and reduced until we can not stand another reduction in wages. Old Ed Betts used to say that $6 a week was enough for any girl to live on, and I guess his sons are putting the father's theory into practice. At least, they appear to think that $6 a week is enough to pay any girl. We are put up against all kinds of persecution. Although we are working on piecework, we have to be in the shop at 7.10 in the morning or the doors are locked, and we can not get in until 7.45. If we are not in then we are locked out for the day. I do not know what right the Bettses have to lock up their hundreds of employees in a shop like that. What would happen if the place ever took fire and every exit locked? I always thought there were laws to protect workers, but they do not seem to be in effect in Troy. After we once get in we have to stay in until the boss says we can go out. They have made the nine-hour law an excuse for persecuting us by making us stay in until 6 o'clock at night, whether we have any work to do or not. Of course, if there is work to do, working by piece, we want to do it and earn as much money as possible. We want to work the full maximum of nine hours a day, but when there is nothing to do, staying in until 6 o'clock is just so many hours in prison. At first the bosses tried to make the girls think that the State law was doing this and that the proper redress was to agitate a return to old conditions, when women in factories could be worked until they dropped."

Employees of Cluett, Peabody & Co. were talking strike pretty generally this morning. They say any further reduction in the wages can result only in organization for action.

Mr. President, this article contains considerable matter which perhaps is not germane to the circular itself or to the letter which has been reproduced in facsimile in the article to which attention was called. My purpose in presenting it at present is to focus the attention of the Senate upon what seems to be the commencement of a system of procedure on the part of some at least of the manufacturers of this country, having for its purpose through the preliminary reduction of wages to force their employees, dependent upon them for subsistence, into adverse action with reference to the Underwood tariff bill and its consideration by the Members of this body, and by reason of such combined attack, expressed through continued and multiplied correspondence, either change public sentiment or force the hand of the majority of this body.

The gentlemen representing this industry, headed by the mayor of the city of Troy, called to see me about 10 days ago. I received them as courteously and listened to them as patiently and gave them such time as I could. They declared that any interference with the present rates of duty would result in the closing of their shops and in the abandonment of a great industry, which, while affecting them to some extent, would, of course, be very injurious to multitudes of employees by throwing them out of employment. Of course, the people of the country have heard this tale of woe from every direction, and will continue to hear it, because they can not help themselves, until this bill becomes a law, as it will become a law, and goes into effect throughout the country.

Mr. President, this Senate is a body the temper of which I greatly mistake—the temper of which on this side of the Chamber, at least, I greatly mistake—if it is to be influenced by any manufactured panic, by any forced obstruction of industries, by any ruthless and brutal reduction of wages, whereby the dependent labor of this country is to be coerced into taking a stand against a measure the passage of which is designed for and must result in their ultimate benefit.

If there is an industry which has less cause to take a step of this sort than any other, it is the collar and cuff and shirt industry of the country. The duty which they have enjoyed is not protective; it is absolutely prohibitive, as is shown by the statistical records of the Government. The Tariff Handbook discloses the fact that in 1910—that being the last date upon which complete statistics were obtainable at the time of its preparation, as I am informed—imports of linen collars and cuffs for that year were valued at $52,719.75, the duties upon which, at the rate of 40 cents per dozen and 20 per cent ad valorem—an equivalent ad valorem of 48.81—amounted to $25,731.82. The domestic production for that year was $17,230,452 in value. So that the importation was too insignificant to be of any importance whatever. The Underwood rate as proposed is 30 per cent ad valorem, upon which the estimated imports will be but $82,500, the duties upon which at that rate will be $24,750.

The value of the imports of cotton collars and cuffs for the same year was $2,431, the duties upon which were $1,493, under a rate of 45 cents and 15 per cent ad valorem, equaling 61.44 per cent ad valorem, with a domestic production valued at $19,648,412. The proposed Underwood rate is 25 per cent ad valorem, with estimated imports thereunder of the value of but $10,000, with duties amounting to $2,500.

Here is an industry, Mr. President, the total production of which is nearly $37,000,000, the imports of which amount to less than $60,000 in the aggregate; and yet that company, or this aggregation of companies, in order that their monopoly may not be disturbed, in order that they may force the hand of the Senate, are issuing their circulars commanding their employees to take certain action, cutting the rate of wages at the same time, and upon the pretense that depression occasioned by the proposed tariff changes makes it absolutely necessary.

I can only speak for myself. I am a member, and a most inconspicuous member, of the majority of the Finance Committee; but speaking for myself I want to say here and now that tactics of this sort will produce anything but the desired result. I believe that any industry which resorts to this line of conduct, which uses for its weapon the reduction of wages when reduction is not necessary, in order that their helpless employees may be coerced into a line of action the object of which is that the employers can continue their monopoly, should be answered by placing upon the free list every article which enters into the subject matter of that particular line of business, and especially so when, as is the case here, the amount of imported goods under existing rates is so infinitesimal, and will be but little larger after the new bill shall go into effect. So these gentlemen, if they continue in this course of conduct, need not be surprised if at the end of tariff legislation the free list will be considerably larger than it has been reported in the other House.

EMPLOYMENT OF FEMALES IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Mr. SMITH of Maryland, from the Committee on the District of Columbia, to which was referred the bill (S. 1294) to regulate the hours of employment and safeguard the health of females employed in the District of Columbia, reported it without amendment and submitted a report (No. 34) thereon.

BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION INTRODUCED.

Bills and a joint resolution were introduced, read the first time, and, by unanimous consent, the second time, and referred as follows:

By Mr. DU PONT:

A bill (S. 1857) for the relief of George T. Hamilton; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. JONES:

A bill (S. 1858) granting a pension to Albert F. Pray;

A bill (S. 1859) granting an increase of pension to Pedro B. de G. Fernandez;

A bill (S. 1860) granting an increase of pension to Susan Robinson;

A bill (S. 1861) granting an increase of pension to Thomas McGooden;

A bill (S. 1862) granting a pension to Raymond Christian; and

A bill (S. 1863) granting a pension to Patrick J. Finnerin; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. O'GORMAN:

A bill (S. 1864) for the relief of the contributors to the Ellen M. Stone ransom fund; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. WORKS:

A bill (S. 1865) to extend the provisions of the act to grant right of way over the public domain in the State of Arkansas for oil or gas pipe lines to the State of California; to the Committee on Public Lands.

By Mr. THOMAS:

A bill (S. 1866) to authorize the President to appoint Brig. Gen. Frank D. Baldwin to the grade of major general in the United States Army and place him on the retired list; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Maine:

A bill (S. 1867) for the relief of Malcolm Johnson; to the Committee on Military Affairs.

A bill (S. 1868) to preserve our national sea-food supplies and reserve, and to assist in fertilizing the land, to better the conditions of our farmers, our fishermen, and ultimate consumers of food by Federal fertilizer utilization of small sharks, called dogfish; also several species of unutilized salt-water fishes all preying upon and destroying our national sea and shore fisheries of enormous commercial and economic value, as plainly shown in and by the United States Bureau of Fisheries Document No. 622, dated 1907; to the Committee on Fisheries.

By Mr. JOHNSON of Maine (for Mr. BURLEIGH):

A bill (S. 1869) granting an increase of pension to William H. Murch; to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. BRADLEY:

A bill (S. 1870) granting an increase of pension to Rhoda A. Work (with accompanying papers); and

A bill (S. 1871) granting an increase of pension to Lucy Wells (with accompanying papers); to the Committee on Pensions.

By Mr. LEA:

A bill (S. 1872) granting an increase of pension to John J. Wolfe; to the Committee on Pensions.

A bill (S. 1873) for the relief of the estate of Ferdinand E. Kuhn; and

A bill (S. 1874) for the relief of the Court Avenue Presbyterian Church, incorporated as the First Cumberland Presbyterian Church of Memphis, Tenn.; to the Committee on Claims.

By Mr. BURTON:

A joint resolution (S. J. Res. 32) authorizing the Executive to accept an invitation to participate in an international conference on education extended by the Netherlands Government; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

THE TARIFF.

Mr. BURTON submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by J. C. South, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had disagreed to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2441) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes, asks a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. FITZGERALD, Mr. SHERLEY, and Mr. GILLETT managers at the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

SUNDRY CIVIL APPROPRIATION BILL.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 2441) making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, and for other purposes, and requesting a conference with the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia. I move that the Senate insist upon its amendments, agree to the conference asked for by the House, the conferees on the part of the Senate to be appointed by the Chair.

The motion was agreed to; and the Vice President appointed Mr. MARTIN of Virginia, Mr. OVERMAN, and Mr. WARREN conferees on the part of the Senate.

THE TARIFF.

The bill (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes, was read the first time by its title.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there be no objection, the bill will be considered as read——

Mr. PENROSE. No.

Mr. SIMMONS. I move that the bill be referred to the Finance Committee.

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, I move to amend the motion to add instructions to the Finance Committee to give public hearings on the bill and the several schedules thereof.

Mr. SIMMONS. I make the point of order that that is not germane to my motion.

Mr. PENROSE. Oh, yes; it is.

Mr. LODGE. On the point of order, if the Chair will glance at Rule XXVI, he will see that it is particularly provided for.

Mr. PENROSE. The rule will be found on page 27 of the Senate Manual.

And a motion simply to refer shall not be open to amendment, except to add instructions.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair rules that the point of order is not well taken.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, apropos of the remarks of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS]——

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Carolina yield to the Senator from Michigan?

Mr. SIMMONS. I had not yielded the floor.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Has the Senator from North Carolina the floor?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Carolina has the floor.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. If the Senator from North Carolina is not going to take any time, I would like to answer the suggestion of the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. SIMMONS. I suppose, before the Senator proceeds, we ought to dispose of the motion now before the Senate.

Mr. GALLINGER. The motion is debatable.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I desire to speak on the motion.

Mr. SIMMONS. Does the Senator from Michigan propose to debate the motion of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE]?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Certainly.

Mr. PENROSE. There may be quite a little debate over this motion, Mr. President.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, I desire to correct——

Mr. SIMMONS. Does the Senator from Michigan propose to address himself to the amendment to my motion offered by the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE]?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I do; yes, Mr. President.

Mr. SIMMONS. I will yield the floor to the Senator for that purpose.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, I shall detain the Senate only a few moments. The statement of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] is so striking and so unwarranted and reveals so much apprehension in the minds of Senators on the other side of the aisle as to what the possible effect of this bill may be upon the industries of the country that I desire to read from the Detroit Free Press of yesterday an interview with one of the leading chair manufacturers of that city, which is a very appropriate reply to the Senator from Colorado. He says:

"It looks like knocking a man down and then sitting on him so that he has no chance to get up," said James F. Murphy, treasurer of the Murphy Chair Co., Tuesday, referring to the statement that the Wilson administration will investigate manufacturers who cut wages, and attribute the cut to the tariff changes.

I do not know anything about the other lines that may be affected by the proposed tariff, but in our trade there have been large quantities of chairs imported from Vienna, and reed furniture from Japan and China has been coming in even with the duty at 35 per cent. Of course I do not know how these manufacturers get at their values for export, but it stands to reason that if they can compete with a 35 per cent duty they can compete with the proposed 15 per cent duty, and to meet this competition American manufacturers will have to cut their costs somewhere.

If we can not cut anything more from our material cost—and, inasmuch as very little of our raw material is imported, I do not see how the tariff will help us—the only thing that we can do to meet foreign competition is cut the labor cost or go out of business.

I do not want to be understood as proposing any cut in wages; in fact, I do not think that it would be possible under present labor conditions in Detroit; but if I did I should tell the administration to go right ahead with its investigation. It seems to me that an American manufacturer ought to have the right to apply a remedy without interference when he sees his cost mounting up to his selling price on account of the cheap-labor competition he may be forced to meet as a result of the Democratic tariff policy.

It does not look as if the Democrats cared much about protecting labor in our line when they keep the duty on reed where it is now and let in manufactures at a 20 per cent lower duty. The 20 per cent would cover the entire cost of the raw material in an ordinary chair of the kind we have to compete with from abroad.

Mr. President, those are the words of a conservative, high-minded, patriotic, enterprising citizen of my State. They are uttered because of his fear that the new tariff law, if put upon the statute books, will undermine his industry, and I think it little less than brazen effrontery for the Senator from Colorado to undertake to build a straight jacket for the manufacturers and business men of our country, so that they may not even be permitted to complain of burdens that are about to be put upon them.

I stood in the House of Representatives yesterday and heard a threat fall from the lips of the author of that bill [Mr. UNDERWOOD] in these words:

The statement has been made that this tariff bill will act on labor and affect the wages of laboring men. I give you notice now that when the men from whom you bring that message endeavor to grind labor in the interest of Republican politics there is a bureau of this Government that is going to ascertain the reason why.

Mr. President, every man in America familiar with its economic history knows that every time the Democratic Party have undertaken to give effect to their special views upon the tariff question wages have been affected, capital has grown timid, employment has fallen off, and improvements languish. That will be the result of this ill-conceived legislation.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Yes.

Mr. THOMAS. I should like to inquire of the Senator from Michigan the name of the concern referred to in the article from which he has read.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I gave it, but I will be glad to give it to the Senator again, and to the Department of Commerce and Labor as well.

Mr. THOMAS. What is the name?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. The name is the Murphy Chair Co., of Detroit.

Mr. THOMAS. Is not that one of the concerns which employs convict labor in the manufacture of its product?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. No; it is not; and I can say to the Senator from Colorado that every great manufacturing institution in our State has had its orders cut down almost one-half by the threat of the passage of this bill, and they employ the highest kind of skilled labor. If you think that by your threat you can force silence and acquiescence upon the part of these employers of labor while you affect vitally the value of their industry, you are making a mistake and your plan will fail.

Mr. President, I rose for the purpose of reading the interview with Mr. Murphy, because it was such an appropriate answer to what has just been said by the Senator from Colorado; but I had in mind something more than that. I respect the Senator from Colorado and his judgment, which oftentimes I have felt it a privilege to follow. Only the other day, when he sought to make no distinctions under the law for violators thereof, he commanded my profound respect; but, Mr. President, in this instance the covert threats of the Democratic Party nor its wild prophecies of good to the country can possibly overcome the feeling of apprehension of our people whenever that party has assailed the industrial policy of our country by the enactment of a revenue-tariff law. What we suffered from 20 years ago we will suffer from now, although the process of strangulation will be steady and sure and the poison a little slower in its effect, but none the less deadly. Under Mr. Cleveland 20 years ago the people watched the financial barometer of the Federal Government for their cue; they saw the revenues fall off; they knew that American industry had been assailed. The Government revenue fell off every day, until it became necessary to augment our currency by the sale of bonds.

Mr. President, our Democratic friends have been much wiser than their compatriots of 20 years ago. Under an amendment to the Constitution they now have the privilege of putting their hands into the pockets of the well to do, and the income of the Government is assured as long as private fortunes last. So, I say the process of strangulation will be slower and the poison not quite so instantaneous in its effect, but it will be just as certain; and the threat that the political doctrinaire who now sits at the head of the Department of Commerce, with power which we gave him to investigate the wages of his own countrymen and the wages of people in similar employments abroad, is prepared to carry out the will of his party associates, will not operate as a successful deterrent to those just complaints which emanate from men of character, men of patriotism, and men of enterprise whose business has now been assailed.

I hope, Mr. President, at least, that the Senate doors may be opened and the people permitted to gaze at the Finance Committee while this diabolical outrage is being committed and that they may be heard in protest against it.

The assault upon the sugar industry of my State is criminal and will be resented by those interested and by the farmers who produce the raw material for the beet-sugar factories. Why, Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] that if he will take testimony, even in his own State, he will find much confusion and disappointment and apprehension growing out of this situation. Every student of economic history knows that Cuba has been knocking at the doors of this Republic for many years for the privilege of bringing her sugar in here free. Her agents have swarmed this Capitol from year to year. She has a productive capacity of more than 5,000,000 tons of sugar annually—nearly twice the ability of our country to consume. Is it possible that you are going to wholly remove the restrictions from our domestic sugar production that is of such tremendous importance to our countrymen? Is it possible this is to be done without permitting a voice to be heard in protest? And then, when these factories close and go out of business because they are unable to compete with the low sugar price of Cuba the belligerent Department of Commerce is to spend its time chasing the unfortunates about the country because they have lost their money in this enterprise, while solemn Senators are horrified that these men should have gone out of the business and left their labor unemployed.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a moment?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Certainly.

Mr. GALLINGER. In view of the utterances that have already been made, in one instance in a higher place than that occupied by the distinguished gentleman whom the Senator from Michigan quoted a little while ago, to the effect that manufacturers are to be punished if they reduce wages or interrupt manufacture, I will ask the Senator if he has any notion as to the method that will be adopted to compel men to manufacture goods and employ labor unless they wish to do so?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Oh, yes, Mr. President. They are to be terrorized into such a condition and state of mind that they will keep their money in unprofitable enterprises without complaining in order that the Democratic Party may remain in power.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator does not believe that that will be done after this bill has been passed if the results follow that some of us believe will follow, does he?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. No, Mr. President; I do not.

A man connected with one of the largest business enterprises in this country, one who knows, told me the other day that the day President Wilson came to the House of Representatives with his magic message on the tariff question his trade fell off a thousand dollars a day, and that it had continued to fall off from that time to this, until on the day he talked to me it had fallen off $12,000 a day.

In the city in which I live, a community that does not thrive because of any direct tariff protection, the largest furniture manufacturing center in the world, where the buyers of furniture come twice every year to look at samples of the genius of our citizens and to make their purchases for the coming season, at the last exhibition, held in January, over 1,300 cities being represented, there was a larger attendance than they had ever had in any previous year of their experience. But just the moment President Wilson came to the House of Representatives, notwithstanding he had the noose of Jackson in his pocket, which he was to adjust nicely to the neck of any man who should decry the success of his policy, business began to fall off, and the orders that were given last January for delivery this spring have been largely curtailed, and in many instances one-half.

Mr. President, I do not intend to enter into any minute discussion of this bill at the present time, although I have given it some study. Since I entered Congress I have assisted in the preparation of several tariff bills. I sat upon this side of the Chamber and heard the late distinguished Senator from Virginia, Mr. Daniel, berate the policy of the Senate in drafting a tariff bill behind closed doors. I saw the look of horror and surprise that crept upon the countenances of my associates upon that side of the Chamber when we proposed to make up a bill in the Committee on Finance; and even then we were going to hear from all those who wished to be heard. But I tell you, my fellow Senators, that if you do not listen to the men who are to be affected, to the enterprising men who do employ labor, many of them not because they have to employ labor, men of fortune who could retire if they wished and leave the industries which they have kept alive from their young manhood to palsy and decay—men of that kind, urged on by civic pride—you will discourage enterprise and strike a blow at American commerce.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Of course I yield to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr JAMES. I should like to ask the Senator whether or not the furniture people of his own State appeared before the Ways and Means Committee that formulated this bill and gave five weeks of open hearings in the House?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Whether they did appear before them?

Mr. JAMES. Whether or not they did?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. No; and I will not tell the Senator why they did not.

Mr. JAMES. They had the opportunity.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Because their industries had not been affected until the bill was reported to the House. When other branches of industry and trade became affected, the business of furniture making began to fall off.

Mr. JAMES. Of course they knew, however, that all the industries of the country had the opportunity offered them by the Ways and Means Committee to appear in the open, and under oath, and make statements on the tariff question, and they knew the question of furniture was under consideration by the committee.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, when the Ways and Means Committee sent out word that they would hear the captains of industry, employers of labor, or laborers themselves, no matter where they came from, and that they would not be permitted to have more than about 15 minutes each of the attention of the House committee, I do not think it was a very great inducement or encouragement for them to come here for that purpose.

Mr. JAMES. The Senator does the Committee on Ways and Means a grave injustice by that statement.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I would not do them an injustice.

Mr. JAMES. The Senator does. I do not think he does it intentionally.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I have been a member of that committee and respect the membership highly.

Mr. JAMES. Many gentlemen who appeared there upon various schedules had hours given them by the committee, and at no time were they shut off by the committee if they stated there were further statements that they desired to make.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I do not think they had hours on this bill, Mr. President.

Mr. JAMES. Why, certainly; many men did under cross-examination by gentlemen of the Senator's own party. I am speaking of the various witnesses that appeared.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I do not think they had upon this bill. I know something about the methods employed. I have been a member of the Committee on Ways and Means of the House. I know the methods they employ. I will say to the Senator from Kentucky, whom I respect very highly, that in my judgment the public were not encouraged to come before the Ways and Means Committee this year, and it is not your purpose to encourage them to come before the Finance Committee now, because of the fear that the country may be aroused to the enormity of the offense you are about to commit and protest against it in language which you will be unable to resist.

Mr. JAMES. Will the Senator yield to me further?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Certainly.

Mr. JAMES. The Senator has stated that the furniture people did not appear before the Ways and Means Committee because their industry had not been affected. The sugar people, however, whose industry had not been affected, because the bill had not yet been formulated, appeared and had sufficient hearing to make their protests and their statements to the committee.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Oh, yes.

Mr. JAMES. They were afforded every courtesy and opportunity to do it.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Oh, yes; they received courtesy, and that is all; but, Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Kentucky that there was quite a powerful agreement that the sine qua non of this new tariff bill should be free sugar and free wool; and the sugar people would be deaf indeed if they did not understand it and blind indeed if they could not see their peril. Everybody knows that the sugar industries of America are dead under this bill.

Mr. LANE. Mr. President——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. You give them three years in which to die, and you give the American Sugar Refining Co., which is their rival, three years in which to buy their stock for nothing and put them out of business.

Mr. LANE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Oregon?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I do.

Mr. LANE. I should like to be allowed to ask a question for information in regard to the sugar schedule. As I understand the Senator's position, that is one of the gravest acts of injustice committed in this bill.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I think it is a crime.

Mr. LANE. A crime, then—a criminal action.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Yes.

Mr. LANE. If the fact were capable of substantiation and actual proof that sugar is sold free on board for foreign shipment, if it is to be used in Canada, Guatemala, China, or any other country in the world, for a cent and four-tenths a pound less than it is sold to the American consumer, would that make any difference with the Senator in his conclusion in regard to sugar?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I will answer the Senator. The Brussels convention had to take drastic steps to prevent the bountyizing of the European sugars, because there was a vast surplus of that product; and when they withdrew their bounties and their cartels the volume not only decreased, but the price of sugar rose in the only free and open market in the world. The only market that did not fluctuate unfairly was the American market, because we had our domestic supply that had not been affected by the situation in Austria and in Germany.

Mr. LANE. As a matter of fact, however, if sugar is selling in the American market for a cent and a quarter a pound less to the foreign consumer than to the American consumer, is not that a discrimination against the American consumer?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, I do not accept the suggestion of the Senator from Oregon. He is laboring under a misapprehension. American sugar does not go abroad.

Mr. LANE. The Senator does not? I will prove it to him.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. But I will say to him that every man who knows anything about the American sugar industry knows that it costs just about 3 cents a pound to make sugar here.

Mr. LANE. That is what it sells for for foreign shipment.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, if it costs 3 cents a pound to make it here and by producing it ourselves we can hold here the supply of gold which otherwise would be withdrawn from us to go to pay for the foreign product, have we not shown great wisdom, especially when it is being sold to the consumers of America to-day cheaper than ever before in the history of the American Government? I say to you, as a warning, that the three years' option which you are giving to the owners of the American Sugar Refining Co. upon the domestic factories in our own country will be foreclosed during that period of three years.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. To-day they can buy their stock at about 30 cents on the dollar; next year they can buy it at 20 cents; the following year at 10; and when you have put our domestic producers out of business the American Sugar Refining Co. will have an absolute monopoly, and the price of sugar will go back where it was before we had domestic competition.

Mr. THOMAS rose.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I yield to my colleague from North Dakota.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The inquiry of the Chair was whether the Senator from Michigan yielded to the Senator from Colorado.

Mr. GALLINGER. The Senator can yield to whom he pleases.

Mr. THOMAS. I did not rise, Mr. President, to interrupt, but to take the floor when the Senator from Michigan had concluded.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Now, does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I yield to the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. McCUMBER. It is wholly immaterial to me to which one the Senator yields first.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I yield to the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. McCUMBER. I wanted to ask the Senator if he completed his answer to the Senator from Kentucky? Has it not been established beyond question that the price of sugar for consumption in the United States is less than in any other country in the world except England?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I think I stated that; and in England last year it was higher than it was in America. If in the wisdom of our Democratic friends they propose to withdraw all of the money represented in the daily investment in sugar from circulation in our country and turn it over to foreigners, I think they ought to do it in the open, and give the people of our State and country an opportunity to be heard on it.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Surely.

Mr. JAMES. Does the Senator mean that sugar sells cheaper to the consumer in the United States than in Canada?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. If it does not, I will say to the Senator from Kentucky that Canada, taking care of her own enterprises, has an antidumping law, and that law does not permit them to buy anything there that is sold on the American market at a greater price than it is sold for in Canada, including sugar.

Mr. JAMES. Of course the Senator will admit that sugar sells much cheaper in Great Britain than in the United States.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I admit that it does at times, yes; and at times it sells for more.

Mr. JAMES. It sells for much less right now, and from my observation at all times.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. At times it does, because England is the only open market in the world for sugar and gets the world's surplus.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, it sells at 9 cents a hundred less.

Mr. JAMES. Is it not true that the Hamburg market export price on sugar is 2 cents a pound less than the price in the United States——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. It has been that.

Mr. JAMES. Is it not now?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. No; I do not think it is.

Mr. JAMES. If the Senator will investigate, he will find that it is.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. That is what I should like to do, and I should like to have our people given an opportunity to do it.

Mr. JAMES. It was investigated in the House by a select committee for many months.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I should like to have them given an opportunity to do it before the Committee on Finance of the Senate.

Mr. JAMES. I will state to the Senator, upon the question of sugar, that an investigation was made by a special committee composed of members of the Republican Party and the Democratic Party. They took evidence and made a thorough and complete investigation not 12 months ago. All that is before the Senate and can be easily examined by the Senator, together with the hearings before the Ways and Means Committee taken this year.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I think the Senator from Kentucky was a member of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. JAMES. I was.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. And he has had large experience in public life. I have great respect for his candor and sense of fairness. I am going to ask him a plain, straight, and simple question—whether he believes that the American sugar industry can survive under the Underwood tariff bill?

Mr. JAMES. They made as much as 100 per cent profit in some of the plants last year, did they not?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Some.

Mr. JAMES. I ask the Senator whether they will not survive?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. They can not survive on what they made last year.

Mr. JAMES. I will answer the Senator in this way: It costs the American people $115,000,000 a year by reason of the tariff on sugar. Most of it goes into the pockets of the sugar monopoly. They have, I believe, about $30,000,000 invested. I would rather buy their property and pay for it out of the Treasury than to give the Sugar Trust the right to rob the American consumer year in and year out of that enormous amount of money.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, to be perfectly fair, the Senator from Kentucky admits that the domestic sugar industry can not survive the blow given it in this bill.

Mr. JAMES. I have not admitted that.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Do you deny it?

Mr. JAMES. I am not called upon either to admit it or to deny it.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. The Senator——

Mr. JAMES. I am called upon to do what is fair to the American consumer; my first duty is to them, and I am unwilling that the American consumer should be robbed to the extent he has been by the tariff on sugar for the purpose of hothousing into life or for the continued life of the industry in the United States.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I want to answer that statement.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. We pay hundreds of millions of dollars for sugar. Where will we get it when our domestic supply is gone, and at what price?

Mr. GALLINGER. And the foreigners will have the monopoly.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Where will we get our supply? We will send these millions out of our country——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Surely.

Mr. SMOOT. I wish to say to the Senator from Kentucky that if we destroy the local sugar industry the American people will pay the sugar distributors of this country, who would be the refiners, the price that they paid them in 1911. Just as soon as the local sugar was consumed and they had to rely upon the sugar refiners in 1911 for sugar, it advanced in the New York market to $7.75 a hundred. During those three months this American Sugar Refinery Co. made something like $22,000,000 out of the American people. As far as I am concerned, I would rather have the $115,000,000 go to the industries of this country, even admitting, which I do not, that it goes to them, than to have it go into the pockets of four or five or more refiners in the country.

Mr. JAMES. The Senator's party placed sugar on the free list.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Yes; we did in——

Mr. JAMES. They thought it was all right.

Mr. SMOOT. But we paid a bounty at the time in order that the industry might become established in this country.

Mr. JAMES. I merely wanted to direct attention to the fact——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair would suggest that one Senator should talk at a time.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I have the floor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Michigan has the floor.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I wish to answer the Senator from Kentucky, who says that our party put sugar on the free list. That was about a quarter of a century ago. There was not a single beet-sugar factory in America, and in order to encourage the domestic industry, because science had told us that we could produce the beet and that we could produce the sugar, the McKinley bill put a bounty on the domestic industry, and having bountyized it until it has become one of the important industries of our country, I think it comes with poor grace now to strike it down in the interest of the American Sugar Refining Co., who know that every dollar's worth of sugar which comes here from Cuba will pass through their refinery before it can reach the American consumer.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I do.

Mr. JAMES. The Senator has just stated that when sugar was placed on the free list about 25 years ago by the Republican Party there were no beet-sugar factories in the United States. The Senator is mistaken. Were there not some factories in California at that time owned by the Watson Co.?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I think not. There were some experimental stations. I know something about it. I know something about California. There was some experimental work, but there was no settled or established industry.

Mr. JAMES. Is it not true of the industry in California that several of those factories made as much as 33⅓ per cent annually?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. They were purely experimental, just as our tin production in California up to that time was experimental.

Mr. JAMES. It seems that, so far as supplying the American people with sugar is concerned, it is experimental even now.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. It is not very experimental now, when we produce so much that we actually fix the price at which sugar shall be sold in the American market.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Certainly.

Mr. SMOOT. The Senator from Kentucky ought to be frank enough, when he refers to 33⅓ per cent profit in the Watsonville, Cal., factory, to state that it was not made in the production of sugar, but it was made in the sale of real estate, the value of which had been increased by the location of the factory in the community, so that land worth, perhaps, $5 an acre became worth $150 an acre.

Mr. JAMES. Investigation will not sustain the statement made by the Senator, but it will sustain the one I made.

Mr. SMOOT. I know what investigation will show. I have read every word of the testimony, and I not only have read the testimony, but I know the facts.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I am familiar with the facts, too.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, will the Senator from Michigan allow me to ask a question of the Senator from Utah?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I do not exactly fancy this discussion taking that turn.

Mr. REED. It is on a question of fact.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Of course, I can not decline to yield to my friend from Missouri.

Mr. REED. I wish to ask the Senator from Utah if the land that went up from $5 an acre to $150 an acre went up because they were raising beets upon it.

Mr. SMOOT. Yes; if they had not raised beets upon that particular land perhaps it would be there to-day with no cultivation whatever.

Mr. REED. I trust the Senator is not irritated with me for asking the question.

Mr. SMOOT. I am not irritated with the Senator.

Mr. REED. I wanted to ask the Senator if he thought it was just fair to take land which he says was worthless and boom it to $150 an acre at the expense of the people who had to use sugar.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the question is hardly worth answering, because the fact is that whatever the land is worth to people they pay for it. If it was not worth it, they would not buy it at that price.

Mr. REED. Thanking the Senator for his very courteous reply, which is quite characteristic, I beg to ask him a further question. Is that land worth anything for any purpose except to raise beets?

Mr. SMOOT. Beet raising made the land valuable, of course. If the Senator will study the question, he will find that the raising of beets on any kind of land brings it into a condition increasing it in value; and perhaps that land to-day could be used for purposes that it could not have been used for before beets were grown upon it.

Mr. REED. So one of the profits from raising beets is that you not only get the beet and get the sugar from it, but you get better land.

Mr. SMOOT. That advantage generally goes to the man who raises the beets.

Mr. REED. So, as I understand the Senator, his proposition is that we shall take a piece of worthless land and raise it to the price of $150 an acre at the expense of the people of the United States, and that any interference with that is in the nature of a high crime and misdemeanor.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, of course wherever a sugar factory is located the Senator must know there is almost a city rising immediately; and the money is not made altogether from the farm land, but it is made from the sale of city lots, the value increasing as the population increases. That has not only been the case in California, but in every State where a beet-sugar factory has been located.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. If the Senator will yield for one word further, then the Senator's position is that we ought to tax all the people of the United States for the purpose of building up communities and villages in States where they happen to have worthless land which can be made to raise beets.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, beet-sugar factories may operate for years and years, but the profits are made from the sale of real estate in their early operation.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, I simply rose for the purpose of giving emphasis to the idea that we should have hearings on this bill; that there is enough at stake to warrant public hearings; that there is enough information at hand which will be useful if it is permitted to be shown, and which will help us in the determination of this very important question.

I have no doubt whatever that our friends on the other side of the aisle have the best interests of the Government at heart. I have no idea that it was otherwise when they made the last tariff bill—singularly enough, a bill which bore the name of Wilson, which seems to be synonymous with free things. But to throttle the industries of our country and then forge departmental chains to hold them from remonstrating against it is an unwise suggestion, and I am surprised that it emanated from such a worthy man as the chairman of the House Committee on Ways and Means. I was associated with Mr. UNDERWOOD for many years. He is a high-minded man. If he had been a Member of the House 19 years ago, he would have supported the Wilson bill of that date.

Mr. Bryan, now Secretary of State, helped carry Prof. Wilson out of the House of Representatives upon his shoulders after his great personal triumph in the passage of the last low-tariff and free-trade law. It was not very long before the same shoulders that helped to carry Prof. Wilson, of beloved memory, a saintly, pure, able, honest man, out of the Chamber, bore upon their shoulders a weight so heavy that it has taken nearly 20 years for you to get strength enough to even aspire to further confidence at the hands of the American people.

Mr. President, there never has been a time in the history of this Government when wages were so high, when more men had money to their credit, than now. Every fourth man in this Republic has a bank account to-day, and more money is represented in the savings of labor to-day than was represented in all the money ever discovered and mined since Columbus discovered America. There is more money to the credit of labor to-day in the savings banks of our country than would be required to pay more than a third of the combined national debts of the 50 leading countries of the earth. In such a condition we are again invited to a spectacle often repudiated, now temporarily rehabilitated, and in this Chamber is to be enacted again a revenue bill as ill-suited to the necessities of our people as it is possible to imagine. It contains a blight so severe that capital will immediately withdraw from business activity and enterprise will wither and decay.

Now, I do not rejoice over that condition of affairs. I had hoped that whatever law you pass the country would accept it, that enterprise might go on, and industry thrive and labor be employed. But I do not believe it. You are disappointed and doubtful, and in your hearts a constant dread resides. If it were otherwise you would not be standing there anticipating the difficulties which are to grow out of the passage of this law and threatening the employers of labor with dire calamity if they dare complain over the burdens you have put upon them.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I, of course, yield to my friend from Nebraska.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I wish to call him back for a moment to the subject of furniture, with which he opened his address, and I ask him——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. But I did not open it with furniture. I touched the subject of furniture——

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I should like to ask the Senator whether it is not a fact that we now export about ten times as much furniture as we import?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Oh, Mr. President——

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Will the Senator kindly answer the question?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I say that the genius of our furniture workers has crowded the foreign manufacturer very severely and our products do enter into competition in almost every country in the world.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Then I should like to ask the Senator if we are selling, say, six or seven million dollars' worth of furniture made in America in other countries in competition with those other countries, why is it necessary to maintain the present high tariff of 35 per cent?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I will tell you why. Because over there they do not pay on an average a dollar a day to the furniture worker. Here we pay on an average——

Mr. HITCHCOCK. How can we sell furniture abroad if competition would be so disastrous under the 15 per cent tariff at home?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Just let me answer. Abroad they have not the different styles we have; they are not quite so acceptable to the purchasers; but here——

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Does the Senator think the styles will change with the change of the tariff?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I think that when you have discouraged the domestic consumption of furniture they will find it impossible to manufacture for export alone.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Let me ask the Senator if it is not a fact that in the days when furniture was given only a protective tariff of 25 per cent we even in those days exported much more than we imported?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Yes; we had our forests, and we had our enterprises, and we had our domestic market. We have no forests now. The buyers of the wood that makes the furniture in my city are in every part of the civilized world purchasing the wood. We have no adequate domestic supply.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Is it not a fact that wood will be more easily purchased under this bill?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. No.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I think it will.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. No. Why not? Because if you can not sell your product at home to those in other employment your industry will languish.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Let me ask the Senator——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. You can not afford to keep business going.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Why will they not be able to sell their product at home?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Because in other lines labor will be cut down; because labor will be out of employment; because laborers will be turned from workingmen into wanderers and furniture the last thing they will buy.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Does the Senator think the American people are going to cease to use all furniture?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Yes; I think that they will cease to use new furniture for the time being, as they did in 1894, 1895, and 1896. They will use the old bed and the old chair and the old table in preference to new ones until they get a surplus of money and the storm rolls by, and until that time comes they will suffer collaterally a loss of customers. I went the other day into the great Hoe printing press factory—I make this statement because the Senator from Nebraska is a printer.

I went into the Hoe factory for the purpose of buying a press, and I was told by Mr. Hoe that they were getting their London factory in shape to work more men and more hours, because it would be to their advantage to use the cheaper labor of England rather than the high-priced labor that they were obliged to employ in New York. When I asked him: "Will it make any difference in the price of your printing presses?" he said, "No; we will govern our output by the demand, but we will play safe, because we will make our new presses by the lower scale of London labor."

Mr. HITCHCOCK. Will the Senator from Michigan now please answer why the American furniture manufacturers need a protective tariff of 35 per cent——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I am not talking about what they need.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. In this market, when they sell between six and seven million dollars' worth of furniture without any protection in free competition in other countries?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Now, just a moment. Listen, will you? I want to answer the Senator directly. I am not pleading for any duty on furniture at all. If you will give a fair protection on the other employments of labor, we will have a market for our domestic furniture without a burdensome tariff; but it is these collateral industries that are affected vitally by the tariff. The farmer who raises the sugar beet and the wool, the men who work in the American industries at wages, millions of whom have money to their credit in the banks, are the people upon whom we will rely to buy the products of our labor.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I always yield to my friend from Missouri.

Mr. REED. Will the Senator from Michigan tell us how many men in his State are actually engaged in raising sugar beets?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Yes. I should think upward of 15,000.

Mr. REED. I notice that there are only 40,000 acres under cultivation, according to the Statistical Abstract. Does the Senator mean to say that they only cultivate about 2½ acres apiece?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Oh, well, you have got to pay the laborer who works in the beet fields, on an average, $2.75 a day, while the peon who works in the sugar fields of Cuba, who wears a clout upon his stomach and not even a hat upon his head or shoes upon his feet, does not get over 10 cents a day; and you propose to pit the farmers and the laborers upon the farms in that industry against such labor as that.

Mr. REED. But, Mr. President, the Senator's last remark was so far aside from my question that I will not follow it at this time. It was not an answer. I was trying to get at a fact and not a fancy, neither did I mean to inspire another burst of oratory. I was simply trying to find out how many men in the State of Michigan were actually engaged in cultivating sugar beets.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I have told the Senator.

Mr. REED. And the Senator said that he thought there were about 15,000.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I think so.

Mr. REED. I followed that by the statement that the Statistical Abstract showed that there were but 40,000 acres cultivated, and I wanted to ask the Senator if he was not in error about the number of men engaged, because, surely they must raise, if they are really in the business, more than 2½ or 3 acres apiece.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I do not know that they do.

Mr. REED. Then, if that is the case——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I have seen the beet farmer parcel his laborers out with reference to the smallest possible labor for the most thorough results.

Mr. REED. Very well, then.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I think in the State of Michigan we have got upward of $10,000,000 invested in the beet-sugar business.

Mr. REED. I wanted to follow this with another question. I am trying to get at some facts—that is all—in my very slow way. The Senator spoke of the wages paid in cultivating beets.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Yes.

Mr. REED. Are the wages higher for the men who cultivate beets than they are generally for other farm labor?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Oh, yes, Mr. President.

Mr. REED. Arising from what cause?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Arising from the fact that it requires exceptional skill. I have just returned from California, and I know my friend, the Senator from California, will bear me out in the statement that it is difficut to get men in the beet fields at $2.50 a day.

Mr. REED. Is it not a fact that in some of the Western States they are cultivating sugar beets with what you might call peon labor, with the lowest and cheapest class of labor there is?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I never heard of it; but I will say that the sugar producers of California are getting any labor they can get that is skilled enough to answer their purpose, but they are paying that labor all the way from $2.50 to $3 a day.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

Mr. REED. Now, I have just one further question in this connection.

Mr. THOMAS. I was simply desirous of giving the Senator from Missouri a little information on that subject.

Mr. REED. Very well.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Before the Senator sits down——

Mr. REED. I was not through. I yielded to the Senator from Colorado; that is, I gave way to him. I can not yield to him.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I want to say to my friend from Missouri that his very inquiry—and I know it is a sincere and honest one—prompts me to urge that Senators upon the other side open the doors and give a hearing to the people who want to be heard upon this question. The Senator from Missouri wants accurate information; he ought to have it; and he can get it without any difficulty if the Committee on Finance will open its doors and permit those who are to be injured, if injury is to result, to tell them in advance what the true situation is.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I merely wish to say, in response to some of the inquiries of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED], that the labor employed in the beet-sugar fields of the West is as cheap as, if not the cheapest of, any labor on this continent. It consists of Mexicans——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. What are they paid?

Mr. THOMAS. Syrians, Chinese, Japanese, Austrians, Germans, who work very cheaply and who work in droves or colonies. The cost per acre is somewhere in the neighborhood of $20 in my State. It is not agriculture; it is horticulture. The rate of wages I can not state in round numbers, but the wages are as cheap as those of any labor on this continent.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. How cheap?

Mr. THOMAS. Just let me finish my answer. Some time ago, and shortly after the industry began in my State, the labor organizations objected to this sort of labor, which was done by Mexicans. They were asked to turn their hands to it; they did so, and finally said, "You people are welcome to your job." It is the cheapest labor on the continent, in my judgment.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I wish the Senator from Colorado would let us know how cheap it is.

Mr. THOMAS. I will do that long before this discussion is over; but I do not wish to hazard a statement that may be incorrect. I can not give it from memory, and not anticipating that this debate would occur so soon, I have not had an opportunity to refresh my memory as to the figures.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Is it as cheap as is the labor in Cuba?

Mr. THOMAS. It is quite as cheap, in my judgment, as the labor in Cuba.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Then it does not cost much in Colorado to make sugar.

Mr. THOMAS. But my statement was that it was the cheapest labor on the continent, with the possible exception of some of the colored labor in the South, as to the price of which I am not informed.

Mr. GALLINGER. I rise to a question of order, Mr. President. I think it would be well to have Rule XIX read. Possibly some of the rest of us may want some time to say a few words on this subject, and if this is to be a colloquial discussion, without reference to the rule, we never shall have a proper debate.

Mr. THOMAS. This is my first offense, Mr. President.

Mr. SMOOT. I wish to ask——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Before the Senator from Utah asks his question, inasmuch as I have the floor, I want to ask the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS] whether he is opposed to allowing the beet-sugar raisers of Colorado to come before the Committee on Finance and to give accurately the cost of their sugar production?

Mr. THOMAS. Yes. Shall I say why?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. You are opposed to that?

Mr. THOMAS. Yes. Shall I say why?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. The Senator may say why, if he wishes to do so; yes.

Mr. THOMAS. I think I have good reasons for my position. In the first place, those gentlemen have been before the House committee, not once, but several times. We all have their statements, which we are reading, and nearly all of which I have read. They can tell us nothing that they have not already told the committee of the other House time and time again.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. The Senator is mistaken as to that.

Mr. THOMAS. And I for one do not propose to vote for a proceeding that will delay the ultimate passage of this measure and carry it into the beginning of the next regular session of Congress.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Now, one more question: You say you have all the information necessary?

Mr. THOMAS. Yes.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Then, why can you not tell us what it costs per day to hire that labor?

Mr. THOMAS. I simply told the Senator I could not state it from memory, and I do not wish to hazard a statement that may not be correct——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Does the Senator know?

Mr. THOMAS. But I believe it to be somewhere between 20 and 22½ cents a day.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Oh, no. Mr. President——

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Michigan has the floor. He had consented that the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED] should propound certain inquiries. Is the Senator from Missouri through, or does he desire——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I have the floor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understands the Senator from Michigan has the floor. Does he yield further to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. No; not at this point. I merely want to express my surprise, my regret, and my entire disbelief in the figures just given by the Senator from Colorado—22 cents a day. That can not be true.

Mr. SMOOT and Mr. WORKS addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Of course.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I merely want to make a correction, so far as the State of Utah is concerned, in relation to the statement that has been made by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS]. He referred to the Western States in speaking of cheap labor——

Mr. THOMAS. Yes.

Mr. SMOOT. And that they employ Greeks, Chinamen——

Mr. THOMAS. I did not mention Greeks, although I think they may be also employed.

Mr. SMOOT. And Japanese and other different classes of foreign labor.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. And Austrians and Russians.

Mr. SMOOT. I want to say to the Senator from Colorado that while that statement may apply to Colorado it does not apply to the State of Utah. I say to him now that there is no beet field in the State of Utah which employs the labor he says is employed in the West.

Mr. THOMAS. Will the Senator say that it costs more than $20 an acre for sugar-beet cultivation?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes, Mr. President; I will say that it costs more than $20 an acre in the cultivation of sugar beets in Colorado; and it costs $35 an acre in the State of Utah.

Mr. THOMAS. I take issue with that statement also.

Mr. SMOOT. I know that it costs $35 in Utah, and I believe that it costs that much in Colorado.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Now, Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from California, who has been very patient and who desires to make an inquiry.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I had not expected that California would be brought into the tariff discussion at this early day. I have been greatly astonished at the statements made by the Senator from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS]. If they are paying any such wages as that in that State, I think Colorado had better be annexed to Cuba. [Laughter in the galleries.]

The VICE PRESIDENT. The galleries will preserve order.

Mr. WORKS. The statement of the Senator from Colorado is not true as it relates to California. We do not pay that kind of wages in our State. I am glad to say, and we are not employing all the kinds of people that the Senator from Colorado mentions.

Mr. THOMAS. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. WORKS. Certainly.

Mr. THOMAS. Are you not employing Syrians?

Mr. WORKS. Not, as I understand, in the beet industry.

Mr. THOMAS. Japanese?

Mr. WORKS. We may be employing some Japanese; and the Government seems disposed to compel us to keep Japanese whether we want them or not?

Mr. THOMAS. Chinese?

Mr. WORKS. Probably so.

Mr. THOMAS. Mexicans?

Mr. WORKS. I do not know about that; but we are paying decent wages to whomsoever we employ.

Mr. THOMAS. And other foreigners?

Mr. WORKS. No. I expect before this discussion is over to give the Senate——

Mr. THOMAS. May I ask the Senator another question?

Mr. WORKS. Just a moment.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I have the floor, and I yielded to the Senator from California.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair thinks perhaps we can shortly reach some conclusion of the pending motion.

Mr. THOMAS. Do they not work in colonies?

Mr. WORKS. Not that I know of.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I think the rule ought to be read, and I think it ought to be enforced.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Hampshire call for the reading of the rule?

Mr. GALLINGER. Yes; the first clause of the rule relating to debate.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I can remedy the matter by not yielding.

Mr. GALLINGER. The first clause of Rule XIX I think ought to be read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

When a Senator desires to speak he shall rise and address the presiding officer, and shall not proceed until he is recognized, and the presiding officer shall recognize the Senator who shall first address him. No Senator shall interrupt another Senator in debate without his consent, and to obtain such consent he shall first address the presiding officer; and no Senator shall speak more than twice upon any one question in debate on the same day without leave of the Senate, which shall be determined without debate.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I yield to the Senator from California for a question.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I have not in any respect violated the rule which has just been read. I addressed the Chair, and waited patiently until I was recognized. I think, however, the Senator from New Hampshire is perfectly right in calling the attention of the Chair and of the Senate to the rule.

I have been drawn into this discussion, Mr. President, unexpectedly by what has occurred, and did not expect to take up the subject until later. Some time during this summer I expect to discuss this question and undertake to disclose the facts with respect to the beet industry in California. I shall expect then to show that the statements made by the Senator from Colorado are not sustained by the facts as they exist in my State. I do not know anything about what the conditions are in Colorado, but I know that such conditions do not exist with us.

The matter of the effect upon the lands in California has been mentioned here. Thousands of acres of California lands that were practically worthless by reason of the deposits of alkali in the land have been reclaimed and made some of the best lands we have in the State for all purposes. That is one of the greatest benefits that has resulted to the State of California from the growing of beets. It has not only added to the land values of the State, but of the whole Nation, and is important in that respect.

What has been said by the Senator from Michigan with respect to wages paid in California is practically correct. The best of wages are paid there for that kind of work, just as in the case of other farm industries. There is no difference, so far as I know, between the two.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, the discussion——

Mr. REED. I want to ask the Senator, with his permission, the question that I started to ask him three-quarters of an hour ago. It is simply to conclude the series of questions I was asking.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Is this the first of a series?

Mr. REED. Well, neither the first nor the last, if the Senator does not want me to ask it.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I desire to say to the Senator from Missouri that I will gladly yield the floor to him——

Mr. REED. No; I do not want that.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. But I do not exactly want to go under cross-examination this afternoon.

Mr. REED. I was not attempting to cross-examine the Senator, but in view of the fact that he has stated that there has been no light thrown upon these questions through investigations or hearings——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I did not say that.

Mr. REED. And as he was speaking about his own State——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I did not say that, Mr. President.

Mr. REED. And as he is so well informed with reference to matters relating to his own State, I was trying to find out how many men were actually employed in raising sugar beets in Michigan. I understood the Senator to say about 15,000 men, in his judgment.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I included all the field people employed in that industry.

Mr. REED. Does the Senator mean there are that many raising the beets?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Yes; about ten or fifteen thousand, I should think. That includes everybody that is interested in that industry in the field.

Mr. REED. What is the population of the State?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. About 2,800,000, mostly Republicans, sometimes astray. [Laughter in the galleries.]

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Sergeant at Arms will maintain order in the galleries, or they will be cleared.

Mr. REED. The Senator is in error. The majority of them repudiated the Republican Party.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Oh, no; the Senator has not heard the latest returns.

Mr. REED. Possibly that is so.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. We had a spring election, where the people had an opportunity to regret what they did last fall, and we carried the State by about 50,000. I think the Democrats were second and the Socialists were third and the Bull Moose fourth.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I do not wish to discuss the politics of the State of Michigan.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. No; I do not want the Senator to do so.

Mr. REED. The iniquities of the tariff are sufficient for the day. I desire to ask the Senator this concluding question: If he thinks it is good policy to tax two and a half million or three million people of his State upon their tables throughout the year for the benefit of the 10,000 people who are engaged, directly or indirectly, in the beet-sugar business?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Now, will the Senator allow me to answer?

Mr. REED. Certainly; I intend to allow the Senator to answer.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. That raises the old fundamental question as to who pays the tax. Before we produced beet sugar in America our people were paying 10 cents a pound for it. After we began to produce it we bought it for 4½ cents. Who bears the burden of that tariff I leave for my distinguished friend from Missouri to figure out.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I do; to be sure.

Mr. JAMES. The Senator stated, in the course of his discussion of the sugar question, that there were no beet-sugar factories prior to the passage of the free-sugar bill in 1890.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I said the industry was in its experimental stage; and I did not refer to 1890. I referred to 25 years ago. I said "a quarter of a century ago."

Mr. JAMES. However that may be, I stated that there were beet-sugar factories in California, and that in three years they made a profit of 100 per cent—33⅓ per cent per year. The Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] very emphatically denied that statement, and stated that whatever profit was made there was made in land. I desire to read from the testimony of Mr. Spreckels, at page 2284 of the hearings before the House committee.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

Mr. JAMES. Just a moment:

> I can tell you, as an instance, that about 1887, about the time of the formation of the Sugar Trust, the Watsonville sugar factory was built at Watsonville, Cal. The first year of its operation it made 12 per cent. The following year it made 80 per cent. It was capitalized at $500,000. There was $400,000 of actual cash paid in, so they got more than the capital back within two years by $100,000.

Instead of being 33⅓ per cent, as I stated, the sworn testimony is that it was nearer 50 per cent a year.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Utah?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I of course yield to the Senator from Utah, although I do not like to be interrupted so continually.

Mr. SMOOT. I will not interrupt the Senator again. So that there will be no misunderstanding of what I did say, I wish to remind the Senator from Kentucky that I particularly called his attention to the fact that if they made all that Mr. Spreckels testified they made, it was not upon the production of sugar but upon the sale of real estate.

Mr. JAMES. The Senator from Utah makes the statement that that is true; but Mr. Spreckels, under oath, states that they made it out of the sugar business. The Senator was very emphatic. I can only take the sworn testimony of witnesses. Of course the Senator is not from California, and can not know the facts.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, Mr. Spreckels, whom the Senator from Kentucky has quoted, is the head of the Federal Refining Co. of New York, and will be one of the beneficiaries of this Democratic policy.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from California?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I do.

Mr. WORKS. I just wanted to say that while Mr. Spreckels testified as indicated by the Senator from Kentucky, subsequently to that time other testimony was taken showing conclusively that the money was realized out of the sale of land. There is no question at all about that.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, I want to arrest the attention of the Senator from Missouri [Mr. REED], who a moment ago called attention to the fact that we had 40,000 acres of sugar beets under cultivation in Michigan. I want him to know the exact facts. Michigan has to-day 100,000 acres actually under contract for beet factories. The statistics do not show 40,000 acres. One company alone has over 50,000 acres, with six factories; and 35,000 or 40,000 men are engaged in the entire business.

Mr. REED. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Certainly.

Mr. REED. I stated to the Senator that the Statistical Abstract showed that for the last year that is reported.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. It has not kept up with the progress of the industry, then.

Mr. REED. I stated it accurately. I referred to an official document. What is the document the Senator is referring to?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I hold in my hand a card written by one of the humble stockholders of the five factories that I have just spoken about, which have 50,000 acres under cultivation. I suppose it is a crime for him to come here; and I suppose that this afternoon the Senate, under the guidance of my friend from Colorado [Mr. THOMAS], will pass a resolution referring the Department of Commerce and Labor to his presence.

Mr. REED. Did I understand the Senator to say that this one man had 50,000 acres under contract?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. No; the Senator did not.

Mr. REED. How much was it?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I said this man was one of 40,000 men who are interested in the Michigan sugar factories, and who tells me that his company has 50,000 acres under cultivation. Is that a crime?

Mr. REED. Then, Mr. President, we come to this——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Is that a crime?

Mr. REED. That in 1910 there were 40,000 acres under cultivation——

Mr. GALLINGER. Three years ago.

Mr. REED. It appears that the business has increased since that time, and now one company controls 50,000 acres; and the Senator wants to tax every man, woman, and child in the United States so that this gentleman, who has 50,000 acres, can get rich at the expense of the people.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Oh, Mr. President——

Mr. REED. The statement of the Senator simply shows that this business is going into the hands of syndicates, and that we are once more asked to tax the people for the benefit of some large syndicate.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, the Statistical Abstract, from which the Senator has quoted, is a sufficient indication of the uneasiness and the anxiety of the American Sugar Refining Co. and of the Federal Refining Co. to head off this industry before it produces all the sugar the American people need. What page is the Senator quoting from?

Mr. REED. I was looking for my abstract. Some Senator has it. I will find it in a moment for the Senator.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I will give the Senator time and proceed, because I want to finish what I have to say.

I only wish to say that it is little less than shameful to think that the Senate of the United States should be asked to have this bill considered with closed doors, when a few days ago the Senate had the pleasure of hearing the junior Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] rise and by resolution proclaim that it was the business of the Senate to open all its doors. I agree with him; and it is the business of the Finance Committee to open its doors and let the American citizen, whether he be capitalist, merchant, manufacturer, or laborer, cross its portals. Instead of sitting over there in that marble structure as cold and indifferent to public opinion as you can possibly be, you ought to open your doors and invite the men who are to be vitally affected to come in and give the facts before it is too late.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, with the permission of the Senator, I will state that I have found the section I was referring to. The year given—and it is the last Statistical Abstract—which caught my eye in a hurried examination, was the year 1909.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Eighteen hundred and ninety-nine.

Mr. LODGE. Eighteen hundred and ninety-nine.

Mr. GALLINGER. Fourteen years ago.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Or is it 1799? [Laughter in the galleries.]

The VICE PRESIDENT. If the Sergeant at Arms can not maintain order in the galleries, the galleries will be cleared. This is the third announcement from the Chair, and it is the last one that will be made to-day.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I am not to blame because the last Republican administration could not keep its statistics up to a time within the memory of men now living.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. There are no statistics under the last Democratic administration of which you were proud which are to be found.

Mr. REED. Oh, yes.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. No; there were not.

Mr. REED. But, Mr. President, I wanted the Senator to understand that I have not tried to mislead him.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Oh, I acquit the Senator of any such purpose.

Mr. REED. The figures appear on page 149 of the Statistical Abstract. Upon glancing at them, without looking at them, I found that in Michigan the area cultivated was 40,247 acres.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. The industry has been growing since then.

Mr. REED. We are discussing an immaterial point. I had asked the Senator how much there was, and he says it has increased. I do not dispute the fact, and have not done so.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. It has greatly increased.

Mr. REED. I was simply trying to ascertain the number of people to be actually benefited. The Senator says about 10,000, which is all that I desired to elicit.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. There are a great many more. There are probably more than 10,000 stockholders in those factories—women and children, as well as men.

Mr. REED. Very well; I will discuss that when the Senator takes his seat.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I will discuss it now.

Mr. REED. Certainly.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I venture the assertion that there are nearly 40,000 people directly related to that industry in Michigan. Yet they are to be crushed at the behest of the American Sugar Refining Co. and the Federal Sugar Refining Co., who are the sole rivals of our domestic sugar producers. If they have made an alliance with the Democratic Party, it is an unholy alliance. Men who have not hesitated to commit crimes to increase the volume of their business, and who are now responding to the law, make very poor allies of any political party. In every barrel of sugar shipped out by Mr. Spreckels's refining company in the last year and a half he has put a circular telling the consumers of sugar to repudiate the tariff and get free sugar.

Mr. President, the men in the cane fields of Cuba, whom I have seen in their labor, patronize no American industry. They work with neither shirts upon their backs nor shoes upon their feet; yet that kind of labor is to produce all the sugar we take. The advantages that have been given to Porto Rico and to Hawaii for encouraging their development, and the importance of the industry in Louisiana, it seems to me ought to command at least the respectful attention of the Democratic majority of the Senate of the United States.

Who can look without sympathy upon the stalwart features of those two distinguished Senators from Louisiana, discouraged as they sit there in the rear row, having battled against their party in vain? Because it was accident alone that gave you your power, and not majorities. Resubmit the question of Democratic dominance to-day and from one end of the country to the other you would be repudiated. California, whose vote occasioned so much interest, would to-day turn the Democratic Party out of power if it had its way.

Take the lemon industry of California. We bought our lemons from Sicily until we put a tariff on them. Now we get lemons for less than we ever bought them for before. We get about $2,000,000 of revenue from those who prefer to use Sicilian lemons. The happy and prosperous people who live amid the green fields and the blossoming trees in the foothills of California are praying that you will keep your hands off an industry that has developed so fast and prospered so highly; that has given you a better product than you ever got from foreign lands; that has furnished the product to the sick room and the home at less than you ever got it for before. Meanwhile the wages that are paid in the diversified industries of that State go to employ men in all walks of industry and commercial life, keeping our circulating medium at home, until it amounts to more now than it ever amounted to in any prior period of our country's history.

Mr. President, in a matter of such far-reaching importance, in a matter of such intense significance, in a matter affecting the welfare of so many of our countrymen perhaps for years to come, it seems to me it is asking very little of the Democratic majority in this body to open its doors to take the testimony of those who want to be heard before our industries are vitally disturbed or permanently ruined.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Will the Senator from Michigan yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Certainly.

Mr. JAMES. If I understood the Senator correctly, a moment ago he stated that the Michigan Sugar Co. was the principal rival of the Sugar Trust. I desire to ask him——

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. No; I did not say that. I said the Michigan sugar industry was a rival of the Sugar Trust.

Mr. JAMES. Is it not true that——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The morning hour has expired, and the Chair lays before the Senate the unfinished business, which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. Order of business 10, Senate resolution 37, authorizing the appointment of a committee to make investigation of conditions in Paint Creek district, West Virginia.

Mr. KERN. I ask for the reading of the resolution reported.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. President, if the Senator from Indiana will permit me, before that is done I desire to leave the floor, and I simply wish to say that I hope the Senators on the other side may yield to the request of the Senators on this side of the Chamber and give us an opportunity for the people who are engaged in our industries to be heard. I do not ask that it be extended through the summer, but this month, to give those who are to be vitally affected an opportunity to be heard in their own behalf. I beg of you to do it; and then if the consequences come which I believe are certain to come, you will, at least, not have perpetrated your offense in darkness and in gloom, but will have such statements and facts before you as will enable you to do as you evidently intend to do with a full knowledge of the vital and far-reaching effect of your action.

LOWRY'S "SUGAR AT A SECOND GLANCE" (S. DOC. NO. 23).

Mr. GORE. Mr. President——

Mr. GALLINGER. The regular order, Mr. President.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Indiana yield to the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. KERN. I do not desire anything to intervene.

Mr. JAMES. I should like to have the Senator from Indiana yield to me, that I may make a request for unanimous consent.

Mr. KERN. Very well.

Mr. JAMES. I desire to ask unanimous consent to print as a public document an article by Frank C. Lowry, entitled "Sugar at a Second Glance." An article upon this same question, called "Sugar at a Glance," has been made a public document, and I think, for the purpose of having both sides of this question properly before the people of the country, this article ought to be printed as a public document. I therefore ask unanimous consent for that purpose.

Mr. SMOOT. I will ask the Senator from Kentucky whether that is the article entitled "Sugar at a Second Glance," by Mr. Lowry, and if it is not already in print, not only in the hearings, but in the proceedings in the House and in the Senate?

Mr. JAMES. No, sir; the Senator is mistaken. It has never been printed as a public document. There may be parts of it in hearings at various places, but it would take a man about two years to gather it up and see it in a concrete form.

I will say to the Senator from Utah there was no objection from any Senator on this side when unanimous consent was given for the purpose of printing as a public document "Sugar at a Glance," by Truman G. Palmer, and I think in fair play the Senator ought not to object to my request.

Mr. SMOOT. I merely asked the question because I have noticed the article on my desk. I have not had time to go through it; but, opening it casually, it appeared to me to be nothing more nor less than an abstract of the testimony that Mr. Lowry gave before the committee of the House and the Senate. Of course, Mr. Lowry is a representative of Mr. Spreckels, the president of the Federal Refining Co., and the Federal Refining Co. has furnished all the money that has been furnished for the publication of articles favoring free sugar. It has sent them broadcast, not only in bags of sugar but in other ways as well.

Mr. JAMES. It is immaterial who pays for the publication; it is true.

Mr. SMOOT. I am not going to object to the request.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Utah object to the request of the Senator from Kentucky?

Mr. SMOOT. No; I do not object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the paper will be printed as a public document.

WASHED PAPER MONEY.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President——

Mr. GALLINGER. I call for the regular order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The regular order is demanded. The unfinished business is before the Senate. The Chair understands that the Senator from Indiana only yielded to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. With the permission of the Senator from Indiana, I merely wish to take advantage at this moment to state that it is a very little step from sugar to money. In fact, money and sugar are almost synonymous. We say "we did not have the sugar," meaning "we did not have the money."

Now, I have a proposition that I desire to present. It is to have printed certain matter as a public document. But the distinguished Senator from Utah has found a very decided difference between the printing of a document that refers to the very lifeblood of our Nation, the circulating money of the country, and sugar. It may have been because sugar is grown from beets in Colorado and the washed-money enterprise does not exist there; but I make this statement because I want to have my position in the matter understood.

I am seriously in earnest in this matter, and I shall insist upon it at the proper time when I may have the floor; but I yield to the distinguished Senator from Indiana. Therefore, I will withdraw the proposition now, but I want the Senate to understand that at some other time I shall seek a suitable opportunity to press my request.

Mr. SMOOT. I wish to say to the Senator from New Jersey that the reason why I objected to the printing of 587 letters as a public document was not because it was on the question of the currency, but because all the letters were virtually upon the same subject matter and from one circular, and no doubt Senators have received letters almost similar from a great many banks of the country. I am in sympathy with the object the Senator is trying to accomplish in having it published as a document.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Mr. President, if the Senator will permit me, twice before have I endeavored to urge the publication of the document by the Senate, and in each case objection has been made.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The regular order has been called for by the Senator from Indiana, and the Secretary will read the resolution before the Senate.

MR. HATHAWAY'S BRIEF ON SUGAR DUTIES.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. For what purpose does the Senator from Oklahoma rise?

Mr. GORE. I ask the Senator from Indiana if he will yield to me for a moment that I may ask unanimous consent for the publication of a document?

Mr. KERN. Very well.

Mr. SMOOT. I ask for the regular order, because we can dispose of that question in a few minutes, I think.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I will say to the Senator from Utah that no Senator on this side desires to suppress light on the subject of sugar or any other subject. The sugar producers of Michigan have been having a hearing to-day and yesterday before a subcommittee of the Committee on Finance. Mr. Hathaway, representing the sugar interests of Michigan, filed with the subcommittee a very able and exhaustive brief. Indeed it exhausted the subject from the standpoint of the sugar producers of Michigan. That every Senator may have access to this document I ask that it be printed as a Senate document.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, the regular order was called for and enforced against the Senator from New Jersey, and I shall now insist on the regular order.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The regular order is demanded.

Mr. GORE. Mr. President, I wish to disclaim for myself and for this side any responsibility for refusing to throw any light on this subject at this time.

PAINT CREEK COAL FIELDS, WEST VIRGINIA.

Mr. KERN. I ask for the reading of Senate resolution 37, authorizing the appointment of a committee to make investigation of conditions in Paint Creek district, West Virginia.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The pending resolution will be read.

The Secretary read Senate resolution 37 submitted by Mr. KERN April 12, 1913, and reported from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate April 28, 1913, with a substitute, the substitute being as follows:

Resolved, That the Senate Committee on Education and Labor is hereby authorized and directed to make a thorough and complete investigation of the conditions existing in the Paint Creek coal fields of West Virginia for the purpose of ascertaining—

First. Whether or not any system of peonage is maintained in said coal fields.

Second. Whether or not access to post offices is prevented; and if so, by whom.

Third. Whether or not the immigration laws of this country are being violated in the West Virginia coal fields; and if so, by whom.

Fourth. If any or all of those conditions exist, the causes leading up to such conditions.

Fifth. Whether or not the Commissioner of Labor or any other official or officials of the Government can be of service in adjusting such strike.

Sixth. Whether or not parties are being convicted and punished in violation of the laws of the United States.

Said committee or any subcommittee thereof is hereby empowered to sit and act during the session or recess of Congress or of either House thereof at such time and place as it may deem necessary; to require by subpœna or otherwise the attendance of witnesses and the production of papers, books, and documents; to employ stenographers, at a cost not exceeding $1 per printed page, to take and make a record of all evidence taken and received by the committee and keep a record of its proceedings; to have such evidence, record, and other matter required by the committee printed. The chairman of the committee or any member thereof may administer oaths to witnesses. Subpœnas for witnesses shall be issued under the signature of the chairman of the committee or subcommittee thereof. Every person who, having been summoned as a witness by authority of said committee or any subcommitttee thereof, willfully makes default or who, having appeared, refuses to answer any questions pertinent to the investigation herein authorized shall be held to the penalties provided by section 102 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

The expenses thereof shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate on vouchers ordered by said committee, signed by the chairman thereof and approved by the Committee on Contingent Expenses.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, I ask that the resolution be adopted as recommended.

On last Monday morning my attention was called to a statement of the governor of West Virginia published in a Washington newspaper of that date regarding the proposed investigation of certain conditions in that State, in which that distinguished and amiable gentleman was pleased to employ language so picturesque and a style so unusual and to state facts so startling and sentiments so new to our civilization that I did not deem it necessary or proper to make any reference thereto on the floor of the Senate.

But as it now appears that fragmentary parts of this remarkable statement have been published in various parts of the country with its most interesting allegations of fact omitted I have concluded to ask that the entire article as originally published be printed in the RECORD, to the end that it may be permanently preserved in its entirety as well as its beauty. I send the article to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. For reading?

Mr. KERN. For reading.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

CHARLESTON, W. VA., May 4, 1913.

Gov. Henry D. Hatfield, of West Virginia, in a statement to-night attacked Senator JOHN W. KERN, of Indiana, who to-morrow is expected to bring up a resolution which he introduced some time ago in the United States Senate providing for Federal investigation of conditions in the West Virginia coal fields.

The governor declares the Senator has been misinformed, that the coal strike is over, that he intends to arrest any person aiding and abetting lawlessness, and that he courts a thorough investigation.

In his statement Gov. Hatfield says:

"I am informed that Senator KERN has made a statement that peonage exists in West Virginia and that Mrs. Mary (Mother) Jones has been on trial before a drumhead militia court for the past 30 days.

"CALLS CHARGE FABRICATION.

"In reply to the Senator's statement relative to peonage I wish to say that his allegation is a fabrication out of the whole cloth. Mrs. Jones is not now nor has she at any time since her arrest been in prison. She is being detained—and is not in any way confined—at a pleasant boarding house with a private family on the banks of the Kanawha River, at Pratt, W. Va.

"I do not intend to permit Mrs. Jones or any other person to come into West Virginia and make inflammatory speeches that have a tendency to produce riot and bloodshed.

"The honorable body of which Senator KERN is a Member has a perfect right to investigate West Virginia or any part of it. I shall be delighted to have such an investigation and will use my best efforts to aid the investigation committee in any way I can; but Senator KERN must remember that I am responsible to the people of West Virginia for the maintenance of law and order, and it will be maintained by me during my term of office at any hazard, and when it becomes necessary to detain or jail people to accomplish this purpose it will be done unhesitatingly.

"TWISTERS OF THE TRUTH.

"Such twisters of the truth as Senator KERN seem to be largely responsible for these falsehoods and misrepresentations which work untold hardships upon those in office who have due respect for law and order and who are trying to carry out and maintain the principles of good government.

"I note that one of the statements of Senator KERN is to the effect that he knows positively that one newspaper correspondent was ejected during the trial of "Mother" Jones and deported from the State. I can use no better terms and can not express myself more forcibly than to say that this was a willful and deliberate lie on the part of the one who informed Senator KERN, and it would not at all surprise me to learn that the Senator knew this to be the case when he made the statement."

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, I have no quarrel with this distinguished gentleman, who has thus questioned my veracity and impugned my motives in such graceful and poetic language. I have not the honor of a personal acquaintance with him, though I am compelled to confess that I have known him by reputation for many years, and it is but fair to him that I should state in this presence that the impression I already had as to the sweetness of his temper, the gentleness of his manners, the dignity of his bearing, the purity of his purposes, and his veneration for the laws of his country, has been greatly confirmed after reading the noble sentiments expressed in the delightful phrase of the interview which the Senate has just now heard.

I have no thought of occupying the time of the Senate with any extended comments on this interview. If any doubt as to the propriety and necessity of an investigation into the conditions existing in West Virginia existed in the mind of any Senator, surely those doubts have been dispelled after reading this fulmination of the chief executive of that unfortunate Commonwealth; for he makes it plain that in certain parts of the State the constitutions of both State and Nation have been nullified, and the constitutional provisions for the protection of the liberty of the citizens have been set aside by his arbitrary edicts, and we have the spectacle of a governor of an American State proclaiming his purpose to proceed in his lawless course, defiant of all the limitations upon his power which the Constitution has provided.

I shall briefly call attention to one or two passages of this document for a moment's comment. He says:

I am informed that Senator KERN has made a statement that peonage exists in West Virginia, and that Mrs. Mary (Mother) Jones has been on trial before a drumhead militia court for the past 30 days.

In reply to the Senator's statement relative to peonage, I wish to say that his allegation is a fabrication out of the whole cloth. Mrs. Jones is not now, nor has she at any time since her arrest, been in prison. She is being detained (and is not in any way confined) at a pleasant boarding house with a private family on the banks of the Kanawha River, at Pratt, W. Va.

It might be well for me to say at this point that I have never claimed to have personal knowledge as to any matter referred to in the resolution of inquiry. I have seen affidavits of workingmen, however, who declare that conditions worse than peonage have prevailed in the mining districts of West Virginia. But that issue of fact will be for the committee to try and determine.

I did not know that Mother Jones had been tried or was being tried at the time I introduced the resolution now under consideration. I learned of the trial from a very estimable lady interested in sociological work who had visited that locality to study the conditions there. She told me of the trial of Mother Jones before a drumhead military court-martial within a few miles of the State capital, and within the boundaries of the county in which that capital is situated. She was tried before this unlawful tribunal on a charge of murder, or as an accessory either before or after the fact.

The following is the military order which superseded the constitution in certain parts of West Virginia and which conferred authority upon a coterie of irresponsible militia officers to deal with questions affecting the life and liberty of the people of that State:

(General Orders, No. 23.)

The following is published for the guidance of the military commission organized under General Orders, No. 22, of this office, dated November 16, 1912:

1. The military commission is substituted for the criminal courts of the district covered by the martial-law proclamation, and all offenses against the civil laws as they existed prior to the proclamation of November 15, 1912, shall be regarded as offenses under the military law, and as a punishment therefor the military commission can impose such sentences, either lighter or heavier than those imposed under the civil law, as in their judgment the offender may merit.

2. Cognizances of offenses against the civil law as they existed prior to November 5, 1912, committed prior to the declaration of martial law and unpunished, will be taken by the military commission.

3. Persons sentenced to imprisonment will be confined in the penitentiary at Moundsville, W. Va.

By command of the governor:

C. D. ELLIOTT, Adjutant General.

Mother Jones and other prisoners, some of whom are serving sentences in the penitentiary inflicted by this so-called military court, were tried and sentenced at a time when, according to the opinion handed down by one of the supreme court judges, and from which I quote—

The criminal courts of Kanawha County were open, able, and with full jurisdiction to try the charges against them.

But to me the most startling fact bearing on the subject under discussion was this: Here was a proceeding not only unusual but almost unheard of being carried on almost in sight of the capital of West Virginia and within 300 miles of the National Capital. One of the best-known women in America—a woman past her eightieth year—a woman known and loved by millions of the working people of America for the promotion of whose welfare and for the amelioration of whose condition she had dedicated her life—a woman so honored and beloved by these millions that she was known to all of them in every humble home as Mother Jones, was being tried in this unusual way before this mock tribunal.

The fact of the trial was sensational. The subject matter of the trial was of the deepest interest. The incidents of such a trial would be of necessity not only sensational but would interest the country.

And yet the great news-gathering agencies of the country, active, alert, with a large, intelligent force searching everywhere for items of news, were not able to furnish a line of information to their newspaper patrons concerning this astonishing proceeding.

This fact speaks volumes as to the conditions in that terror-stricken country. A zone had been established for these infamous proceedings for the purpose of suppressing information concerning them.

I was informed by a representative of the greatest of all these news-gathering agencies that the proceedings were not reported because the conditions there were such that it was not safe for newspaper men to enter that field to secure the facts for publication.

This same agency has had a representative in the City of Mexico throughout the period of the recent revolutions. He was not afraid to remain there and report faithfully the news while the streets were being plowed and mowed by the deadly missiles from the cannons of contending armies. But in West Virginia the situation was such that the American reading public was kept in profound ignorance of the startling happenings there because of a reign of terror which could not be braved by the dauntless representatives of the American Press associations.

This single fact alone will justify fully the most searching investigation.

After this trial Mother Jones remained in custody. The finding of the court-martial was returned to the governor, who has it in his keeping for approval or modification.

What the finding is, whether this old woman is to die or to live, whether she is to spend the remainder of her life in prison or go free, is known only to the one man who sets his will above the law of the land. While he solves these issues of life or death the venerable woman is detained by military law. To use his own chaste language again, "She is being detained—and not in any way confined—at a pleasant boarding house with a private family on the banks of the Kanawha River at Pratt, W. Va."

From this pleasant boarding house on the banks of the river this old woman sent me the following telegram on the same day that West Virginia's governor was giving out his interview:

HANSFORD, W. VA., May 4, 1913.

Senator KERN, Care Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.:

From out the military prison walls, where I have been forced to pass my eighty-first milestone of life, I plead with you for the honor of this Nation. I send you groans and tears of men, women, and children as I have heard them in this State, and beg you to force that investigation. Children yet unborn will rise and bless you.

MOTHER JONES.

Mr. President, I will not detain the Senate longer. The mere suggestion of an investigation has caused the military dictator of that Commonwealth to remove her from the pleasant boarding house on the banks of the river, but it has not yet set her free.

Let this investigation proceed, that the full light may be let in on this foul spot and that all the facts bearing on these questions may be brought out, to the end that wrongs, if they exist, may be righted and that any men who are unjustly accused may be vindicated.

Mr. CHILTON. Mr. President, the misfortune of occasions of this kind generally is that it is hard to criticize a public official without being accused of, or credited with, as the case may be, political bias. I have known Gov. Hatfield since he was a boy. The only thing that I ever had against him in my life was that he is a Republican. I live in the county spoken of by the distinguished Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN], and have lived there all my life.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, will the Senator from West Virginia yield for a question?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from West Virginia yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. CHILTON. I do.

Mr. KERN. I ask the Senator from West Virginia whether he indorses the action of Gov. Hatfield as he himself relates that action?

Mr. CHILTON. I am coming to that in a moment.

Mr. KERN. I understood the Senator to say that he had known nothing against Gov. Hatfield or in Gov. Hatfield's career other than his politics.

Mr. CHILTON. I did not say "his career" at all; I said "except his politics." I meant that personally. I, of course, do not indorse a great many things that Gov. Hatfield probably indorses, as the Senator will learn later on. I said I had known Gov. Hatfield since he was a boy. He and I both came from the mountains of West Virginia; and I said that I had nothing against him, except his politics—at least, I meant to say that.

I live, Mr. President, in the county, and I was born in the county, where these labor troubles had their incipiency and have been carried on. I know that section of the county as well as I know the immediate place of my birth. We have had some labor troubles in West Virginia, and they have not been different from the labor troubles in Massachusetts; they have not been different from the labor troubles in Ohio or from those in the State of New York; in fact, there is very little difference between the labor troubles in West Virginia and those that are now on in other parts of the country.

On principle, and in so far as any practical good may come from it, I would oppose this resolution. I could well ask the Senate, if peonage exists in the State of West Virginia, what can the Senate do about it? If the postal laws of the United States have been violated, what can the Senate do about it? If the State of West Virginia, indeed, is not giving the people a republican form of government, what can the Senate by a report of a committee do in relation thereto? The laws of the United States have not been suspended, and peonage can be prosecuted if anybody in West Virginia has been guilty of that offense. So with the other matters proposed to be investigated. This matter, however, has taken such a shape, and political considerations possibly may have so entered into it, that I think I should make to the Senate a short explanation.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from West Virginia yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. CHILTON. Certainly; I yield.

Mr. KERN. The Senator has referred to political considerations.

Mr. CHILTON. I absolve the Senator——

Mr. KERN. Does the Senator not know that this resolution was introduced by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] in the closing days of the last session?

Mr. CHILTON. Why, Mr. President, I never intimated that the Senator from Indiana was influenced by any political considerations or that the Senator from Idaho was. For that matter, let us assume that there is no politics in this resolution. Notwithstanding the fact of that admission, Mr. President, the State of West Virginia has been for 16 years in the hands of the Republican Party; the county of Kanawha has been for the same length of time in the hands of the Republican Party; and I am not going to sit here and, by my acquiescence, allow an indictment to be made of the people of West Virginia or of any part of it and allow the tacit admission to go unchallenged, that the Republicans of West Virginia are a different kind of people from the Democrats or of the general run of the people of these United States. What I meant by using the word "political" was that inasmuch as no Democrat has had anything to do with these troubles in an official way, I could well play politics by allowing these sweeping charges to go unchallenged. But I am more of a West Virginian than a politician. The great coal industry of that State is more important than my political fortunes, and I represent in this Chamber all the people of my State, and not alone my own party. The labor organizations can have my services here when needed in a just cause, and the coal industry as well, and I refuse to admit that West Virginia has ever surrendered her self-respect or that her people are so ignorant as to permit open, high-handed lawlessness or the reign of a dictator.

The natives born in those West Virginia hills and her naturalized citizens, as a rule, are honest, and they love just as truly as does the Senator from Indiana a republican form of government. They treasure the traditions of this Nation, and they would go out to fight for the rights of all of the people, as they have done in the past. Because I am a Democrat I shall not permit a Republican administration to be branded as false to the people and the flag. The people of my State may differ on politics, but we all love liberty, law, and order.

Our situation, sir, is simply a growth; and anything that has existed, or may exist now, in that region of the State has come about in a natural way, in my judgment; and I say it is unfortunate for me here to-day that I, willing that this investigation should go on, must be put in the position either of defending a Republican administration in the State of West Virginia and trying to defeat this resolution or else in a way concur in what has been said in the newspaper press and in the magazines all over this country concerning the State. I prefer to do right and discharge my duty to my people regardless of consequences. Some things have gone wrong there; we have had a labor agitation; we have had a strike, so to speak; but, Mr. President, the State of West Virginia has not been careless in that matter, and I want to say that Gov. Hatfield has not declared martial law in the State of West Virginia. That was an inheritance of Gov. Hatfield's. It is just for me, as a Democrat, to say that of him as a Republican governor of my State. Gov. Glasscock declared martial law in the State of West Virginia, and when Gov. Hatfield was inaugurated on the 4th of March he found that condition there. Instead of keeping a military force, as there was under Gov. Glasscock's administration, costing, as I understand, about $3,000 a day, Gov. Hatfield has gradually reduced that until it is now costing the State only $50 or $60 a day for merely a little squad of soldiers to act as a guard around the immediate place of the trouble, and he has given notice of his intention to withdraw all troops.

Now, Mr. President, acquitting the Senator from Indiana of any idea of seeking political advantage or personal advantage, so far as that may be concerned, in relation to this matter, I want the Senate to know that I do not concur in the general indictment that has been published all over this land against the State of West Virginia. She is not lawless. She does not countenance lawlessness. The general run of her people love honesty. They love legal means. They are respecters of law and order and peace. They are largely a religious people and they are always a law-abiding people. The conditions which have grown up in that State might grow up anywhere under similar causes, of which I need not speak here. They might be present in the State of Ohio or in the State of Indiana.

I do not say this to criticize the Senator from Indiana; but let him not forget that even his own city of Indianapolis has been charged with being a breeding place of anarchy and disorder. That does not refer to the great body of the people; but this country was stirred from ocean to ocean by the fact that alleged anarchists were tried in that city. They were charged there with having conspired against the lives of people all over this country; and yet I would not stand here and ask a Federal investigation of that State for that reason alone, nor would I permit myself to believe that any party in that State would willingly submit to arbitrary rule or to general lawlessness.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from West Virginia yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. CHILTON. I do.

Mr. KERN. Does the Senator understand that anybody in Indiana was tried by a military court-martial?

Mr. CHILTON. No, sir; certainly not. I am coming to that in a minute.

Mr. President, I am a Jacksonian, Jeffersonian Democrat. I will never say in this presence, nor have I ever said on the soil of West Virginia or anywhere else, that I indorse military law as construed by the present supreme court of the State and as construed by the administration that went out on the 4th of March. That, sir, is my opinion. We must not forget, however, that the supreme court of appeals of the State has held that nothing unconstitutional was done. It has held that that military commission was justified by the laws and the constitution of the State.

Suppose, now, a committee of the Senate should determine otherwise. In the final analysis it is for the Supreme Court of the United States to determine whether or not that proceeding was violative of the Constitution of the United States, and it is for the Supreme Court of the State of West Virginia to determine whether or not it was violative of the constitution of that State. Even now a case has been prepared taking that question to the Supreme Court of the United States upon an appeal or writ of error from the supreme court of appeals of the State—the highest court in the State.

That matter is going along orderly and in a regular way. We can not stop the case if we would. We can not reverse the decision of the highest court in the State. We can not release a single person who has been held under the proceedings in West Virginia. Again, I would be slow even to insinuate, much less to admit by conduct, that if peonage or interference with the mails can be shown, the present able and faithful administration of the government will fail to take cognizance of such violations of the law.

I have said from the first—I have said it as a citizen, and I have said it as a lawyer—that I hope the Supreme Court of the United States will never hold that the word of a governor is the last word as to how a citizen of a State shall be tried. I hope the Supreme Court of the United States will reverse the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of West Virginia and will hold that the governor of that State can not create a military commission in the way he did originally. I have said, further, that I did not want to live in a State whose governor can draw a circle around my house and try me before breakfast under a military order.

I hope that is not the law of West Virginia; but now it is, until the Supreme Court says otherwise. The court to which I am bound to give respect, if I am a law-abiding citizen of the State, has held it to be the law of the State. I am in sympathy with the view of those who are taking the case to the Supreme Court of the United States, and I sincerely hope that high tribunal will decide that the military power is circumscribed in some way, and that the Supreme Court of Appeals of my State is mistaken. That statement I have made in public and in private to persons on both sides of this unfortunate controversy; but, sir, it can not be decided by the Senate, nor by a committee of it; it must be decided in the regular way, and proceedings to determine it are going forward as rapidly as possible.

I read in magazines statements about West Virginia, many of which I know to be untrue. I read in papers in this country statements attacking good citizens of that State, some of which I know to be untrue. I would rather go out of the Senate tomorrow than to sit in this body, with the responsibilities of my position, and not rise when the question comes up and give my testimony that untrue statements are being published against good Republicans and against a Republican administration that I am naturally inclined to fight under all circumstances and against both the laboring men and some of their employers. God knows I have a political indictment against my Republican friends sufficient for all purposes that I know to be true. I will not sit here in my place and allow things to be said against them which my knowledge teaches me, and my information leads me to believe, are not true.

Gov. Hatfield found this order. Not a single human being has he allowed to go into the penitentiary. He not only found it, but he found it upheld by the Supreme Court of Appeals of the State of West Virginia. He has simply been executing it, not allowing a human being ever to get inside of the penitentiary walls since he has been on the job. It is but simple justice to state these facts, and it is but fair to admit that he has had a most difficult situation and has given his best thought and practically all of his time to its solution. I am opposed to him politically, but I will not strike under the belt. If West Virginia's good name is the price of my political success, then my loyalty and love prevent me from paying the price.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, will the Senator state that there are not two men in the penitentiary now, one serving a sentence of five years and the other a sentence of two years, imposed by this military court-martial?

Mr. CHILTON. They were sentenced under a prior administration, though; not under this one.

Mr. KERN. I am talking about the court-martial that we are talking about here. Were not the cases of those two men presented to the Supreme Court in habeas corpus proceedings, and are not those same men now, under the administration of Gov. Hatfield, permitted to remain there as prisoners, with the full power of pardon in his hands?

Mr. CHILTON. I say last what I said first: It is my information that not a single person has been sent to the penitentiary under Gov. Hatfield's administration. They were tried under Gov. Glasscock's administration; they were sentenced to the penitentiary, and they were put in the penitentiary, and a great many of them were pardoned by him. I think I am right in that statement. I say it subject to correction if I am not.

Mr. KERN. In what court were these men tried?

Mr. CHILTON. They were tried in a military court. There is on doubt about that.

Mr. KERN. How many miles from the city of Charleston does that court sit?

Mr. CHILTON. Some 8 or 10 or 15 miles, or probably 20 miles. It is in the same county, adjoining, right along on the same river.

I am not denying that people have been tried by a military court, and I am not defending it. I am not denying that the administration has carried out martial law, probably in its rigor. I am simply trying to get the facts before the Senate, to have it understand that this has not been done in the extreme, high-handed, arbitrary manner that has been described. It has been upheld by the Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia.

I will ask the Senator now if the language which he read a moment ago was not from the dissenting opinion of that court?

Mr. KERN. I so stated.

Mr. CHILTON. I did not understand the Senator to say so. He said it was the language of one of the judges that decided the case.

Mr. KERN. Yes; it is a minority opinion. I am going to ask later to have it printed as a Senate document, because it exposes the iniquity not only of the conditions in West Virginia but of the court itself.

Mr. CHILTON. There is no doubt in the world, whatever it may be, that the dissenting opinion of Judge Robinson expresses my view of the law and what I hope the Supreme Court of the United States will hold to be the law. But up to this time that is not the law in the State of West Virginia, and that decision must be reversed before the views of Judge Robinson shall become the law. I leave it for the Senate to determine whether or not the word "iniquity" applies to the court or to the decision. Our judges are elected by the people, and they are men of ability and character.

As I said before, Mr. President, the magazines and newspapers have given a very horrible description of conditions in West Virginia. Some of these I know to be untrue. I want to say further that I have not taken either side of this controversy. The members of the labor organizations of West Virginia have been my friends all during my political life, and they are my friends now.

They know that I understand perfectly well that the great body of these organizations stand for law and order and regret the outbreaks which sometimes have brought down the strong arm of the law upon them.

I hope they are that character of people—and they have got to be if they are to be my friends—who want all the truth and who do not want anybody to misrepresent any condition for their benefit. I have talked to them about these matters; I talk to them often, and they so express themselves to me. I feel that they want nothing to go through the Senate of the United States upon misrepresentation or as a result of any extreme statements coming from them.

Part of the strike and all of the lawlessness, I have always said, was not authorized by the labor unions. You can always find on the outskirts of these strikes a few people who do not want law and order anywhere, who will use the sympathy of the people for labor as an opportunity to do lawless acts and to do things of which labor unions do not approve.

As I said in the beginning, ordinarily I would ask that this resolution be defeated. Why? Because each Senator feels that his State ought to be allowed to take care of its own affairs. I recall that when an effort was made here to investigate the Lawrence strike, the mere suggestion of the Senator from Massachusetts, who said that that State was able to take care of its own affairs, was all sufficient for the Senate, and then and there the matter was dropped.

I do not, however, want West Virginia held up to the people of this country as being a lawless State and then let the matter drop there. I should not want that done even if my word could accomplish it. I am not that kind of a citizen of the State. So far as I am concerned, I agree with Gov. Hatfield that the matter might be investigated; and if I did not agree with him, since I have seen his statement that he wants it investigated, I should not object. But, Mr. President, I think this resolution should be amended. I think there should be some amendments made as to the wording of it.

It occurs to me that the resolution has not yet taken the regular course. It was simply referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate on the question as to whether or not that committee would recommend that the Senate bear the expense of the investigation. The resolution has never gone to a committee upon its merits. I think the wording of it should be changed in some respects. I think it should cover two or three other matters, so as to embrace both sides of this great controversy.

I intend to ask—not for the purpose of killing the resolution, not for the purpose of delaying any investigation, because it can come back here the first of next week—to have this resolution sent to the regular Committee on Education and Labor as to its merits. It has never gone there upon its merits, and it should be considered by that committee, where proper amendments can be made to it. At the proper time I am going to ask—and move, if necessary—that the resolution be sent to the Committee on Education and Labor and reported upon as to its merits, after such a hearing as to the grounds and reasons for making the investigation as may be submitted. Now there are no facts before the Senate. We have only a resolution and a speech. Can we afford to make a precedent that any Senator can offer a resolution to investigate an internal affair of a State and, without proof of its necessity and without suggestion that any good can result therefrom, the Senate will order the investigation? I only ask fair treatment for my State and an orderly course in our proceedings.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, this trouble in West Virginia is connected with coal mines, is it not?

Mr. CHILTON. Yes, sir.

Mr. STONE. How many men are engaged as coal miners in West Virginia?

Mr. CHILTON. In round numbers, 70,000.

Mr. STONE. Can the Senator tell who they are? By that I mean, can he classify them as to nationality?

Mr. CHILTON. No, sir; I can not. A great many of them are native-born citizens, both white and black. A great many of them have come in from the State of North Carolina and the State of South Carolina, and the overplus from Virginia. Those are mostly of the colored race. Then there are quite a number of other nationalities.

Mr. STONE. As between whites and blacks, how are they divided?

Mr. CHILTON. I should say there are about two or three whites to one black.

Mr. STONE. How is it as to the foreign-born people—Italians, Poles, and so forth?

Mr. CHILTON. It would be a guess, but in my part of the country the majority of the people are native-born whites and blacks. I can not speak of the upper end of the State. In my end of the State—that is, in the New River and the Kanawha fields, and I take it in the McDowell fields—a large majority of the miners are blacks and native-born whites. I should think that would be a correct statement.

Mr. STONE. They are citizens of the United States, then?

Mr. CHILTON. Yes; they are citizens.

Mr. STONE. Most of them?

Mr. CHILTON. Yes; that is my opinion about it. Of course there are a great many people there, a great many foreigners, that are not citizens of the United States. I desire to have it understood that I do not speak from actual figures. I am speaking generally from my limited knowledge of the situation.

Mr. President, it is a serious matter to indict a whole State, its courts, its governor, and all its civil officers. An investigation as broad and as sweeping as this would be an indictment. If I were a mere politician I could well sit here and permit this wholesale charge against my people and their Republican officials to take the easy course of parliamentary procedure that is mapped out for it. If we can start right and the country will withhold judgment till all the facts be known, the word of the governor put into the record that an investigation is desired, leaves me little to say in answer to the suggestion that an investigation might vindicate the State. But why object to a preliminary hearing by the regular committee? Why railroad such an important resolution? No one can be injured, for it is well known that this investigation, if ordered now, can not be made for some time, because the presence of Senators here at the Capitol is and will be for quite a while demanded. The press of West Virginia announces that the strike has been settled. That is my information from other sources friendly, too, to labor organizations. The regular committee can hear anyone desiring to be heard, and it can then decide whether or not there is a public necessity for an investigation, and if so, the scope of that investigation.

Mr. GOFF. Mr. President, I think it is quite apparent from what has already been said that no good can come from this proposed investigation. I should like each Senator to ask himself, before voting for it, on what evidence is he voting? What has been presented to the Senate, or to any committee of the Senate, justifying such allegations as have been made here relative to the State of West Virginia that will authorize this great deliberative body to pass this resolution?

A resolution has been offered, that resolution has been referred to a committee, and a report has been made. The report simply tells the Senate in substance:

> We report this resolution favorably, and trust it will pass.

On what? On a newspaper statement? On a mere interview given by some one to some one? Or is it on an affidavit of some man or woman who, before the evangel of Almighty God, will state that such facts exist as will justify the Senate in so proceeding? Not a scrap; not a memorandum; not an affidavit.

Is that the way matters of great moment are brought to the attention of the Senate? Does not a committee from the Senate give the reasons why a bill should pass or why a resolution should be favorably considered? I ask you to look for one single word telling why that should be done.

Is it because there is a strike in the coal region of West Virginia? Concede it. There has been a strike in the coal region of West Virginia, as there have been strikes in the coal region of Illinois, of Ohio, of Virginia, of every other section of the country where coal is mined. Then, it can not be that simply because there is a strike the investigation should be made.

Then what else? Because men have been killed? Concede it. Have not men been murdered, killed, and assassinated at other mines, also at factories and mills?

It was only yesterday that I read in one of the metropolitan journals that up in the great State of New York at a strike—I think at Syracuse, but I am not sure of the city—two rioters and a policeman had been killed. Should not the Senate at once send a committee there to investigate that matter and ascertain who was to blame and what action it should take? Over in the State of New Jersey, at Paterson, I think, a strike at the silk factories has been in progress for some time; property has been destroyed, life has been taken. Should not the Senate send a committee there to investigate that matter?

But it is said we have martial law in West Virginia. Is that anything new in this country? Would it not be much better if in some localities where martial law has not been declared it had been proclaimed?

Now, what is martial law? It is simply the rule of the military when the civil power is inadequate. That is all. It should necessarily intervene when there is chaos, when the civil power fails. Would not a justice of the peace in this strike zone in West Virginia, the sheriff of the county, or the constable of the district, make a lovely spectacle of himself in attempting to arrest two or three thousand riotous men? How long would the man stay under arrest with a thousand of his comrades to rush him from the officers of the law? How long would the courts stay open in that zone?

Martial law does not exist throughout the State of West Virginia. With its five hundred and twenty and odd thousand square miles of territory it exists only in one small section of one county; that is all. Why? Because in that small territory a few miles square this condition of affairs still exists, and the civil authorities are utterly powerless.

Gov. Hatfield and Gov. Glasscock both proceeded under the provisions of law. They both proceeded under West Virginia enactments. Those West Virginia enactments are in spirit older than the State. They are taken from her grand old mother—Virginia. We first find them upon the statute books of colonial Virginia. We find them repeated when such brilliant men as Patrick Henry and Thomas Jefferson were in control of affairs in Virginia. We find that when Thomas Jefferson was governor of Virginia the Legislature of Virginia proposed that the governor, with the advice of his council, the council being used there as a cabinet, might at any moment issue a proclamation that would cause the arrest, the banishment, the imprisonment the holding in detention of anyone who was producing turmoil and strife, of anyone who was giving aid and comfort to those opposing. At that time the spirit of '76 was in the air. At that time this enactment went so far as to say that as to the people so arrested the writ of habeas corpus should not be used.

The men who were then speaking and then enacting law were men who knew their rights and dared maintain them. One of them was the man who said, "Give me liberty or give me death." Another was a man whom we all believe indited the glorious Declaration of Independence, and, pardon me, last but not least by any means, the founder of the Democratic Party. I say it is a part of the history of the country that has come down to us through the years to the present time.

Gentlemen, just think what the situation would be without it. We might as well look these things in the face. The turmoil and strife that are in the land, growing from strikes here, there, and everywhere, necessarily invoke the military power and thereby override the civil law. Are we to stand idly by? Are the governors of the State of New York, the State of Ohio, the State of New Jersey, the State of Indiana, where these difficulties have arisen, to stand by and take no action, and simply rely upon the justices of the peace or the judges of the courts? Would not that be folly?

In this small section of the State of West Virginia martial law exists. In every other section of the State the civil courts are open, as they have always been. If the people to whom the Senator from Indiana alludes are improperly held by the judicial authorities or by the mandate of the governor, why do they not go to the courts? The courts are open. Their petition will be heard. Are we to presume that a man is held in durance vile improperly? Is it not the presumption of law that he is properly so held? On the eloquence of the Senator from Indiana, or out of sympathy for an aged lady, are we to presume that she is improperly held in confinement, or is it not the presumption that in all the States of the Union men or women in prison are held according to law? Now, if they are not held according to law they can go to the courts; and I will say that these people have gone to the courts. They have filed their petitions in the court; they have asked the courts to release them; they have made the same argument that the Senator from Indiana has made; and what did the inferior and court of appeals of West Virginia say? They said: "You are properly held in confinement under the law and the constitution. We can not turn you out."

Now, such is the judgment of those courts. The Supreme Court of West Virginia is composed of able, learned, and experienced men—tried jurists—who, acting upon their oaths, have construed those statutes and executive proclamations, as similar enactments and mandates have by other courts for years past been construed. Whether we agree with them or not is not the question before the Senate. It is the Supreme Court of West Virginia that has spoken. Are we to ignore our judicial system? Does it not provide that if the supreme court of a State rules that a citizen of the United States is improperly deprived of his property or of his liberty the great tribunal that sits in another part of this Capitol shall review that judgment when the same is properly taken before it? Why do they not bring it here? Those so convicted and held do not ask the Supreme Court of the United States to reverse the judgments now standing against them. My colleague [Mr. CHILTON] says he understands that will be done. Can we not wait and abide the judgment of that great court? Why should we proceed now? Why should we stir up this strife? Why should we continue it in West Virginia?

I doubt very much whether the wish of my colleague will ever be realized—that the judgment of the court of appeals of West Virginia will be reversed. This is no new question. It was raised out in Colorado a few years ago. (In re Moyer, 35 Colo., 159.) It is a noted case. That same matter in another form went to the Supreme Court of the United States. What did that court say? Let me invite your attention to the syllabus in Moyer v. Peabody (212 U. S. Reports, p. 78):

> What is due process of law depends on circumstances and varies with the subject matter and necessities of the situation.
>
> An officer of a State interfering with an individual's rights in an unconstitutional manner derives no protection from personal liability on account of his office.
>
> The declaration of the governor of a State that a state of insurrection exists is conclusive.

So says the Supreme Court:

> Where the constitution and laws of a State give the governor power to suppress insurrection by the National Guard, as is the case in Colorado—

As is the case in West Virginia—

> he may also seize and imprison those resisting, and is the final judge—

That is, the governor, now—> and is the final judge of the necessity for such action, and when such an arrest is made in good faith he can not be subjected to an action therefor after he is out of office, on the ground that he had not reasonable cause.

On this question also see the case of Luther v. Borden (7 How., 1) and Commonwealth v. Shortall (206 Pa., 165).

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Will the Senator from West Virginia yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. GOFF. I yield.

Mr. THOMAS. I am, of course, very familiar with the decision to which the Senator refers. It was the outgrowth of labor conditions.

Mr. GOFF. Most undoubtedly, it was, just as in West Virginia.

Mr. THOMAS. The decision as rendered by the supreme court of the State invested the governor with absolute power. He used it in deporting hundreds of men from the district in box cars and dumping them out upon the prairies of New Mexico and of Kansas. The people of the State, generally speaking, without regard to party, disapproved of that decision, and largely because of the consequences which followed it, which were subversive of all forms of constitutional government and of every individual right guaranteed by that document to the individual. It resulted in a revulsion of political sentiment, in consequence of which, among other things, the judges responsible for the decision have not been returned to office.

Mr. GOFF. Yes; quite likely; I am not surprised. If the wish of the mob is to prevail, judges will be recalled.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from West Virginia yield to the Senator from Colorado?

Mr. GOFF. I do.

Mr. THOMAS. The Senator certainly does not mean by that expression to say that the people of the State of Colorado are a mob?

Mr. GOFF. No; I do not.

Mr. THOMAS. They are a law-abiding people, and acted in their resentment by constitutional methods exclusively.

Mr. GOFF. No; they are not all engaged as is the mob, but many of the people in Colorado did, as well as many of the people in West Virginia, sympathize with the men who are engaged in these controversies, who have taken the law into their own hands, and their votes will be cast accordingly.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from West Virginia yield further?

Mr. GOFF. I do.

Mr. THOMAS. The sympathy of the people of my State was against the labor conditions until that decision of the supreme court turned the tide, so that the statement is not entirely correct with reference to existing public sentiment there.

Mr. GOFF. Well, is it not a pity that this decision that you say has been recalled has nevertheless been affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States?

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I think not.

Mr. GOFF. Very well. Why?

Mr. THOMAS. Because the acts which followed that decision demonstrated beyond question the effect that could be given to it, when a governor of a State can be armed with absolute authority, and his ipse dixit as to the existence or nonexistence of insurrectionary conditions enables him to set aside the law of courts, all forms of civil and judicial procedure, and substitute his will for the law.

Mr. GOFF. Mr. President, in my State we will not for one moment think that any man whom the voters of that State—whatever his politics—have chosen as their governor would ever act in that manner, ever substitute his will for the law.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I certainly hope the governor of that State will not; but if he does, I earnestly hope that the people of West Virginia will consign him to the same fate.

Mr. GOFF. But bear in mind, as I said a moment ago, that "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." We have no governor of any Commonwealth in this great Nation who has ever resorted to any such thing, who has ever betrayed a trust of that kind. He feels his responsibility.

I want to say for Gov. Hatfield, of West Virginia, that there is not an executive in all the broad land, from ocean to ocean and mountain to gulf, who has a higher regard for his position than Gov. Hatfield. He is a man of courage, a man of brains, a man of education, a man of intelligence, who knows his rights and dares exercise them. He is a man among men—a governor among governors. That is the situation out there, Senators. It exists in just one small portion of the State.

The governor is to stand by, I suppose, and let the insurrection continue, permit those engaged in rioting to have their own way, and the law to be defied.

I want to say that there are just as good men in that small section of the State as ever lived anywhere. There are just as good miners in those coal mines as ever mined coal anywhere or earned a living down in the bowels of the earth. They all do not agree to this thing, but many of them are overawed. What chance has a man under such circumstances to assert his individual rights or wishes? Senators, it is simply the old, old story of the conflict between the union and those not members thereof. It is simply an instance of men saying to others, "You shall not work this property of yours unless you do it thus and so"; it is simply saying to other men, "You shall not work in this mine unless I do, or unless it is unionized."

Mr. President, I believe in the rights of labor. So do the people of my State; I believe in the right of labor to organize and to strike; I have so decreed from the bench; and I believe in their right to be protected when so organized; but there comes a time when, for their own good, as well as the good of the country, those so organized should go no further. While they have a perfect right to strike and to quit work, they have no right to make others strike and to prevent those from working who desire to continue to labor in order to support their wives and children. They must not drive other laborers out. They may go out, but the other people have a right—a God-given right—to protect themselves and to earn their living, with which those who wish to strike have no right to interfere.

There never was any trouble there in the Cabin Creek country down to the time when—if the Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN] will pardon me—the emissaries from his State came into that region to unionize it. They had a right to come there; certainly they had. They had a right to argue and to present their views. If that had been all they did there never would have been any trouble. They had, however, no right to engender a strike or a strife that would close the mines and not let other men work in the mines unless they could be worked according to their way.

This is a serious matter for West Virginia. It would be a serious matter for any State in the Union; but, Mr. President and Senators, we have got to meet the situation. As I have said, the West Virginia statutes have met it, and the governor has acted in accordance therewith.

Martial law necessarily suspends, in that locality only, the civil authority. War is a dreadful thing. West Virginia knows what war is; West Virginia was born in the throes of the Civil War. Riot, insurrection, death, the fiery flames of the hell of war swept over her mountains and flooded her valleys. I was a boy there at the time, and I know whereof I speak. Yet this State that is now so recklessly assailed, issuing out of that chaos, that confusion, organized a government, elected Congressmen and Senators, established courts, and throughout all that great expanse of territory, from the summit of the Alleghanies to the Ohio Valley, restored order, built up the wilderness, developed its theretofore hidden wealth, and stands to-day among the first of the great States of the Nation.

Those courts have meted out justice to all, and the blind goddess has never yet held the scales unevenly, nor will she ever do so.

I simply suggest the propriety of letting West Virginia work out this trouble. Other States are permitted to do so, and why not West Virginia? Other States have demonstraed their ability to guard, to manage, and control their own affairs. Has not West Virginia demonstrated that she can do the same? She requires no assistance at this time, and she has been guilty of no act that requires the attention of this Senate.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Indiana if he thinks he will be able to get a vote on the resolution this afternoon?

Mr. KERN. I was about to suggest that the matter might be temporarily laid aside, unless there is a desire to vote on it to-night.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas. Let us have an executive session.

Mr. KERN. Very well, then.

Mr. STONE. I hope the Senator will wait until I can submit a resolution.

Mr. KERN. I was going to say that if there is no objection, the resolution may be temporarily laid aside in order that we may have an executive session.

Mr. STONE. Let it be temporarily laid aside.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, it will be so ordered.

INVESTIGATION OF BUREAU OF INDIAN AFFAIRS.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I desire to offer a resolution, which I ask to have read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Missouri offers a resolution, which the Secretary will read.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 81), as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Indian Affairs of the Senate, or any subcommittee thereof, be, and it hereby is, authorized during the Sixty-third Congress to investigate the administration of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and to that end it is authorized to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, and to employ stenographers at a price not to exceed $1 per printed page, and to employ such other assistants as may be required, to report such hearings as may be had in connection with such investigation, the expenses thereof to be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate, and that such committee, or subcommittee thereof, may sit during the sessions of the Senate, or during the vacation of the Senate, at any place in the United States.

Mr. STONE. I submit that resolution under the instructions of the Committee on Indian Affairs, and I ask to have it referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will be so referred.

HEARINGS BEFORE COMMITTEE ON INDIAN AFFAIRS.

Mr. STONE. I offer another resolution, for which I ask immediate consideration. I present this resolution under instructions from the Committee on Indian Affairs. There are some hearings in progress now before that committee, and I do not think the committee has authority to employ a stenographer or to have printing done. Under instructions from the committee I ask the Senate to adopt the resolution which I send to the desk.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Missouri reports a resolution from the Committee on Indian Affairs, which the Secretary will read.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 80), as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Indian Affairs, or any subcommittee thereof, be authorized during the Sixty-third Congress to send for books and papers, to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer at a price not to exceed $1 per printed page, to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before the said committee; that the committee may sit during the sessions or recesses of the Senate; and the expense thereof shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

Mr. GALLINGER. Manifestly that resolution must go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It must go to the committee under the law.

Mr. STONE. Does that resolution have to go to that committee?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair has ruled that, under the rules of the Senate, the resolution must go to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate.

Mr. GALLINGER. The law so requires.

Mr. STONE. Very well, then, let it go to that committee.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be so referred.

ADJOURNMENT TO TUESDAY.

Mr. KERN. I move that when the Senate adjourns to-day, it adjourn to meet on Tuesday next at 2 o'clock p. m.

The motion was agreed to.

AMENDMENT OF THE RULES.

Mr. JONES. I desire to offer the proposed amendment to the rules of which I gave notice the other day, and ask that it be referred to the Committee on Rules.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the notice of the proposed amendment of the rules heretofore presented by the Senator from Washington.

The Secretary read as follows (S. Res. 82):

The Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] gives notice that he intends to propose the following amendment to the standing rules of the Senate:

Amend, paragraph 2 of Rule VII, by striking out, in the third line thereof, the words "after the morning hour may" and inserting the word "shall."

The VICE PRESIDENT. The proposed amendment to the rules will be referred to the Committee on Rules.

THE TARIFF.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, it is now half past 5 o'clock, and I move that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask the Senator from Mississippi, before he makes that motion, to allow me to submit a request in reference to the tariff bill. It is necessary to do so in order that the bill may be printed in the RECORD to-morrow.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I withhold my motion for that purpose.

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask that House bill 3321, being the tariff bill, may be read a second time so that it may be printed in the RECORD of to-day's proceedings.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there is no objection, the bill will be considered as having been read the first and second times.

Mr. GALLINGER. What bill is that, Mr. President?

Mr. SIMMONS. It is the tariff bill.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, there is a motion pending to refer the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is true; but the Chair has not yet said that the bill has been read the first and second times.

Mr. SIMMONS It has only been read the first time, and can not be printed without being read the second time.

Mr. GALLINGER. Has not that bill been already printed in several editions? Have we not an abundant supply of it?

Mr. SIMMONS. It has not been printed in the RECORD, so far as I know.

Mr. GALLINGER. Oh, in the RECORD.

Mr. SIMMONS. And it has not been printed in any form whatever since it has been passed by the other House.

Mr. GALLINGER. It can be printed in the RECORD, it occurs to me, by unanimous consent.

Mr. SIMMONS. My request does not interfere, Mr. President, at all with the motion to refer, or the proposed amendment of that motion now pending. That may go over until Tuesday.

Mr. GALLINGER. Without reference to that motion, it seems to me that by unanimous consent the bill could be printed in the RECORD without any reference to its being read the first and second times.

Mr. SIMMONS. Under the rule, as I understand, a bill can not be printed unless it has been read a second time, and this bill has only been read once.

The VICE PRESIDENT. If there is no objection, the request of the Senator from North Carolina will be considered as granted.

Mr. JONES and Mr. WILLIAMS addressed the Chair.

Mr. SIMMONS. I desire to present——

Mr. JONES. I desire to ask——

Mr. WILLIAMS. I yielded to the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS] for a moment, but still retained the floor. I now renew the motion that the Senate adjourn.

Mr. SIMMONS. I ask the Senator to yield to me for another request.

Mr. WILLIAMS. I yielded to the Senator a few moments ago, and I thought he was through.

Mr. SIMMONS. I was not. The Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] was anxious to get recognition, although I was not through. I now offer the resolution which I send to the desk, and ask unanimous consent for its present consideration. It is only to provide for printing copies of the tariff bill.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. What disposition was made of the request of the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. SIMMONS] that the tariff bill be read a second time?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair announced, amid a great deal of confusion, that if there was no objection on the part of Senators the request would be considered as granted and the bill would be considered as having been read the first and second times and ordered printed in the RECORD.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I object to the second reading of the bill. I have no objection to printing it in the RECORD by unanimous consent, but I object to its second reading.

Mr. SIMMONS. I will change the form of the request, if the Senator objects, and ask unanimous consent that the bill may be printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will state, for the benefit of the Senator from Connecticut, that the Chair was under the impression that the bill had been read the first and second times; otherwise the Chair would have ruled that the motion to refer the bill to the Finance Committee, and the amendment of the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] to that motion, whereby certain instructions were to be given to the Finance Committee, were not in order.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Anything can be printed in the RECORD by unanimous consent. I have no objection to the request for unanimous consent for the printing of the bill in the RECORD; but, of course, the bill can not be considered as having been read a second time unless by unanimous consent, and I would interpose an objection if that request were made.

Mr. SIMMONS. I think the objection of the Senator came too late——

Mr. NORRIS. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry, Mr. President——

Mr. SIMMONS. Because I think the Chair announced that the request had been granted. However, all I desire is that the bill be printed, and I understand the Senator does not object to that. Now, Mr. President, I ask——

Mr. NORRIS. I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. NORRIS. If the bill is not read the first and second times, can it, under the rules of the Senate, be printed in bill form?

Mr. GALLINGER. No.

Mr. SIMMONS. By unanimous consent; yes.

Mr. NORRIS. That is the object, I understand, of having it read the first and second times. Before Tuesday all of us will be desirous of getting the bill in the form in which it passed the House; and I hope, therefore, that the Senator from Connecticut will not object to the request; otherwise we will not be able to get copies of the bill.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Of course, the committee can have printed all the copies it desires as a committee print.

Mr. SIMMONS. I want to say to Senators that I have just sent up a resolution authorizing the printing of 5,000 copies of the bill for the use of the Senate, and I ask unanimous consent for the reading and present consideration of that resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That the record may be clear, the Chair would like to know whether the ruling of the Chair was correct—that the tariff bill has been read the first and second times and is now pending on the motion to commit with instructions to the Committee on Finance, or whether the motion and the proposed amendment thereto were out of order and the bill has only been read once?

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, I think, as a matter of fact, that the bill has been read only once. Immediately upon the first reading the controversy with reference to hearings arose. The bill has not been read a second time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The present presiding officer desires to state further that since the chair has been occupied by the present incumbent it has been the custom to announce that a bill has been read the first and second times when nothing appears to have been read except the title of the bill, whereupon it has gone to the appropriate committee. The Chair was under the impression that the tariff bill would take the same course, except that the motion to refer with instructions intervened. If there is objection to that, it will be understood that the bill has only been read the first time; and, without objection, it will be considered that the motion of the Senator from North Carolina, that the bill be printed in the RECORD, has been carried by unanimous consent. The Chair hears no objection.

The bill is as follows:

An act (H. R. 3321) to reduce tariff duties and to provide revenue for the Government, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted, etc., That on and after the day following the passage of this act, except as otherwise specially provided for in this act, there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon all articles when imported from any foreign country into the United States or into any of its possessions (except the Philippine Islands and the islands of Guam and Tutuila) the rates of duty which are by the schedules and paragraphs of the dutiable list of this section prescribed, namely:

DUTIABLE LIST.

SCHEDULE A—CHEMICALS, OILS, AND PAINTS.

1. Acids: Boracic acid, ¾ cent per pound; citric acid, 5 cents per pound; formic acid, 1½ cents per pound; gallic acid, 4 cents per pound; lactic acid, 1½ cents per pound; oxalic acid, 2 cents per pound; pyrogallic acid, 10 cents per pound; salicylic acid, 2½ cents per pound; tannic acid and tannin, 4 cents per pound; tartaric acid, 3½ cents per pound; all other acids and acid anhydrides not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

2. Acetic anhydrid, 2½ cents per pound.

3. Acetone, 1 cent per pound.

4. Egg albumen, 3 cents per pound.

5. Alkalies, alkaloids, and all chemical and medicinal compounds, preparations, mixtures and salts, and combinations thereof not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

6. Alizarin, natural or synthetic, dry or suspended in water, 10 per cent ad valorem.

7. Alumina, hydrate of, or refined bauxite; alum, alum cake, patent alum, sulphate of alumina, and aluminous cake, and all other manufactured compounds of alumina, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

8. Ammonia, carbonate of, and muriate of, ¾ of 1 cent per pound; phosphate of, 1 cent per pound; liquid anhydrous, 2½ cents per pound; ammoniacal gas liquor, 10 per cent ad valorem.

9. Argols or crude tartar or wine lees crude or partly refined, containing not more than 90 per cent of potassium bitartrate, 5 per cent ad valorem; containing more than 90 per cent of potassium bitartrate, cream of tartar, and Rochelle salts or tartrate of soda and potassa, 2½ cents per pound; calcium tartrate crude, 5 per cent ad valorem.

10. Balsams: Copaiba, fir or Canada, Peru, tolu, and all other balsams, which are natural and uncompounded and not suitable for the manufacture of perfumery and cosmetics, if in a crude state, not advanced in value or condition by any process or treatment whatever beyond that essential to the proper packing of the balsams and the prevention of decay or deterioration pending manufacture, all the foregoing not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem; if advanced in value or condition by any process or treatment whatever beyond that essential to the proper packing of the balsams and the prevention of decay or deterioration pending manufacture, all the foregoing not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That no article containing alcohol shall be classified for duty under this paragraph.

11. Barium, chloride of, ½ cent per pound; dioxide of, 1½ cents per pound; carbonate of, precipitated, 15 per cent ad valorem.

12. Blacking of all kinds, polishing powders, and all creams and preparations for cleaning or polishing, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That no preparations containing alcohol shall be classified for duty under this paragraph.

13. Bleaching powder, or chloride of lime, $\frac{1}{10}$ cent per pound.

14. Caffein, $1 per pound; impure tea, tea waste, tea siftings or sweepings, for manufacturing purposes in bond, pursuant to the provisions of the act of May 16, 1908, 1 cent per pound.

15. Calomel, corrosive sublimate, and other mercurial preparations, 15 per cent ad valorem.

16. Chalk, precipitated, suitable for medicinal or toilet purposes; chalk put up in the form of cubes, blocks, sticks, or disks, or otherwise, including tailors', billiard, red, and other manufactures of chalk not specially provided for in this section, 25 per cent ad valorem.

17. Chemical and medicinal compounds and preparations, including mixtures and salts, distilled oils, essential oils, expressed oils, rendered oils, greases, ethers, flavoring and other extracts and fruit essences, all the foregoing and their combinations when containing alcohol, and all articles consisting of vegetable or mineral objects immersed or placed in, or saturated with, alcohol, except perfumery and spirit varnishes, and all alcoholic compounds not specially provided for in this section, if containing 20 per cent of alcohol or less, 10 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem; containing more than 20 per cent and not more that 50 per cent of alcohol, 20 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem; containing more than 50 per cent of alcohol, 40 cents per pound and 20 per cent ad valorem.

18. Chemical and medicinal compounds and all similar articles dutiable under this section, except soap, whether specially provided for or not, put up in individual packages of 2½ pounds or less, gross weight (except samples without commercial value), shall be dutiable at a rate not less than 20 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That chemicals, drugs, medicinal, and similar substances, whether dutiable or free, imported in capsules, pills, tablets, lozenges, troches, ampoules, jubes, or similar forms, shall be dutiable at not less than 25 per cent ad valorem.

19. Salol, chloral hydrate, phenolphthalein, urea, terpin hydrate, acetphenetidin, antipyrine, salts and compounds of glycerophosphoric acid, acetylsalicylic acid, aspirin, guaicol carbonate, and thymol, 25 per cent ad valorem.

20. Chloroform, 2 cents per pound; carbon tetrachloride, 1 cent per pound.

21. Coal-tar dyes or colors, not specially provided for in this section, 30 per cent ad valorem.

22. All other products or preparations of coal tar, not colors or dyes, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

23. Coal-tar distillates, including dead and creosote oil not specially provided for in this section; anthracene and anthracene oil, benzol, naphtol, resorcin, toluol, xylol; all the foregoing not medicinal and not colors or dyes, 5 per cent ad valorem.

24. Coal-tar products known as anilin oil and salts, toluidine, xylidin, cumidin, binitrotoluol, binitrobenzol, benzidin, tolidin, dianisidin, naphtylamin, diphenylamin, benzaldehyde, benzyl chloride, nitro-benzol and nitrotoluol, naphtylaminsulfoacids and their sodium or potassium salts, naphtolsulfoacids and their sodium or potassium salts, amidonaphtolsulfoacids and their sodium or potassium salts, amidosalicylic acid, binitrochlorbenzol, diamidostilbendisulfoacid, metanilic acid, paranitranilin, dimethylanilin; all the foregoing not medicinal and not colors or dyes, 10 per cent ad valorem.

25. Cobalt, oxide of, 10 cents per pound.

26. Collodion and all other liquid solutions of pyroxylin, or of other cellulose esters, or of cellulose; compounds of pyroxylin or of other cellulose esters, whether known as celluloid or by any other name, if in blocks, sheets, rods, tubes, or other forms not polished, wholly or partly, and not made into finished or partly finished articles, 15 per cent ad valorem; if polished, wholly or partly, or if finished or partly finished articles, of which collodion or any compound of pyroxylin or other cellulose esters, by whatever name known, is the component material of chief value, 35 per cent ad valorem.

27. Coloring for brandy, wine, beer, or other liquors, 40 per cent ad valorem.

28. Drugs, such as barks, beans, berries, buds, bulbs, bulbous roots, excrescences, fruits, flowers, dried fibers, dried insects, grains, gums, herbs, leaves, lichens, mosses, roots, stems, vegetables, seeds (aromatic, not garden seeds), seeds of morbid growth, and weeds; any of the foregoing which are natural and uncompounded drugs and not edible, and not specially provided for in this section, but which are advanced in value or condition by shredding, grinding, chipping, crushing, or any other process or treatment whatever beyond that essential to the proper packing of the drugs and the prevention of decay or deterioration pending manufacture, 10 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That no article containing alcohol shall be classified for duty under this paragraph.

29. Ergot, 10 cents per pound.

30. Ethers: Sulphuric, 4 cents per pound; amyl nitrite, 20 per cent ad valorem; amyl acetate and ethyl acetate or acetic ether, 5 cents per pound; ethyl chloride, 20 per cent ad valorem; ethers and esters of all kinds not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That no article containing alcohol shall be classified for duty under this paragraph.

31. Extracts and decoctions of logwood and of other dyewoods, and all extracts of vegetable origin suitable for dyeing, coloring, or staining, not specially provided for in this section; all the foregoing not containing alcohol, and not medicinal, ⅛ of 1 cent per pound.

32. Extract of chlorophyll, 15 per cent ad valorem; saffron and safflower, and extract of, and saffron cake, 10 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That no article containing alcohol shall be classified for duty under this paragraph.

33. Formaldehyde solution containing not more than 40 per cent of formaldehyde, or formaline, 1 cent per pound.

34. Fusel oil, or amylic alcohol, ½ cent per pound.

35. Gelatin, glue, and glue size, valued not above 10 cents per pound, 1 cent per pound; valued above 10 cents per pound and not above 25 cents per pound, 15 per cent ad valorem; valued above 25 cents per pound, 25 per cent ad valorem; manufactures of gelatin or manufactures of which gelatin is the component material of chief value, 25 per cent ad valorem; isinglass and prepared fish sounds, 25 per cent ad valorem; agar-agar, 20 per cent ad valorem.

36. Glycerin, crude, not purified, 1 cent per pound; refined, 2 cents per pound.

37. Gums: Amber, and amberoid unmanufactured, or crude gum, $1 per pound; arabic, or senegal, ½ cent per pound; camphor, crude, natural, 1 cent per pound; camphor, refined and synthetic, 5 cents per pound; chicle, 20 cents per pound; dextrine, burnt starch or British gum, dextrine substitutes, and soluble or chemically treated starch, ⅛ of 1 cent per pound.

38. Ink and ink powders, 15 per cent ad valorem.

39. Iodoform and potassium iodide, 15 cents per pound.

40. Leaves and roots: Buchu leaves, 10 cents per pound; coca leaves, 10 cents per pound; gentian, ¼ cent per pound; licorice root, unground, ¼ cent per pound; sarsaparilla root, 1 cent per pound.

41. Licorice, extracts of, in pastes, rolls, or other forms, 1 cent per pound.

42. Lime, citrate of, 1 cent per pound.

43. Magnesia: Calcined, 3½ cents per pound; carbonate of, precipitated, 1½ cents per pound; sulphate of, or Epsom salts, $\frac{1}{10}$ cent per pound.

44. Menthol, 50 cents per pound.

45. Oils, rendered: Sod, seal, herring, and other fish oil, not specially provided for in this section, 3 cents per gallon; whale oil, 5 cents per gallon; sperm oil, 8 cents per gallon; wool grease, including that known commercially as degras or brown wool grease, crude and not refined or improved in value or condition, ¼ cent per pound; refined or improved in value or condition, and not specially provided for in this section, ½ cent per pound; lanolin, 1 cent per pound; all other animal oils, rendered oils and greases, and all combinations of the same, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

46. Oils, expressed: Alizarin assistant, sulphoricinoleic acid, and ricinoleic acid, and soaps containing castor oil, any of the foregoing in whatever form, and all other alizarin assistants and all soluble greases used in the processes of softening, dyeing, or finishing, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem; castor oil, 12 cents per gallon; flaxseed and linseed oil, raw, boiled, or oxidized, 12 cents per gallon of 7½ pounds; poppy-seed oil, raw, boiled, or oxidized, rapeseed oil, and peanut oil, 6 cents per gallon, hempseed oil, 3 cents per gallon; almond oil, sweet, 5 cents per pound; sesame or sesamum seed or bean oil, 1 cent per pound; olive oil, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem; olive oil, in bottles, jars, kegs, tins, or other packages having a capacity of less than 5 standard gallons each, 30 cents per gallon; all other expressed oils and all combinations of the same, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

47. Oils, distilled and essential: Orange and lemon, 10 per cent ad valorem; peppermint, 25 cents per pound; mace oil, 6 cents per pound; almond, bitter; amber; ambergris; anise or anise seed; bergamot; camomile; caraway; cassia; cinnamon; cedrat; citronella and lemongrass; civet; fennel; jasmine or jasimine; juniper; lavender, and aspic or spike lavender; limes; neroli or orange flower; origanum, red or white; rosemary or anthoss; attar of roses; thyme; and valerian; all the foregoing oils, and all fruit ethers, oils, and essences, and essential and distilled oils and all combinations of the same, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That no article containing alcohol shall be classified for duty under this paragraph.

48. Opium, crude or unmanufactured, and not adulterated, containing 9 per cent and over of morphia, $3 per pound; opium of the same composition, dried to contain 15 per cent or less of moisture, powdered, or otherwise advanced beyond the condition of crude or unmanufactured, $4 per pound; morphia or morphine, sulphate of, and all alkaloids of opium, and salts and esters thereof, $3 per ounce; cocaine, ecgonine, and all salts and derivatives of the same, $2 per ounce; aqueous extract of opium, for medicinal uses, and tincture of, as laudanum, and other liquid preparations of opium, not specially provided for in this section, 60 per cent ad valorem; opium containing less than 9 per cent of morphia, $6 per pound; but preparations of opium deposited in bonded warehouses shall not be removed therefrom without payment of duties, and such duties shall not be refunded: Provided, That nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to repeal or in any manner impair or affect the provisions of an act entitled "An act to prohibit the importation and use of opium for other than medicinal purposes," approved February 9, 1909.

49. Perfumery, including cologne and other toilet waters, articles of perfumery, whether in sachets or otherwise, and all preparations used as applications to the hair, mouth, teeth, or skin, such as cosmetics, dentifrices, including tooth soaps, pastes, including theatrical grease paints, and pastes, pomades, powders, and other toilet preparations, all the foregoing wholly or partly manufactured; if containing alcohol, 40 cents per pound and 60 per cent ad valorem; if not containing alcohol, 60 per cent al valorem; floral or flower waters containing no alcohol, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem.

50. Ambergris, enfleurage greases and floral essences by whatever method obtained; flavoring extracts, musk, grained or in pods, civet, and all natural or synthetic odoriferous or aromatic substances, preparations, and mixtures used in the manufacture of, but not marketable as, perfumes or cosmetics; all the foregoing not containing alcohol and not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem.

51. Plasters, healing or curative, of all kinds, and court-plaster, 15 per cent ad valorem.

52. Baryta, sulphate of, or barytes, including barytes earth, unmanufactured, 15 per cent ad valorem; manufactured, 20 per cent ad valorem; blanc-fixe, or artificial sulphate of barytes, and satin white, or artificial sulphate of lime, 20 per cent ad valorem.

53. Blues, such as Berlin, Prussian, Chinese, and all others, containing ferrocyanide of iron, in pulp, dry or ground in or mixed with oil or water, 20 per cent ad valorem; ultramarine blue, whether dry, in pulp, or ground in or mixed with oil or water, and wash blue containing ultramarine, 15 per cent ad valorem.

54. Black pigments, made from bone, ivory, or vegetable substance, by whatever name known; gas black and lampblack, dry or ground in or mixed with oil or water, 15 per cent ad valorem.

55. Chrome yellow, chrome green, and all other chromium colors in the manufacture of which lead and bichromate of potash or soda are used, in pulp, dry, or ground in or mixed with oil or water, 20 per cent ad valorem.

56. Ocher and ochery earths, sienna and sienna earths, and umber and umber earths, 5 per cent ad valorem; Spanish brown, venetian red, Indian red, and colcothar or oxide of iron, not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem.

57. Lead pigments: Litharge, orange mineral, red lead, white lead, and all pigments containing lead, dry or in pulp, and ground or mixed with oil or water, not specially provided for in this section, 25 per cent ad valorem.

58. Lead, acetate of, white, and nitrate of, 1½ cents per pound; acetate of, brown, gray, or yellow, 1 cent per pound; all other lead compounds not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem.

59. Varnishes, including so-called gold size or japan, 10 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That spirit varnishes containing less than 10 per cent of methyl alcohol of the total alcohol contained therein, shall be dutiable at $1.32 per gallon and 15 per cent ad valorem.

60. Vermilion reds, containing quicksilver, dry or ground in oil or water, 15 per cent ad valorem; when not containing quicksilver but made of lead or containing lead, 25 per cent ad valorem.

61. Whiting and Paris white, dry, and chalk, ground or bolted, ¼ cent per pound; whiting and Paris white, ground in oil, or putty, 15 per cent ad valorem.

62. Zinc, oxide of, and white sulphid of, lithopone, and pigments containing zinc, but not containing more than 3 per cent of lead, ground dry, 10 per cent ad valorem; when ground in or mixed with oil or water, 15 per cent ad valorem.

63. Zinc, chloride of and sulphate of, ½ cent per pound.

64. Enamel paints, and all paints, colors, pigments, stains, crayons, including charcoal crayons or fusians, smalts, and frostings, and all ceramic and glass fluxes, glazes, enamels, and colors, whether crude, dry, mixed, or ground with water or oil or with solutions other than oil, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem; all paints, colors, and pigments commonly known as artists' paints or colors, whether in tubes, pans, cakes, or other forms, 20 per cent ad valorem; all color lakes, whether dry or in pulp, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem.

65. Potash: Bicarbonate of, refined, ½ cent per pound; chlorate of, chromate and bichromate of, 1 cent per pound; cyanide of, 1½ cents per pound; nitrate of, or saltpeter, refined, $7 per ton; permanganate of, 1 cent per pound; prussiate of, red, 2 cents per pound; yellow, 1½ cents per pound.

66. Salts and all other compounds and mixtures of which bismuth, gold, platinum, rhodium, silver, and tin constitute the element of chief value, 10 per cent ad valorem.

67. Soaps: Perfumed toilet soaps, 40 per cent ad valorem; medicinal soaps, 30 per cent ad valorem; castile soap, and unperfumed toilet soap, 10 per cent ad valorem; all other soaps not specially provided for in this section, 5 per cent ad valorem.

68. Soda: Benzoate of, 5 cents per pound; chlorate of, and nitrite of, ½ cent per pound; bicarbonate of, or supercarbonate of, or saleratus, and other alkalies containing 50 per cent or more of bicarbonate of soda; hydrate of, or caustic; phosphate of; hyposulphite of; sulphid of, and sulphite of, ½ cent per pound; cyanide of, 1½ cents per pound; chromate and bichromate of, and yellow prussiate of, ¾ cent per pound; borate of, or borax refined; crystal carbonate of, monohydrate, and sesquicarbonate of; sal soda, and soda crystals, ¼ cent per pound; and sulphate of soda crystallized, or Glauber salts, $1 per ton.

69. Sponges: Trimmed or untrimmed but not advanced in value by chemical processes, 10 per cent ad valorem; bleached sponges and sponges advanced in value by processes involving chemical operations, manufactures of sponges, or of which sponge is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

70. Talcum, ground talc, steatite, and French chalk, cut, powdered, washed, or pulverized, 15 per cent ad valorem.

71. Vanillin, 10 cents per ounce; vanilla beans, 30 cents per pound; tonka beans, 25 cents per pound.

SCHEDULE B—EARTHS, EARTHENWARE, AND GLASSWARE.

72. Fire brick, magnesite brick, chrome brick, and brick not specially provided for in this section, not glazed, enameled, painted, vitrified, ornamented, or decorated in any manner, 10 per cent ad valorem; if glazed, enameled, painted, vitrified, ornamented, or decorated in any manner, and bath brick, 15 per cent ad valorem.

73. Tiles, plain unglazed, one color, exceeding 2 square inches in size, 1½ cents per square foot; glazed, ornamented, hand-painted, enameled, vitrified, semivitrified, decorated, encaustic, ceramic mosaic, flint, spar, embossed, gold decorated, grooved and corrugated, and all other earthenware tiles and tiling, except pill tiles and so-called quarries or quarry tiles, but including tiles wholly or in part of cement, 5 cents per square foot; so-called quarries or quarry tiles, 20 per cent ad valorem; mantels, friezes, and articles of every description or parts thereof, composed wholly or in chief value of earthenware tiles or tiling, except pill tiles, 30 per cent ad valorem.

74. Roman, Portland, and other hydraulic cement, 5 per cent ad valorem.

75. Lime, 5 per cent ad valorem.

76. Plaster rock or gypsum, crude, ground or calcined, pearl hardening for paper makers' use, Keene's cement, or other cement of which gypsum is the component material of chief value, and all other building cements not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem.

77. Pumice stone, unmanufactured, 5 per cent ad valorem; wholly or partially manufactured, ¼ cent per pound; manufactures of pumice stone, or of which pumice stone is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 25 per cent ad valorem.

78. Clays or earths, unwrought or unmanufactured, not specially provided for in this section, 50 cents per ton; wrought or manufactured, not specially provided for in this section, $1 per ton; china clay or kaolin, $1.25 per ton; fuller's earth, unwrought and unmanufactured, 75 cents per ton; wrought or manufactured, $1.50 per ton; fluorspar, $1.50 per ton; limestone-rock asphalt, 25 cents per ton; asphaltum, and bitumen, 50 cents per ton: Provided, That the weight of the casks or other containers shall be included in the dutiable weight.

79. Mica and manufactures of mica, or of which mica is the component material of chief value, 30 per cent ad valorem; ground mica, 15 per cent ad valorem.

80. Common yellow, brown, or gray earthenware made of natural unwashed and unmixed clay; plain or embossed, common salt-glazed stoneware; stoneware and earthenware crucibles; all the foregoing, not ornamented, incised, or decorated in any manner, 15 per cent ad valorem; if ornamented, incised, or decorated in any manner and manufactures wholly or in chief value of such ware, 20 per cent ad valorem; Rockingham earthenware, 30 per cent ad valorem.

81. Earthenware and crockery ware composed of a nonvitrified absorbent body, including white granite and semiporcelain earthenware, and cream-colored ware, and stoneware, including clock cases with or without movements, pill tiles, plaques, ornaments, toys, charms, vases, statues, statuettes, mugs, cups, steins, lamps, and all other articles composed wholly or in chief value of such ware; if plain white, plain yellow, plain brown, plain red, or plain black, not painted, colored, tinted, stained, enameled, gilded, printed, ornamented or decorated in any manner, and manufactures in chief value of such ware not specially provided for in this section, 35 per cent ad valorem; if painted, colored, tinted, stained, enameled, gilded, printed, or ornamented or decorated in any manner, and manufactures in chief value of such ware not specially provided for in this section, 40 per cent ad valorem.

82. China and porcelain wares composed of a vitrified nonabsorbent body having a vitrified or semivitrified fracture, and all bisque and parian wares, including clock cases with or without movements, plaques, ornaments, toys, charms, vases, statues, statuettes, mugs, cups, steins, lamps, and all other articles composed wholly or in chief value of such ware, if plain white or plain brown, not painted, colored, tinted, stained, enameled, gilded, printed, or ornamented or decorated in any manner; and manufactures in chief value of such ware not specially provided for in this section, 50 per cent ad valorem; if painted, colored, tinted, stained, enameled, gilded, printed, or ornamented or decorated in any manner and manufactures in chief value of such ware not specially provided for in this section, 55 per cent ad valorem.

83. Earthy or mineral substances wholly or partially manufactured and articles and wares composed wholly or in chief value of earthy or mineral substances, not specially provided for in this section, whether susceptible of decoration or not, if not decorated in any manner, 20 per cent ad valorem; if decorated, 25 per cent ad valorem; unmanufactured carbon, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem; electrodes for electric furnaces, electrolytic and battery purposes, brushes, plates, and disks, all the foregoing composed wholly or in chief value of carbon, 25 per cent ad valorem.

84. Gas retorts, 10 per cent ad valorem; lava tips for burners, 15 per cent ad valorem; carbons for electric lighting, wholly or partly finished, made entirely from petroleum coke, 15 cents per hundred feet; if composed chiefly of lampblack or retort carbon, 40 cents per hundred feet; filter tubes, 30 per cent ad valorem; porous carbon pots for electric batteries, 15 per cent ad valorem.

85. Plain green or colored, molded or pressed, and flint, lime, or lead glass bottles, vials, jars, and covered and uncovered demijohns, and carboys, any of the foregoing, filled or unfilled, not otherwise specially provided for in this section, and whether their contents be dutiable or free (except such as contain merchandise subject to an ad valorem rate of duty, or to a rate of duty based in whole or in part upon the value thereof which shall be dutiable at the rate applicable to their contents), 30 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That the terms bottles, vials, jars, demijohns, and carboys, as used herein, shall be restricted to such articles when suitable for use as and of the character ordinarily employed as containers for the holding or transportation of merchandise, and not as appliances or implements in chemical or other operations.

86. Glass bottles, decanters, and all articles of every description composed wholly or in chief value of glass, ornamented or decorated in any manner, or cut, engraved, painted, decorated, ornamented, colored, stained, silvered, gilded, etched, sand blasted, frosted, or printed in any manner, or ground (except such grinding as is necessary for fitting stoppers or for purposes other than ornamentation), and all articles of every description, including bottles and bottle glassware, composed wholly or in chief value of glass blown either in a mold or otherwise; all of the foregoing, not specially provided for in this section, filled or unfilled, and whether their contents be dutiable or free, 45 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That for the purposes of this act, bottles with cut-glass stoppers shall, with the stoppers, be deemed entireties.

87. Unpolished, cylinder, crown, and common window glass, not exceeding 150 square inches, ⅛ of 1 cent per pound; above that, and not exceeding 384 square inches, 1 cent per pound; above that, and not exceeding 720 square inches, 1½ cents per pound; above that, and not exceeding 1,200 square inches, 1¾ cents per pound; above that, and not exceeding 2,400 square inches, 1¾ cents per pound; above that, 2 cents per pound: Provided, That unpolished, cylinder, crown, and common window glass, imported in boxes, shall contain 50 square feet, as nearly as sizes will permit, and the duty shall be computed thereon according to the actual weight of glass.

88. Cylinder and crown glass, polished, not exceeding 384 square inches, 3 cents per square foot; above that, and not exceeding 720 square inches, 4 cents per square foot; above that, and not exceeding 1,440 square inches, 7 cents per square foot; above that, 10 cents per square foot.

89. Fluted, rolled, ribbed, or rough plate glass, or the same containing a wire netting within itself, not including crown, cylinder, or common window glass, not exceeding 384 square inches, ¼ cent per square foot; all above that, 1 cent per square foot; and all fluted, rolled, ribbed, or rough plate glass, weighing over 100 pounds per 100 square feet, shall pay an additional duty on the excess at the same rates herein imposed: Provided, That all of the above plate glass, when ground, smoothed, or otherwise obscured, shall be subject to the same rate of duty as cast polished plate glass unsilvered.

90. Cast polished plate glass, finished or unfinished and unsilvered, or the same containing a wire netting within itself, not exceeding 384 square inches, 6 cents per square foot; above that, and not exceeding 720 square inches, 8 cents per square foot; all above that, 12 cents per square foot.

91. Cast polished plate glass, silvered, cylinder and crown glass, silvered, and looking-glass plates exceeding in size 144 square inches, shall be subject to a duty of 1 cent per square foot in addition to the rates otherwise chargeable on such glass unsilvered: Provided, That no looking-glass plates or glass silvered, when framed, shall pay a less rate of duty than that imposed upon similar glass of like description not framed, but shall pay in addition thereto upon such frames the rate of duty applicable thereto when imported separate.

92. Cast polished plate glass, silvered or unsilvered, and cylinder, crown, or common window glass, silvered or unsilvered, polished or unpolished, when bent, ground, obscured, frosted, sanded, enameled, beveled, etched, embossed, engraved, flashed, stained, colored, painted, ornamented, or decorated, shall be subject to a duty of 4 per cent ad valorem in addition to the rates otherwise chargeable thereon.

93. Spectacles, eyeglasses, and goggles, and frames for the same, or parts thereof, finished or unfinished, 35 per cent ad valorem.

94. Lenses of glass or pebble, molded or pressed, or ground and polished to a spherical, cylindrical, or prismatic form, and ground and polished plano or coquill glasses, wholly or partly manufactured, 30 per cent ad valorem.

Strips of glass, not more than 3 inches wide, ground or polished on one or both sides to a cylindrical or prismatic form, including those used in the construction of gauges, and glass slides for magic lanterns, 20 per cent ad valorem.

96. Opera and field glasses, telescopes, microscopes, photographic and projection lenses and optical and surveying instruments and frames or mountings for the same; all the foregoing not specially provided for in this section, 30 per cent ad valorem.

97. Stained or painted glass windows, or parts thereof, and all mirrors, not exceeding in size 144 square inches, with or without frames or cases; incandescent electric-light bulbs and lamps, with or without filaments; and all glass or manufactures of glass or paste or of which glass or paste is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 30 per cent ad valorem.

98. Fusible enamel, 20 per cent ad valorem; opal or cylinder glass tiles or tiling, 30 per cent ad valorem.

99. Marble, breccia, and onyx, in block, rough or squared only, 50 cents per cubic foot; marble, breccia, and onyx, sawed or dressed, over 2 inches in thickness, 75 cents per cubic foot; slabs or paving tiles of marble or onyx, containing not less than four superficial inches, if not more than 1 inch in thickness, 6 cents per superficial foot; if more than 1 inch and not more than 1½ inches in thickness, 8 cents per superficial foot; if more than 1½ inches and not more than 2 inches in thickness, 10 cents per superficial foot; if rubbed in whole or in part, 2 cents per superficial foot in addition; mosaic cubes of marble or onyx, not exceeding 2 cubic inches in size, if loose, 20 per cent ad valorem; if attached to paper or other material, 35 per cent ad valorem.

100. Marble, breccia, onyx, alabaster, and jet, wholly or partly manufactured into monuments, benches, vases, and other articles, or of which these substances or either of them is the component material of chief value, and all articles composed wholly or in chief value of agate, rock crystal, or other semiprecious stones, except such as are cut into shapes and forms fitting them expressly for use in the construction of jewelry, not specially provided for in this section, 45 per cent ad valorem.

101. Freestone, granite, sandstone, limestone, lava, and all other stone suitable for use as monumental or building stone, except marble, breccia, and onyx, not specially provided for in this section, hewn, dressed, or polished, or otherwise manufactured, 25 per cent ad valorem; unmanufactured, or not dressed, hewn, or polished, 3 cents per cubic foot.

102. Grindstones, finished or unfinished, $1.50 per ton.

103. Slates, slate chimney pieces, mantels, slabs for tables, roofing slates, and all other manufactures of slate, not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem.

SCHEDULE C—METALS AND MANUFACTURES OF.

104. Iron in pigs, iron kentledge, spiegeleisen, wrought and cast scrap iron and scrap steel, 8 per cent ad valorem; but nothing shall be deemed scrap iron or scrap steel except second-hand or waste or refuse iron or steel fit only to be remanufactured; ferromanganese, chrome or chromium metal, ferrochrome or ferrochromium, ferromolybdenum, ferrophosphorus, ferrotitanium, ferrotungsten, ferrovanadium, molybdenum, titanium, tantalum, tungsten or wolfram metal, and ferrosilicon, and other alloys used in the manufacture of steel, 15 per cent ad valorem.

105. All iron in slabs, blooms, loops, or other forms less finished than iron in bars, and more advanced than pig iron, except castings; muck bars, bar iron, square iron, rolled or hammered, round iron, in coils or rods, bars or shapes of rolled or hammered iron not specially provided for in this section, 8 per cent ad valorem.

106. Beams, girders, joists, angles, channels, car-truck channels, TT, columns and posts or parts or sections of columns and posts, deck and bulb beams, sashes, frames, and building forms, together with all other structural shapes of iron or steel, whether plain, punched, or fitted for use, or whether assembled or manufactured, 12 per cent ad valorem.

107. Boiler or other plate iron or steel, and strips of iron or steel, not specially provided for in this section; sheets of iron or steel, common or black, of whatever dimensions, whether plain, corrugated or crimped, including crucible plate steel and saw plates, cut or sheared to shape or otherwise, or unsheared, and skelp iron or steel, whether sheared or rolled in grooves, or otherwise, 15 per cent ad valorem.

108. Iron or steel anchors or parts thereof; forgings of iron or steel, or of combined iron and steel, but not machined, tooled, or otherwise advanced in condition by any process or operation subsequent to the forging process, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem; antifriction balls, ball bearings, and roller bearings, of iron or steel or other metal, finished or unfinished, and parts thereof, 35 per cent ad valorem.

109. Hoop, band, or scroll iron or steel not otherwise provided for in this section, 12 per cent ad valorem.

110. Railway fishplates or splice bars made of iron or steel, 10 per cent ad valorem.

111. All iron or steel sheets, plates, or strips, and all hoop, band, or scroll iron or steel, when galvanized or coated with zinc, spelter, or other metals, or any alloy of those metals; sheets or plates composed of iron, steel, copper, nickel, or other metal with layers of other metal or metals imposed thereon by forging, hammering, rolling, or welding; sheets of iron or steel, polished, planished, or glanced, by whatever name designated, including such as have been pickled or cleaned by acid, or by any other material or process, or which are cold rolled, smoothed only, not polished, and such as are cold hammered, blued, brightened, tempered, or polished by any process to such perfected surface finish or polish better than the grade of cold rolled, smoothed only; and sheets or plates of iron or steel, or taggers iron or steel, coated with tin or lead, or with a mixture of which these metals, or either of them is a component part, by the dipping or any other process, and commercially known as tin plates, terne plates, and taggers tin, 20 per cent ad valorem; tin plates coated with metal, and metal sheets decorated in colors or coated with nickel or other metals by dipping, printing, stenciling, or other process, 20 per cent ad valorem.

112. Steel ingots, cogged ingots, blooms and slabs, die blocks or blanks, billets and bars, and tapered or beveled bars; mill shafting; pressed, sheared, or stamped shapes, not advanced in value or condition by any process or operation subsequent to the process of stamping; hammer molds or swaged steel; gun-barrel molds not in bars; all descriptions and shapes of dry sand, loam, or iron molded steel castings, sheets, and plates; all the foregoing, if made by the Bessemer, Siemens-Martin, open-hearth, or similar processes, not containing alloys, such as nickel, cobalt, vanadium, chromium, tungsten or wolfram, molybdenum, titanium, iridium, uranium, tantalum, boron, and similar alloys, 10 per cent ad valorem; steel ingots, cogged ingots, blooms and slabs, die blocks or blanks; billets and bars and tapered or beveled bars; pressed, sheared, or stamped shapes not advanced in value or condition by any process or operation subsequent to the process of stamping; hammer molds or swaged steel; gun-barrel molds not in bars; alloys used as substitutes for steel in the manufacture of tools; all descriptions and shapes of dry sand, loam, or iron molded castings, sheets, and plates; rolled wire rods in coils or bars not smaller than No. 6 wire gauge, and steel not specially provided for in this section, all the foregoing when made by the crucible, electric, or cementation process, either with or without alloys, and finished by rolling, hammering, or otherwise, and all steels by whatever process made, containing alloys such as nickel, cobalt, vanadium, chromium, tungsten, wolfram, molybdenum, titanium, iridium, uranium, tantalum, boron, and similar alloys, 15 per cent ad valorem.

113. Steel wool or steel shavings, 20 per cent ad valorem.

114. Grit, shot, and sand made of iron or steel, that can be used as abrasives, 30 per cent ad valorem.

115. Rivet, screw, fence, nail, and other iron or steel wire rods, whether round, oval, or square, or in any other shape, and flat rods up to 6 inches in width ready to be drawn or rolled into wire or strips, all the foregoing in coils or otherwise, including wire rods and iron or steel bars, cold rolled, cold drawn, cold hammered, or polished in any way in addition to the ordinary process of hot rolling or hammering, 10 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That all round iron or steel rods smaller than No. 6 wire gauge shall be classed and dutiable as wire.

116. Round iron or steel wire; wire composed of iron, steel, or other metal, except gold or silver, covered with cotton, silk, or other material; corset clasps, corset steels, dress steels, and all flat wires and steel in strips not thicker than No. 15 wire gauge and not exceeding 5 inches in width, whether in long or short lengths, in coils or otherwise, and whether rolled or drawn through dies or rolls, or otherwise produced; telegraph, telephone, and other wires and cables composed of metal and rubber, or of metal, rubber, and other materials; iron and steel wire coated by dipping, galvanizing, or similar process with zinc, tin, or other metal; all other wire not specially provided for in this section and articles manufactured wholly or in chief value of any wire or wires provided for in this section; all the foregoing 20 per cent ad valorem; wire heddles and healds, 25 per cent ad valorem; wire rope, 30 per cent ad valorem.

117. No article not specially provided for in this section, which is wholly or partly manufactured from tin plate, terne plate, or the sheet, plate, hoop, band, or scroll iron or steel herein provided for, or which such tin plate, terne plate, sheet, plate, hoop, band, or scroll iron or steel shall be the material of chief value, shall pay a lower rate of duty than that imposed on the tin plate, terne plate, or sheet, plate, hoop, band, or scroll iron or steel from which it is made, or of which it shall be the component thereof of chief value.

118. No allowance or reduction of duties for partial loss or damage in consequence of rust or of discoloration shall be made upon any description of iron or steel, or upon any article wholly or partly manufactured of iron or steel, or upon any manufacture of iron or steel.

119. All metal produced from iron or its ores, which is cast and malleable, of whatever description or form, without regard to the percentage of carbon contained therein, whether produced by cementation, or converted, cast, or made from iron or its ores, by the crucible, Bessemer, Clapp-Griffith, pneumatic, Thomas-Gilchrist, basic, Siemens-Martin, or open-hearth process, or by the equivalent of either, or by a combination of two or more of the processes, or their equivalents, or by any fusion or other process which produces from iron or its ores a metal either granular or fibrous in structure, which is cast and malleable, excepting what is known as malleable-iron castings, shall be classed and denominated as steel.

120. Anvils of iron or steel, or of iron and steel combined, by whatever process made, or in whatever stage of manufacture, 15 per cent ad valorem.

121. Finished automobiles and automobile bodies, 45 per cent ad valorem; automobile chassis, 30 per cent ad valorem; finished parts of automobiles, not including tires, 20 per cent ad valorem.

122. Bicycles, 25 per cent ad valorem; motor cycles, and finished parts thereof, not including tires, 40 per cent ad valorem.

123. Axles, or parts thereof, axle bars, axle blanks, or forgings for axles, whether of iron or steel, without reference to the stage or state of manufacture, not otherwise provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That when iron or steel axles are imported fitted in wheels, or parts of wheels, of iron or steel, they shall be dutiable at the same rate as the wheels in which they are fitted.

124. Blacksmiths' hammers, tongs, and sledges, track tools, wedges, and crowbars, whether of iron or steel, 10 per cent ad valorem.

125. Bolts of iron or steel, with or without threads or nuts, or bolt blanks, finished hinges or hinge blanks, nuts or nut blanks, and washers, 15 per cent ad valorem; spiral nut locks and lock washers, whether of iron or steel, 35 per cent ad valorem.

126. Card clothing not actually and permanently fitted to and attached to carding machines or to parts thereof at the time of importation, 40 per cent ad valorem.

127. Cast-iron pipe of every description, 12 per cent ad valorem; cast-iron andirons, plates, stove plates, sadirons, tailor's irons, hatter's irons, and castings and vessels wholly of cast iron, including all castings of iron or cast-iron plates which have been chiseled, drilled, machined, or otherwise advanced in condition by processes or operations subsequent to the casting process but not made up into articles or finished machine parts; castings of malleable iron not specially provided for in this section; cast hollow ware, coated, glazed, or tinned, 10 per cent ad valorem.

128. Chain or chains of all kinds, made of iron or steel, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem.

129. Lap-welded, butt-welded, seamed, or jointed iron or steel tubes, pipes, flues, or stays; cylindrical or tubular tanks or vessels, for holding gas, liquids, or other material, whether full or empty; flexible metal tubing or hose, not specially provided for in this section, whether covered with wire or other material, or otherwise, including any appliances or attachments affixed thereto; welded cylindrical furnaces, tubes or flues made from plate metal, and corrugated, ribbed, or otherwise reenforced against collapsing pressure, and all other iron or steel tubes, finished, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem.

130. Penknives, pocketknives, clasp knives, pruning knives, budding knives, erasers, manicure knives, and all knives by whatever name known, including such as are denominatively mentioned in this section, which have folding or other than fixed blades or attachments, and razors, all the foregoing, whether assembled but not fully finished or finished; valued at not more than $1 per dozen, 35 per cent ad valorem; valued at more than $1 per dozen, 55 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That blades, handles, or other parts of any of the foregoing knives, razors, or erasers shall be dutiable at not less than the rate herein imposed upon the knives, razors, and erasers, of which they are parts. Scissors and shears, and blades for the same, finished or unfinished, 30 per cent ad valorem: Provided further, That all articles specified in this paragraph shall, when imported, have the name of the maker or purchaser and beneath the same the name of the country of origin die-sunk conspicuously and indelibly on the blade, shank, or tang of at least one or, if practicable, each and every blade thereof.

131. Sword blades, and swords and side arms, irrespective of quality or use, in part of metal, 30 per cent ad valorem.

132. Table, butchers', carving, cooks', hunting, kitchen, bread, butter, vegetable, fruit, cheese, carpenters' bench, curriers', drawing, farriers', fleshing, hay, tanners', plumbers', painters', palette, artists', and shoe knives, forks and steels, finished or unfinished, without handles, 25 per cent ad valorem; with handles, 30 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That all the articles specified in this paragraph, when imported, shall have the name of the maker or purchaser, and beneath the same the name of the country of origin indelibly stamped or branded thereon in a place that shall not be covered thereafter.

133. Files, file blanks, rasps, and floats, of all cuts and kinds, 25 per cent ad valorem.

134. Muskets, air-rifles, muzzle-loading shotguns and rifles, and parts thereof, 15 per cent ad valorem.

135. Breech-loading shotguns and rifles, combination shotguns and rifles, and parts thereof and fittings therefor, including barrels further advanced than rough bored only; pistols, whether automatic, magazine, or revolving, or parts thereof and fittings therefor, 35 per cent ad valorem.

136. Table, kitchen, and hospital utensils, or other similar hollow ware composed wholly or in chief value of aluminum or of iron or steel, enameled or glazed with vitreous glasses, but not ornamented or decorated with lithographic or other printing, 25 per cent ad valorem.

137. Needles for knitting or sewing machines, latch needles, crochet needles, and tape needles, knitting and all other needles not specially provided for in this section, bodkins of metal, and needle cases or needle books furnished with assortments of needles or combinations of needles and other articles, 25 per cent ad valorem; but no articles other than the needles which are specifically named in this section shall be dutiable as needles unless having an eye and fitted and used for carrying a thread.

138. Fishhooks, fishing rods and reels, artificial flies, artificial baits, snelled hooks, and all other fishing tackle or parts thereof, not specially provided for in this section, except fishing lines, fishing nets and seines, 30 per cent ad valorem.

139. Steel plates engraved, stereotype plates, electrotype plates, and plates of other materials, engraved for printing, plates of iron or steel engraved or fashioned for use in the production of designs, patterns, or impressions on glass in the process of manufacturing plate or other glass, 15 per cent ad valorem; lithographic plates of stone or other material engraved, drawn, or prepared, and wet transfer paper or paper prepared wholly with glycerin, or glycerin combined with other materials, containing the imprints taken from lithographic plates, 25 per cent ad valorem.

140. Rivets, studs, and steel points, lathed, machined, or brightened, and rivets or studs for nonskidding automobile tires, and rivets of iron or steel, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem.

141. Crosscut saws, mill saws, pit and drag saws, circular saws, steel band saws, finished or further advanced than tempered and polished, hand, back, and all other saws, not specially provided for in this section, 12 per cent ad valorem.

142. Screws, commonly called wood screws, made of iron or steel, 25 per cent ad valorem.

143. Umbrella and parasol ribs and stretchers, composed in chief value of iron, steel, or other metal, in frames or otherwise, and tubes for umbrellas, wholly or partially finished, 35 per cent ad valorem.

144. Wheels for railway purposes, or parts thereof, made of iron or steel, and steel-tired wheels for railway purposes, whether wholly or partly finished, and iron or steel locomotive, car, or other railway tires or parts thereof, wholly or partly manufactured, 25 per cent ad valorem; ingots, cogged ingots, blooms, or blanks for the same, without regard to the degree of manufacture, 10 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That when wheels for railway purposes, or parts thereof, of iron or steel, are imported with iron or steel axles fitted in them, the wheels and axles together shall be dutiable at the same rate as is provided for the wheels when imported separately.

145. Aluminum, aluminum scrap, and alloys of any kind in which aluminum is the component material of chief value, in crude form, aluminum in plates, sheets, bars, strips, and rods; barium, calcium, magnesium, sodium, and potassium, and alloys of which said metals are the component material of chief value, 25 per cent ad valorem.

146. Antimony, as regulus or metal, antimony ore, stibnite and matte containing antimony but not containing more than 10 per cent of lead, 10 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That on all importations of antimony-bearing ores and matte containing antimony the duties shall be estimated at the port of entry, and a bond given in double the amount of such estimated duties for the transportation of the ores by common carriers bonded for the transportation of appraised or unappraised merchandise to properly equipped sampling or smelting establishments, whether designated as bonded warehouses or otherwise. On the arrival of the ores at such establishments, they shall be sampled according to commercial methods under the supervision of Government officers, who shall be stationed at such establishments, and who shall submit the samples thus obtained to a Government assayer, designated by the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall make a proper assay of the sample and report the result to the proper customs officers, and the import entry shall be liquidated thereon, except in case of ores that shall be removed to a bonded warehouse to be refined for exportation as provided by law, and the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to make all necessary regulations to enforce the provisions of this paragraph; antimony, oxide salts, and compounds of, 25 per cent ad valorem.

147. Argentine, albata, or German silver, unmanufactured, 15 per cent ad valorem.

148. Bronze powder, brocades, flitters, and metallics; bronze, or Dutch-metal or aluminum, in leaf, 25 per cent ad valorem.

149. Copper, in rolled plates, called braziers' copper, sheets, rods, pipes, and copper bottoms, sheathing or yellow metal of which copper is the component material of chief value, and not composed wholly or in part of iron ungalvanized, 5 per cent ad valorem.

150. Gold leaf, 35 per cent ad valorem.

151. Silver leaf, 30 per cent ad valorem.

152. Tinsel wire, lame or lahn, made wholly or in chief value of gold, silver, or other metal, 10 per cent ad valorem; bullions and metal threads, made wholly or in chief value of tinsel wire, lame or lahn, 30 per cent ad valorem; fabrics, ribbons, beltings, toys, or other articles, made wholly or in chief value of tinsel wire, lame or lahn, or of tinsel wire, lame or lahn, and india rubber, bullions, or metal threads, not specially provided for in this section, 40 per cent ad valorem.

153. Hooks and eyes, metallic, snap fasteners and clasps by whatever name known, trousers buckles and waistcoat buckles made wholly or partly of iron or steel, steel trousers buttons and metal buttons not specially provided for in this section, all the foregoing and parts thereof, 15 per cent ad valorem.

154. Lead-bearing ores of all kinds containing more than 3 per cent of lead, ½ cent per pound on the lead contained therein: Provided, That on all importations of lead-bearing ores the duties shall be estimated at the port of entry, and a bond given in double the amount of such estimated duties for the transportation of the ores by common carriers bonded for the transportation of appraised or unappraised merchandise to properly equipped sampling or smelting establishments, whether designated as bonded warehouses or otherwise. On the arrival of the ores at such establishments they shall be sampled according to commercial methods under the supervision of Government officers, who shall be stationed at such establishments, and who shall submit the samples thus obtained to a Government assayer, designated by the Secretary of the Treasury, who shall make a proper assay of the sample and report the result to the proper customs officers, and the import entries shall be liquidated thereon, except in case of ores that shall be removed to a bonded warehouse to be refined for exportation as provided by law. And the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to make all necessary regulations to enforce the provisions of this paragraph.

155. Lead dross, lead bullion or base bullion, lead in pigs and bars, lead in any form not specially provided for in this section, old refuse lead run into blocks and bars, and old scrap lead fit only to be remanufactured; lead in sheets, pipe, shot, glaziers' lead, and lead wire; all the foregoing, 25 per cent ad valorem.

156. Metallic mineral substances in a crude state, and metals unwrought, whether capable of being wrought or not, not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem; monazite sand and thorite; thorium, oxide of and salts of; gas, kerosene, or alcohol mantles treated with chemicals or metallic oxides, 25 per cent ad valorem; and gas-mantle scrap consisting in chief value of metallic oxides, 10 per cent ad valorem.

157. Nickel, nickel oxide, alloy of any kind in which nickel is a component material of chief value, in pigs, ingots, bars, rods, or plates, 10 per cent ad valorem; sheets or strips, 20 per cent ad valorem.

158. Pens, metallic, 8 cents per gross; with nib and barrel in one piece, 12 cents per gross.

159. Penholder tips, penholders and parts thereof, gold pens, fountain pens, and stylographic pens; combination penholders, comprising penholder, pencil, rubber eraser, automatic stamp, or other attachment, 25 per cent ad valorem.

160. Pins with solid heads, without ornamentation, including hair, safety, hat, bonnet, and shawl pins; any of the foregoing composed wholly of brass, copper, iron, steel, or other base metal, not plated with gold or silver, and not commonly known as jewelry, 20 per cent ad valorem.

161. Quicksilver, 10 per cent ad valorem. The flasks, bottles, or other vessels in which quicksilver is imported shall be subject to the same rate of duty as they would be subjected to if imported empty.

162. Type metal, and types, 15 per cent ad valorem.

163. Watch movements, including time-detectors, whether imported in cases or not, watchcases and parts of watches, chronometers, box or ship, and parts thereof, lever clock movements having jewels in the escapement, and clocks containing such movements, all other clocks and parts thereof, not otherwise provided for in this section, whether separately packed or otherwise, not composed wholly or in chief value of china, porcelain, parian, bisque, or earthenware, 30 per cent ad valorem; all jewels for use in the manufacture of watches or clocks, 10 per cent ad valorem; enameled dials and dial plates for watches or other instruments, 30 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That all watch and clock dials, whether attached to movements or not, shall have indelibly painted or printed thereon the name of the country of origin, and that all watch movements, and plates, lever clock movements with jewels in the escapement, whether imported assembled or knocked down for reassembling, and cases of foreign manufacture, shall have the name of the manufacturer and country of manufacture cut, engraved, or die-sunk conspicuously and indelibly on the plate of the movement and the inside of the case, respectively, and the movements and plates shall also have marked thereon by one of the methods indicated the number of jewels and adjustments, said numbers to be expressed either in words or in Arabic numerals; and if the movement is not adjusted, the word "unadjusted" shall be marked thereon by one of the methods indicated; and none of the aforesaid articles shall be delivered to the importer unless marked in exact conformity to this direction.

164. Zinc-bearing ores of all kinds, including calamine, 10 per cent ad valorem.

165. Zinc in blocks, pigs, or sheets, and zinc dust; and old and worn-out zinc fit only to be remanufactured, 10 per cent ad valorem.

166. Bottle caps, collapsible tubes, and sprinkler tops, if not decorated, colored, waxed, lacquered, enameled, lithographed, electroplated, or embossed in color, 30 per cent ad valorem; if decorated, colored, waxed, lacquered, enameled, lithographed, electroplated, or embossed in color, 40 per cent ad valorem.

167. All steam engines, steam locomotives, printing presses, and machine tools, 15 per cent ad valorem; embroidering machines, and lace-making machines, including machines for making lace curtains, nets, or nettings, 25 per cent ad valorem; machine tools as used in this paragraph shall be held to mean any machine operated by other than hand power which employs a tool for working on metal.

168. Nippers and pliers of all kinds wholly or partly manufactured, 30 per cent ad valorem.

169. Articles or wares not specially provided for in this section; if composed wholly or in part of platinum, gold, or silver, and articles or wares plated with gold or silver, and whether partly or wholly manufactured, 50 per cent ad valorem; if composed wholly or in chief value of iron, steel, lead, copper, nickel, pewter, zinc, aluminum, or other metal, but not plated with gold or silver, and whether partly or wholly manufactured, 25 per cent ad valorem.

SCHEDULE D—WOOD AND MANUFACTURES OF.

170. Briar root or briar wood, ivy or laurel root, and similar wood unmanufactured, or not further advanced than cut into blocks suitable for the articles into which they are intended to be converted, 10 per cent ad valorem.

171. Sawed boards, planks, deals, and all forms of sawed cedar, lignum-vitæ, lancewood, ebony, box, granadilla, mahogany, rosewood, satinwood, and all cabinet woods not further manufactured than sawed, 10 per cent ad valorem; veneers of wood, 15 per cent ad valorem; and wood unmanufactured, not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem.

172. Paving posts, railroad ties, and telephone, trolley, electric-light, and telegraph poles of cedar or other woods, 10 per cent ad valorem.

173. Casks, barrels, and hogsheads (empty), sugar-box shooks, and packing boxes (empty), and packing-box shooks, of wood, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

174. Boxes, barrels, or other articles containing oranges, lemons, limes, grapefruit, shaddocks, or pomelos, 15 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That the thin wood, so called, comprising the sides, tops, and bottoms of orange and lemon boxes of the growth and manufacture of the United States, exported as orange and lemon box shooks, may be reimported in complete form, filled with oranges and lemons, by the payment of duty at one-half the rate imposed on similar boxes of entirely foreign growth and manufacture; but proof of the identity of such shooks shall be made under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

175. Chair cane or reeds wrought or manufactured from rattans or reeds, 10 per cent ad valorem; osier or willow, including chip of and split willow, prepared for basket makers' use, 10 per cent ad valorem; manufactures of osier or willow and willow furniture, 25 per cent ad valorem.

176. Toothpicks of wood or other vegetable substance, 25 per cent ad valorem; butchers' and packers' skewers of wood, 10 cents per thousand.

177. Porch and window blinds, curtains, shades, or screens, any of the foregoing in chief value of bamboo, wood, straw, or compositions of wood, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem; if stained, dyed, painted, printed, polished, grained, or creosoted, and baskets in chief value of like material, 25 per cent ad valorem.

178. House or cabinet furniture wholly or in chief value of wood, wholly or partly finished, and manufactures of wood or bark, or of which wood or bark is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

SCHEDULE E—SUGAR, MOLASSES, AND MANUFACTURES OF.

179. Sugars, tank bottoms, sirups of cane juice, melada, concentrated melada, concrete and concentrated molasses, testing by the polariscope not above 75°, $\frac{1}{10}$ of 1 cent per pound, and for every additional degree shown by the polariscopic test, $\frac{1}{125}$ of 1 cent per pound additional, and fractions of a degree in proportion; molasses testing not above 40°, 15 per cent ad valorem; testing above 40° and not above 56°, 2½ cents per gallon; testing above 56°, 4½ cents per gallon; sugar drainings and sugar sweepings shall be subject to duty as molasses or sugar, as the case may be, according to the polariscopic test: Provided, That on and after the 1st day of May, 1916, the articles hereinbefore enumerated in this paragraph shall be admitted free of duty.

180. Maple sugar and maple sirup, 3 cents per pound; glucose or grape sugar, 1½ cents per pound; sugar cane in its natural state, or unmanufactured, 15 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That on and after the 1st day of May, 1916, the articles hereinbefore enumerated in this paragraph shall be admitted free of duty.

181. Saccharin, 65 cents per pound.

182. Sugar candy and all confectionery not specially provided for in this section, valued at 15 cents per pound or less, and sugars after being refined, when tinctured, colored, or in any way adulterated, 2 cents per pound; valued at more than 15 cents per pound, 25 per cent ad valorem. The weight and the value of the immediate coverings, other than the outer packing case or other covering, shall be included in the dutiable weight and the value of the merchandise.

SCHEDULE F—TOBACCO AND MANUFACTURES OF.

183. Wrapper tobacco, and filler tobacco when mixed or packed with more than 15 per cent of wrapper tobacco, and all leaf tobacco the product of two or more countries or dependencies when mixed or packed together, if unstemmed, $1.85 per pound; if stemmed, $2.50 per pound; filler tobacco not specially provided for in this section, if unstemmed, 35 cents per pound; if stemmed, 50 cents per pound.

184. The term wrapper tobacco as used in this section means that quality of leaf tobacco which has the requisite color, texture, and burn, and is of sufficient size for cigar wrappers, and the term filler tobacco means all other leaf tobacco. Collectors of customs shall not permit entry to be made, except under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, of any leaf tobacco, unless the invoices of the same shall specify in detail the character of such tobacco, whether wrapper or filler, its origin and quality. In the examination for classification of any imported leaf tobacco, at least one bale, box, or package in every 10, and at least one in every invoice, shall be examined by the appraiser or person authorized by law to make such examination, and at least 10 hands shall be examined in each examined bale, box, or package.

185. All other tobacco, manufactured or unmanufactured, not specially provided for in this section, 55 cents per pound; scrap tobacco, 35 cents per pound.

186. Snuff and snuff flour, manufactured of tobacco, ground dry, or damp, and pickled, scented, or otherwise, of all descriptions, 55 cents per pound.

187. Cigars, cigarettes, cheroots of all kinds, $4.50 per pound and 25 per cent ad valorem, and paper cigars and cigarettes, including wrappers, shall be subject to the same duties as are herein imposed upon cigars.

SCHEDULE G—AGRICULTURAL PRODUCTS AND PROVISIONS.

188. Cattle, 10 per cent ad valorem.

189. Horses and mules, valued at $200 or less per head, $15 per head; if valued at over $200 per head, 10 per cent ad valorem.

190. Sheep, 10 per cent ad valorem.

191. All other live animals not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem.

192. Barley, 15 cents per bushel of 48 pounds.

193. Barley malt, 25 cents per bushel of 34 pounds.

194. Barley, pearled, patent, or hulled, 1 cent per pound.

195. Macaroni, vermicelli, and all similar preparations, 1 cent per pound.

196. Oats, 10 cents per bushel of 32 pounds.

197. Rice, cleaned, 1 cent per pound; uncleaned rice, or rice free of the outer hull and still having the inner cuticle on, ⅜ of 1 cent per pound; rice flour, and rice meal, and rice broken which will pass through a No. 12 sieve of a kind prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, ¼ cent per pound; paddy, or rice having the outer hull on, ⅜ of 1 cent per pound.

198. Wheat, 10 cents per bushel.

199. Biscuits, bread, wafers, cakes, and other baked articles, and puddings, by whatever name known, containing chocolate, nuts, fruit, or confectionery of any kind, and without regard to the component material of chief value, 25 per cent ad valorem.

200. Butter and butter substitutes, 3 cents per pound.

201. Cheese and substitutes therefor, 20 per cent ad valorem.

202. Beans, and lentils, not specially provided for, 25 cents per bushel of 60 pounds.

203. Beets, 10 per cent ad valorem; sugar beets, 5 per cent ad valorem.

204. Beans, peas, prepared or preserved, or contained in tins, jars, bottles, or similar packages, including the weight of immediate coverings, 1 cent per pound; mushrooms and truffles, 2½ cents per pound.

205. Vegetables, if cut, sliced or otherwise reduced in size, or if parched or roasted, or if pickled, or packed in salt, brine, oil, or prepared in any way; any of the foregoing not specially provided for in this section, and bean stick or bean cake, miso, and similar products, 25 per cent ad valorem.

206. Pickles, including pickled nuts, sauces of all kinds, not specially provided for in this section, and fish paste or sauce, 25 per cent ad valorem.

207. Cider, 2 cents per gallon.

208. Eggs not specially provided for in this section, 2 cents per dozen; eggs frozen or otherwise prepared or preserved in tins or other packages, not specially provided for in this section, including the weight of the immediate coverings or containers, 2½ cents per pound.

209. Eggs, dried, 10 cents per pound; eggs, yolk of, 10 per cent ad valorem; dried blood, when soluble, 1½ cents per pound.

210. Hay, $2 per ton.

211. Honey, 10 cents per gallon.

212. Hops, 16 cents per pound; hop extract and lupulin, 50 per cent ad valorem.

213. Garlic, 1 cent per pound; onions, 20 cents per bushel.

214. Peas, green or dried, in bulk or in barrels, sacks, or similar packages, 15 cents per bushel of 60 pounds; split peas, 25 cents per bushel of 60 pounds; peas in cartons, papers, or other similar packages, including the weight of the immediate covering, ½ cent per pound.

215. Orchids, palms, azalea indica, and all other decorative greenhouse plants and cut flowers, preserved or fresh, 25 per cent ad valorem; lily of the valley pips, tulips, narcissus, begonia, and gloxinia bulbs, $1 per thousand; hyacinth bulbs, astilbe, dielytra, and lily of the valley clumps, $2.50 per thousand; lily bulbs and calla bulbs or corms, $5 per thousand; herbaceous peony, Iris Kaempferri or Germanica, canna, dahlia, and amaryllis bulbs, $10 per thousand; all other bulbs, roots, root stocks, corms, and tubers, which are cultivated for their flowers or foliage, 50 cents per thousand.

216. Stocks, cuttings, or seedlings of Myrobolan plum, Mahaleb or Mazzard cherry, Manetti multiflora and briar rose, Rosa Rugosa, three years old or less, $1 per thousand plants; stocks, cuttings, or seedlings of pear, apple, quince, and the St. Julien plum, three years old or less, $1 per thousand plants; rose plants, budded, grafted, or grown on their own roots, 4 cents each; stocks, cuttings, and seedlings of all fruit and ornamental trees, deciduous and evergreen shrubs and vines, and all trees, shrubs, plants, and vines commonly known as nursery stock, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

217. Seeds: Castor beans or seeds, 15 cents per bushel of 50 pounds; flaxseed or linseed and other oil seeds not specially provided for in this section, 20 cents per bushel of 56 pounds; poppy seed, 15 cents per bushel of 47 pounds; mushroom spawn, and spinach seed, 1 cent per pound; canary seed, ½ cent per pound; caraway seed, 1 cent per pound; anise seed, 2 cents per pound; beet (except sugar beet), carrot, corn salad, parsley, parsnip, radish, turnip, and rutabaga seed, 3 cents per pound; cabbage, collard, kale, and kohl-rabi seed, 6 cents per pound; egg plant and pepper seed, 10 cents per pound; seeds of all kinds not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That no allowance shall be made for dirt or other impurities in seeds provided for in this paragraph.

218. Straw, 50 cents per ton.

219. Teazels, 15 per cent ad valorem.

220. Vegetables in their natural state, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

221. Fish, except shellfish, by whatever name known, packed in oil or in oil and other substances, in bottles, jars, kegs, tin boxes, or cans, 20 per cent ad valorem; all other fish, except shellfish, in tin packages, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem; caviar and other preserved roe of fish, 30 per cent ad valorem; fish, skinned or boned, ⅜ of 1 cent per pound.

222. Apples, peaches, quinces, cherries, plums, and pears, green or ripe, 10 cents per bushel of 50 pounds; berries, edible, in their natural condition, ½ cent per quart; cranberries, 10 per cent ad valorem; all edible fruits, including berries, when dried, desiccated, evaporated, or prepared in any manner, not specially provided for in this section, 1 cent per pound; comfits, sweetmeats, and fruits of all kinds preserved or packed in sugar, or having sugar added thereto or preserved or packed in molasses, spirits, or their own juices, if containing no alcohol, or containing not over 10 per cent of alcohol, 20 per cent ad valorem; if containing over 10 per cent of alcohol and not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem, and in addition $2.50 per proof gallon on the alcohol contained therein in excess of 10 per cent; jellies of all kinds, 20 per cent ad valorem; pineapples preserved in their own juice, 20 per cent ad valorem.

223. Figs, 2 cents per pound; plums, prunes, and prunelles, 1 cent per pound; raisins and other dried grapes, 2 cents per pound; dates, 1 cent per pound; currants, Zante or other, 2 cents per pound; olives, 15 cents per gallon.

224. Grapes in barrels or other packages, 25 cents per cubic foot of the capacity of the barrels or packages.

225. Lemons, limes, oranges, grapefruit, shaddocks, and pomelos in packages of a capacity of 1½ cubic feet or less, 18 cents per package; in packages of capacity exceeding 1½ cubic feet and not exceeding 2½ cubic feet, 35 cents per package; in packages exceeding 2½ and not exceeding 5 cubic feet, 70 cents per package; in packages exceeding 5 cubic feet or in bulk, one-half of 1 cent per pound.

226. Orange peel or lemon peel, preserved, candied, or dried, 1 cent per pound; coconut meat or copra desiccated, shredded, cut, or similarly prepared, and citron or citron peel, preserved, candied, or dried, 2 cents per pound.

227. Pineapples, in barrels or other packages, 6 cents per cubic foot of the capacity of the barrels or packages, in bulk, $5 per thousand.

228. Almonds, not shelled, 3 cents per pound; almonds, shelled, 4 cents per pound; apricot and peach kernels, 3 cents per pound.

229. Filberts and walnuts of all kinds, not shelled, 2 cents per pound; shelled, 4 cents per pound.

230. Peanuts or ground beans, unshelled, ⅜ of 1 cent per pound; shelled, ⅜ of 1 cent per pound.

231. Nuts of all kinds, shelled or unshelled, not specially provided for in this section, 1 cent per pound; but no allowance shall be made for dirt or other impurities in nuts of any kind, shelled or unshelled.

232. Venison and other game, 1½ cents per pound; game birds, dressed, 30 per cent ad valorem.

233. Extract of meat, not specially provided for in this section, 15 cents per pound; fluid extract of meat, 7 cents per pound, but the dutiable weight of the extract of meat and of the fluid extract of meat shall not include the weight of the packages in which the same is imported.

234. Poultry, live, 1 cent per pound; dead, 2 cents per pound.

235. Chicory root, raw, dried, or undried, but unground, 1 cent per pound; chicory root, burnt or roasted, ground or granulated, or in rolls, or otherwise prepared, and not specially provided for in this section, 2 cents per pound.

236. Unsweetened chocolate and cocoa, prepared or manufactured, not specially provided for in this section, 8 per cent ad valorem. Sweetened chocolate and cocoa, prepared or manufactured, not specially provided for in this section, valued at 15 cents per pound or less, 2 cents per pound; valued at more than 15 cents per pound, 25 per cent ad valorem. The weight and the value of the immediate coverings, other than the outer packing case or other covering, shall be included in the dutiable weight and the value of the merchandise.

237. Cocoa butter or cocoa butterine, refined deodorized coconut oil, and all substitutes for cocoa butter, 3½ cents per pound.

238. Dandelion root, and acorns prepared, and articles used as coffee, or as substitutes for coffee not specially provided for in this section, 2 cents per pound.

239. Starch, made from potatoes, 1 cent per pound; all other starch, including all preparations, from whatever substance produced, fit for use as starch, ½ cent per pound.

240. Spices: Cassia buds, cassia, and cassia vera; cinnamon and cinnamon chips; ginger root, unground and not preserved or candied; nutmegs; pepper, black or white; capsicum or red pepper, or cayenne pepper; and clove stems, 1 cent per pound; cloves, 2 cents per pound; pimento, ⅘ of 1 cent per pound; sage, ½ cent per pound; mace, 8 cents per pound; mustard, ground or prepared, in bottles or otherwise, 6 cents per pound; all other spices not specially provided for in this section, including all herbs or herb leaves in glass or other small packages for culinary use, 20 per cent ad valorem.

241. Vinegar, 4 cents per proof gallon. The standard proof for vinegar shall be taken to be that strength which requires 35 grains of bicarbonate of potash to neutralize 1 ounce troy of vinegar.

SCHEDULE H—SPIRITS, WINES, AND OTHER BEVERAGES.

242. Brandy and other spirits manufactured or distilled from grain or other materials, and not specially provided for in this section, $2.60 per proof gallon.

243. Each and every gauge or wine gallon of measurement shall be counted as at least 1 proof gallon; and the standard for determining the proof of brandy and other spirits or liquors of any kind imported shall be the same as that which is defined in the laws relating to internal revenue: Provided, That it shall be lawful for the Secretary of the Treasury, in his discretion, to authorize the ascertainment of the proof of wines, cordials, or other liquors, by distillation or otherwise, in cases where it is impracticable to ascertain such proof by the means prescribed by existing law or regulations: And provided further, That any brandy or other spirituous or distilled liquors imported in any sized cask, bottle, jug, or other packages, of or from any country, dependency, or province under whose laws similar sized casks, bottles, jugs, or other packages of distilled spirits, wine, or other beverage put up or filled in the United States are denied entrance into such country, dependency, or province, shall be forfeited to the United States; and any brandy or other spirituous or distilled liquor imported in a cask of less capacity than 10 gallons from any country shall be forfeited to the United States.

244. On all compounds or preparations of which distilled spirits are a component part of chief value there shall be levied a duty not less than that imposed upon distilled spirits.

245. Cordials, liqueurs, arrack, absinthe, kirschwasser, ratafia, and other spirituous beverages or bitters of all kinds, containing spirits, and not specially provided for in this section, $2.60 per proof gallon.

246. No lower rate or amount of duty shall be levied, collected, and paid on brandy, spirits, and other spirituous beverages than that fixed by law for the description of first proof; but it shall be increased in proportion for any greater strength than the strength of first proof, and all imitations of brandy or spirits or wines imported by any names whatever shall be subject to the highest rate of duty provided for the genuine articles respectively intended to be represented, and in no case less than $1.75 per gallon.

247. Bay rum or bay water, whether distilled or compounded, of first proof, and in proportion for any greater strength than first proof, $1.75 per gallon.

248. Champagne and all other sparkling wines, in bottles containing each not more than 1 quart and more than 1 pint, $9.60 per dozen; containing not more than 1 pint each and more than one-half pint, $4.80 per dozen; containing one-half pint each or less, $2.40 per dozen; in bottles or other vessels containing more than 1 quart each, in addition to $9.60 per dozen bottles, on the quantity in excess of 1 quart, at the rate of $3 per gallon; but no separate or additional duty shall be levied on the bottles.

249. Still wines, including ginger wine or ginger cordial, vermuth, and rice wine or sake, and similar beverages not specially provided for in this section, in casks or packages other than bottles or jugs, if containing 14 per cent or less of absolute alcohol, 45 cents per gallon; if containing more than 14 per cent of absolute alcohol, 60 cents per gallon. In bottles or jugs, per case of one dozen bottles or jugs, containing each not more than 1 quart and more than 1 pint, or 24 bottles or jugs containing each not more than 1 pint, $1.85 per case; and any excess beyond these quantities found in such bottles or jugs shall be subject to a duty of 6 cents per pint or fractional part thereof, but no separate or additional duty shall be assessed on the bottles or jugs: Provided, That any wines, ginger cordial, or vermuth imported containing more than 24 per cent of alcohol shall be classed as spirits and pay duty accordingly: And provided further, That there shall be no constructive or other allowance for breakage, leakage, or damage on wines, liquors, cordials, or distilled spirits. Wines, cordials, brandy, and other spirituous liquors, including bitters of all kinds, and bay rum or bay water, imported in bottles or jugs, shall be packed in packages containing not less than one dozen bottles or jugs in each package, or duty shall be paid as if such package contained at least one dozen bottles or jugs, and in addition thereto, duty shall be collected on the bottles or jugs at the rates which would be chargeable thereon if imported empty. The percentage of alcohol in wines and fruit juices shall be determined in such manner as the Secretary of the Treasury shall by regulation prescribe.

250. Ale, porter, stout, and beer, in bottles or jugs, 45 cents per gallon, but no separate or additional duty shall be assessed on the bottles or jugs; otherwise than in bottles or jugs, 23 cents per gallon.

251. Malt extract, fluid, in casks, 23 cents per gallon; in bottles or jugs, 45 cents per gallon; solid or condensed, 45 per cent ad valorem.

252. Cherry juice and prune juice, or prune wine, and other fruit juices, and fruit sirup, not specially provided for in this section, containing no alcohol or not more than 18 per cent of alcohol, 70 cents per gallon; if containing more than 18 per cent of alcohol, 70 cents per gallon and in addition thereto $2.07 per proof gallon on the alcohol contained therein.

253. Ginger ale, ginger beer, lemonade, soda water, and other similar beverages containing no alcohol, in plain green or colored, molded or pressed, glass bottles, containing each not more than three-fourths of a pint, 18 cents per dozen; containing more than three-fourths of a pint each and not more than 1½ pints, 28 cents per dozen; but no separate or additional duty shall be assessed on the bottles; if imported otherwise than in plain green or colored, molded or pressed, glass bottles, or in such bottles containing more than 1½ pints each, 50 cents per gallon, and in addition thereto duty shall be collected on the bottles, or other coverings, at the rates which would be chargeable thereon if imported empty. Beverages not specially provided for containing not more than 2 per cent of alcohol shall be assessed for duty under this paragraph.

254. All mineral waters and all imitations of natural mineral waters, and all artificial mineral waters not specially provided for in this section, in bottles or jugs containing not more than one-half pint, 10 cents per dozen bottles; if containing more than one-half pint and not more than 1 pint, 15 cents per dozen bottles; if containing more than 1 pint and not more than 1 quart, 20 cents per dozen bottles; if imported in bottles or in jugs containing more than 1 quart, 18 cents per gallon; if imported otherwise than in bottles or jugs, 8 cents per gallon; and in addition thereto, on all of the foregoing, duty shall be collected upon the bottles or other containers at one-third of the rates that would be charged thereon if imported empty or separately.

SCHEDULE I—COTTON MANUFACTURES.

255. Cotton thread and carded yarn, combed yarn, warps or warp yarn, whether on beams or in bundles, skeins, or cops, or in any other form, except spool thread of cotton, crochet, darning and embroidery cottons, hereinafter provided for, shall be subject to the following rates of duty: Nos. 1 to 9, inclusive, 5 per cent ad valorem; Nos. 10 to 19, inclusive, 7½ per cent ad valorem; Nos. 20 to 39, inclusive, 10 per cent ad valorem; Nos. 40 to 49, inclusive, 15 per cent ad valorem; Nos. 50 to 59, inclusive, 17½ per cent ad valorem; Nos. 60 to 99, inclusive, 20 per cent ad valorem; No. 100 and over, 25 per cent ad valorem. Cotton card laps, roping, sliver, or roving, 10 per cent ad valorem; cotton waste and flocks manufactured or otherwise advanced in value, 5 per cent ad valorem.

256. Spool thread of cotton, crochet, darning, and embroidery cottons, on spools, reels, or balls, or in skeins, cones, or tubes, or in any other form, 15 per cent ad valorem.

257. Cotton cloth not bleached, dyed, colored, stained, painted, printed, Jacquard figured, or mercerized, containing yarn the highest number of which does not exceed No. 9, 7½ per cent ad valorem; exceeding No. 9 and not exceeding No. 19, 10 per cent ad valorem; exceeding No. 19 and not exceeding No. 39, 12½ per cent ad valorem; exceeding No. 39 and not exceeding No. 49, 17½ per cent ad valorem; exceeding No. 49 and not exceeding No. 59, 20 per cent ad valorem; exceeding No. 59 and not exceeding 99, 22½ per cent ad valorem; exceeding No. 99, 27½ per cent ad valorem. Cotton cloth when bleached, dyed, colored, stained, painted, printed, Jacquard figured, or mercerized, shall be subject to a duty of 2½ per cent ad valorem in addition to the rates otherwise chargeable thereon.

258. The term cotton cloth, or cloth, wherever used in the paragraphs of this section, unless otherwise specially provided for, shall be held to include all woven fabrics of cotton, in the piece or cut in lengths, whether figured, fancy, or plain, and shall not include any article, finished or unfinished, made from cotton cloth. In the ascertainment of the condition of the cloth or yarn upon which the duties imposed upon cotton cloth are made to depend, the entire fabric and all parts thereof shall be included. The number of the yarn in cotton cloth herein provided for shall be ascertained under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

259. Cloth composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber and silk, whether known as silk-striped sleeve linings, silk stripes, or otherwise, of which cotton or other vegetable fiber is the component material of chief value, and tracing cloth, 30 per cent ad valorem; cotton cloth filled or coated, all oilcloths (except silk oilcloths and oilcloths for floors), and cotton window hollands, 25 per cent ad valorem; waterproof cloth composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, whether composed in part of india rubber or otherwise, 25 per cent ad valorem.

260. Handkerchiefs or mufflers composed of cotton, not specially provided for in this section, whether in the piece or otherwise and whether finished or unfinished, 30 per cent ad valorem.

261. Clothing, ready-made, and articles of wearing apparel of every description, composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, or of which cotton or other vegetable fiber is the component material of chief value, made up or manufactured, wholly or in part, by the tailor, seamstress, or manufacturer, and not otherwise specially provided for in this section, 30 per cent ad valorem; shirt collars and cuffs of cotton, not specially provided for in this section, 25 per cent ad valorem.

262. Plushes, velvets, velveteens, corduroys, and all pile fabrics, cut or uncut, whether or not the pile covers the entire surface; any of the foregoing composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, except flax; and manufactures or articles in any form, including such as are commonly known as bias dress facings or skirt bindings, made or cut from plushes, velvets, velveteens, corduroys, or other pile fabrics composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, except flax, 40 per cent ad valorem.

263. Curtains, table covers, and all articles manufactured of cotton chenille, or of which cotton chenille is the component material of chief value, tapestries, and other Jacquard figured upholstery goods, composed wholly or in chief value of cotton or other vegetable fiber; any of the foregoing, in the piece or otherwise, 35 per cent ad valorem; all other Jacquard figured manufactures of cotton or of which cotton is the component material of chief value, 30 per cent ad valorem.

264. Stockings, hose and half hose, made on knitting machines or frames, composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, and not otherwise specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem.

265. Stockings, hose and half hose, selvedged, fashioned, narrowed, or shaped wholly or in part by knitting machines or frames, or knit by hand, including such as are commercially known as seamless stockings, hose and half hose, and clocked stockings, hose and half hose, all of the above composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, finished or unfinished; if valued at not more than 70 cents per dozen pairs, 40 per cent ad valorem; if valued at more than 70 cents per dozen pairs, 50 per cent ad valorem. Gloves by whatever process made, composed wholly or in chief value of cotton, 35 per cent ad valorem.

266. Shirts and drawers, pants, vests, union suits, combination suits, tights, sweaters, corset covers, and all underwear of every description, made wholly or in part on knitting machines or frames, or knit by hand, finished or unfinished, not including such as are trimmed with lace, imitation lace or crochet or as are embroidered and not including stockings, hose and half hose, composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, 30 per cent ad valorem.

267. Bandings, beltings, bindings, bone casings, cords, garters, ribbons, tire fabric or fabric suitable for use in pneumatic tires, suspenders and braces, tapes, tubing, and webs or webbing, any of the foregoing made of cotton or other vegetable fiber, or of which cotton or other vegetable fiber is the component material of chief value, or of cotton or other vegetable fiber and india rubber, and not embroidered by hand or machinery; spindle banding, woven, braided, or twisted lamp, stove, or candle wicking made of cotton or other vegetable fiber; loom harness, healds, or collets made of cotton or other vegetable fiber, or of which cotton or other vegetable fiber is the component material of chief value; boot, shoe, and corset lacings made of cotton or other vegetable fiber; and labels for garments or other articles, composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, 25 per cent ad valorem; belting for machinery made of cotton or other vegetable fiber and india rubber, or of which cotton or other vegetable fiber is the component material of chief value, 15 per cent ad valorem.

268. Cotton table damask, and manufactures of cotton table damask, or of which cotton table damask is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 25 per cent ad valorem.

269. Towels, bath mats, quilts, blankets, polishing cloths, mop cloths, wash rags or cloths, sheets, pillowcases, and batting, any of the foregoing made of cotton, or of which cotton is the component material of chief value, whether in the piece or otherwise, not embroidered nor in part of lace and not otherwise provided for, 25 per cent ad valorem.

270. Lace window curtains, nets, nettings, pillow shams, and bed sets, finished or unfinished, made on the Nottingham lace-curtain machine, and composed of cotton or other vegetable fiber, when counting not more than six points or spaces between the warp threads to the inch, 35 per cent ad valorem; when counting more than six and not more than eight points or spaces to the inch, 40 per cent ad valorem; when counting nine or more points or spaces to the inch, 45 per cent ad valorem.

271. All articles made from cotton cloth, whether finished or unfinished, and all manufactures of cotton or of which cotton is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 30 per cent ad valorem.

SCHEDULE J—FLAX, HEMP, AND JUTE, AND MANUFACTURES OF.

272. Flax, not hackled or dressed, ½ of 1 cent per pound.

273. Flax, hackled, known as "dressed line," 1½ cents per pound.

274. Tow of flax, $10 per ton.

275. Hemp, and tow of hemp, ½ cent per pound; hemp, hackled, known as "line of hemp," 1 cent per pound.

276. Single yarns made of jute, not finer than 5 lea or number, 15 per cent ad valorem; if finer than 5 lea or number and yarns made of jute not otherwise specially provided for in this section, 25 per cent ad valorem.

277. Cables and cordage, composed of istle, Tampico fiber, manila, sisal grass or sunn, or a mixture of these or any of them, ½ cent per pound; cables and cordage made of hemp, tarred or untarred, 1 cent per pound.

278. Threads, twines, or cords, made from yarn not finer than 5 lea or number, composed of flax, hemp, or ramie, or of which these substances or any of them is the component material of chief value, 25 per cent ad valorem; if made from yarn finer than 5 lea or number, 30 per cent ad valorem.

279. Single yarns, made of flax, hemp, or ramie, or a mixture of any of them, not finer than 8 lea or number, 15 per cent ad valorem; finer than 8 lea or number and not finer than 80 lea or number, 25 per cent ad valorem; finer than 80 lea or number, 10 per cent ad valorem; ramie sliver or roving, 15 per cent ad valorem.

280. Gill nettings, nets, webs, and seines made of flax, hemp, or ramie, or a mixture of any of them, or of which any of them is the component material of chief value, 30 per cent ad valorem.

281. Floor mattings, plain, fancy, or figured, including mats and rugs, manufactured from straw, round or split, or other vegetable substances, not otherwise provided for in this section, and having a warp of cotton, hemp, or other vegetable substances, including what are commonly known as China, Japan, and India straw matting, 2½ cents per square yard.

282. Carpets, carpeting, mats and rugs made of flax, hemp, jute, or other vegetable fiber (except cotton), 35 per cent ad valorem.

283. Hydraulic or flume hose, made in whole or in part of cotton, flax, hemp, ramie, or jute, 7 cents per pound.

284. Tapes composed wholly or in part of flax, woven with or without metal threads, on reels, spools, or otherwise, and designed expressly for use in the manufacture of measuring tapes, 25 per cent ad valorem.

285. Linoleum, plain, stamped, painted, or printed, including corticine and cork carpet, figured or plain, also linoleum known as granite and oak plank, 30 per cent ad valorem; inlaid linoleum, 35 per cent ad valorem; oilcloth for floors, plain, stamped, painted, or printed, 20 per cent ad valorem; mats or rugs made of oilcloth, linoleum, corticine, or cork carpet shall be subject to the same rate of duty as herein provided for oilcloth, linoleum, corticine, or cork carpet.

286. Shirt collars and cuffs, composed in whole or in part of linen, 30 per cent ad valorem.

287. Bands, bandings, belts, beltings, bindings, cords, ribbons, tapes, webs and webbings, all the foregoing composed wholly or in chief value of flax, hemp, or ramie, or of flax, hemp, or ramie and india rubber, and not otherwise specially provided for in this section, 30 per cent ad valorem; wearing apparel composed wholly or in chief value of flax, hemp, or ramie, or of flax, hemp, or ramie and india rubber, 50 per cent ad valorem.

288. Plain woven fabrics of single jute yarns, by whatever name known, 20 per cent ad valorem.

289. All pile fabrics, whether or not the pile covers the entire surface, composed of flax, or of which flax is the component material of chief value, and all articles and manufactures made from such fabrics, not specially provided for in this section, 45 per cent ad valorem.

290. Bags or sacks made from plain woven fabrics, of single jute yarns, not dyed, colored, stained, painted, printed, or bleached, 25 per cent ad valorem.

291. Handkerchiefs composed of flax, hemp, or ramie, or of which these substances, or any of them, is the component material of chief value, whether in the piece or otherwise, and whether finished or unfinished, not hemmed or hemmed only, 35 per cent ad valorem; if hemstitched, or imitation hemstitched, or revered, or with drawn threads, but not embroidered, initialed, or in part of lace, 40 per cent ad valorem.

292. Plain woven fabrics, not including articles, finished or unfinished, of flax, hemp, or ramie, or of which these substances or any of them is the component material of chief value, including such as is known as shirting cloth, 35 per cent ad valorem.

293. All woven articles, finished or unfinished, and all manufactures of flax, hemp, ramie, or other vegetable fiber, or of which these substances, or any of them, is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 40 per cent ad valorem.

294. Istle or tampico, when dressed, dyed, or combed, 20 per cent ad valorem.

SCHEDULE K—WOOL AND MANUFACTURES OF.

295. Combed wool or tops and roving or roping made wholly or in part of wool or camel's hair, and on other wool and hair which have been advanced in any manner or by any process of manufacture beyond the washed or scoured condition, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

296. Yarns made wholly or in chief value of wool, 20 per cent ad valorem.

297. Cloths, knit fabrics, felts not woven, and all manufactures of every description made, by any process, wholly or in chief value of wool, not specially provided for in this section, 35 per cent ad valorem.

298. Blankets and flannels, composed wholly or in chief value of wool, 25 per cent ad valorem; flannels composed wholly or in chief value of wool, valued at above 50 cents per pound, 35 per cent ad valorem.

299. Women's and children's dress goods, coat linings, Italian cloths, bunting, and goods of similar description and character, composed wholly or in chief value of wool, and not specially provided for in this section, 35 per cent ad valorem.

300. Clothing, ready-made, and articles of wearing apparel of every description, including shawls whether knitted or woven, and knitted articles of every description made up or manufactured wholly or in part, and not specially provided for in this section, composed wholly or in chief value of wool, 35 per cent ad valorem.

301. Webbings, suspenders, braces, bandings, beltings, bindings, cords, cords and tassels, and ribbons; any of the foregoing made of wool or of which wool or wool and india rubber are the component materials of chief value, 35 per cent ad valorem.

302. Aubusson, Axminster, moquette, and chenille carpets, figured or plain, and all carpets or carpeting of like character or description, 35 per cent ad valorem.

303. Saxony, Wilton, and Tournay velvet carpets, figured or plain, and all carpets or carpeting of like character or description, 30 per cent ad valorem.

304. Brussels carpets, figured or plain, and all carpets or carpeting of like character or description, 25 per cent ad valorem.

305. Velvet and tapestry velvet carpets, figured or plain, printed on the warp or otherwise, and all carpets or carpeting of like character or description, 30 per cent ad valorem.

306. Tapestry Brussels carpets, figured or plain, and all carpets or carpeting of like character or description, printed on the warp or otherwise, 20 per cent ad valorem.

307. Treble ingrain, 3-ply, and all-chain Venetian carpets, 20 per cent ad valorem.

308. Wool Dutch and 2-ply ingrain carpets, 20 per cent ad valorem.

309. Carpets of every description, woven whole for rooms, and oriental, Berlin, Aubusson, Axminster, and similar rugs, 50 per cent ad valorem.

310. Druggets and bockings, printed, colored, or otherwise, 20 per cent ad valorem.

311. Carpets and carpeting of wool, flax, or cotton, or composed in part of any of them, not specially provided for in this section, and on mats, matting, and rugs of cotton, 20 per cent ad valorem.

312. Mats, rugs for floors, screens, covers, hassocks, bed sides, art squares, and other portions of carpets or carpeting, made wholly or in part of wool, and not specially provided for in this section, shall be subjected to the rate of duty herein imposed on carpets or carpeting of like character or description.

313. Whenever in this section the word "wool" is used in connection with a manufactured article of which it is a component material, it shall be held to include wool or hair of the sheep, camel, or other like animals, whether manufactured by the woolen, worsted, felt, or any other process.

314. Hair of the Angora goat, alpaca, and other like animals, and all hair on the skin of such animals, 20 per cent ad valorem.

315. Tops made from the hair of the Angora goat, alpaca, and other like animals, 25 per cent ad valorem.

316. Yarns made of the hair of the Angora goat, alpaca, and other like animals, 30 per cent ad valorem.

317. Cloth and all manufactures of every description made of the hair of the Angora goat, alpaca, and other like animals, not specially provided for in this section, 40 per cent ad valorem.

318. Plushes, velvets, and all other pile fabrics, cut or uncut, woven or knit, whether or not the pile covers the entire surface, made wholly or partly of the hair of the Angora goat, alpaca, and other like animals, and articles made wholly or in chief value of such plushes or velvets, 50 per cent ad valorem.

SCHEDULE L—SILKS AND SILK GOODS.

319. Silk partially manufactured from cocoons or from waste silk and not further advanced or manufactured than carded or combed silk, and silk noils exceeding 2 inches in length, 15 per cent ad valorem.

320. Spun silk or schappe silk yarn, 35 per cent ad valorem.

321. Thrown silk not more advanced than singles, tram, or organzine, sewing silk, twist, floss, and silk threads or yarns of every description made from raw silk, 15 per cent ad valorem.

322. Velvets, plushes, chenilles, velvet or plush ribbons, or other pile fabrics, composed of silk or of which silk is the component material of chief value, 50 per cent ad valorem.

323. Handkerchiefs or mufflers composed wholly or in chief value of silk, finished or unfinished; if cut, not hemmed or hemmed only, 40 per cent ad valorem; if hemstitched or imitation hemstitched, or revered, or having drawn threads, but not embroidered in any manner with an initial letter, monogram, or otherwise, 50 per cent ad valorem.

324. Ribbons, bandings, including hatbands, beltings, bindings, all of the foregoing not exceeding 12 inches in width and if with fast edges, bone casings, braces, cords, cords and tassels, garters, suspenders, tubings, and webs and webbings; all the foregoing made of silk or of which silk or silk and india rubber are the component materials of chief value, if not embroidered in any manner, 40 per cent ad valorem.

325. Clothing, ready-made, and articles of wearing apparel of every description, including knit goods, made up or manufactured in whole or in part by the tailor, seamstress, or manufacturer; all the foregoing composed of silk or of which silk or silk and india rubber are the component materials of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 50 per cent ad valorem.

326. Woven fabrics, in the piece or otherwise, of which silk is the component material of chief value, and all manufactures of silk, or of which silk or silk and india rubber are the component materials of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 45 per cent ad valorem.

327. Yarns, threads, filaments of artificial or imitation silk, or of artificial or imitation horsehair, by whatever name known, and by whatever process made, 35 per cent ad valorem; beltings, cords, tassels, ribbons, or other articles or fabrics composed wholly or in chief value of yarns, threads, filaments, or fibers of artificial or imitation silk or of artificial or imitation horsehair, or of yarns, threads, filaments or fibers of artificial or imitation silk, or of artificial or imitation horsehair and india rubber, by whatever name known, and by whatever process made, 60 per cent ad valorem.

SCHEDULE M—PAPERS AND BOOKS.

328. Sheathing paper and roofing felt, 5 per cent ad valorem.

329. Filter masse or filter stock, composed wholly or in part of wood pulp, wood flour, cotton or other vegetable fiber, 20 per cent ad valorem.

330. Printing paper (other than paper commercially known as handmade or machine handmade paper, japan paper, and imitation japan paper by whatever name known), unsized, sized, or glued, suitable for the printing of books and newspapers, but not for covers or bindings, not specially provided for in this section, valued above 2½ cents per pound, 12 per cent ad valorem: Provided, however, That if any country, dependency, province, or other subdivision of government shall impose any export duty, export license fee, or other charge of any kind whatsoever (whether in the form of additional charge or license fee or otherwise) upon printing paper, wood pulp, or wood for use in the manufacture of wood pulp, there shall be imposed upon printing paper, valued above 2½ cents per pound, when imported either directly or indirectly from such country, dependency, province, or other subdivision of government, an additional duty equal to the amount of such export duty or other export charge imposed by such country, dependency, province, or other subdivision of government, upon printing paper, or upon an amount of wood pulp, or wood for use in the manufacture of wood pulp necessary to manufacture such printing paper.

331. Papers commonly known as copying paper, stereotype paper, bibulous paper, tissue paper, pottery paper, letter-copying books, wholly or partly manufactured, crêpe paper and filtering paper weighing not more than 10 pounds per ream of 480 sheets, and articles manufactured from any of the foregoing papers or of which such paper is the component material of chief value, 30 per cent ad valorem.

332. Papers, including wrapping paper, with coated surface or surfaces, or with the surface wholly or partly covered or decorated with a design, fancy effect, pattern or character whether produced in the pulp or otherwise, all of the foregoing not specially provided for, whether or not wholly or partly covered with metal or its solution or with gelatin or flock or embossed or printed except by lithographic process, cloth-lined or reenforced paper, parchment papers, and grease-proof and imitation parchment papers which have been supercalendered and rendered transparent, or partially so, by whatever name known; all other grease-proof and imitation parchment papers, not specially provided for in this section, by whatever name known; bags, envelopes, printed matter other than lithographic, and all other articles composed wholly or in chief value of any of the foregoing papers, not specially provided for in this section, and all boxes of paper, papier-mâché, or wood covered with any of the foregoing paper, 35 per cent ad valorem; albuminized or sensitized paper or paper otherwise surface-coated for photographic purposes, plain basic papers for albuminizing, sensitizing, baryta coating, or for photographic or solar printing processes, 25 per cent ad valorem.

333. Pictures, calendars, cards, labels, flaps, cigar bands, placards, and other articles composed wholly or in chief value of paper lithographically printed in whole or in part from stone, metal, or other material (except boxes, views of American scenery or objects, and music, and illustrations when forming part of a periodical or newspaper, or of bound or unbound books, accompanying the same, not specially provided for in this section) shall pay duty at the following rates: Labels, flaps, and cigar bands, if printed entirely in bronze printing, 15 per cent ad valorem; if printed otherwise than entirely in bronze printing, but not printed in whole or in part in metal leaf, 25 per cent ad valorem; if printed in whole or in part in metal leaf, 30 per cent ad valorem; booklets, books of paper or other material for children's use, not exceeding in weight 24 ounces each, fashion magazines or periodicals, printed in whole or in part by lithographic process, or decorated by hand, booklets decorated in whole or in part by hand or by spraying, whether or not lithographed, 12 per cent ad valorem; decalcomanias in ceramic colors, whether or not backed with metal leaf, and all other decalcomanias, except toy decalcomanias, 20 per cent ad valorem; pictures, calendars, cards, placards, and all other articles than those hereinbefore specifically provided for in this paragraph, 20 per cent ad valorem.

334. Writing, letter, note, handmade paper and paper commercially known as handmade paper and machine handmade paper, japan paper and imitation japan paper by whatever name known, and ledger, bond, record, tablet, typewriter, manifold, and onionskin and imitation onionskin papers calendered or uncalendered, whether or not any such paper is ruled, bordered, embossed, printed, lined, or decorated in any manner, 25 per cent ad valorem.

335. Paper envelopes, folded or flat, plain, bordered, embossed, printed, tinted, decorated, or lined, 15 per cent ad valorem.

336. Jacquard designs on ruled paper, or cut on Jacquard cards, and parts of such designs, cardboard and bristol board, press boards or press paper, paper hangings with paper back or composed wholly or in chief value of paper, and wrapping paper not specially provided for in this section, 25 per cent ad valorem.

337. Books of all kinds, bound or unbound, including blank books, slate books, and pamphlets, engravings, photographs, etchings, maps, charts, music in books or sheets, and printed matter, all the foregoing, and not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem. Views of any landscape, scene, building, place, or locality in the United States, on cardboard or paper, not thinner than eight one-thousandths of 1 inch, by whatever process printed or produced, including those wholly or in part produced by either lithographic or photogelatin process (except show cards), occupying 35 square inches or less of surface per view, bound or unbound, or in any other form, 45 per cent ad valorem; thinner than eight one-thousandths of 1 inch, $2 per thousand.

338. Photograph, autograph, scrap, post-card, and postage-stamp albums, wholly or partly manufactured, 25 per cent ad valorem.

339. Playing cards, 60 per cent ad valorem.

340. All papers and manufactures of paper, or of which paper is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 25 per cent ad valorem.

SCHEDULE N—SUNDRIES.

341. Beads and spangles of all kinds, including imitation pearl beads, not threaded or strung, or strung loosely on thread for facility in transportation only, 35 per cent ad valorem; fabrics, wearing apparel, trimmings, curtains, and other articles not specially provided for in this section, composed wholly or in chief value of beads or spangles made of glass or paste, gelatin, metal, or other material, 50 per cent ad valorem.

342. Braids, featherstitch braids, fringes, gimps, gorings, all the foregoing, of whatever material composed, and articles made wholly or in chief value of any of the foregoing, not specially provided for in this section, 50 per cent ad valorem.

343. Braids, plaits, laces, and willow sheets or squares, composed wholly or in chief value of straw, chip, grass, palm leaf, willow, osier, rattan, real horsehair, cuba bark, ramie, or manila hemp, suitable for making or ornamenting hats, bonnets, or hoods, not bleached, dyed, colored, or stained, 15 per cent ad valorem; if bleached, dyed, colored, or stained, 20 per cent ad valorem; hats, bonnets, and hoods composed wholly or in chief value of straw, chip, grass, palm leaf, willow, osier, rattan, cuba bark, ramie, or manila hemp, whether wholly or partly manufactured, but not blocked or trimmed, 25 per cent ad valorem; if blocked or trimmed, and in chief value of such materials, 40 per cent ad valorem. But the terms "grass" and "straw" shall be understood to mean these substances in their natural form and structure, and not the separated fiber thereof.

344. Brooms, made of broom corn, straw, wooden fiber, or twigs, 15 per cent ad valorem; brushes and feather dusters of all kinds, and hair pencils in quills or otherwise, 35 per cent ad valorem.

345. Bristles, sorted, bunched, or prepared, 7 cents per pound.

346. Button forms of lastings, mohair or silk cloth, or other manufactures of cloth, woven or made in patterns of such size, shape, or form as to be fit for buttons exclusively, and not exceeding 8 inches in any one dimension, 10 per cent ad valorem.

347. Buttons or parts of buttons and button molds or blanks, finished or unfinished, not specially provided for in this section, and all collar or cuff buttons and studs composed wholly of bone, mother-of-pearl, or ivory, 40 per cent ad valorem.

348. Cork bark, cut into squares, cubes, or quarters, 4 cents per pound; manufactured cork stoppers, over three-fourths of an inch in diameter, measured at the larger end, and manufactured cork disks, wafers, or washers, over three-sixteenths of an inch in thickness, 12 cents per pound; manufactured cork stoppers, three-fourths of an inch or less in diameter, measured at the larger end, and manufactured cork disks, wafers, or washers, three-sixteenths of an inch or less in thickness, 15 cents per pound; cork, artificial, or cork substitutes manufactured from cork waste, or granulated corks, and not otherwise provided for in this section, 3 cents per pound; cork insulation, wholly or in chief value of granulated cork, in slabs, boards, planks, or molded forms, ¼ cent per pound; cork paper, 35 per cent ad valorem; manufactures wholly or in chief value of cork or of cork bark, or of artificial cork or bark substitutes, granulated or ground cork, not specially provided for in this section, 30 per cent ad valorem.

349. Dice, dominoes, draughts, chessmen, chess balls, and billiard, pool, bagatelle balls, and poker chips, of ivory, bone, or other materials, 50 per cent ad valorem.

350. Dolls, and parts of dolls, doll heads, toy marbles of whatever materials composed, and all other toys, and parts of toys, not composed of china, porcelain, parian, bisque, earthen or stone ware, and not specially provided for in this section, 35 per cent ad valorem.

351. Emery grains and emery, manufactured, ground, pulverized, or refined, 1 cent per pound; emery wheels, emery files, emery paper, and manufactures of which emery or corundum is the component material of chief value, 20 per cent ad valorem; crude artificial abrasives, 10 per cent ad valorem.

352. Firecrackers of all kinds, 6 cents per pound; bombs, rockets, Roman candles, and fireworks of all descriptions, not specially provided for in this section, 10 cents per pound; the weight on all the foregoing to include all coverings, wrappings, and packing material.

353. Fulminates, fulminating powders, and other like articles not specially provided for in this section, 5 per cent ad valorem.

354. Gunpowder, and all explosive substances used for mining, blasting, artillery, or sporting purposes, when valued at 20 cents or less per pound, ½ cent per pound; valued above 20 cents per pound, 1 cent per pound.

355. Matches, friction or lucifer, of all descriptions, per gross of 144 boxes, containing not more than 100 matches per box, 3 cents per gross; when imported otherwise than in boxes containing not more than 100 matches each, ½ of 1 cent per 1,000 matches; wax matches, fuses, wind matches, and all matches in books or folders or having a stained, dyed, or colored stick or stem, and tapers consisting of a wick coated with an inflammable substance, and night lights, 25 per cent ad valorem.

356. Percussion caps, cartridges, and cartridge shells empty, 15 per cent ad valorem; blasting caps, 75 cents per thousand; mining, blasting, or safety fuses of all kinds, 15 per cent ad valorem.

357. Feathers and downs, on the skin or otherwise, crude or not dressed, colored, or otherwise advanced or manufactured in any manner, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem; when dressed, colored, or otherwise advanced or manufactured in any manner, including quills of down and other manufactures of down, 40 per cent ad valorem; artificial or ornamental feathers, fruits, grains, leaves, flowers, and stems or parts thereof, of whatever material composed, not specially provided for in this section, 60 per cent ad valorem; boas, boutonnieres, wreaths, and all articles not specially provided for in this section, composed wholly or in chief value of any of the feathers, flowers, leaves, or other materials or articles herein mentioned, 60 per cent ad valorem: Provided, That the importation of aigrettes, egret plumes or so-called osprey plumes, and the feathers, quills, heads, wings, tails, skins or parts of skins, of wild birds, either raw or manufactured, and not for scientific or educational purposes, is hereby prohibited; but this provision shall not apply to the feathers or plumes of ostriches, or to the feathers or plumes of domestic fowls of any kind.

358. Furs and fur skins of all kinds not dressed in any manner, except undressed skins of hares, rabbits, dogs, goats, sheep, and not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem; furs dressed on the skin, not advanced further than dyeing, 30 per cent ad valorem; manufactures of furs, further advanced than dressing and dyeing, when prepared for use as material, joined or sewed together, including plates, linings, and crosses, and articles manufactured from fur not specially provided for in this section, 40 per cent ad valorem; articles of wearing apparel of every description partly or wholly manufactured, composed of or of which fur is the component material of chief value, 50 per cent ad valorem. Furs not on the skin, prepared for hatters' use, including fur skins carroted, 15 per cent ad valorem.

359. Fans of all kinds, except common palm-leaf fans, 50 per cent ad valorem.

360. Gun wads of all descriptions, 10 per cent ad valorem.

361. Human hair, raw, uncleaned and not drawn, 10 per cent ad valorem; if cleaned or drawn, wholly or in part, but not manufactured, 20 per cent ad valorem; manufactures of human hair, or of which human hair is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 35 per cent ad valorem.

362. Hair, curled, suitable for beds or mattresses, 10 per cent ad valorem.

363. Haircloth, known as "crinoline" cloth, 6 cents per square yard; haircloth, known as "hair seating," and hair press cloth, 15 cents per square yard.

364. Hats, bonnets, or hoods, for men's, women's, boys', or children's wear, trimmed or untrimmed, including bodies, hoods, plateaux, forms or shapes, for hats or bonnets, composed wholly or in chief value of fur of the rabbit, beaver, or other animals, 40 per cent ad valorem.

365. Indurated fiber ware and manufactures of pulp, not specially provided for in this section, 25 per cent ad valorem.

366. Jewelry, commonly or commercially so known, valued above 20 cents per dozen pieces, 60 per cent ad valorem; rope, curb, cable, and fancy patterns of chain not exceeding one-half inch in diameter, width, or thickness, valued above 30 cents per yard; and articles valued above 20 cents per dozen pieces designed to be worn on apparel or carried on or about or attached to the person, such as and including buckles, card cases, chains, cigar cases, cigar cutters, cigar holders, cigarette cases, cigarette holders, coin holders, collar, cuff, and dress buttons, combs, match boxes, mesh bags and purses, millinery, military, and hair ornaments, pins, powder cases, stamp cases, vanity cases, and like articles; all the foregoing and parts thereof, finished or partly finished, composed of metal, whether or not enameled, washed, covered, or plated, including rolled gold plate, and whether or not set with precious or semiprecious stones, pearls, cameos, coral, or amber, or with imitation precious stones or pearls, 60 per cent ad valorem. Stampings, galleries, mesh and other materials of metal, whether or not set with glass or paste, finished or partly finished, separate or in strips or sheets, suitable for use in the manufacture of any of the foregoing articles in this paragraph, 50 per cent ad valorem.

367. Diamonds and other precious stones, rough or uncut, and not advanced in condition or value from their natural state by cleaving, splitting, cutting, or other process, including glaziers' and engravers' diamonds not set, miners' diamonds, whether in their natural form or broken, and bort; any of the foregoing not set, and diamond dust, 10 per cent ad valorem; pearls and parts thereof, drilled or undrilled, but not set or strung; diamonds, coral, rubies, cameos, and other precious stones and semiprecious stones, cut but not set, and suitable for use in the manufacture of jewelry, 20 per cent ad valorem; imitation precious stones, including pearls and parts thereof, for use in the manufacture of jewelry, doublets, artificial, or so-called synthetic or reconstructed pearls and parts thereof, rubies, or other precious stones, 20 per cent ad valorem.

368. Laces, lace braids, lace window curtains not specially provided for in this section, coach, carriage, and automobile laces, and all lace articles of whatever material composed; handkerchiefs, napkins, wearing apparel, and all other articles made wholly or in part of lace or of imitation lace of any kind; embroideries, wearing apparel, handkerchiefs, and all other articles or fabrics embroidered in any manner by hand or machinery, whether with a plain or fancy initial or monogram or otherwise, or tamboured, appliquéd, or scalloped by hand or machinery; edgings, insertings, galloons, nets, nettings, veils, veilings, neck rufflings, ruchings, tuckings, flouncings, flutings, quillings, ornaments, all the foregoing, of whatever material composed; woven fabrics or articles from which threads have been omitted, drawn, punched, or cut, leaving open spaces in which figures or designs are formed by threads other than the threads of the fabric alone or in combination with the threads of the fabric not including hemstitching or spoke stitching, and articles made in whole or in part of any of the above materials; all the foregoing, 60 per cent ad valorem.

369. Chamois skins, 15 per cent ad valorem; pianoforte, pianoforte action, and glove leathers, 10 per cent ad valorem.

370. Bags, baskets, belts, satchels, card cases, pocketbooks, jewel boxes, portfolios, and other boxes and cases, made wholly of or in chief value of leather, not jewelry, and manufactures of leather, or of which leather is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section; all the foregong whether or not permanently fitted and furnished with traveling, bottle, drinking, dining, or luncheon, and similar sets, 30 per cent ad valorem.

371. Gloves, not specially provided for in this section, made wholly or in chief value of leather, whether wholly or partly manufactured, shall pay duty at the following rates, the lengths stated in each case being the extreme length when stretched to their full extent, namely:

372. Men's, women's, or children's "glacé" finish, Schmaschen (of sheep origin), not over 14 inches in length, $1 per dozen pairs; over 14 inches in length, 25 cents per dozen pairs for each additional inch in excess of 14 inches.

373. All other gloves wholly or in chief value of leather, not over 14 inches in length, $2 per dozen pairs; over 14 inches in length, 25 cents per dozen for each additional inch in excess of 14 inches.

374. In addition to the foregoing rates there shall be paid the following cumulative duties: On all leather gloves when lined with cotton or other vegetable fiber, 25 cents per dozen pairs; when lined with a knitted glove or when lined with silk, or wool, 50 cents per dozen pairs; when lined with fur, $2 per dozen pairs; on all piqué and prixseam gloves, 25 cents per dozen pairs.

375. Glove tranks, with or without the usual accompanying pieces, shall pay 75 per cent of the duty provided for the gloves in the fabrication of which they are suitable.

376. Harness, saddles, saddlery in sets or in parts, finished or unfinished, not specially provided for in this section, 20 per cent ad valorem.

377. Manufactures of amber, asbestos, bladders, catgut, or whip gut or worm gut, or wax, or of which these substances or any of them is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem; yarn and woven fabrics composed wholly or in chief value of asbestos, 20 per cent ad valorem.

378. Manufactures of bone, chip, grass, horn, india rubber or guttapercha, palm leaf, quills, straw, weeds, or whalebone, or of which any of them is the component material of chief value not otherwise specially provided for in this section, shall be subject to the following rates: India rubber or gutta-percha, 10 per cent ad valorem; palm leaf, 15 per cent ad valorem; bone, chip, horn, quills, and whalebone, 20 per cent ad valorem; grass, straw, and weeds, 25 per cent ad valorem; combs composed wholly of horn or of horn and metal, 25 per cent ad valorem. The terms "grass" and "straw" shall be understood to mean these substances in their natural state, and not the separated fibers thereof.

379. Ivory tusks in their natural state, or cut vertically across the grain only, with the bark left intact, 20 per cent ad valorem; manufactures of ivory or vegetable ivory, or of which either of these substances is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 30 per cent ad valorem; manufactures of mother-of-pearl and shell, plaster of Paris, papier-mâché, and vulcanized india rubber known as "hard rubber," or of which these substances or any of them is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section, 25 per cent ad valorem; shells engraved, cut, ornamented, or otherwise manufactured, 25 per cent ad valorem.

380. Masks, composed of paper or pulp, 20 per cent ad valorem.

381. Matting made of cocoa fiber or rattan, 5 cents per square yard; mats made of cocoa fiber or rattan, 3 cents per square foot.

382. Moss and sea grass, eelgrass, and seaweeds, if manufactured or dyed, 10 per cent ad valorem.

383. Musical instruments or parts thereof, pianoforte actions and parts thereof, strings for musical instruments, not otherwise enumerated in this section, cases for musical instruments, pitch pipes, tuning forks, tuning hammers, and metronomes; strings for musical instruments, composed wholly or in part of steel or other metal, all the foregoing, 35 per cent ad valorem.

384. Phonographs, gramophones, graphophones, and similar articles, or parts thereof, 25 per cent ad valorem.

385. Violin rosin, in boxes or cases or otherwise, 10 per cent ad valorem.

386. Paintings in oil or water colors, pastels, pen and ink drawings, and sculptures, not specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem.

387. Peat moss, 50 cents per ton.

388. Pencils of paper or wood, or other material not metal, filled with lead or other material, pencils of lead and slate pencils, all the foregoing, 25 per cent ad valorem.

389. Pencil leads not in wood or other material, 10 per cent ad valorem.

390. Photographic dry plates or films, not otherwise specially provided for in this section, 15 per cent ad valorem. Photographic-film negatives or positives, imported in any form, for use in any way in connection with moving-picture exhibits, or for making or reproducing pictures for such exhibits, including herein all moving, motion, motophotography or cinematography film pictures, prints, positives, or duplicates of every kind and nature, and of whatever substance made, 20 per cent ad valorem.

391. Pipes and smokers' articles: Common tobacco pipes and pipe bowls made wholly of clay, 25 per cent ad valorem; other pipes and pipe bowls of whatever material composed, and all smokers' articles whatsoever, not specially provided for in this section, including cigarette books, cigarette-book covers, pouches for smoking or chewing tobacco, and cigarette paper in all forms, except cork paper, 50 per cent ad valorem.

392. Plush, black, known commercially as hatters' plush, composed of silk, or of silk and cotton, such as is used for making men's hats, 10 per cent ad valorem.

393. Umbrellas, parasols, and sunshades covered with material other than paper or lace, not embroidered or appliquéd, 35 per cent ad valorem. Sticks for umbrellas, parasols, or sunshades, and walking canes, finished or unfinished, 30 per cent ad valorem.

394. Waste, not specially provided for in this section, 10 per cent ad valorem.

395. That there shall be levied, collected, and paid on the importation of all raw or unmanufactured articles not enumerated or provided for in this section, a duty of 10 per cent ad valorem, and on all articles manufactured, in whole or in part, not provided for in this section, a duty of 15 per cent ad valorem.

396. That each and every imported article, not enumerated in this section, which is similar, either in material, quality, texture, or the use to which it may be applied, to any article enumerated in this section as chargeable with duty, shall pay the same rate of duty which is levied on the enumerated article which it most resembles in any of the particulars before mentioned; and if any nonenumerated article equally resembles two or more enumerated articles on which different rates of duty are chargeable, there shall be levied on such nonenumerated article the same rate of duty as is chargeable on the article which it resembles paying the highest rate of duty; and on articles not enumerated, manufactured of two or more materials, the duty shall be assessed at the highest rate at which the same would be chargeable if composed wholly of the component material thereof of chief value; and the words "component material of chief value," wherever used in this section, shall be held to mean that component material which shall exceed in value any other single component material of the article; and the value of each component material shall be determined by the ascertained value of such material in its condition as found in the article. If two or more rates of duty shall be applicable to any imported article, it shall pay duty at the highest of such rates.

FREE LIST.

That on and after the day following the passage of this act, except as otherwise specially provided for in this act, the articles mentioned in the following paragraphs shall, when imported into the United States or into any of its possessions (except the Philippine Islands and the islands of Guam and Tutuila), be exempt from duty:

397. Acids: Acetic or pyroligneous, arsenic or arsenious, carbolic, chromic, fluoric, hydrofluoric, hydrochloric or muriatic, nitric, phosphoric, phthalic, prussic, silicic, sulphuric or oil of vitriol, and valerianic.

398. Aconite.

399. Acorns, raw, dried or undried, but unground.

400. Agates, unmanufactured.

401. Agricultural implements: Plows, tooth and disk harrows, headers, harvesters, reapers, agricultural drills and planters, mowers, horserakes, cultivators, thrashing machines and cotton gins, wagons and carts, and all other agricultural implements of any kind and description, whether specifically mentioned herein or not, whether in whole or in parts, including repair parts.

402. Albumen, blood, and albumen, not specially provided for in this section.

403. Alcohol, methyl or wood.

404. Ammonia, sulphate of and nitrate of.

405. Any animal imported by a citizen of the United States, specially for breeding purposes, shall be admitted free, whether intended to be used by the importer himself or for sale for such purposes: Provided, That no such animal shall be admitted free unless pure bred of a recognized breed, and duly registered in a book of record recognized by the Secretary of Agriculture for that breed: And provided further, That the certificate of such record and pedigree of such animal shall be produced and submitted to the Department of Agriculture, duly authenticated by the proper custodian of such book of record, together with an affidavit of the owner, agent, or importer that the animal imported is the identical animal described in said certificate of record and pedigree. The Secretary of Agriculture may prescribe such regulations as may be required for determining the purity of breeding and the identity of such animal: And provided further, That the collectors of customs shall require a certificate from the Department of Agriculture stating that such animal is pure bred of a recognized breed and duly registered in a book of record recognized by the Secretary of Agriculture for that breed.

The Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe such additional regulations as may be required for the strict enforcement of this provision.

Horses, asses, cattle, mules, sheep, swine, and goats straying across the boundary line into any foreign country, or driven across such boundary line by the owner for temporary pasturage purposes only, together with their offspring, shall be dutiable unless brought back to the United States within six months, in which case they shall be free of duty, under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury: And provided further, That the provisions of this act shall apply to all such animals as have been imported and are in quarantine or otherwise in the custody of customs or other officers of the United States at the date of the taking effect of this act.

406. Animals brought into the United States temporarily for a period not exceeding six months, for the purpose of breeding, exhibition or competition for prizes offered by any agricultural, polo, or racing association; but a bond shall be given in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; also teams of animals, including their harness and tackle, and the wagons or other vehicles actually owned by persons emigrating from foreign countries to the United States with their families, and in actual use for the purpose of such emigration under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; and wild animals intended for exhibition in zoological collections for scientific and educational purposes, and not for sale or profit.

407. Annatto, roucou, rocoa, or orleans, and all extracts of.

408. Antitoxins, vaccine virus, and all other serums derived from animals and used for therapeutic purposes.

409. Apatite.

410. Arrowroot in its natural state and not manufactured.

411. Arsenic and sulphide of arsenic, or orpiment.

412. Articles the growth, produce, or manufacture of the United States, when returned after having been exported, without having been advanced in value or improved in condition by any process of manufacture or other means; casks, barrels, carboys, bags, and other containers or coverings of American manufacture exported filled with American products, or exported empty and returned filled with foreign products, including shooks and staves when returned as barrels or boxes; also quicksilver flasks or bottles, iron or steel drums of either domestic or foreign manufacture, used for the shipment of acids, or other chemicals, which shall have been actually exported from the United States; but proof of the identity of such articles shall be made, under general regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, but the exemption of bags from duty shall apply only to such domestic bags as may be imported by the exporter thereof, and if any such articles are subject to internal-revenue tax at the time of exportation, such tax shall be proved to have been paid before exportation and not refunded; photographic dry plates or films of American manufacture (except moving-picture films), exposed abroad, whether developed or not, and films from moving-picture machines, light struck or otherwise damaged, or worn out, so as to be unsuitable for any other purpose than the recovery of the constituent materials, provided the basic films are of American manufacture, but proof of the identity of such articles shall be made under general regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury; articles exported from the United States for repairs may be returned upon payment of a duty upon the value of the repairs under conditions and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That this paragraph shall not apply to any article upon which an allowance of drawback has been made, the reimportation of which is hereby prohibited except upon payment of duties equal to the drawbacks allowed; or to any article manufactured in bonded warehouse and exported under any provision of law: And provided further, That when manufactured tobacco which has been exported without payment of internal-revenue tax shall be reimported it shall be retained in the custody of the collector of customs until internal-revenue stamps in payment of the legal duties shall be placed thereon: And provided further, That the provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to animals made dutiable under the provisions of paragraph 405.

413. Asafetida.

414. Asbestos, unmanufactured.

415. Ashes, wood and lye of, and beet-root ashes.

416. Bagging for cotton, gunny cloth, and similar fabrics, suitable for covering cotton, composed of single yarns made of jute, jute butts, sea, Russian sea, New Zealand tow, Norwegian tow, aloe, mill waste, cotton tares, or other material not bleached, dyed, colored, stained, painted, or printed, not exceeding 16 threads to the square inch, counting the warp and filling, and weighing not less than 15 ounces per square yard.

417. Balm of Gilead.

418. Barks, cinchona or other, from which quinine may be extracted.

419. Bauxite or beauxite, crude, not refined or otherwise advanced in condition from its natural state.

420. Beeswax.

421. Bells, broken, and bell metal, broken and fit only to be remanufactured.

422. Bibles, comprising the books of the Old or New Testament, or both, bound or unbound.

423. All binding twine manufactured from New Zealand hemp, manila, istle or Tampico fiber, sisal grass, or sunn, or a mixture of any two or more of them, of single ply and measuring not exceeding 600 feet to the pound.

424. Birds and land and water fowls, not specially provided for in this section.

425. Biscuits, bread, and wafers, not specially provided for in this section.

426. Bismuth.

427. Bladders, and all integuments, tendons and intestines of animals and fish sounds, crude, dried or salted for preservation only, and unmanufactured, not specially provided for in this section.

428. Blood, dried, not specially provided for in this section.

429. Blue vitriol, or sulphate of copper; acetate and subacetate of copper, or verdigris.

430. Bolting cloths composed of silk, imported expressly for milling purposes, and so permanently marked as not to be available for any other use. Press cloths composed of camel's hair, imported expressly for oil milling purposes, and marked so as to indicate that it is for such purposes, and cut into lengths not to exceed 72 inches and woven in widths not under 10 inches nor to exceed 15 inches and weighing not less than one-half pound per square foot.

431. Bones, crude, burned, calcined, ground, steamed, but not otherwise manufactured, and bone dust or animal carbon, bone meal, and bone ash.

432. Books, engravings, photographs, etchings, bound or unbound, maps and charts imported by authority or for the use of the United States or for the use of the Library of Congress.

433. Books, maps, music, engravings, photographs, etchings, lithographic prints, bound or unbound, and charts, which shall have been printed more than 20 years at the date of importation, and all hydrographic charts, and publications issued for their subscribers or exchanges by scientific and literary associations or academies, or publications of individuals for gratuitous private circulation, not advertising matter, and public documents issued by foreign governments.

434. Books and pamphlets printed chiefly in languages other than English; also books and music, in raised print, used exclusively by the blind.

435. Books, maps, music, engravings, photographs, etchings, lithographic prints, and charts, specially imported, not more than two copies in any one invoice, in good faith, for the use and by order of any society or institution incorporated or established solely for religious, philosophical, educational, scientific, or literary purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for the use and by order of any college, academy, school, or seminary of learning in the United States, or any State or public library, and not for sale, subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe.

436. Books, libraries, usual and reasonable furniture, and similar household effects of persons or families from foreign countries, all the foregoing if actually used abroad by them not less than one year, and not intended for any other person or persons, nor for sale.

437. Borax, crude and unmanufactured, and borate of lime, soda, and other borate material, crude and unmanufactured, not otherwise provided for in this section.

438. Bran and wheat screenings.

439. Brass, old brass, clippings from brass or Dutch metal, all the foregoing, fit only for remanufacture.

440. Brazilian pebble, unwrought or unmanufactured.

441. Bristles, crude, not sorted, bunched, or prepared.

442. Bromin.

443. Broom corn.

444. Buckwheat and buckwheat flour.

445. Bullion, gold or silver.

446. Burgundy pitch.

447. Burrstones, manufactured or bound up into millstones.

448. Cadmium.

449. Calcium, acetate of, brown and gray, and chloride of, crude; calcium carbide and calcium nitrate.

450. Cash registers, linotype and all typesetting machines, sewing machines, typewriters, shoe machinery, cream separators, and tar and oil spreading machines used in the construction and maintenance of roads and in improving them by the use of road preservatives, all the foregoing whether imported in whole or in parts, including repair parts.

451. Castor or castoreum.

452. Catgut, whip gut, or worm gut, unmanufactured.

453. Cerium, cerite, or cerium ore.

454. Chalk, crude, not ground, bolted, precipitated, or otherwise manufactured.

455. Charcoal, blood char, bone char, or bone black, not suitable for use as a pigment.

456. Chromate of iron or chromic ore.

457. Chromium, hydroxide of, crude.

458. Common blue clay and Gross-Almerode glass-pot clay, in cases or casks, suitable for the manufacture of crucibles and glass melting pots or tank blocks.

459. Coal, anthracite, bituminous, culm, slack, and shale; coke; compositions used for fuel in which coal or coal dust is the component material of chief value, whether in briquets or other form.

460. Coal tar, crude, pitch of coal tar, wood or other tar, and products of coal tar known as naphthalin, phenol, and cresol.

461. Cobalt and cobalt ore.

462. Cocculus indicus.

463. Cochineal.

464. Cocoa, or cacao, crude, and fiber, leaves, and shells of.

465. Coffee.

466. Coins of gold, silver, copper, or other metal.

467. Coir, and coir yarn.

468. Composition metal of which copper is the component material of chief value, not specially provided for in this section.

469. Copper ore; regulus of, and black or coarse copper, and copper cement; old copper, fit only for remanufacture, copper scale, clippings from new copper, and copper in plates, bars, ingots, or pigs, not manufactured or specially provided for in this section.

470. Copperas, or sulphate of iron.

471. Coral, marine, uncut, and unmanufactured.

472. Cork wood, or cork bark, unmanufactured, and cork waste, shavings, and cork refuse of all kinds.

473. Corn or maize.

474. Corn meal.

475. Cotton, and cotton waste or flocks.

476. Cryolite, or kryolith.

477. Cudbear.

478. Curling stones, or quoits, and curling-stone handles.

479. Curry, and curry powder.

480. Cuttlefish bone.

481. Dandelion roots, raw, dried or undried, but unground.

482. Divi-divi.

483. Dragon's blood.

484. Drugs, such as barks, beans, berries, buds, bulbs, bulbous roots, excrescences, fruits, flowers, dried fibers, dried insects, grains, gums, gum resin, herbs, leaves, lichens, mosses, logs, roots, stems, vegetables, seeds (aromatic, not garden seeds), seeds of morbid growth, weeds; any of the foregoing which are natural and uncompounded drugs and not edible and not specially provided for in this section, and are in a crude state, not advanced in value or condition by shredding, grinding, chipping, crushing, or any other process or treatment whatever beyond that essential to the proper packing of the drugs and the prevention of decay or deterioration pending manufacture: Provided, That no article containing alcohol shall be admitted free of duty under this paragraph.

485. Eggs of birds, fish, and insects (except fish roe preserved for food purposes): Provided, however, That the importation of eggs of game birds or eggs of birds not used for food, except specimens for scientific collections, is prohibited: Provided further, That the importation of eggs of game birds for purposes of propagation is hereby authorized, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury.

486. Emery ore and corundum.
487. Fans, common palm-leaf, plain and not ornamented or decorated in any manner, and palm leaf in its natural state, not colored, dyed, or otherwise advanced or manufactured.
488. Felt, adhesive, for sheathing vessels.
489. Fibrin, in all forms.
490. Fresh-water fish, and all other fish not otherwise specially provided for in this section.
491. Fish skins.
492. Flax straw.
493. Flint, flints, and flint stones, unground.
494. Fossils.
495. Fruits or berries, green, ripe, or dried, and fruits in brine, not specially provided for in this section.
496. Fruit plants, tropical and semitropical, for the purpose of propagation or cultivation.
497. Gambier.
498. Glass enamel, white, for watch and clock dials.
499. Glass plates or disks, rough-cut or unwrought, for use in the manufacture of optical instruments, spectacles, and eyeglasses, and suitable only for such use: Provided, however, That such disks exceeding 8 inches in diameter may be polished sufficiently to enable the character of the glass to be determined.
500. Gloves, made wholly or in chief value of leather made from horsehides, pigskins, and cattle hides of cattle of the bovine species, excepting calfskins, whether wholly or partly manufactured.
501. Goldbeaters' molds and goldbeaters' skins.
502. Grasses and fibers: Istle or Tampico fiber, jute, jute butts, manila, sisal grass, sunn, and all other textile grasses or fibrous vegetable substances, not dressed or manufactured in any manner, and not specially provided for in this section.
503. Grease, fats, vegetable tallow, and oils (excepting fish oils), natural and uncompounded, such as are commonly used in soap making or in wire drawing, or for stuffing or dressing leather, not specially provided for in this section.
504. Guano, manures, and all substances used only for manure, including basic slag, ground or unground, and calcium cyanamid or lime nitrogen.
505. Gum copal, damar, and kauri.
506. Gutta-percha, crude.
507. Hair of horse, cattle, and other animals, cleaned or uncleaned, drawn or undrawn, but unmanufactured, not specially provided for in this section.
508. Hide cuttings, raw, with or without hair, and all other glue stock.
509. Hide rope.
510. Hides of cattle, raw or uncured, or dry, salted, or pickled.
511. Hones and whetstones.
512. Hoofs, unmanufactured.
513. Hoop or band iron, or hoop or band steel, cut to lengths, or wholly or partly manufactured into hoops or ties, coated or not coated with paint or any other preparation, with or without buckles or fastenings, for baling cotton or any other commodity.
514. Hop roots for cultivation.
515. Horns and parts of, including horn strips and tips, unmanufactured.
516. Ice.
517. India rubber, crude, and milk of, and scrap or refuse india rubber, fit only for remanufacture.
518. Indigo, natural or synthetic, dry or suspended in water.
519. Iodine, crude, or resublimed.
520. Ipecac.
521. Iridium, osmium, palladium, rhodium, and ruthenium and native combinations thereof with one another or with platinum.
522. Iron ore, including manganiferous iron ore, and the dross or residuum from burnt pyrites.
523. Jalap.
524. Jet, unmanufactured.
525. Joss stick or joss light.
526. Junk, old.
527. Kelp.
528. Kieserite.
529. Kyanite, or cyanite, and kainite.
530. Lac dye, crude, seed, button, stick, and shell.
531. Lactarene or casein.
532. Lard.
533. Lava, unmanufactured.
534. All leather not specially provided for in this section and leather board or compressed leather; leather cut into shoe uppers or vamps or other forms suitable for conversion into boots or shoes; boots and shoes made wholly or in chief value of leather; leather shoe laces, finished or unfinished; harness, saddles, and saddlery, in sets or parts, finished or unfinished, composed wholly or in chief value of leather.
535. Leeches.
536. Lemon juice, lime juice, and sour orange juice, all the foregoing containing not more than 2 per cent of alcohol.
537. Lifeboats and life-saving apparatus specially imported by societies and institutions incorporated or established to encourage the saving of human life.
538. Lithographic stones, not engraved.
539. Litmus, prepared or not prepared.
540. Loadstones.
541. Madder and munjeet, or Indian madder, ground or prepared, and all extracts of.
542. Magnesite, crude or calcined, not purified.
543. Manganese, oxide and ore of.
544. Manna.
545. Manuscripts.
546. Marrow, crude.
547. Marshmallow or althea root, leaves or flowers, natural or unmanufactured.
548. Meats: Fresh beef, veal, mutton, lamb, and pork; bacon and hams; meats of all kinds, prepared or preserved, not specially provided for in this section.
549. Medals of gold, silver, or copper, and other metallic articles actually bestowed as trophies or prizes, and received and accepted as honorary distinctions.
550. Meerschaum, crude or unmanufactured.
551. Milk and cream, including milk or cream preserved or condensed, or sterilized by heating or other processes, and sugar of milk.
552. Mineral salts obtained by evaporation from mineral waters, when accompanied by a duly authenticated certificate and satisfactory proof showing that they are in no way artificially prepared and are only the product of a designated mineral spring.
553. Minerals, crude, or not advanced in value or condition by refining or grinding, or by other process of manufacture, not specially provided for in this section.
554. Miners' rescue appliances, designed for emergency use in mines where artificial breathing is necessary in the presence of poisonous gases, to aid in the saving of human life, and miners' safety lamps and parts, accessories, and appliances for cleaning, repairing, and operating all the foregoing.
555. Models of inventions and of other improvements in the arts, to be used exclusively as models and incapable of any other use.
556. Moss, seaweeds, and vegetable substances, crude or unmanufactured, not otherwise specially provided for in this section.
557. Myrobolans, fruit.
558. Cut nails and cut spikes of iron or steel, horseshoe nails, hobnails, and all other wrought-iron or steel nails not specially provided for in this section; wire staples, wire nails made of wrought iron or steel, spikes, and horse, mule, or ox shoes, of iron or steel, and cut tacks, brads, or sprigs.
559. Needles, hand sewing and darning.
560. Newspapers and periodicals; but the term "periodicals" as herein used shall be understood to embrace only unbound or paper-covered publications issued within six months of the time of entry, devoted to current literature of the day, or containing current literature as a predominant feature, and issued regularly at stated periods, as weekly, monthly, or quarterly, and bearing the date of issue.
561. Nuts: Marrons, crude; coconuts in the shell and broken coconut meat or copra, not shredded, desiccated, or prepared in any manner.
562. Nux vomica.
563. Oakum.
564. Oatmeal and rolled oats and oat hulls.
565. Oil cake.
566. Oils: Birch tar, cajeput, cōconut, cod, cod liver, cottonseed, croton, ichthyol, juglandium, palm, palm-kernel, soya-bean, and olive oil rendered unfit for use as food or for any but mechanical or manufacturing purposes, by such means as shall be satisfactory to the Secretary of the Treasury and under regulations to be prescribed by him; Chinese nut oil, nut oil or oil of nuts not specially provided for in this section; petroleum, crude or refined, and all products obtained from petroleum, including kerosene, benzine, naphtha, gasoline, paraffin, and paraffin oil; lubricating oils not specially provided for in this section; and also spermaceti, whale, and other fish oils of American fisheries, and all fish and other products of such fisheries.
567. Oleo stearin.
568. Orange and lemon peel, not preserved, candied, or dried.
569. Orchil, or orchil liquid.
570. Ores of gold, silver, or nickel, and nickel matte; ores of the platinum metals; sweepings of gold and silver.
571. Paper stock, crude, of every description, including all grasses, fibers, rags, waste, including jute waste, shavings, clippings, old paper, rope ends, waste rope, and waste bagging, and all other waste not specially provided for in this section, including old gunny cloth and old gunny bags, used chiefly for paper making.
572. Printing paper (other than paper commercially known as handmade or machine handmade paper, japan paper, and imitation japan paper by whatever name known), unsized, sized, or glued, suitable for the printing of books and newspapers, but not for covers or bindings, not specially provided for in this section, valued at not above 2½ cents per pound, decalcomania paper not printed.
573. Parchment and vellum.
574. Paris green and London purple.
575. Pearl, mother of, and shells, not sawed, cut, polished, or otherwise manufactured, or advanced in value from the natural state.
576. Personal effects, not merchandise, of citizens of the United States dying in foreign countries.
577. Pewter and britannia metal, old, and fit only to be remanufactured.
578. Philosophical and scientific apparatus, utensils, instruments, and preparations, including bottles and boxes containing the same, specially imported in good faith for the use and by order of any society or institution incorporated or established solely for religious, philosophical, educational, scientific, or literary purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for the use and by order of any college, academy, school, or seminary of learning in the United States, or any State or public library, and not for sale, and articles solely for experimental purposes, when imported by any society or institution of the character herein described, subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe.
579. Phosphates, crude.
580. Phosphorus.
581. Plants, trees, shrubs, roots, seed cane, and seeds, imported by the Department of Agriculture or the United States Botanic Garden.
582. Platinum, unmanufactured or in ingots, bars, plates, sheets, wire, sponge, or scrap, and vases, retorts, and other apparatus, vessels, and parts thereof, composed of platinum, for chemical uses.
583. Plumbago.
584. Potash: Crude, or "black salts"; carbonate of and sulphate of, crude or refined; hydrate of, crude or refined, when not containing more than 15 per cent of caustic soda; nitrate of, or saltpeter, crude; and muriate of.
585. Potatoes, and potatoes, dried, desiccated, or otherwise prepared, not specially provided for in this section.
586. Professional books, implements, instruments, and tools of trade, occupation, or employment in the actual possession of persons emigrating to the United States owned and used by them abroad; but this exemption shall not be construed to include machinery or other articles imported for use in any manufacturing establishment, or for any other person or persons, or for sale, nor shall it be construed to include theatrical scenery, properties, and apparel; but such articles brought by proprietors or managers of theatrical exhibitions arriving from abroad, for temporary use by them in such exhibitions, and not for any other person, and not for sale, and which have been used by them abroad, shall be admitted free of duty under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe; but bonds shall be given for the payment to the United States of such duties as may be imposed by law upon any and all such articles as shall not be exported within six months after such importation: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, extend such period for a further term of six months in case application shall be made therefor.
587. Pulu.
588. Quinine, and its combinations with acids and compounds, not subject to duty in this section.
589. Radium and salts of, radioactive substitutes, selenium and salts of.
590. Rags, not otherwise specially provided for in this section.

591. Railway bars, made of iron or steel, and railway bars made in part of steel, T rails, and punched iron or steel flat rails.
592. Rennets, raw or prepared.
593. Rye and rye flour.
594. Sago, crude, and sago flour.
595. Salicin.
596. Salep, or salop.
597. Salt.
598. Santonin.
599. Seeds: Cardamom, cauliflower, celery, coriander, cotton, cummin, fennel, fenugreek, hemp, hoarhound, mangelwurzel, mustard, rape, St. John's bread or bean, sorghum, sugar beet, and sugar cane for seed; bulbs and bulbous roots, not edible and not otherwise provided for in this section; all flower and grass seeds; coniferous evergreen seedlings; all the foregoing not specially provided for in this section.
600. Sheep dip containing five one-hundredths of 1 per cent of arsenic or more, not specially provided for in this section.
601. Shotgun barrels, in single tubes, forged, rough bored.
602. Shrimps, lobsters, and other shellfish.
603. Silk cocoons and silk waste.
604. Silk, raw, in skeins reeled from the cocoon, or rereeled, but not wound, doubled, twisted, or advanced in manufacture in any way.
605. Silkworm eggs.
606. Skeletons and other preparations of anatomy.
607. Skins of hares, rabbits, dogs, goats, and sheep, undressed.
608. Skins of all kinds, raw, and hides not specially provided for in this section.
609. Soda arseniate of, sulphate of, crude, or salt cake and niter cake, soda ash, silicate of, nitrate of, or cubic nitrate.
610. Soya beans.
611. Specimens of natural history, botany, and mineralogy, when imported for scientific public collections, and not for sale.
612. Spunk.
613. Spurs and stilts used in the manufacture of earthen, porcelain, and stone ware.
614. Stamps: Foreign postage or revenue stamps, canceled or uncanceled, and foreign government stamped post cards bearing no other printing than the official imprint thereon.
615. Statuary and casts of sculpture for use as models or for art educational purposes only; regalia and gems, where specially imported in good faith for the use and by order of any society incorporated or established solely for religious, philosophical, educational, scientific, or literary purposes, or for the encouragement of the fine arts, or for the use and by order of any college, academy, school, seminary of learning, orphan asylum, or public hospital in the United States, or any State or public library, and not for sale, subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe; but the term "regalia" as herein used shall be held to embrace only such insignia of rank or office or emblems as may be worn upon the person or borne in the hand during public exercises of the society or institution, and shall not include articles of furniture or fixtures, or of regular wearing apparel, nor personal property of individuals.
616. Stone and sand: Burrstone in blocks, rough or unmanufactured; rotten stone, tripoli, and sand, crude or manufactured; cliff stone, freestone, granite, sandstone, and limestone, unmanufactured, and not suitable for use as monumental or building stone; all of the foregoing not specially provided for in this section.
617. Strontia, oxide of, protoxide of strontian, and strontianite or mineral carbonate of strontia.
618. Strychnia or strychnine, and all salts thereof.
619. Sulphur in any form, brimstone, and sulphur ore as pyrites, or sulphuret of iron in its natural state, containing in excess of 25 per cent of sulphur.
620. Sumac, ground or unground.
621. Swine.
622. Tagua nuts.
623. Talcum, steatite, and French chalk, crude and unground.
624. Tallow.
625. Tamarinds.
626. Tanning material: Extracts of quebracho, of nutgalls, of Persian berries, of hemlock bark, of sumac, extracts of oak and chestnut; and other barks and woods other than dyewoods such as are commonly used for tanning not specially provided for in this section; nuts and nutgalls and woods used expressly for dyeing or tanning, whether or not advanced in value or condition by shredding, grinding, chipping, crushing, or any other process; and articles in a crude state used in dyeing or tanning; all the foregoing not containing alcohol and not specially provided for in this section.
627. Tapioca, tapioca flour, cassava or cassady.
628. Tar and pitch of wood.
629. Tea and tea plants: Provided, That the cans, boxes, or other containers of tea packed in packages of less than 5 pounds each shall be dutiable at the rate chargeable thereon if imported empty: Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall be construed to repeal or impair the provisions of an act entitled "An act to prevent the importation of impure and unwholesome tea," approved March 2, 1897, and any act amendatory thereof.
630. Teeth, natural, or unmanufactured.
631. Terra alba, not made from gypsum or plaster rock.
632. Terra japonica.
633. Tin ore, cassiterite or black oxide of tin, tin in bars, blocks, pigs, or grain or granulated, and scrap tin: Provided, That there shall be imposed and paid upon cassiterite, or black oxide of tin, and upon bar, block, pig tin and grain or granulated, a duty of 4 cents per pound when it is made to appear to the satisfaction of the President of the United States that the mines of the United States are producing 1,500 tons of cassiterite and bar, block, and pig tin per year. The President shall make known this fact by proclamation, and thereafter said duties shall go into effect.
634. Tobacco stems.
635. Tungsten-bearing ores of all kinds.
636. Turmeric.
637. Turpentine, Venice, and spirits of.
638. Turtles.
639. Type, stereotype metal, electrotype metal, linotype composition, all of the foregoing, old and fit only to be remanufactured.
640. Uranium, oxide and salts of.
641. Valonia.
642. Wafers, unleavened or not edible.
643. Wax, vegetable or mineral.
644. Wearing apparel, articles of personal adornment, toilet articles, and similar personal effects of persons arriving in the United States; but this exemption shall include only such articles as were actually owned by them and in their possession abroad at the time of or prior to their departure from a foreign country, and as are necessary and appropriate for the wear and use of such persons and are intended for such wear and use, and shall not be held to apply to merchandise or articles intended for other persons or for sale: Provided, That in case of residents of the United States returning from abroad all wearing apparel, personal and household effects taken by them out of the United States to foreign countries shall be admitted free of duty, without regard to their value, upon their identity being established under appropriate rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided further, That up to but not exceeding $100 in value of articles acquired abroad by residents of the United States for personal or household use or as souvenirs or curios, but not bought on commission or intended for sale, shall be admitted free of duty.
645. Whalebone, unmanufactured.
646. Wheat flour and semolina: Provided, That wheat flour shall be subject to a duty of 10 per cent ad valorem when imported directly or indirectly from a country, dependency, or other subdivision of government which imposes a duty on wheat flour imported from the United States.
647. Barbed wire, galvanized wire not larger than No. 6 and not smaller than No. 14 wire gauge of the kind commonly used for fencing purposes, galvanized wire fencing composed of wires not larger than No. 6 nor smaller than No. 14 wire gauge, and wire commonly used for baling hay or other commodities.
648. Witherite.
649. Wood: Logs, timber, round, unmanufactured, hewn or sawed, sided or squared; pulp woods, kindling wood, firewood, hop poles, fence posts, handle bolts, shingle bolts, gun blocks for gunstocks rough hewn or sawed, or planed on one side; hubs for wheels, posts, heading bolts, stave bolts, last blocks, wagon blocks, oar blocks, heading blocks, and all like blocks or sticks, rough hewn, sawed, or bored; sawed boards, planks, deals, and other lumber, not further manufactured than sawed, planed, and tongued and grooved; clapboards, laths, pickets, palings, staves, shingles, ship timber, ship planking, broom handles, sawdust, and wood flour; all the foregoing not specially provided for in this section.
650. Woods: Cedar, lignum-vitæ, lancewood, ebony, box, granadilla, mahogany, rosewood, satinwood, and all forms of cabinet woods, in the log, rough, or hewn only, and red cedar (Juniperus virginiana) timber, hewn, sided, squared, or round; sticks of partridge, hair wood, pimento, orange, myrtle, bamboo, rattan, reeds unmanufactured, india malacca joints, and other woods not specially provided for in this section, in the rough, or not further advanced than cut into lengths suitable for sticks for umbrellas, parasols, sunshades, whips, fishing rods, or walking canes.
651. Mechanically ground wood pulp, chemical wood pulp, unbleached or bleached: Provided, That if any country, dependency, province, or other subdivision of government, shall impose an export duty or other export charge of any kind whatsoever, either directly or indirectly (whether in the form of additional charge, or license fee, or otherwise) upon printing paper, mechanically ground wood pulp, chemical wood pulp, or wood for use in the manufacture of wood pulp, the amount of such export duty or other export charge upon an equal amount of mechanically ground wood pulp, or chemical wood pulp, or upon an amount of wood for use in the manufacture of wood pulp necessary to manufacture such chemical wood pulp, or upon an amount of printing paper ordinarily manufactured from such wood pulp, shall be imposed as a duty upon chemical wood pulp when imported directly or indirectly from such country, dependency, province, or other subdivision of government; and if any country, dependency, province, or other subdivision of government shall prohibit the exportation of printing paper, mechanically ground wood pulp, chemical wood pulp, or wood for use in the manufacture of wood pulp, there shall be imposed a duty of one-tenth of 1 cent per pound upon chemical wood pulp when imported directly or indirectly from such country, dependency, province, or other subdivision of government.
652. Wool of the sheep, hair of the camel, and other like animals, and all wools and hair on the skin of such animals.
653. Wool wastes: All noils, top waste, card waste, slubbing waste, roving waste, ring waste, yarn waste, bur waste, thread waste, garnetted waste, shoddies, mungo, flocks, wool extract, carbonized wool, carbonized noils, and all other wastes not specially provided for in this section.
654. Works of art, including paintings in oil, mineral, water, or other colors, pastels, original drawings and sketches in pen and ink or pencil and water colors, etchings not to exceed 20 numbered impressions, and engravings not to exceed 20 numbered impressions, and lithographs not to exceed 20 numbered impressions and original sculptures, including not more than two replicas or reproductions of the same; but the term "sculpture" as used in this section shall be understood to include professional productions of sculptors only, whether in round or in relief, in bronze, marble, stone, terra cotta, ivory, wood, or metal, or whether cut, carved, or otherwise wrought by hand from the solid block or mass of marble, stone, or alabaster, or from metal, or cast in bronze or other metal or substance, or from wax or plaster, made as the professional productions of sculptors only; and the word "painting" as used in this section shall not be understood to include any articles of utility, nor such as are made wholly or in part by stenciling or any other mechanical process; and the words "etchings" and "engravings" as used in this section shall be understood to include only such as are printed by hand from plates or blocks etched or engraved with hand tools and not such as are printed from plates or blocks etched or engraved by photochemical or other mechanical processes.
655. Works of art, drawings, engravings, photographic pictures, and philosophical and scientific apparatus brought by professional artists, lecturers, or scientists arriving from abroad for use by them temporarily for exhibition and in illustration, promotion, and encouragement of art, science, or industry in the United States, and not for sale, shall be admitted free of duty, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury shall prescribe; but bonds shall be given for the payment to the United States of such duties as may be imposed by law upon any and all such articles as shall not be exported within six months after such importation: Provided, That the Secretary of the Treasury may, in his discretion, extend such period for a further term of six months in cases where application therefor shall be made.
656. Works of art, collections in illustration of the progress of the arts, sciences, agriculture, or manufactures, photographs, works in terra cotta, parian, pottery, or porcelain, antiquities and artistic copies thereof in metal or other material, imported in good faith for exhibition at a fixed place by any State or by any society or institution established for the encouragement of the arts, science, agriculture, or education, or for a municipal corporation, and all like articles imported in good faith by any society or association, or for a municipal corporation, for the purpose of erecting a public monument, and not intended for sale nor for any other purpose than herein expressed; but bond shall be given under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe, for the payment of lawful duties which may accrue should any of the articles aforesaid be sold, transferred, or used contrary to this provision, and such articles shall be subject, at any time, to examination and inspection by the proper officers of the customs: Provided, That the privileges of this and the preceding section shall not be allowed to associations or corporations engaged in or connected with business of a private or commercial character.

657. Works of art, productions of American artists residing temporarily abroad, or other works of art, including pictorial paintings on glass, imported expressly for presentation to a national institution or to any State or municipal corporation or incorporated religious society, college, or other public institution, including stained or painted window glass or stained or painted glass windows, and except any article, in whole or in part, molded, cast, or mechanically wrought from metal within 20 years prior to importation; but such exemption shall be subject to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

658. Works of art (except rugs and carpets), collections in illustration of the progress of the arts, works in bronze, marble, terra cotta, parian, pottery, or porcelain, artistic antiquities, and objects of art of ornamental character or educational value which shall have been produced more than 100 years prior to the date of importation, but the free importation of such objects shall be subject to such regulations as to proof of antiquity as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.

659. Zaffer.

SECTION II.

A. That there shall be levied, assessed, and paid annually upon the entire net income arising or accruing from all sources in the preceding calendar year to every citizen of the United States, whether residing at home or abroad, and to every person residing in the United States, though not a citizen thereof, a tax of 1 per cent per annum upon such income over and above $4,000; and a like tax shall be assessed, levied, and paid annually upon the entire net income from all property owned and of every business, trade, or profession carried on in the United States by persons residing elsewhere.

In addition to the income tax provided under this section (herein referred to as the normal income tax), there shall be levied, assessed, and collected upon the net income of every individual an additional income tax (herein referred to as the additional tax) of 1 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $20,000 and does not exceed $50,000, and 2 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $50,000 and does not exceed $100,000, and 3 per cent per annum upon the amount by which the total net income exceeds $100,000. All the provisions of this section relating to individuals who are to be chargeable with the normal income tax, so far as they are applicable, shall apply to the levy, assessment, and collection of the additional tax imposed under this section. Every person subject to this additional tax shall, for the purpose of its assessment and collection, make a personal return of his total net income from all sources, corporate or otherwise, for the preceding calendar year.

B. That, subject only to such exemptions and deductions as are hereinafter allowed, the net income of a taxable person shall include gains, profits, and income derived from salaries, wages, or compensation for personal service of whatever kind and in whatever form paid, or from professions, vocations, businesses, trade, commerce, or sales or dealings in property, whether real or personal, growing out of the ownership or use of or interest in real or personal property, also from interest, rent, dividends, securities, or the transaction of any lawful business carried on for gain or profit, or gains or profits and income derived from any source whatever, including the income from but not the value of property acquired by bequest, devise, or descent: Provided, That the proceeds of life insurance policies paid upon the death of the person insured or payments made by or credited to the insured, on life insurance, endowment, or annuity contracts, upon the return thereof to the insured at the maturity of the term mentioned in the contract, shall not be included as income.

That in computing net income for the purpose of the normal tax there shall be allowed as deductions the necessary expenses actually incurred in carrying on any business, not including personal, living, or family expenses; all interest accrued and payable within the year by a taxable person on indebtedness; all national, State, county, school, and municipal taxes accrued within the year, not including those assessed against local benefits; losses actually sustained during the year, incurred in trade or arising from fires, storms, or shipwreck, and not compensated for by insurance or otherwise; debts actually ascertained to be worthless and charged off during the year; also a reasonable allowance for the exhaustion, wear, and tear of property arising out of its use or employment in the business, but no deduction shall be made for any amount of expense of restoring property or making good the exhaustion thereof for which an allowance is or has been made; no deduction shall be allowed for any amount paid out for new buildings, permanent improvements, or betterments, made to increase the value of any property or estate; the amount of income received or payable from any source at which the tax upon such income, which is or will become due, under the provisions of this section, has been withheld for payment at the source in the manner hereinafter provided, shall be deducted; but in all cases where the tax upon the annual gains, profits, and incomes of a person is required to be withheld and paid at the source as hereinafter provided, if such annual income, except that derived from interest on corporate or United States indebtedness, does not exceed the rate of $4,000 per annum, or if the same is uncertain, indefinite, or irregular in the amount or time during which it shall have accrued, and is not fixed or determinable, the same shall be included in estimating net annual income to be embraced in a personal return; also the amount received as dividends upon the stock, or from the net earnings of any corporation, joint-stock company, association, or insurance company which is taxable upon its net income as hereinafter provided shall be deducted. The net income from property owned and business carried on in the United States by persons residing elsewhere shall be computed upon the basis prescribed in this paragraph and that part of paragraph G of this section relating to the computation of the net income of corporations, joint-stock and insurance companies, organized, created, or existing under the laws of foreign countries, in so far as applicable.

C. That in computing net income under this section there shall be excluded the interest upon the obligations of a State or any political subdivision thereof, and upon the obligations of the United States or its possessions the principal and interest of which are now exempt by law from Federal taxation; also the compensation of the present President of the United States during the term for which he has been elected, and of the judges of the Supreme and inferior courts of the United States now in office, and the compensation of all officers and employees of a State or any political subdivision thereof.

D. That there shall be deducted from the amount of the net income of each of such persons, ascertained as provided herein, the sum of $4,000: Provided, That only one deduction of $4,000 shall be made from the aggregate income of all the members of any family composed of one or both parents and one or more minor children, or husband and wife, but if the wife is living permanently apart from her husband she may be taxed independently; but guardians shall be allowed to make deduction in favor of each and every ward, except that in case where two or more wards are comprised in one family and have joint property interests the aggregate deduction in their favor shall not exceed $4,000; and said tax shall be computed upon the remainder of said net income of such person for the year ending December 31, 1913, and for each calendar year thereafter; and on or before the 1st day of March, 1914, and the 1st day of March in each year thereafter, a true and accurate return, under oath or affirmation, shall be made by each person of lawful age, except as hereinafter provided, subject to the tax imposed by this section, and having a net income of $3,500 or over for the taxable year, to the collector of internal revenue for the district in which such person resides or has his principal place of business, or, in the case of a person residing in a foreign country, in the place where his principal business is carried on within the United States, in such form as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, shall prescribe, setting forth specifically the gross amount of income from all separate sources and from the total thereof, deducting the aggregate items or expenses and allowance herein authorized; guardians, trustees, executors, administrators, agents, receivers, conservators, and all persons, corporations, or associations acting in any fiduciary capacity, shall make and render a return of the net income of the person for whom they act, subject to this tax, coming into their custody or control and management, and be subject to all the provisions of this section which apply to individuals; and also all persons, firms, companies, copartnerships, corporations, joint-stock companies or associations, and insurance companies, except as hereinafter provided, in whatever capacity acting, having the control, receipt, disposal, or payment of fixed or determinable annual gains, profits, and income of another person subject to tax, shall in behalf of such person make and render a return, as aforesaid, but separate and distinct, of the portion of the income of each person from which the normal tax has been thus withheld, and containing also the name and address of such person or stating that the name and address or the address, as the case may be, are unknown: Provided, That in either case above mentioned no return of income not exceeding $3,500 shall be required: Provided further, That persons liable only for the normal income tax, on their own account or in behalf of another, shall not be required to make return of the income derived from dividends on the capital stock or from the net earnings of corporations, joint-stock companies or associations, and insurance companies taxable upon their net income as hereinafter provided; and the collector or deputy collector shall require every list to be verified by the oath or affirmation of the party rendering it, and may increase the amount of any list or return if he has reason to believe that the same is understated: Provided, That no such increase shall be made except after due notice to such party and upon proof of the amount understated; or if the list or return of any person shall have been increased by the collector, such person may be permitted to prove the amount liable to be assessed; but such proof shall not be considered as conclusive of the facts, and no deductions claimed in such cases shall be made or allowed until approved by the collector. If dissatisfied with the decision of the collector, such person may submit the case, with all the papers, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for his decision, and may furnish sworn testimony of witnesses to prove any relevant facts.

E. That all assessments shall be made and all persons shall be notified of the amount for which they are respectively liable on or before the 1st day of June of each successive year, and said assessments shall be paid on or before the 30th day of June, except in cases of refusal or neglect to make such return and in cases of false or fraudulent returns, in which cases the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall, upon the discovery thereof, at any time within three years after said return is due, make a return upon information obtained as above provided for, and the assessment made by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue thereon shall be paid by such person or persons immediately upon notification of the amount of such assessment; and to any sum or sums due and unpaid after the 30th day of June in any year, and for 10 days after notice and demand thereof by the collector, there shall be added the sum of 5 per cent on the amount of tax unpaid, and interest at the rate of 1 per cent per month upon said tax from the time the same became due, except from the estates of insane, deceased, or insolvent persons.

All persons, firms, copartnerships, companies, corporations, joint-stock companies or associations, and insurance companies, in whatever capacity acting, including lessees or mortgagors of real or personal property, trustees acting in any trust capacity, executors, administrators, agents, receivers, conservators, employers, and all officers and employees of the United States having the control, receipt, custody, disposal, or payment of interest, rent, salaries, wages, premiums, annuities, compensation, remuneration, emoluments, or other fixed or determinable annual gains, profits, and income of another person, exceeding $4,000 for any taxable year, other than dividends on capital stock, or from the net earnings of corporations and joint-stock companies or associations subject to like tax, who are required to make and render a return in behalf of another, as provided herein, to the collector of his, her, or its district, are hereby authorized and required to deduct and withhold from such annual gains, profits, and income such sum as will be sufficient to pay the normal tax imposed thereon by this section, and shall pay to the officer of the United States Government authorized to receive the same; and they are each hereby made personally liable for such tax. In all cases where the income tax of a person is withheld and deducted and paid or to be paid at the source as aforesaid, such person shall not receive the benefit of the exemption of $4,000 allowed herein except by an application for refund of the tax unless he shall, not less than 30 days prior to the day on which the return of his income is due, file with the person who is required to withhold and pay tax for him, an affidavit claiming the benefit of such exemption; nor shall any person under the foregoing conditions be allowed the benefit of any deduction provided for in subsection B of this section unless he shall, not less than 30 days prior to the day on which the return of his income is due, file either with the person who is required to withhold and pay tax for him a true and correct return of his annual gains, profits, and income from all other sources, and also the deductions asked for, and the showing thus made shall then become a part of the return to be made in his behalf by the person required to withhold and

